AN ATTESTATION TO THIS Church-Hiſtory OF NEW-ENGLAND.

IT hath been deſervedly eſteemed, one of the great and wonderful Works of God in this Laſt Age, that the Lord ſtirred up the Spirits of ſo many Thouſands of his Servants, to leave the Pleaſant Land of England, the Land of their Nativity, and to tranſport themſelves, and Families, over the Ocean Sea, into a Deſert Land, in America, at the Diſtance of a Thouſand Leagues from their own Country; and this, meerly on the Account of Pure and Undefiled Religion, not knowing how they ſhould have their Daily Bread, but truſting in God for That, in the way of ſeeking firſt the Kingdom of God, and the Righteouſneſs thereof: And that the Lord was pleaſed to grant ſuch a gracious Preſence of his with them, and ſuch a Bleſſing upon their Undertakings, that within a few Years a Wilderneſs was ſubdued before them, and ſo many Colonies Planted, Towns Erected, and Churches Settled, wherein the true and living God in Chriſt Jeſus, is worſhipped, and ſerved, in a place where time out of mind, had been nothing before, but Heatheniſm, Idolatry, and Devil-worſhip; and that the Lord has added ſo many of the Bleſſings of Heaven and Earth for the Comfortable Subſiſtence of his People in theſe Ends of the Earth. Surely of this Work, and of this Time, it ſhall be ſaid, What hath God wrought? And, This is the Lord's doings, it is marvellous in our Eyes! Even ſo (O Lord) didſt thou lead thy People, to make thy ſelf a glorious Name! Now, One Generation paſſeth away, and another cometh. The Firſt Generation of our Fathers, that began this Plantation of New-England, moſt of them in their middle Age, and many of them in their declining Years, who, after they had ſerved the Will of God, in laying the Foundation (as we hope) of many Generations, and given an Example of true Reformed Religion in the Faith and Order of the Goſpel, according to their beſt Light from the Words of God, they are now gathered unto their Fathers. There hath been another Generation ſucceeding the Firſt, either of ſuch as come over with their Parents very Young, or were born in the Country, and theſe have had the managing of the Publick Affairs for many Years, but are apparently paſſing away, as their Fathers before them. There is alſo a Third Generation, who are grown up, and begin to ſtand thick upon the Stage of Action, at this Day, and theſe were all born in the Country, and may call New-England their Native Land. Now, in reſpect of what the Lord hath done for theſe Generations, ſucceeding one another, we have aboundant cauſe of Thankſgiving to the Lord our God, who hath ſo Increaſed and Bleſſed this People, that from a Day of ſmall things, he has brought us to be, what we now are. We may ſet up an EBENEZER, and ſay, Hitherto the Lord hath helped us. Yet in reſpect of our Preſent State, we have need earneſtly to Pray, as we are directed, Let thy Work farther appear unto thy Servants, and let thy Beauty be upon us, and thy Glory upon our Children; Eſtabliſh thou the Works of theſe our hands; yea, the Works of our hands, Eſtabliſh thou them.

For, if we look on the Dark ſide, the Humane ſide of this Work, there is much of Humane Weakneſs and Imperfection, hath appeared in all that hath been done by Man, as was acknowledged by our Fathers before us. Neither was New-England ever without ſome Fatherly Chaſtiſements from God; ſhewing that He is not Fond of the Formalities of any People upon Earth, but expects the Realities of Practical Godlineſs, according to our Profeſſion and Engagement unto him. Much more may we, the Children of ſuch Fathers, lament our Gradual Degeneracy from that Life and Power of Godlineſs that was in them, and the many Provoking Evils that are amongſt us; which have moved our God ſeverely to witneſs againſt us, more than in our firſt Times, by his leſſer Judgments going before, and his Greater Judgments following after; He ſhot off his Warning-pieces firſt, but his Murthering-pieces have come after them, in ſo much as in theſe Calamitous Times, the Changes of Wars of Europe have had ſuch a malignant Influence upon US in America, that we are at this Day Greatly diminiſhed and brought low, through Oppreſſion, Affliction, and Sorrow.

And yet if we look on the Light ſide, the Divine ſide of this Work, we may yet ſee, that the Glory of God which was with our Fathers, is not wholly departed from us their Children; there are as yet many Signs of his Gracious Preſence with us, both in the way of his Providences, and in the uſe of his Ordinances, as alſo in and with the Hearts and Souls of a conſiderable number of his People in New-England, that we may yet ſay as they did, Thy Name is Upon us, and thou art in the midſt of us, therefore, Lord, Leave us not! As Solomon prayed, ſo may we, The Lord our God be with us, as he was with our Fathers; Let him not leave nor forſake us; but incline our Hearts to keep his Commandments. And then, That he would maintain his own, and his Peoples Cauſe, at all times, as the matter may require.

For the Lord our God hath in his infinite Wiſdom, Grace and Holineſs, contrived and eſtabliſhed His Covenant, ſo as he will be the God of his People, and of their Seed with them, and after them, in their Generations; and in the Miniſterial Diſpenſation of the Covenant of Grace, in, with, and to his viſible Church, He hath promiſed Covenant-Mercies on the Condition of Covenant-Duties. If my People, who are called by my Name, ſhall humble themſelves, and pray, and ſeek my Face, and turn from their wicked ways, then will I hear their Prayers, forgive their Sins, and heal their Land; and mine Eyes, and mine Heart, ſhall be upon them perpetually for Good! That ſo the Faithfulneſs of God may appear in all Generations for ever, that if there be any Breach between the Lord and his People, it ſhall appear plainly to lye on his Peoples part. And therefore he has taken care, that his own Dealings with his People in the Courſe of his Providence, and their Dealings with him in the Ways of Obedience or Diſobedience, ſhould be Recorded, and ſo tranſmitted for the Uſe and Benefit of After-times, from Generation to Generation; as, (Exodus 17. 14.) The Lord ſaid unto Moſes, write this for a Memorial in a Book; and, (Deut. 31. 19.) Write ye this Song for you, that it may be a Witneſs for me againſt the Children of Iſrael; and (Pſal. 102. 18.) This and that ſhall be written for the Generation to come, and the People that ſhall be created ſhall praiſe the Lord. Upon this Ground it was ſaid (in Pſal. 44. 1.) We have heard with our Ears, O God, and our Fathers have told Us, what Work thou didſt in their Days in times of Old, how thou caſteſt out the Heathen, and plantedſt them; (ſo likewiſe in Pſal. 78. v. 3 to the 8th.) Upon the ſame account it may be ſaid, (Pſal. 45. laſt.) I will make thy Name to be remembred to all Generations: And this is one Reaſon why the Lord commanded ſo great a part of the Holy Scriptures to be written in an Hiſtorical way, that the wonderful Works of God towards his Church and People, and their Actings towards him again, might be known unto all Generations: And after the Scripture-time, ſo far as the Lord in his Holy Wiſdom hath ſeen meet, He hath ſtirred up ſome or other to write the Acts and Monuments of the Church of God in all Ages; eſpecially ſince the Reformation of Religion from Antichriſtian Darkneſs, was vigorouſly and in a great meaſure ſucceſsfully endeavoured in the foregoing Century, by ſuch Learned and Pious Perſons, as the Lord inclined and inabled thereunto.

And therefore ſurely, it hath been a Duty incumbent upon the People of God, in this our New-England, that there ſhould be extant, a true Hiſtory of the Wonderful Works of God in the late Plantation of this part of America; which was indeed planted, not on the account of any Worldly Intereſt, but on a Deſign of Enjoying and Advancing the true Reformed Religion, in a Practical way: And alſo of the Good Hand of God upon it from the beginning unto this Day, in granting ſuch a meaſure of Good Succeſs, ſo far as we have attained: Such a Work as this hath been much Deſired, and long Expected, both at home and abroad, and too long Delayed by Us, and ſometimes it hath ſeemed a hopeleſs thing ever to be attained, till God raiſed up the Spirit of this Learned and Pious Perſon, one of the Sons of the Colledge, and one of the Miniſters of the Third Generation, to undertake this Work. His Learning and Godlineſs, and Miniſterial Abilities, were ſo Conſpicuous, that at the Age of Seventeen Years, he was called to be a publick Preacher in Boſton, the Metropolis of the whole Engliſh America; and within a while after that, he was ordained Paſtor of the ſame Church, whereof his own Father was the Teacher, and this at the unanimous Deſire of the People, and with the Approbation of the Magiſtrates, Miniſters and Churches, in the Vicinity of Boſton. And after he had, for divers Years, approved himſelf in an exemplary way, and obliged his Native Country, by publiſhing many uſeful Treatiſes, ſuitable to the Preſent State of Religion amongſt us, he ſet himſelf to write the Church-Hiſtory of New-England, not at all omitting his Miniſterial Employments; and in the midſt of many Difficulties, Tears and Temptations, having made a diligent Search, Collecting of proper Materials, and Selecting the choiceſt Memorials, he hath, in the Iſſue, within a few Months, contrived, compoſed, and methodized the ſame into this Form and Frame which we here ſee: So that it deſerves the name of, THE CHVRCH-HISTORY OF NEW-ENGLAND.

But as I behold this Exemplary Son of New-England, while thus Young and Tender, at ſuch a rate Building the Temple of God, and in a few Months diſpatching ſuch a piece of Temple-work as this is; a Work ſo notably adjuſted and adorned, it brings to mind the Epigram upon young Borellus:

Cum Juveni tantam dedit Experientia Lucem,
Tale ut promat opus, quam Dabit illa Seni?

As for my ſelf, having been, by the Mercy of God, now above Sixty eight Years in New-England, and ſerved the Lord and his People in my weak Meaſure, Sixty Years in the Miniſtry of the Goſpel, I may now ſay in my Old Age, I have ſeen all that the Lord hath done for his People in New-England, and have known the Beginning and Progreſs of theſe Churches unto this Day; and having read over much of this Hiſtory, I cannot but in the Love and Fear of God, bear witneſs to the Truth of it; viz. That this preſent Church-Hiſtory of New-England, Compiled by Mr. Cotton Mather, for the Subſtance, End and Scope of it, is, as far as I have been acquainted therewithall, according to Truth.

The manifold Advantage, and Uſefulneſs of this preſent Hiſtory, will appear, if we conſider the Great and Good Ends unto which it may be ſerviceable; As, Firſt, That a plain Scriptural Duty of Recording the Works of God unto After-times, may not any longer be omitted, but performed in the beſt manner we can.

Secondly, That by the Manifeſtation of the Truth of things, as they have been and are amongſt us, the Miſrepreſentations of New-England may be removed and prevented; for, Rectum eſt ſui & obliqui Index.

Thirdly, That the True Original and Deſign of this Plantation may not be loſt, nor buried in Oblivion, but known and remembred for ever, [Pſal. 111. 4. He hath made his wonderful Works to be remembred. Pſal. 105. 5. Remember ye the marvellous Works which he hath done.]

Fourthly, That God may have the Glory of the Great and Good Works which he hath done for his People in theſe Ends of the Earth, [As in Iſaiah 63. 7. I will mention the loving Kindneſs of the Lord, and the Praiſes of the Lord, according to all the Great Goodneſs and Mercy he has beſtowed on us.]

Fifthly, That the Names of ſuch Eminent Perſons as the Lord made uſe of, as Inſtruments in his hand, for the beginning and carrying on of this Work, may be embalmed, and preſerved, for the Knowledge and Imitation of Poſterity; for the Memory of the Juſt is Bleſſed.

Sixthly, That the preſent Generation may remember the Way wherein the Lord hath led his People in this Wilderneſs, for ſo many Years paſt unto this Day; [according to that in Deut. 8. 2. Thou ſhalt remember all the way wherein the Lord hath led thee in the Wilderneſs this Forty Years, to humble thee, and to prove thee, and to know what was in thy Heart, whether thou wouldeſt keep his Commandments or no.] All conſidering Perſons cannot but obſerve, that our Wilderneſs-condition hath been full of humbling, trying, diſtreſſing Providences. We have had our Maſſahs and Meribahs; and few of our Churches but have had ſome remarkable hours of Temptation paſſing over them, and God's End in all has been to prove us, whether, according to our Profeſſion, and his Expectation, we would keep his Commandments, or not.

Seventhly, That the Generations to come in New-England, may know the God of their Fathers, and may ſerve him with a perfect Heart and willing Mind; as eſpecially the firſt Generation did before them; and that they may ſet their hope in God, and not forget his Works, but keep his Commandments. (Pſal. 78. 7.)

Eighthly, And whereas it may be truly ſaid, (as Jer. 23. 21.) That when this People began to follow the Lord into this Wilderneſs, they were, Holineſs to the Lord, and he planted them as a noble Vine; Yet if in proceſs of time, when they are greatly increaſed and multiplied, they ſhould ſo far Degenerate, as to forget the Religious Deſign of their Fathers, and forſake the Holy Ways of God, (as it was ſaid of them in Hoſea 4. 7. As they were increaſed, ſo they ſinned againſt the Lord) and ſo that many Evils and Troubles will befall them; Then this Book may be for a Witneſs againſt them; and yet thro' the Mercy of God, may be alſo a means to Reclaim them, and cauſe them to Return again unto the Lord, and his Holy Ways, that He may Return again in Mercy unto them; even unto the many Thouſands of New-England.

Ninthly, That the Little Daughter of New-England in America, may bow down her ſelf to her Mother England, in Europe, preſenting this Memorial unto her; aſſuring her, that tho' by ſome of her Angry Brethren, ſhe was forced to make a Local Seceſſion, yet not a Separation, but hath always retained a Dutiful Reſpect to the Church of God in England; and giving ſome account to her, how graciouſly the Lord has dealt with her ſelf in a Remote Wilderneſs, and what ſhe has been doing all this while; giving her thanks for all the Supplies ſhe has received from her; and becauſe ſhe is yet in her Minority, ſhe craves her farther Bleſſing and Favour as the Caſe may require; being glad, if what is now preſented to her, may be of any uſe, to help forward the Union and Agreement of her Brethren, which would be ſome Satisfaction to her for her undeſired Local Diſtance from her Dear England; and Finally, promiſing all that Reverence and Obedience which is due to her Good Mother, by Virtue of the Fifth Commandment. And Laſtly, That this preſent Hiſtory may ſtand as a Monument, in relation to future times, of a fuller and better Reformation of the Church of God, than it hath yet appeared in the World. For by this Eſſay it may be ſeen, that a farther Practical Reformation than that which began at the firſt coming out of the Darkneſs of Popery, was aimed at, and endeavoured by a great Number of Voluntary Exiles, that came into a Wilderneſs for that very end, that hence they might be free from humane Additions and Inventions in the Worſhip of God, and might practice the poſitive part of Divine Inſtitutions, according to the Word of God. How far we have attained this Deſign, may be judged by this Book. But we beſeech our Brethren, of our own and of other Nations, to believe that we are far from thinking that we have attained a perfect Reformation. Oh, No! Our Fathers did in their time acknowledge, there were many Defects and Imperfections in our Way, and yet we believe they did as much as could be expected from Learned and Godly Men in their Circumſtances; and we, their Succeſſors, are far ſhort of them in many reſpects, meeting with many Difficulties which they did not; and mourning under many Rebukes from our God which they had not, and with trembling Hearts obſerving the Gradual Declinings that are amongſt us from the Holy Ways of God; we are forced to cry out, and ſay, Lord, what will become of theſe Churches in time? And what wilt thou do for thy great Name? And yet in the Multitude of our Thoughts and Fears, the Conſolations of God refreſh our Souls, that all thoſe that in Simplicity and Godly Sincerity do ſerve the Lord, and his People in their Generation (tho they ſhould miſs it in ſome things) they ſhall deliver their own Souls, they are accepted of the Lord, and their Reward is with him; and in the approaching Days of a better Reformation, the ſincere, tho' weak Endeavours of the Servants of God, that went before them, will be alſo accepted of the Saints in thoſe times of greater Light and Holineſs, that are to come; and when the Lord ſhall make Jeruſalem (or, the true Church of God, and the true Chriſtian Religion) a Praiſe in the Earth, and the Joy of many Generations, then the Miſtakes of theſe times will be rectified; and that which is of God in any of his Churches, now in any Part of the World, will be owned and improved unto an higher Degree of Practical Godlineſs, that ſhall continue for many Generations ſucceeding one another, which hitherto hath been ſo rare a thing to be ſound in the World.

I ſhall now draw to a Concluſion, with an Obſervation which hath viſited my Thoughts: That the Lord hath bleſſed the Family of the MATHERS, amongſt us, with a ſingular Bleſſing, in that no leſs than Ten of them, have been accepted of him, to ſerve the Lord and his People in the Miniſtry of the Goſpel of Jeſus Chriſt; of whom, as the Apoſtle ſaid in another caſe, tho' ſome are fallen aſleep, yet the greateſt part remain unto this Day; I do not know the like in our New-England, and perhaps it will be ſound rare to parallel the ſame in other Countries. Truly I have thought, it hath been a Reward of Grace, with reſpect unto the Faithfulneſs they have expreſſed, in aſſerting, clearing, maintaining, and putting on for the Practice of that great Principle, of the Propagation of Religion in theſe Churches, viz. The Covenant-State and Church-memberſhip of the Children born in theſe Churches, together with the Scripture Duties appertaining thereunto, and that by vertue of God's Covenant of Grace, eſtabliſhed by God with his People, and their Seed with them, and after them in their Generations. And this has been done eſpecially by Mr. Richard Mather the Father, and by Mr. Increaſe Mather his Son, and by Mr. Cotton Mather his Son, the Author of this preſent Work.

I ſhall give the Reader the Satisfaction to enumerate this happy Decemvirate.

1. Richard Mather, Teacher of the Church in Dorcheſter.

2. Samuel Mather: He was the firſt Fellow of Harvard-Colledge in Cambridge in New-England, and the firſt Preacher at North-Boſton, where his Brother and his Nephew are now his Succeſſors. He was afterwards one of the Chaplains in Magdalen-Colledge in Oxford; after that, a Senior Fellow of Trinity-Colledge in Dublin, and Paſtor of a Church in that City, where he died.

3. Nathanael Mather; which ſucceeded his Brother Samuel as Paſtor of that Church in Dublin, and is now Paſtor of a Church in London.

4. Eleazar Mather: He was Paſtor of the Church at Northampton in New-England, and much eſteemed in thoſe parts of the Country: He died when he was but Thirty two years old.

5. Increaſe Mather; who is known in both Englands. Theſe four were the Sons of Richard Mather.

6. Cotton Mather, the Author of this Hiſtory.

7. Nathanael Mather. He died at the Nineteenth Year of his Age; was a Maſter of Arts; began to preach in private. His Piety and Learning was beyond his Years. The Hiſtory of his Life and Death was written by his Brother, and there have been Three Editions of it printed at London. Ht dyed here at Salem, and over his Grave there is written, THE ASHES OF AN HARD STVDENT, A GOOD SCHOLAR, AND A GREAT CHRISTIAN.

8. Samuel Mather; he is now a publick Preacher. Theſe three laſt mentioned, are the Sons of Increaſe Mather.

9. Samuel Mather, the Son of Timothy, and Grandſon of Richard Mather; He is the Paſtor of a Church in Windſor; a Pious and a Prudent Man; who has been an happy Inſtrument of uniting the Church and Town, amongſt whom there had been great Diviſions.

10. Warham Mather, the Son of Eleazar Mather, and by his Mother Grandſon to the Reverend Mr. Warham, late Paſtor of the Church in Windſor: He is now alſo a publick Preacher. Behold, an happy Family, the Glad ſight whereof, may well inſpire even an Old Age paſt Eighty, with Poetry enough to add this,

Epigramma in MATHEROS.

O Nimium Dilecte Deo, Venerande MATHERE,
Gaudens tot Natos Chriſti numerare Miniſtros!
Det Deus ut tales inſurgant uſque Matheri,
Et Nati, Natorum, & qui Naſcentur ab illis.
Has inter ſtellas fulgens, Cottone Mathere,
Patrum tu ſequeris veſtigia ſemper ad orans,
Phoſphorus aſt aliis! ———

Now the Lord our God, the Faithful God, that keepeth Covenant and Mercy to a thouſand Generations, with his People; let him incline the Heart of this People of New-England, to keep Covenant and Duty towards their God, to walk in his Ways, and keep his Commandments, that he may bring upon them the Bleſſing of Abraham, the Mercy and Truth unto Jacob, the ſure Mercies of David, the Grace and Peace that cometh from God the Father, and the Lord Jeſus Chriſt; and that the Grace of our Lord Jeſus Chriſt may be in and with theſe Churches, from one Generation to another, until the Second Coming of our Lord and Saviour Jeſus Chriſt! Unto him be Glory and Dominion, for Ever and Ever. Amen.

A Prefatory Poem,

On that Excellent Book, Entituled,

Magnalia Chriſti Americana:

Written by the Reverend

Mr. COTTON MATHER, Paſtor of a Church at Boſton, New-England.

To the Candid Reader.

S*Truck with huge Love*, of what to be poſſeſt,
I much deſpond, good Reader, in the queſt;
Yet help me, if at length it may be ſaid,
Who firſt the Chambers of the South diſplay'd?
Inform me, Whence the Tawny People came?
Who was their Father, Japhet, Shem, or Cham?
And how they ſtraddled to th' Antipodes,
To look another World beyond the Seas?
And when, and why, and where they laſt broke ground,
What Risks they ran, where they firſt Anchoring ſound?
Tell me their Patriarchs, Prophets, Prieſts and Kings,
Religion, Manners, Monumental things:
What Charters had they? What Immunities?
What Altars, Temples, Cities, Colonies,
Did they erect? Who were their publick Spirits?
Where may we find the Records of their Merits?
What Inſtances, what glorious Diſplayes
Of Heav'ns high Hand, commenced in their dayes?
Theſe things in Black Oblivion covered o'er,
(As they'd ne'er been) lye, with a thouſand more.
A vexing Thought, that makes me ſcarce forbear
To ſtamp, and wring my Hands, and pluck my Hair,
To think, what Bleſſed Ignorance hath done,
What fine Threads Learnings Enemies have ſpun,
How well Books, Schools, and Colledge may be ſpar'd,
So Men with Beaſts may fitly be compar'd!
Yea, how Tradition leaves us in the lurch,
And who, nor ſtay at home, nor go to Church:
The Light-within-Enthuſiaſts, who let fly
Againſt our Pen and Ink Divinity;
Who boldly do pretend (but who'll believe it?)
If Geneſis were loſt, they could retrieve it;
Yea, all the Sacred Writ; Pray let them try
On the New World, their Gift of Prophecy.
For all them, the New Worlds Antiquities,
Smother'd in everlaſting Silence lies;
And its Firſt Sachims mention'd are no more,
Than they that Agamemnon liv'd before.
The poor Americans are under blame,
Like them of old, that ſrom Tel-melah came,

B Conjectur'd

Conjectur'd once to be of Iſrael's Seed,
But no Record appear'd to prove the Deed:
And like Habajah's Sons, that were put by
The Prieſthood, Holy things to come not nigh,
For having loſt their Genealogy.
Who can paſt things to memory command,
Till one with Aaron's Breaſt-plate up ſhall ſtand?
Miſchiefs Remedileſs ſuch Sloth enſue;
God and their Parents loſe their Honour due,
And Childrens Children ſuffer on that Score,
Like Baſtards caſt forlorn at any Door;
And they and others put to ſeek their Father,
For want of ſuch a Scribe as COTTON MATHER;
Whoſe Piety, whoſe Pains, and peerleſs Pen,
Revives New-England's nigh-loſt Origin.
Heads of our Tribes, whoſe Corps are under ground,
Their Names and Fames in Chronicles renown'd,
Begemm'd on Golden Ouches he hath ſet,
Paſt Envy's Teeth, and Times corroding Fret:
Of Death and Malice, he has bruſh'd off the Duſt,
And made a Reſurrection of the Juſt:
And clear'd the Lands Religion of the Gloſs,
And Copper-Cuts of Alexander Roſs.
He hath related Academic things,
And paid their Firſt-Fruits to the King of Kings;
And done his Alma Mater that juſt Favour,
To ſhew Sal Gentium hath not loſt its Savour.
He writes like an Hiſtorian, and Divine,
Of Churches, Synods, Faith, and Diſcipline.
Illuſtrious Providences are diſplay'd,
Mercies and Judgments are in colours laid;
Salvations wonderful by Sea and Land,
Themſelves are Saved by his Pious Hand.
The Churches Wars, and various Enemies,
Wild Salvages, and wilder Sectaries,
Are notify'd for them that after riſe.
This well-inſtructed Scribe brings New and Old,
And from his Mines digs richer things than Gold;
Yet freely gives, as Fountains do their Streams,
Nor more than they, Himſelf, by giving, drains.
He's all Deſign, and by his Craftier Wiles
Locks faſt his Reader, and the Time beguiles:
Whilſt Wit and Learning move themſelves aright,

Allow what's known; they who write Hiſtories,
Write many things they ſee with others Eyes;
'Tis fair, where nought is feign'd, nor undigeſted,
Nor ought, but what is credibly atteſted.

Why may not I ſpeak mine Opinion too?
The Stuff is true, the Trimming neat and ſpruce,
The Workman's good, the Work of publick uſe;

Great your Attempt. No doubt ſome Sacred Spy,

Nurs'd your firſt Thoughts, with gentle Beams of Light,
And taught your Hand Things paſt to bring to ſight:
Thus led by ſecret ſweeteſt Influence,

Recording how that mighty Hand was nigh,
To Trace out Paths not known to mortal Eye,
To thoſe brave Men, that to this Land came o'er,
And plac'd them ſafe on the Atlantick Shore:
And how the ſame Hand did them after ſave,
And ſay, Return, oft on the Brink o'th' Grave;
And gave them room to ſpread, and bleſs'd their Root,

The Growth of Pride, fierce Luſt, and worldly Rage.

A General
INTRODUCTION.

Ἐρῶ δὲ τοῦτο, τῆς τῶν ἐντευξομένων ὠφελείας ἕνεκα.

Dicam hoc propter utilitatem eorum qui Lecturi ſunt hoc opus. Theodorit.

§. 1. I WRITE the Wonders of the CHRISTIAN RELIGION, flying from the Depravations of Europe, to the American Strand: And, aſſiſted by the Holy Author of that Religion, I do, with all Conſcience of Truth, required therein by Him, who is the Truth it ſelf, Report the Wonderful Diſplays of His Infinite Power, Wiſdom, Goodneſs, and Faithfulneſs, wherewith His Divine Providence hath Irradiated an Indian Wilderneſs.

I Relate the Conſiderable Matters, that produced and attended the Firſt Settlement of COLONIES, which have been Renowned for the Degree of REFORMATION, Profeſſed and Attained by Evangelical Churches, erected in thoſe Ends of the Earth: And a Field being thus prepared, I proceed unto a Relation of the Conſiderable Matters which have been acted thereupon.

I firſt introduce the Actors, that have, in a more exemplary manner ſerved thoſe Colonies; and give Remarkable Occurrences, in the exemplary LIVES of many Magiſtrates, and of more Miniſters, who ſo Lived, as to leave unto Poſterity, Examples worthy of Everlaſting Remembrance.

I add hereunto, the Notables of the only Proteſtant Univerſity, that ever ſhone in that Hemiſphere of the New World; with particular Inſtances of Criolians, in our Biography, provoking the whole World, with vertuous Objects of Emulation.

I introduce then, the Actions of a more Eminent Importance, that have ſignalized thoſe Colonies: Whether the Eſtabliſhments, directed by their Synods; with a Rich Variety of Synodical and Eccleſiaſtical Determinations; or, the Diſturbances, with which they have been from all ſorts of Temptations and Enemies Tempeſtuated; and the Methods by which they have ſtill weathered out each Horrible Tempeſt.

And into the midſt of theſe Actions, I interpoſe an entire Book, wherein there is, with all poſſible Veracity, a Collection made, of Memorable Occurrences, and amazing Judgments and Mercies, befalling many particular Perſons among the People of New-England.

Let my Readers expect all that I have promiſed them, in this Bill of Fair; and it may be they will find themſelves entertained with yet many other Paſſages, above and beyond their Expectation, deſerving likewiſe a room in Hiſtory: In all which, there will be nothing, but the Author's too mean way of preparing ſo great Entertainments, to Reproach the Invitation.

§. 2. The Reader will doubtleſs deſire to know, what it was that

———tot Volvere caſus
Inſignes Pietate Viros, tot adire Labores, Impulerit.

And our Hiſtory ſhall, on many fit Occaſions which will be therein offered, endeavour, with all Hiſtorical Fidelity and Simplicity, and with as little Offence as may be, to ſatisfie him. The Sum of the Matter is, That from the very Beginning of the REFORMATION in the Engliſh Nation, there hath always been a Generation of Godly Men, deſirous to purſue the Reformation of Religion, according to the Word of God, and the Example of the beſt Reformed Churches; and anſwering the Character of Good Men, given by Joſephus, in his Paraphraſe on the words of Samuel to Saul, μηδὲν ἄλλο πραχθήσεσθαι καλῶς ὑφ' ἑαυτῶν νομίζοντες ἢ ὅ, τι ἂν ποιήσωσι τοῦ Θεοῦ κεκελευκότος. They think they do nothing Right in the Service of God, but what they do according to the Command of God. And there hath been another Generation of Men, who have ſtill employed the Power which they have generally ſtill had in their Hands, not only to ſtop the Progreſs of the Deſired Reformation, but alſo, with Innumerable Vexations, to Perſecute thoſe that moſt Heartily wiſhed well unto it. There were many of the Reformers, who joyned with the Reverend JOHN FOX, in the Complaints which he then entred in his Martyrology, about the Baits of Popery yet left in the Church; and in his Wiſhes, God take them away, or eaſe us from them, for God knows, they be the Cauſe of much Blindneſs and Strife amongſt Men! They Zealouſly decreed the Policy of complying always with the Ignorance and Vanity of the People; and cried out earneſtly for Purer Adminiſtrations in the Houſe of God, and more Conformity to the Law of Chriſt, and Primitive Chriſtianity: While others would not hear of going any further than the Firſt Eſſay of Reformation. 'Tis very certain, that the Firſt Reformers never intended, that what They did, ſhould be the Abſolute Boundary of Reformation, ſo that it ſhould be a Sin to proceed any further; as, by their own going beyond Wickliff, and Changing and Growing in their own Models alſo, and the Confeſſions of Cranmer, with the Scripta Anglicana of Bucer, and a thouſand other things, was abundantly demonſtrated. But after a Fruitleſs Expectation, wherein the trueſt Friends of the Reformation long waited, for to have that which Heylin himſelf owns to have been the Deſign of the Firſt Reformers, followed as it ſhould have been, a Party very unjuſtly arrogating to themſelves, the Venerable Name of, The Church of England, by Numberleſs Oppreſſions, grievouſly Smote thoſe their Fellow-Servants. Then 'twas that, as our Great OWEN hath expreſſed it, Multitudes of Pious, Peaceable Proteſtants, were driven, by their Severities, to leave their Native Country, and ſeek a Refuge for their Lives and Liberties, with Freedom, for the Worſhip of God, in a Wilderneſs, in the Ends of the Earth.

§. 3. It is the Hiſtory of theſe PROTESTANTS, that is here attempted: PROTESTANTS that highly honoured and affected The Church of ENGLAND, and humbly Petition to be a Part of it: But by the Miſtake of a few powerful Brethren, driven to ſeek a place for the Exerciſe of the Proteſtant Religion, according to the Light of their Conſciences, in the Deſarts of America. And in this Attempt I have propoſed, not only to preſerve and ſecure the Intereſt of Religion, in the Churches of that little Country NEW-ENGLAND, ſo far as the Lord Jeſus Chriſt may pleaſe to Bleſs it for that End, but alſo to offer unto the Churches of the Reformation, abroad in the World, ſome ſmall Memorials, that may be ſerviceable unto the Deſigns of Reformation, whereto, I believe, they are quickly to be awakened. I am far from any ſuch Boaſt, concerning theſe Churches, That they have Need of Nothing, I wiſh their Works were more perfect before God. Indeed, that which Auſtin called The Perfection of Chriſtians, is like to be, until the Term for the Antichriſtian Apoſtaſie be expired, The Perfection of Churches too; Ut Agnoſcant ſe nunquam eſſe perfectas. Neverthelesſ, I perſwade my ſelf, that ſo far as they have attained, they have given Great Examples of the Methods and Meaſures, wherein an Evangelical Reformation is to be proſecuted, and of the Qualifications requiſite in the Inſtruments that are to proſecute it, and of the Difficulties which may be moſt likely to obſtruct it, and the moſt likely Directions and Remedies for thoſe Obſtructions. It may be, 'tis not poſſible for me to do a greater Service unto the Churches on the Beſt Iſland of the Univerſe, than to give a diſtinct Relation of thoſe Great Examples which have been occurring among Churches of Exiles, that were driven out of that Iſland, into an horrible Wilderneſs, meerly for their being Well-willers unto the Reformation. When that Bleſſed Martyr Conſtantine was carried, with other Martyrs, in a Dung-Cart, unto the place of Execution, he pleaſantly ſaid, Well, yet we are a precious Odour to God in Chriſt. Tho' the Reformed Churches in the American Regions, have, by very Injurious Repreſentations of their Brethren (all which they deſire to Forget and Forgive!) been many times thrown into a Dung-Cart; yet, as they have been a precious Odour to God in Chriſt, ſo, I hope, they will be a precious Odour unto His People; and not only Precious, but Uſeful alſo, when the Hiſtory of them ſhall come to be conſidered. A Reformation of the Church is coming on, and I cannot but thereupon ſay, with the dying Cyrus to his Children in Xenophon, 'Εκ τῶν προγεγεννημένων μανθάνετε, αὕτη γὰρ ἀρίστη διδασκαλία. Learn from the things that have been done already, for this is the beſt way of Learning. The Reader hath here an Account of The Things that have been done already. Bernard upon that Clauſe in the Canticles, [O thou faireſt among Women] has this ingenious Gloſs, Pulchram, non omnimode quidem, ſed pulchram inter mulieres eam docet, videlicet cum Diſtinctione, quatenus ex hoc amplius reprimatur*, & ſciat quid deſit ſibi. Thus I do not ſay, That the Churches of New-England are the moſt Regular that can be; yet I do ſay, and am ſure, That they are very like unto thoſe that were in the Firſt Ages of Chriſtianity. And if I aſſert, That in the Reformation of the Church, the State of it in thoſe Firſt Ages, is to be not a little conſidered, the Great Peter Ramus, among others, has emboldened me. For when the Cardinal of Lorrain, the Mæcenas of that Great Man, was offended at him, for turning Proteſtant, he replied, Inter Opes illas, quibus me ditaſti, has etiam in æternum recordabor, quod Beneficio, Poeſſiacæ Reſponſionis tuæ didici, de Quindecim a Chriſto ſæculis, primum vere eſſe aureum, Reliqua, quo longius abſcederent eſſe nequiora, atque deteriora: Tum igitur cum fieret optio, Aureum ſæculum delegi. In ſhort, The Firſt Age was the Golden Age: To return unto That, will make a Man a Proteſtant, and I may add, a Puritan. 'Tis poſſible, That our Lord Jeſus Chriſt carried ſome Thouſands of Reformers into the Retirements of an American Deſart, on purpoſe, that, with an opportunity granted unto many of his Faithful Servants, to enjoy the precious Liberty of their Miniſtry, tho' in the midſt of many Temptations all their days, He might there, To them firſt, and then By them, give a Specimen of many Good Things, which He would have His Churches elſewhere aſpire and ariſe unto: And This being done, He knows not whether there be not All done, that New-England was planted for; and whether the Plantation may not, ſoon after this, Come to Nothing.

Upon that Expreſſion in the Sacred Scripture, Caſt the unprofitable Servant into Outer Darkneſs, it hath been imagined by ſome, That the Regiones Exteræ of America, are the Teuebræ Exteriores, which the Unprofitable are there condemned unto. No doubt, the Authors of thoſe Eccleſiaſtical Impoſitions and Severities, which drove the Engliſh Chriſtians into the Dark Regions of America, eſteemed thoſe Chriſtians to be a very unprofitable ſort of Creatures. But behold, ye European Churches, There are Golden Candleſticks [more than twice Seven times Seven!] in the midſt of this Outer Darkneſs: Unto the upright Children of Abraham, here hath ariſen Light in Darkneſs. And let us humbly ſpeak it, it ſhall be Profitable for you to conſider the Light, which from the midſt of this Outer Darkneſs, is now to be Darted over unto the other ſide of the Atlantick Ocean. But we muſt therewithal ask your Prayers, that theſe Golden Candleſticks may not quickly be Removed out of their place!

§. 4. But whether New-England may Live any where elſe or no, it muſt Live in our Hiſtory!

HISTORY, in general, hath had ſo many and mighty Commendations from the Pens of thoſe Numberleſs Authors, who, from Herodotus to Howel, have been the profeſſed Writers of it, that a tenth part of them Tranſcribed, would be a Furniture for a Polyanthea in Folio. We, that have neither liberty, nor occaſion, to quote thoſe Commendations of Hiſtory, will content our ſelves with the Opinion of one who was not much of a profeſs'd Hiſtorian, expreſſed in that paſſage, whereto all Mankind ſubſcribe, Hiſtoria eſt Teſtis temporum, Nuntia vetuſtatis, Lux veritatis, vita memoriæ, magiſtra vitæ. But of all Hiſtory it muſt be confeſſed, that the Palm is to be given unto Church-Hiſtory; wherein the Dignity, the Suavity, and the Utility of the Subject is tranſcendent. I obſerve, that for the Deſcription of the whole World in the Book of Geneſis, that Firſt-born of all Hiſtorians, the great Moſes, implies but one or two Chapters, whereas he implies, it may be ſeven times as many Chapters, in deſcribing that one little Pavilion, The Tabernacle. And when I am thinking, what may be the Reaſon of this Difference, methinks it intimates unto us, That the Church wherein the Service of God is performed, is much more Precious than the World, which was indeed created for the Sake and Uſe of the Church. 'Tis very certain, that the greateſt Entertainments muſt needs occur in the Hiſtory of the People, whom the Son of God hath Redeemed and Purified unto himſelf, as a Peculiar People, and whom the Spirit of God, by Supernatural Operations upon their Minds, does cauſe to live like Strangers in this World, conforming themſelves unto the Truths and Rules of his Holy Word, in Expectation of a Kingdom, whereto they ſhall be in another and a better World advanced. Such a People our Lord Jeſus Chriſt hath procured and preſerved in all Ages viſible; and the Diſpenſations of his wonderous Providence towards this People (for, O Lord, thou do'ſt lift them up, and caſt them down!) their Calamities, their Deliverances, the Diſpoſitions which they have ſtill diſcovered, and the conſiderable Perſons and Actions found among them, cannot but afford Matters of Admiration and Admonition, above what any other Story can pretend unto: 'Tis nothing but Atheiſm in the Hearts of Men, that can perſwade them otherwiſe. Let any Perſon of good Senſe peruſe the Hiſtory of Herodotus, which, like a River taking Riſe, where the Sacred Records of the Old Teſtament leave off, runs along ſmoothly and ſweetly, with Relations that ſometimes perhaps want an Apology, down until the Grecians drive the Perſians before them. Let him then peruſe Thucydides, who from Acting betook himſelf to Writing, and carries the ancient State of the Grecians, down to the twenty firſt Year of the Peloponneſian Wars in a manner, which Caſaubon judges to be Mirandum potius quam imitandum. Let him next Revolve Xenophon, that Bee of Athens, who continues a Narrative of the Greek Affairs, from the Peloponneſian Wars, to the Battle of Mantinea, and gives us a Cyrus into the bargain, at ſuch a rate, that Lipſius reckons the Character of a Suavi, Fidus & Circumſpectus Scriptor, to belong unto him. Let him from hence proceed unto Diodorus Siculus, who, beſides a rich Treaſure of Egyptian, Aſſyrian, Lybian and Grecian, and other Antiquities, in a Phraſe, which according to Photius's Judgment, is ἱϛορία μάλιϛα πρέπȣσῃ, of all moſt becoming an Hiſtorian, carries on the Thread begun by his Predeceſſors, until the End of the Hundred and nineteenth Olympiad; and where he is defective, let it be ſupplied from Arianus, from Juſtin, and from Curtius, who in the reliſh of Colerus is, Quovis melle dulcior. Let him hereupon conſult Polybius, and acquaint himſelf with the Birth and Growth of the Roman Empire, as far as 'tis deſcribed, in Five of the Forty Books compoſed by an Author, who with a Learned Profeſſor of Hiſtory is, Prudens Scriptor, ſi quis alius. Let him now run over the Table of the Roman Affairs, compendiouſly given by Lucius Florus, and then let him conſider the Tranſactions of above three hundred Years reported by Dionyſius Halicarnaſſæus, who, if the Cenſure of Bodin may be taken, Græcos omnes & Latinos ſuperaſſe videatur. Let him from hence paſs to Livy, of whom the famous Critick ſays, Hoc ſolum ingenium (de Hiſtoricis Loquor) populus Romanus par Imperio ſuo habuit, and ſupply thoſe of his Decads that are loſt, from the beſt Fragments of Antiquity, in others (and eſpecially Dion and Saluſt) that lead us on ſtill further in our way. Let him then proceed unto the Writers of the Ceſarean times, and firſt revolve Suetonius, then Tacitus, then Herodian, then a whole Army more of Hiſtorians, which now crowd into our Library; and unto all the reſt, let him not fail of adding the Incomparable Plutarch, whoſe Books they ſay, Theodore Gaza preferred above any in the World, next unto the Inſpired Oracles of the Bible: But if the Number be ſtill too little to ſatisfie an Hiſtorical Appetite, let him add Polyhiſtor unto the number, and all the Chronicles of the following Ages. After all, he muſt ſenſibly acknowledge, that the two ſhort Books of Eccleſiaſtical Hiſtory, written by the Evangeliſt Luke, hath given us more glorious Entertainments, than all theſe voluminous Hiſtorians if they were put all together. The Atchievements of one Paul particularly, which that Evangeliſt hath Emblazon'd, have more True Glory in them, than all the Acts of thoſe Execrable Plunderers and Murderers, and irreſiſtible Banditti of the World, which have been dignified with the Name of Conquerors. Tacitus counted Ingentia bella, Expugnationes urbium, fuſos captoſque Reges, the Ravages of War, and the glorious Violences, whereof great Warriors make a wretched Oſtentation, to be the Nobleſt Matter for an Hiſtorian. But there is a Nobler, I humbly conceive, in the planting and forming of Evangelical Churches, and the Temptations, the Corruptions, the Afflictions, which aſſault them, and their Salvations from thoſe Aſſaults, and the Exemplary Lives of thoſe that Heaven employs to be Patterns of Holineſs and Vſefulneſs upon Earth: And unto ſuch it is, that I now invite my Readers; Things, in compariſon whereof, the Subjects of many other Hiſtories, are of as little weight, as the Queſtions about Z, the laſt Letter of our Alphabet, and whether H is to be pronounced with an Aſpiration, where about whole Volumes have been written, and of no more Account, than the Compoſure of Didymus. But for the manner of my treating this Matter, I muſt now give ſome account unto him.

§. 5. Reader! I have done the part of an Impartial Hiſtorian, albeit not without all occaſion perhaps, for the Rule which a worthy Writer, in his Hiſtorica, gives to every Reader, Hiſtorici Legantur cum Moderatione & venia, & cogitetur fieri non poſſe ut in omnibus circumſtantiis ſint Lymei. Polybius complains of thoſe Hiſtorians, who always made either the Carthagenians brave, and the Romans baſe, or è contra, in all their Actions, as their Affection for their own Party led them. I have eadeavoured, with all good Conſcience, to decline this writing meerly for a Party, or doing like the Dealer in Hiſtory, whom Lucian derides, for always calling the Captain of his own Party an Achilles, but of the adverſe Party a Therſites: Nor have I added unto the juſt Provocations for the Complaint made by the Baron Maurier, That the greateſt part of Hiſtories are but ſo many Panegyricks compoſed by Intereſted Hands, which elevate Iniquity to the Heavens, like Paterculus, and like Machiavel, who propoſe Tiberius Ceſar, and Ceſar Borgia, as Examples fit for Imitation, whereas True Hiſtory would have Exhibited them as Horrid Monſters, as very Devils. 'Tis true, I am not of the Opinion, that one cannot merit the Name of an Impartial Hiſtorian, except he write bare Matters of Fact, without all Reflection; for I can tell where to find this given as the Definition of Hiſtory, Hiſtoria eſt rerum geſtarum, cum laude aut vituperatione, Narratio: And if I am not altogether a Tacitus, when Vertues or Vices occur to be Matters of Reflection, as well as of Relation, I will, for my Vindication, appeal to Tacitus himſelf, whom Lipſius calls one of the Prudenteſt (tho' Tertullian, long before, counts him the Lyingeſt) of them who have Inriched the World with Hiſtory: He ſays, Præcipuum munus Annalium reor, ne virtutes ſileantur, utque pravis Dictis, Factiſque ex poſteritate & Infamia metus ſit. I have not Commended any Perſon, but when I have really judg'd, not only That he Deſerved it, but alſo that it would be a Benefit unto Poſterity to know, Wherein he deſerved it: And my Judgment of Deſert, hath not been Biaſſed, by Perſons being of my own particular Judgment in matters of Diſputation, among the Churches of God. I have been as willing to wear the Name of Simplicius Verinus, throughout my whole undertaking, as he that, before me, hath aſſumed it: Nor am I like Pope Zachary, impatient ſo much as to hear of any Antipodes. The Spirit of a Schluſſelbergius, who falls foul with Fury and Reproach on all who differ from him; The Spirit of an Heylin, who ſeems to count no Obloquy too hard for a Reformer; and the Spirit of thoſe (Folio-writers there are, ſome of them, in the Engliſh Nation!) whom a Noble Hiſtorian Stigmatizes, as, Thoſe Hot-headed, Paſſionate Bigots, from whom, 'tis enough, if you be of a Religion contrary unto theirs, to be defamed, condemned and purſued with a thouſand Calumnies. I thank Heaven I Hate it with all my Heart. But how can the Lives of the Commendable be written without Commending them? Or, is that Law of Hiſtory given in one of the eminenteſt pieces of Antiquity we now have in our hands, wholly antiquated, Maxime proprium eſt Hiſtoriæ, Laudem rerum egregie geſtarum perſequi? Nor have I, on the other ſide, forbore to mention many Cenſurable things, even in the Beſt of my Friends, when the things, in my opinion, were not Good; or ſo bore away for Placentia, in the courſe of our Story, as to paſs by Verona; but been mindful of the Direction which Polybius gives to the Hiſtorian, It becomes him that writes an Hiſtory, ſometimes to extol Enemies in his Praiſes, when their praiſe-worthy Actions beſpeak it, and at the ſame time to reprove the beſt Friends, when their Deeds appear worthy of a reproof; in-as much as Hiſtory is good for nothing, if Truth (which is the very Eye of the Animal) be not in it. Indeed I have thought it my duty upon all accounts, (and if it have proceeded unto the degree of a Fault, there is, it may be, ſomething in my Temper and Nature, that has betray'd me therein) to be more ſparing and eaſie, in thus mentioning of Cenſurable things, than in my other Liberty: A writer of Church-Hiſtory, ſhould, I know, be like the builder of the Temple, one of the Tribe of Naphtali; and for this I will alſo plead my Polybius in my Excuſe; It is not the Work of an Hiſtorian, to commemorate the Vices and Villanies of Men, ſo much as their juſt, their fair, their honeſt Actions: And the Readers of Hiſtory get more good by the Objects of their Emulation,

Emulation, than of their Indignation. Nor do I deny, that tho' I cannot approve the Conduct of Joſephus, (whom Jerom not unjuſtly nor ineptly calls, The Greek Livy) when he left out of his Antiquities, the Story of the Golden Calf, and I don't wonder to find Chamier, and Rivet, and others, taxing him for his Partiality towards his Country-men; yet I have left unmentioned ſome Cenſurable Occurrences in the Story of our Colonies, as things no leſs Unuſeful than Improper to be raiſed out of the Grave, wherein Oblivion hath now buried them; leſt I ſhould have incurred the Paſquil beſtowed upon Pope Urban, who employing a Committee to Rip up the Old Errors of his Predeceſſors, one clap'd a pair of Spurs upon the heels of the Statue of St. Peter; and a Label from the Statue of St. Paul oppoſite thereunto, upon the Bridge, ask'd him, Whither he was bound? St. Peter anſwered, I apprehend ſome Danger in ſtaying here; I fear they'll call me in Queſtion for denying my Maſter. And St. Paul replied, Nay, then I had beſt be gone too, for they'll queſtion me alſo, for Perſecuting the Chriſtians before my Converſion. Briefly, My Pen ſhall Reproach none, that can give a Good Word unto any Good Man that is not of their own Faction, and ſhall Fall out with none, but thoſe that can Agree with no body elſe, except thoſe of their own Schiſm. If I draw any ſort of Men with Charcoal, it ſhall be, becauſe I remember a notable paſſage of the Beſt Queen that ever was in the World, our late Queen Mary. Monſieur Juvien, that he might Juſtifie the Reformation in Scotland, made a very black Repreſentation of their old Queen Mary; for which, a certain Sycophant would have incenſed our Queen Mary againſt that Reverend Perſon, ſaying, Is it not a Shame that this Man, without any Conſideration for your Royal Perſon, ſhould dare to throw ſuch Infamous Calumnies upon a Queen, from whom your Royal Highneſs is deſcended? But that Excellent Princeſs replied, No, not at all; Is it not enough that by fulſome Praiſes great Perſons be lull'd aſleep all their Lives; But muſt Flattery accompany them to their very Graves? How ſhould they fear the Judgment of Poſterity, if Hiſtorians be not allowed to ſpeak the Truth after their Death? But whether I do my ſelf Commend, or whether I give my Reader an opportunity to Cenſure, I am careful above all things to do it with Truth; and as I have conſidered the words of Plato, Deum indigne & graviter ferre, cum quis ei ſimilem hoc eſt, virtute præſtantem, vituperet, aut laudet contrarium: So I have had the Ninth Commandment of a greater Law-giver than Plato, to preſerve my care of Truth from firſt to laſt. If any Miſtake have been any where committed, it will be found meerly Circumſtantial, and wholly Involuntary; and let it be remembred, that tho' no Hiſtorian ever merited better than the Incomparable Thuanus, yet learned Men have ſaid of his Work, what they never ſhall truly ſay of ours, that it contains multa falſiſſima & indigna. I find Eraſmus himſelf miſtaking One Man for Two, when writing of the Ancients. And even our own Engliſh Writers too are often miſtaken, and in Matters of a very late Importance, as Baker, and Heylin, and Fuller, (profeſſed Hiſtorians) tell us, that Richard Sutton, a ſingle Man, founded the Charter-Houſe; whereas his Name was Thomas, and he was a married Man. I think I can Recite ſuch Miſtakes, it may be Sans Number occurring in the moſt credible Writers; yet I hope I ſhall commit none ſuch. But altho' I thus challenge, as my due, the Character of an Impartial, I doubt I may not challenge That of an Elegant Hiſtorian: I cannot ſay, whether the Style, wherein this Church-Hiſtory is written, will pleaſe the Modern Criticks: But if I ſeem to have uſed ἀπλουστάτῃ συντάξει γραφῆς, a Simple, Submiſs, Humble Style, 'tis the ſame that Euſebius affirms to have been uſed by Hegeſippus, who, as far as we underſtand, was the firſt Author (after Luke) that ever compoſed an entire Body of Eccleſiaſtical Hiſtory, which he divided into Five Books, and Entitled, ὑπομνήματα τῶν ἐκκλησιαστικῶν πράξεων. Whereas others, it may be, will reckon the Style Embelliſhed with too much of Ornament, by the multiplied References to other and former Concerns, cloſely couch'd, for the Obſervation of the Attentive, in almoſt every Paragraph; but I muſt confeſs, that I am of his mind who ſaid, Sicuti ſal modice cibis aſperſus Condit, & gratiam ſaporis addit, ita ſi paulum Antiquitatis admiſcueris, Oratio fit veniſtior. And I have ſeldom ſeen that Way of Writing faulted, but by thoſe, who, for a certain odd Reaſon, ſometimes find fault, That the Grapes are not ripe. Theſe Embelliſhments (of which yet I only--Veniam pro laude peto) are not the puerile Spoils of Polyanthea's; but I ſhould have aſſerted them to be as choice Flowers as moſt that occur in Ancient or Modern Writings, almoſt unavoidably putting themſelves into the Authors Hand, while about his Work, if thoſe words of Ambroſe had not a little frighted me, as well as they did Baronius, Unumquemque Fallunt ſua ſcripta. I obſerve that Learned Men have been ſo terrified by the Reproaches of Pedantry, which little Smatterers at Reading and Learning have, by their Quoting Humours brought upon themſelves, that, for to avoid all Approaches towards that which thoſe Feeble Creatures have gone to imitate, the beſt way of Writing has been moſt injuriouſly deſerted. But what ſhall we ſay? The Beſt way of Writing, under Heaven, ſhall be the Worſt, when Eraſmus his Monoſyllable Tyrant will have it ſo! And if I ſhould have reſign'd my ſelf wholly to the Judgment of others, What way of Writing to have taken, the Story of the two Statues made by Policletus tells me, what may have been the Iſſue: He contrived one of them according to the Rules that beſt pleaſed himſelf, and the other according to the Fancy of every one that look'd upon his Work: The former was afterwards Applauded by all, and the latter Derided by thoſe very Perſons who had given their Directions for it. As for ſuch Unaccuracies as the Critical may diſcover, Opere in longo, I appeal to the Courteous, for a favourable Conſtruction of them; and certainly they will be favourably Judged of, when there is conſidered the Variety of my other Employments, which have kept me in continual Hurries, I had almoſt ſaid, like thoſe of the Ninth Sphere, for the few Months in which this Work has been Digeſting. It was a thing well thought, by the wiſe Deſigners of Chelſey-Colledge, wherein able Hiſtorians were one ſort of Perſons to be maintained; That the Romaniſts do in one Point condemn the Proteſtants; for among the Romaniſts, they don't burden their Profeſſors with any Parochial Incumbrances; but among the Proteſtants, the very ſame Individual Man muſt Preach, Catechize, Adminiſter the Sacraments, Viſit the Afflicted, and manage all the parts of Church-Diſcipline; and if any Books for the Service of Religion, be written, Perſons thus extreamly incumbred muſt be the Writers. Now, of all the Churches under Heaven, there are none that expect ſo much Variety of Service from their Paſtors, as thoſe of New-England; and of all the Churches in New-England, there are none that require more, than thoſe in Boſton, the Metropolis of the Engliſh America; whereof one is, by the Lord Jeſus Chriſt, committed unto the Care of the unworthy Hand, by which this Hiſtory is compiled. Reader, Give me leave humbly to mention, with him in Tully, Antequam de Re, Pauca de Me! Conſtant Sermons, uſually more than once, and perhaps three or four times, in a Week, and all the other Duties of a Paſtoral Watchfulneſs, a very large Flock has all this while demanded of me; wherein, if I had been furniſhed with as many Heads as a Typheus, as many Eyes as an Argos, and as many Hands as a Briareus, I might have had Work enough to have employ'd them all; nor hath my Station left me free from Obligations to ſpend very much time in the Evangelical Service of others alſo. It would have been a great Sin in me, to have Omitted, or Abated, my Juſt Cares, to fulfil my Miniſtry in theſe things, and in a manner Give my ſelf wholly to them. All the time I have had for my Church-Hiſtory, hath been perhaps only, or chiefly, that, which I might have taken elſe for leſs profitable Recreations; and it hath all been done by Snatches. My Reader will not find me the Perſon intended in his Littany, when he ſays, Libera me ab homine unius Negotiis: Nor have I ſpent Thirty Years in ſhaping this my Hiſtory, as Diodorus Siculus did for his, [and yet both Bodinus and Sigonius complain of the Σφαλματα attending it.] But I wiſh I could have enjoy'd entirely for this Work, one quarter of the little more than Two Years which have roll'd away ſince I began it; whereas I have been forced ſometimes wholly to throw by the Work whole Months together, and then reſume it, but by a ſtolen hour or two in a day, not without ſome hazard of incurring the Title which Coryat put upon his Hiſtory of his Travels, Crudities haſtily gobbled up in five Months. Protogenes being ſeven Years in drawing a Picture, Apelles upon the ſight of it, ſaid, The Grace of the Work was much allay'd by the length of the Time. Whatever elſe there may have been to take off the Grace of the Work, now in the Readers hands, (whereof the Pictures of Great and Good Men make a conſiderable part) I am ſure there hath not been the length of the Time to do it. Our Engliſh Martyrologer, counted it a ſufficient Apology, for what Meanneſs might be found in the firſt Edition of his Acts and Monuments, that it was haſtily raſhed up in about fourteen Months: And I may Apologize for this Collection of our Acts and Monuments, that I ſhould have been glad, in the little more than Two Years which have ran out, ſince I enter'd upon it, if I could have had one half of About fourteen Months to have entirely devoted thereunto. But beſides the Time, which the Daily Services of my own firſt, and then many other Churches, have neceſſarily call'd for, I have loſt abundance of precious Time, thro' the feeble and broken State of my Health, which hath unfitted me for Hard Study; I can do nothing to purpoſe at Lucubrations. And yet, in this Time alſo of the two or three Years laſt paſt, I have not been excuſed from the further Diverſion of Publiſhing (tho' not ſo many as they ſay Mercurius Triſmegiſtus did, yet) more than a Score of other Books, upon a copious Variety of other Subjects, beſides the compoſing of ſeveral more, that are not yet publiſhed. Nor is this neither all the Task that I have in this while had lying upon me; for (tho' I am very ſenſible of what Jerom ſaid, Non bene fit, quod occupato Animo fit; and of Quintilian's Remark, Non ſimul in multa intendere Animus totum poteſt;) when I applied my mind unto this way of ſerving the Lord JESUS CHRIST in my Generation, I ſet upon another and a greater, which has had, I ſuppoſe, more of my Thought and Hope than this, and wherein there hath paſſed me, for the moſt part, Nulla dies ſine linea. I conſidered, That all ſort of Learning might be made glorioſly Subſervient unto the Illuſtration of the Sacred Scripture; and that no profeſſed Commentaries had hitherto given a thouſandth part of ſo much Illuſtration unto it, as might be given. I conſidered, that Multitudes of particular Texts, had, eſpecially of later Years, been more notably Illuſtrated in the Scattered Books of Learned Men, than in any of the Ordinary Commentators. And I conſider'd, That the Treaſures of Illuſtration for the Bible, diſperſed in many hundred Volumes, might be fetch'd all together by a Labour that would reſolve to Conquer all things; and that all the Improvements which the Later-ages have made in the Sciences, might be alſo, with an inexpreſſible Pleaſure, call'd in, to Chriſt the Illuſtration of the Holy Oracles, at a Rate that hath not been attempted in the vulgar Annotations; and that a common degree of Senſe, would help a Perſon, who ſhould converſe much with theſe things, to attempt ſometimes alſo an Illuſtration of his own, which might expect ſome Attention. Certainly, it will not be ungrateful unto good Men, to have innumerable Antiquities, Jewiſh, Chaldee, Arabian, Grecian and Roman, brought home unto us, with a Sweet Light Reflected from them on the Word, which is our Light: Or, To have all the Typical

Men and things in our Book of Myſteries, accommodated with their Antitypes: Or, To have many Hundreds of References to our deareſt Lord Meſſiah, diſcovered in the Writings which Teſtifie of Him, oftner than the moſt of Mankind have hitherto imagined: Or, To have the Hiſtories of all Ages, coming in with punctual and ſurpriſing Fulfillments of the Divine Prophecies, as far as they have been hitherto fulfilled; and not meer Conjectures, but even Mathematical and Inconteſtable Demonſtrations, given of Expoſitions offered upon the Prophecies, that yet remain to be accompliſhed: Or, To have in One Heap, Thouſands of thoſe Remarkable Diſcoveries of the deep things of the Spirit of God, whereof one or two, or a few, ſometimes, have been with good Succeſs accounted Materials enough to advance a Perſon into Authoriſm; or to have the delicious Curioſities of Grotius, and Bochart, and Mede, and Lightfoot, and Selden, and Spencer (carefully ſelected and corrected) and many more Giants in Knowledge, all ſet upon one Table. Travellers tell us, That at Florence there is a rich Table, worth a thouſand Crowns, made of Precious Stones neatly inlaid; a Table that was fifteen Years in making, with no leſs than thirty Men daily at work upon it; even ſuch a Table could not afford ſo rich Entertainments, as one that ſhould have the Soul-feaſting Thoughts of thoſe Learned Men together ſet upon it. Only 'tis pitty, that inſtead of one poor feeble American, overwhelm'd with a thouſand other Cares, and capable of touching this Work no otherwiſe than in a Digreſſion, there be not more than Thirty Men daily employ'd about it. For, when the excellent Mr. Pool had finiſhed his Laborious and Immortal Task, it was noted by ſome conſiderable Perſons, That wanting Aſſiſtance to Collect for him many miſcellaneous Criticiſms, occaſionally ſcattered in other Authors, he left many better Things behind him than he found. At more than all this, our Eſſay is levell'd, if it be not anticipated with that Epitaph, agnis tamen excidit auſis. Deſigning accordingly, to give the Church of God ſuch diſplays of his bleſſed Word, as may be more Entertaining for the Rarity and Novelty of them, than any that have hitherto been ſeen together in any Expoſition; and yet ſuch as may be acceptable unto the moſt Judicious, for the Demonſtrative Truth of them, and unto the moſt Orthodox, for the regard had unto the Analogy of Faith in all, I have now, in a few Months, got ready an huge number of Golden Keys to open the Pandects of Heaven, and ſome thouſands of charming and curious and ſingular Notes, by the New Help whereof, the Word of CHRIST may run and be glorified. If the God of my Life, will pleaſe to ſpare my Life [my yet Sinful, and Slothful, and thereby Fofeited Life!] as many years longer as the Barren Fig-tree had in the Parable, I may make unto the Church of God, an humble Tender of our BIBLIA AMERICANA, a Volumn enrich'd with better things than all the Plate of the Indies; YET NOT I, BUT THE GRACE OF CHRIST WITH ME. My Reader ſees, why I commit the Fault of a περιαυτία, which appears in the mention of theſe Minute-paſſages; 'tis to excuſe whatever other Fault of Inaccuracy, or Inadvertency, may be diſcovered in an Hiſtory, which hath been a ſort of Rapſody made up (like the Paper whereon 'tis written!) with many little Rags, torn from an Employment, multifarious enough to overwhelm one of my ſmall Capacities.

Magna dabit, qui magna poteſt; mihi parva potenti,
Parvaque poſcenti, parva dediſſe ſat eſt.

§. 6. But ſhall I prognoſticate thy Fate, now that,

Parve (ſed invideo) ſine me, Liber, ibis in Urbem.

Luther, who was himſelf owner of ſuch an Heart, adviſed every Hiſtorian to get the Heart of a Lion; and the more I conſider of the Provocation, which this our Church Hiſtory muſt needs give to that Roaring Lion, who has, through all Ages hitherto, been tearing the Church to pieces; the more occaſion I ſee to wiſh my ſelf a Cœur de Lion. But had not my Heart been Trebly Oak'd and Braſs'd for ſuch Encounters as this our Hiſtory may meet withal, I would have worn the Silk-worms Motto, Operitur dum Operatur, and have choſen to have written Anonymouſly; or, as Claudius Salmaſius calls himſelf Walo Meſſalinus, as Ludovicus Molinæus calls himſelf Ludiomæus Colvinus, as Carolus Scribanius calls himſelf Clarus Bonarſcius, (and no leſs Men than Peter du Moulin, and Dr. Henry More, ſtile themſelves, the one Hippolytus Fronto, the other Franciſcus Paleopolitanus.) Thus I would have tried, whether I could not have Anagrammatized my Name into ſome Concealment; or I would have referr'd it to be found in the ſecond Chapter of the ſecond Syntagm of Selden de Diis Syris. Whereas now I freely confeſs, 'tis COTTON MATHER that has written all theſe things;

Me, me, ad ſum qui ſcripſi; tu me convertite Ferrum.

I hope 'tis a right Work that I have done; but we are not yet arrived unto the Day, wherein God will bring every Work into Judgment (the Day of the Kingdom that was promiſed unto David) and a Son of David hath as Truly as Wiſely told us, that until the arrival of that Happy Day, this is one of the Vanities attending Humane Affairs; For a right VVork a Man ſhall be envied of his Neighbour. It will not be ſo much a Surpriſe unto me, if I ſhould live to ſee our Church-Hiſtory vexed with Anie-mad-verſions of Calumnious Writers, as it would have been unto Virgil, to read his Bucolicks reproached by the Antibucolica of a Nameleſs Scribbler, and his Æneids traveſtied by the Æneidomaſtix of Carbilius: Or Herennius taking pains to make a Collection of the Faults, and Fauſtinus of the Thefts, in his incomparable Compoſures: Yea, Pliny, and

Seneca themſelves, and our Jerom, reproaching him, as a Man of no Judgment, nor Skill in Sciences; while Pædianus affirms of him, that he was himſelf, Uſque adeo invidiæ Expers, ut ſi quid erudite dictum inſpiceret alterius, non minus gauderet ac ſi ſuum eſſet. How ſhould a Book, no better laboured than this of ours, eſcape Zoilian Outrages, when in all Ages, the moſt exquiſite Works have been as much vilified, as Plato's by Scaliger, and Ariſtotle's by Lactantius? In the time of our K. Edward VI. there was an Order to bring in all the Teeth of St. Apollonia, which the People of his one Kingdom carried about them for the Cure of the Tooth ach; and they were ſo many, that they almoſt fill'd a Tun. Truly Envy hath as many Teeth as Madam Apollonia would have had, if all thoſe pretended Reliques had been really hers. And muſt all theſe Teeth be faſtned on thee, O my Book? It may be ſo! And yet the Book, when ground between theſe Teeth, will prove like Ignatius in the Teeth of the furious Tygers, The whiter Manchet for the Churches of God. The greateſt and fierceſt Rage of Envy, is that which I expect from thoſe IDUMÆANS, whoſe Religion is all Ceremony, and whoſe Charity is more for them who deny the moſt Eſſential things in the Articles and Homilies of the Church of England, than for the moſt Conſcientious Men in the World, who manifeſt their being ſo, by their Diſſent in ſome little Ceremony: Or thoſe Perſons whoſe Hearts are notably expreſſed in thoſe words uſed by one of them ['tis Howel in his Familiar Letters, Vol. 1. Sect. 6. Lett. 32.] I rather pitty, than hate, Turk or Infidel, for they are of the ſame Metal, and bear the ſame Stamp, as I do, tho' the Inſcriptions differ; If I hate any, 'tis thoſe Schiſmaticks that puzzle the ſweet Peace of our Church; ſo that I could be content to ſee an Anabaptiſt go to Hell on a Browniſts Back. The Writer whom I laſt quoted, hath given us a Story of a young Man in High-Holbourn, who being after his death Diſſected, there was a Serpent with divers tails, found in the left Ventricle of his Heart. I make no queſtion, that our Church-Hiſtory will find ſome Reader diſpoſed like that Writer, with an Heart as full of Serpent and Venom as ever it can hold: Nor indeed will they be able to hold, but the Tongues and Pens of thoſe angry Folks, will ſcourge me as with Scorpions, and cauſe me to feel (if I will feel) as many Laſhes as Cornelius Agrippa expected from their Brethren, for the Book in which he expoſed their Vanities. A Scholar of the great JUELS, made once about fourſcore Verſes, for which the Cenſor of Corpus Chriſti Colledge in the beginning of Queen Maries Reign, publickly and cruelly ſcourged him, with one Laſh for every Verſe. Now in thoſe Verſes, the young Man's Prayers to the Lord JESUS CHRIST, have this for part of the anſwer given to them.

Reſpondet Dominus, ſpectans de ſedibus altis,
Ne dubites recte credere, parve puer.
Olim ſum paſſus mortem, nunc occupo dextram
Patris, nunc ſummi ſunt mea regna poli.
Sed tu, crede mihi, vires Scriptura reſumet,
Tolleturque ſuo tempore miſſa nequam.

In Engliſh.

The Lord beholding from his Throne, reply'd,
Doubt not, O Youth, firmly in me confide:
I dy'd long ſince, now ſit at the Right Hand
Of my bleſs'd Father, and the World command.
Believe me, Scripture ſhall regain her ſway,
And wicked Maſs in due time fade away.

Reader, I alſo expect nothing but Scourges from that Generation, to whom the Maſs-book is dearer than the Bible. But I have now likewiſe confeſſed another Expectation, that ſhall be my Conſolation under all. They tell us, That on the higheſt of the Capſian Mountains in Spain, there is a Lake, whereinto if you throw a Stone, there preſently aſcends a Smoke, which forms a denſe Cloud, from whence iſſues a Tempeſt of Rain, Hail, and horrid Thunder-claps, for a good quarter of an hour. Our Church-Hiſtory will be like a Stone caſt into that Lake, for the furious Tempeſt which it will raiſe among ſome, whoſe Eccleſiaſtical Dignities have ſet them, as on the top of Spaniſh Mountains. The Catholick Spirit of Communion wherewith 'tis written, and the Liberty which I have taken, to tax the Schiſmatical Impoſitions and Perſecutions of a Party, who have always been as real Enemies to the Engliſh Nation, as to the Chriſtian and Proteſtant Intereſt, will certainly bring upon the whole Compoſure, the quick Cenſures of that Party, at the firſt caſt of their look upon it. In the Duke of Alva's Council of twelve Judges, there was one Heſſels a Flemming, who ſlept always at the Trial of Criminals, and when they wak'd him to deliver his Opinion, he rub'd his Eyes, and cry'd, between ſleeping and waking, Ad patibulum! ad Patibulum! To the Gallows with 'em! [And, by the way, this Blade was himſelf, at the laſt, condemned unto the Gallows, without an Hearing!] As quick Cenſures muſt this our Labour expect from thoſe who will not beſtow waking thoughts upon the Repreſentations of Chriſtianity here made unto the World; but have a Sentence of Death always to paſs, or at leaſt, Wiſh, upon thoſe Generous Principles, without which 'tis impoſſible to maintain the Reformation: And I confeſs, I am very well content, that this our Labour takes the Fate of thoſe Principles: Nor do I diſſent from the words of the Excellent VVhitaker upon Luther, Fœlix ille, quem Dominus eo Honore dignatus eſt, ut Homines nequiſſimos ſuos haberet inimicos. But if the old Epigrammatiſt, when he ſaw Guilty Folks raving Mad at his Lines, could ſay——

Hoc volo; nunc nobis carmina noſtra placent:

Certainly an Hiſtorian ſhould not be diſpleaſed at it, if the Enemies of Truth diſcover their Madneſs at the true and free Communications of his Hiſtory; and therefore the more Stones they throw at this Book, there will not only be the more Proofs, that it is a Tree which hath good Fruits growing upon it, but I will build my ſelf a Monument with them, whereon ſhall be inſcribed, that Clauſe in the Epitaph of the Martyr Stephen:

Excepit Lapides, cui petra Chriſtus erat:

Albeit perhaps the Epitaph, which the old Monks beſtow'd upon Wickliff, will be rather endeavour'd for me, (If I am thought worth one!) by the Men, who will, with all poſſible Monkery, ſtrive to ſtave off the approaching Reformation.

But ſince an Undertaking of this Nature, muſt thus encounter ſo much Envy, from thoſe who are under the Power of the Spirit that works in the Children of Unperſwadeableneſs, methinks I might perſwade my ſelf, that it will find another ſort of Entertainment from thoſe Good Men who have a better Spirit in them: For, as the Apoſtle James hath noted, (ſo with Monſieur Claude I read it) The Spirit that is in us, luſteth againſt Envy; and yet even in us alſo, there will be the Fleſh, among whoſe Works, one is Envy, which will be Luſting againſt the Spirit. All Good Men will not be ſatisfied with every thing that is here ſet before them. In my own Country, beſides a conſiderable number of looſe and vain Inhabitants riſen up, to whom the Congregational Church-Diſcipline, which cannot Live well, where the Power of Godlineſs dyes, is become diſtaſtful for the Purity of it; there is alſo a number of eminently Godly Perſons, who are for a Larger way, and unto theſe my Church-Hiſtory will give diſtaſt, by the things which it may happen to utter, in favour of that Church-Diſcipline on ſome few occaſions; and the Diſcoveries which I may happen to make of my Apprehenſions, that Scripture, and Reaſon, and Antiquity is for it; and that it is not far from a glorious Reſurrection. But that, as the Famous Mr. Baxter, after Thirty or Forty Years hard Study, about the true Inſtituted Church-Diſcipline, at laſt, not only own'd, but alſo invincibly prov'd, That it is The Congregational; ſo, The further that the Unprejudiced Studies of Learned Men proceed in this Matter, the more generally the Congregational Church-Diſcipline will be pronounced for. On the other ſide, There are ſome among us, who very ſtrictly profeſs the Congregational Church-Diſcipline, but at the ſame time they have an unhappy Narrowneſs of Soul, by which they confine their value and Kindneſs too much unto their own Party; and unto thoſe my Church Hiſtory will be offenſive, becauſe my Regard unto our own declared Principles, does not hinder me from giving the Right-hand of Fellowſhip unto the valuable Servants of the Lord Jeſus Chriſt, who find not our Church-Diſcipline as yet agreeable unto their preſent Underſtandings and Illuminations. If it be thus in my own Country, it cannot be otherwiſe in That whereto I ſend this account of my own. Briefly, as it hath been ſaid, That if all Epiſcopal Men were like Archbiſhop Uſher, and all Presbyterians like Stephen Marſhal, and all Independents like Jeremiah Burroughs, the Wounds of the Church would ſoon be healed; my Eſſay to carry that Spirit through this whole Church-Hiſtory, will beſpeak Wounds for it, from thoſe that are of another Spirit. And there will alſo be in every Country thoſe Good Men, who yet have not had the Grace of Chriſt ſo far prevailing in them, as utterly to diveſt them of that piece of Ill Nature which the Comedian reſents, In homine Imperito, quo nil quicquam Injuſtius, quia niſi quod ipſe facit, nil recte factum putat.

However, All theſe things, and an hundred more ſuch things which I think of, are very ſmall Diſcouragements for ſuch a Service as I have here endeavoured. I foreſee a Recompence, which will abundantly ſwallow up all Diſcouragements! It may be Strato the Philoſopher counted himſelf well recompenſed for his Labours, when Ptolomy beſtow'd fourſcore Talents on him. It may be Archimelus the Poet counted himſelf well recompenſed, when Hiero ſent him a thouſand Buſhels of Wheat for one little Epigram: And Saleius the Poet might count himſelf well recompenſed, when Veſpaſian ſent him twelve thouſand and five hundred Philippicks; and Oppian the Poet might count himſelf well recompenſed, when Caracalla ſent him a piece of Gold for every Line that he had inſcribed unto him. As I live in a Country where ſuch Recompences never were in faſhion; it hath no Preferments for me, and I ſhall count that I am well Rewarded in it, if I can eſcape without being heavily Reproached, Cenſured and Condemned, for what I have done: So I thank the Lord, I ſhould exceedingly Scorn all ſuch mean Conſiderations, I ſeek not out for Benefactors, to whom theſe Labours may be Dedicated: There is ONE to whom all is due! From Him I ſhall have a Recompence: And what Recompence? The Recompence, whereof I do, with inexpreſſible Joy, aſſure my ſelf, is this, That theſe my poor Labours will certainly ſerve the Churches and Intereſts of the Lord Jeſus Chriſt. And I think I may ſay, That I ask to live no longer, than I count a Service unto the Lord Jeſus Chriſt, and his Churches, to be it ſelf a glorious Recompence for the doing of it. When David was contriving to build the Houſe of God, there was that order given from Heaven concerning him, Go tell David, my Servant. The adding of that more than Royal Title unto the Name of David, was a ſufficient Recompence for all his Contrivance about the Houſe of God. In our whole Church-Hiſtory, we have been at work for the Houſe of the Lord Jeſus Chriſt, [Even that Man who is the Lord God, and whoſe Form ſeems on that occaſion repreſented unto His David.] And herein 'tis Recompence enough, that I have been a Servant unto that heavenly Lord. The greateſt Honour, and the ſweeteſt Pleaſure, out of Heaven, is to Serve our Illuſtrious Lord JESUS CHRIST, who hath loved us, and given himſelf for us; and unto whom it is infinitely reaſonable that we ſhould give our ſelves, and all that we have and Are: And it may be the Angels in Heaven too, aſpire not after an higher Felicity.

Unto thee, therefore, O thou Son of God, and King of Heaven, and Lord of all things, whom all the Glorious Angels of Light, unſpeakably love to Glorifie; I humbly offer up a poor Hiſtory of Churches, which own thee alone for their Head, and Prince, and Law-giver; Churches which thou haſt purchas'd with thy own Blood, and with wonderful Diſpenſations of thy Providence hitherto protected and preſerved; and of a People which thou didſt Form for thy ſelf, to ſhew forth thy Praiſes. I bleſs thy great Name, for thy inclining of me to, and carrying of me through, the Work of this Hiſtory: I pray thee to ſprinkle the Book of this Hiſtory with thy Blood, and make it acceptable and profitable unto thy Churches, and ſerve thy Truths and Ways among thy People, by that which thou haſt here prepared; for 'tis THOU that haſt prepar'd it for them. Amen.

Quid ſum? Nil. Quis ſum? Nullus. Sed Gratia CHRISTI, Quod ſum, quod Vivo, quodque Laboro, facit.

ANTIQUITIES:

OR,

A FIELD prepar'd for Conſiderable Things to be Acted thereupon.

The INTRODUCTION.

IT was not long ago, as about the middle of the former Century, that under the Influences of that admirable Hero and Martyr, of the Proteſtant Religion, Gaſper Coligni, the great Admiral of France, a Noble and Learned Knight called Villagagnon, began to attempt the Settlement of ſome Colonies in AMERICA, (as it was declared) for the Propagation of that Religion. He Sailed with ſeveral Ships of no ſmall Burthen, till he arriv'd at Braſile; where he thought there were now ſhown him Quiet Seats, for the retreat of a People harraſs'd already with deadly Perſecutions, and threatned with yet more Calamities. Thence he wrote Home Letters unto that glorious Patron of the Reform'd Churches, to inform him, That he had now a fair Proſpect of ſeeing thoſe Churches erected, multiply'd and ſhelter'd in the Southern Regions of the New World; and requeſted him, That Geneva might ſupply them with Paſtors for the planting of ſuch Churches in theſe New Plantations. The Bleſſed Calvin, with his Collegues, thereupon ſent of their Number Two Worthy Perſons, namely Richerius and Quadrigarius, to aſſiſt this Undertaking; and unto theſe were joined ſeveral more, eſpecially Lerius, and, who became a Leader to the reſt, Corquillerius, an eminent Man, for the Cauſe of Chriſtianity, then reſiding at Geneva. Embark'd in three Ships, well fitted, they came to the American Country, whither they had been invited; and they ſoon ſet up an Evangelical Church Order, in thoſe Corners of the Earth where God in our Lord Jeſus Chriſt had never before been called upon. But it was not long before ſome unhappy Controverſies aroſe among them, which drove their Principal Miniſters into Europe again, beſides thoſe Three that were Murthered by their Apoſtate Governour, whoſe Martyrdom Lerius procured Criſpin to Commemorate in his Hiſtory, but I now omit in this of ours, Ne me Criſpini ſcrinia lecti, compitaſſe putes: And as for the People that ſtaid behind, no other can be Learn'd, but that they are entirely loſt, either in Paganiſm or Diſaſter: In this, more unhappy ſure, than that Hundred Thouſand of their Brethren who were ſoon after Butcher'd at Home, in that horrible Maſſacre, which then had not, but ſince hath, known a Parallel. So has there been utterly loſt in a little time, A Country intended for a Receptacle of Proteſtant Churches on the American Strand. It is the moſt Incomparable De Thou, the Honourable Preſident of the Parliament at Paris, an Hiſtorian whom Caſaubon Pronounces, A Singular Gift of Heaven, to the laſt Age, for an Example of Piety and Probity, that is our Author, (beſides others) for this Hiſtory.

'Tis now time for me to tell my Reader, that in our Age there has been another Eſſay, made not by French, but by Engliſh PROTESTANTS, to fill a certain Country in America with Reform'd Churches; nothing in Doctrine, little in Diſcipline, different from that of Geneva. Mankind will pardon me, a Native of that Country, if ſmitten with a juſt Fear of incroaching and ill-bodied Degeneracies, I ſhall uſe my Modeſt Endeavours to prevent the Loſs of a Country, ſo ſignaliz'd for the Profeſſion of the pureſt Religion, and for the Protection of God upon it, in that Holy Profeſſion. I ſhall count my Country loſt, in the Loſs of the Primitive Principles, and the Primitive Practices, upon which it was at firſt Eſtabliſhed: But certainly one good way to ſave that Loſs, wou'd be to do ſomething that the Memory of the great Things done for us by our God may not be loſt, and that the Story of the Circumſtances attending the Foundation and Formation of this Country, and of its Preſervation hitherto, may be impartially handed unto Poſterity. THIS is the Undertaking whereto I now Addreſs my ſelf ; and now, Grant me thy Gracious Aſſiſtances, O my God ; that in this my Undertaking I may be kept from every falſe way : But that ſincerely aiming at thy Glory in my Undertaking, I may find my Labours made Acceptable and Profitable unto thy Churches, and Serviceable unto the Intereſts of thy Goſpel ; ſo let my God think upon me for Good ; and ſpare me according to the greatneſs of thy Mercy in the Bleſſed Jeſus, Amen.

CHAP. I.

Veniſti tandem? Or Diſcoveries of AMERICA, tending to, and ending in, Diſcoveries of NEW-ENGLAND.

§. 1. IT is the Opinion of ſome, though 'tis but an Opinion, and but of ſome Learned Men, That when the Sacred Oracles of Heaven aſſure us, The Things under the Earth are ſome of thoſe, whoſe Knees are to bow in the Name of Jeſus, by thoſe Things are meant the Inhabitants of America, who are Antipodes to thoſe of the other Hemiſphere. I would not Quote any Words of Lactantius, tho' there are ſome to Countenance this Interpretation, becauſe of their being ſo Ungeographical: Nor would I go to ſtrengthen the Interpretation by reciting the Words of the Indians to the firſt White Invaders of their Territories, We hear you are come from under the World to take our World from us. But granting the uncertainty of ſuch an Expoſition, I ſhall yet give the Church of God a certain Account of thoſe Things, which in America have been Believing and Adoring the glorious Name of Jeſus ; and of that Country in America, where thoſe Things have been attended with Circumſtances moſt remarkable. I can contentedly allow that America (which as the Learned Nicolas Fuller Obſerves, might more juſtly be called Columbina) was altogether unknown to the Penmen of the Holy Scriptures, and in the Ages when the Scriptures were Penned. I can allow, that thoſe Parts of the Earth, which do not include America, are in the inſpired Writings of Luke, and of Paul, ſtiled, All the World. I can allow, that the Opinion of Torniellus, and of Pagius, about the Apoſtles Preaching the Goſpel in America, has been ſufficiently refuted by Baſnagius. But I am out of the reach of Pope Zachary's Excommunication. I can aſſert the Exiſtence of the American Antipodes: And I can Report unto the European Churches great Occurrences among theſe Americans. Yet I will Report every one of them with ſuch a Chriſtian and exact Veracity, that no Man ſhall have cauſe to uſe about any one of them, the Words which the great Auſtin (as great as he was) uſed about the Exiſtence of Antipodes ; it is a Fable, and, nulla ratione credendum.

§. 2. If the Wicked One in whom the whole World lyeth, were he, who like a Dragon, keeping a Guard upon the ſpacious and mighty Orchards of America, could have ſuch a Faſcination upon the Thoughts of Mankind, that neither this Ballancing half of the Globe ſhould be conſidered in Europe till a little more than two Hundred Years ago, nor the Clue that might lead unto it, namely, the Loadſtone, ſhould be known, till a Neapolitan ſtumbled upon it, about an Hundred Years before ; yet the overruling Providence of the great God is to be acknowledged, as well in the Concealing of America for ſo long a time, as in the Diſcovering of it, when the fulneſs of Time was come for the Diſcovery : For we may count America to have been concealed, while Mankind in the other Hemiſphere had loſt all Acquaintance with it, if we may conclude it had any from the Words of Diodorus Siculus, That Phænecians were by great Storms driven on the Coaſt of Africa, far Weſtward, ἐπὶ πολλὰς ἡμέρας, for many Days together, and at laſt fell in with an Iſland of prodigious Magnitude ; or from the Words of Plato, that beyond the Pillars of Hercules there was an Iſland in the Atlantick Ocean, ἅμα λιβύης ϗ Ασίας μείζων, larger than Africa and Aſia put together : Nor ſhould it paſs without Remark, that Three moſt memorable things which have born a very great Aſpect upon Humane Affairs, did near the ſame time, namely at the Concluſion of the Fifteenth, and the beginning of the Sixteenth Century, ariſe unto the World : The Firſt was the Reſurrection of Literature ; the Second was the opening of America ; the Third was the Reformation of Religion. But, as probably, the Devil ſeducing the firſt Inhabitants of America into it, therein aimed at the having of them and their Poſterity out of the ſound of the Silver Trumpets of the Goſpel, then to be heard through the Roman Empire ; if the Devil had any Expectation, that by the Peopling of America, he ſhould utterly deprive any Europeans of the Two Benefits, Literature and Religion, which dawned upon the miſerable World, one juſt before, t'other juſt after, the firſt famed Navigation hither, 'tis to be hop'd he will be diſappointed of that Expectation. The Church of God muſt no longer be wrapp'd up in Strabo's Cloak : Geography muſt now find work for a Chriſtiano-graphy in Regions far enough beyond the Bounds wherein the Church of God had thro' all former Ages been circumſcribed. Renown'd Churches of Chriſt muſt be gathered where the Ancients once Derided them that look'd for any Inhabitants. The Myſtery of our Lord's Garments, made Four Parts, by the Soldiers that caſt Lots for them, is to be accompliſhed in the good Sence put upon it by Auſtin, who if he had known America could not have given a better Quadripartita veſtis Domini Jeſu, quadripartitam figuravit ejus Eccleſiam, toto ſcilicet, qui quatuor partibus conſtat, terraram orbe diffuſam.

§. 3. Whatever Truth may be in that Aſſertion of one who writes; If we may credit any Records beſides the Scriptures, I know it might be ſaid and proved well, that this New World was known, and partly Inhabited by Britains, or by Saxons from England, Three or Four Hundred Years before the Spaniards coming thither; which Aſſertion is Demonſtrated from the Diſcourſes between the Mexicans and the Spaniards at their firſt Arrival; and the Popiſh Reliques, as well as Britiſh Terms and Words, which the Spaniards then found among the Mexicans, as well as from undoubted Paſſages, not only in other Authors, but even in the Britiſh Annals alſo: Nevertheleſs, Mankind generally agree to give unto Chriſtopher Columbus, a Genoeſe, the Honour of being the Firſt European that opened a way into theſe Parts of the World. It was in the Year 1492. that this famous Man, acted by a moſt vehement and wonderful Impulſe, was carried into the Northern Regions of this vaſt Hemiſphere, which might more juſtly therefore have receiv'd its Name from Him, than from Americus Veſputius a Florentine, who in the Year 1497. made a further Detection of the more Southern Regions in this Continent. So a World, which has been one great Article among the Res deperditæ of Pancirollus, is now found out, and the Affairs of the whole World have been affected by the finding of it. So the Church of our Lord Jeſus Chriſt, well compared unto a Ship, is now victoriouſly ſailing round the Globe after Sir Francis Drake's renowned Ship, called, The Victory, which could boaſt, Prima ego velivolis ambivi curſibus orbem.

And yet the Story about Columbus himſelf muſt be corrected from the Information of De la Vega, That one Sanchez, a Native of Helva in Spain, did before him find out theſe Regions. He tells us, That Sanchez uſing to Trade in a ſmall Veſſel to the Canaries, was driven by a furious and tedious Tempeſt over unto theſe Weſtern Countries; and at his return he gave to Colon, or Columbus, an account of what he had ſeen, but ſoon after died of a Diſeaſe he had got on his dangerous Voyage. However, I ſhall expect my Reader e're long to grant, that ſome things done ſince by Almighty God for the Engliſh in theſe Regions, have exceeded all that has been hitherto done for any other Nation: If this New World were not found out firſt by the Engliſh; yet in thoſe regards that are of all the greateſt, it ſeems to be found out more for them than any other.

§. 4. But indeed the two Cabots, Father and Son, under the Commiſſion of our King Henry VII. entering upon their generous Undertakings in the Year 1497. made further Diſcoveries of America, than either Columbus or Veſputius; in regard of which notable Enterprizes, the younger of them had very great Honours by the Crown put upon him, till at length he died in a good Old Age, in which Old Age King Edward VI. had allowed him an Honourable Penſion. Yea, ſince the Cabots, employ'd by the King of England, made a Diſcovery of this Continent in the Year 1497: and it was the Year 1498. before Columbus diſcovered any part of the Continent; and Veſputius came a conſiderable time after both of them; I know not why the Spaniard ſhould go unrivall'd in the claim of this New World, which from the firſt finding of it is pretended unto. Theſe Diſcoveries of the Cabots were the Foundation of all the Adventures, with which the Engliſh Nation have ſince followed the Sun, and ſerved themſelves into an Acquaintance on the hither ſide of the Atlantick Ocean. And now I ſhall drown my Reader with my ſelf in a tedious Digreſſion, if I enumerate all the Attempts made by a Willoughby, a Frobriſher, a Gilbert, and beſides many others, an Incomparable Rawleigh, to ſettle Engliſh Colonies in the Deſarts of the Weſtern India. It will be enough if I entertain him with the Hiſtory of that Engliſh Settlement, which may, upon a Thouſand accounts, pretend unto more of True Engliſh than all the reſt, and which alone therefore has been called New-England.

§. 5. After a diſcouraging Series of Diſaſters attending the Endeavours of the Engliſh to ſwarm into Florida, and the reſt of the Continent unto the Northward of it, called Virginia, becauſe the firſt White Born in thoſe Regions was a Daughter, then Born to one Ananias Dare, in the Year 1585. The Courage of one Bartholomew Goſnold, and one Captain Bartholomew Gilbert, and ſeveral other Gentlemen, ſerved them to make yet more Eſſays upon the like Deſigns. This Captain Goſnold in a ſmall Bark, on May 11. 1602. Made Land on this Coaſt in the Latitude of Forty-Three; where, tho' he liked the Welcome he had from the Salvages that came aboard him, yet he diſliked the Weather, ſo that he thought it neceſſary to ſtand more Southward into the Sea. Next Morning he found himſelf Embayed within a mighty Head of Land; which Promontory, in remembrance of the Cod-Fiſh in great quantity by him taken there, he called Cape-Cod, a Name which I ſuppoſe it will never loſe, till Shoals of Cod-Fiſh be ſeen ſwimming upon the top of its higheſt Hills. On this Cape, and on the Iſlands to the Southward of it, he found ſuch a comfortable Entertainment from the Summer-Fruits of the Earth, as well as from the Wild Creatures then ranging the Woods, and from the wilder People now ſurprized into Courteſie, that he carried back to England a Report of the Country, better than what the Spies once gave of the Land flowing with Milk and Honey. Not only did the Merchants of Briſtol now raiſe a conſiderable Stock to Proſecute theſe Diſcoveries, but many other Perſons of ſeveral Ranks Embarked in ſuch Undertakings; and many Sallies into America were made; the exacter Narrative whereof I had rather my Reader ſhould purchaſe at the expence of conſulting Purchas's Pilgrims, than endure any ſtop in our haſtening Voyage unto the Hiſtory of a New-Engliſh Iſrael.

§. 6. Perhaps my Reader would gladly be informed how America came to be firſt Peopled; and if Hornius's Diſcourſes, De origine Gentium Americanarum, do not ſatisfie him, I hope ſhortly the moſt Ingenious Dr. Woodward, in his Natural Hiſtory of the Earth, will do it. In the mean time, to ſtay thy Stomach, Reader, accept the Account which a very ſenſible Ruſſian, who had been an Officer of Prime Note in Siberia, gave unto Father Avril. Said he, 'There is beyond the Obi a great River called Kawoina, at the Mouth whereof, diſcharging it ſelf into the Frozen Sea, there ſtands a ſpacious Iſland very well Peopled, and no leſs conſiderable for Hunting an Animal, whoſe Teeth are in great eſteem. The Inhabitants go frequently upon the ſide of the Frozen Sea to Hunt this Monſter; and becauſe it requires great Labour with Aſſiduity, they carry their Families uſually along with them. Now it many times happens, that being ſurprized with a Thaw, they are carried away, I know not whither, upon huge peices of Ice that break off one from another. For my part, I am perſwaded that ſeveral of thoſe Hunters have been carried upon theſe floating pieces of Ice to the moſt Northern Parts of America, which is not far from that Part of Aſia that jutts out into the Sea of Tartary. And that which confirms me in this Opinion, is this, That the Americans who Inhabit that Country, which advances fartheſt towards that Sea, have the ſame Phyſiognomy as thoſe Iſlanders. Thus the Vayvode of Smotenſko. But all the concern of this our Hiſtory, is to tell how Engliſh People firſt came into America; and what Engliſh People firſt came into that Part of America, where this Hiſtory is compoſed. Wherefore, inſtead of reciting the many Adventures of the Engliſh, to viſit theſe Parts of the World, I ſhall but repeat the Words of one Captain Weymouth, an Hiſtorian, as well as an Undertaker of thoſe Adventures; who Reports, That one main End of all theſe Undertakings, was to plant the Goſpel in theſe dark Regions of America. How well the moſt of the Engliſh Plantations have anſwered this main End, it mainly becomes them to conſider: However, I am now to tell Mankind, that as for One of theſe Engliſh Plantations, this was not only a main End, but the ſole End upon which it was erected. If they that are ſolicitous about the Intereſts of the Goſpel, would know what and where that Plantation is; be it noted, That all the vaſt Country from Florida to Nova-Francia, was at firſt called Virginia; but this Virginia was diſtinguiſhed into North Virginia and South Virginia, till that Famous Traveller Captain John Smith, in the Year 1614. preſenting unto the Court of England a Draught of North Virginia, got it called by the Name of NEW-ENGLAND; which Name has been ever ſince allowed unto my Country, as unto the moſt Reſembling Daughter, to the chief Lady of the European World. Thus the Diſcoveries of the Country proceeded ſo far, that K. James I. did by his Letters Patents under the Great Seal of England, in the 18th Year of his Reign, give and grant unto a certain Honourable Council Eſtabliſhed at Plymouth, in the County of Devon, for the Planting, Ruling, and Ordering, and Governing of New-England in America, and to their Succeſſors and Aſſigns, all that Part of America, lying and being in Breadth, from Forty Degrees of Northerly Latitude, from the Equinoctial Line, to the Forty-Eighth Degree of the ſaid Northerly Latitude Incluſively; and the Length of, and within all the Breadth aforeſaid, throughout all the firm Lands from Sea to Sea. This at laſt is the Spot of Earth, which the God of Heaven Spied out for the Seat of ſuch Evangelical, and Eccleſiaſtical, and very remarkable Tranſactions, as require to be made an Hiſtory; here 'twas that our Bleſſed Jeſus intended a Reſting-place, muſt I ſay? Or only an Hiding-place for thoſe Reformed CHURCHES, which have given him a little Accompliſhment of his Eternal Father's Promiſe unto him; to be, we hope, yet further accompliſhed, of having the utmoſt Parts of the Earth for his Poſſeſſion?

§. 7. The Learned Joſeph Mede conjectures that the American Hemiſphere will eſcape the Conflagration of the Earth, which we expect at the deſcent of our Lord JESUS CHRIST from Heaven: And that the People here will not have a ſhare in the Bleſſedneſs which the Renovated World ſhall enjoy, during the Thouſand Years of Holy Reſt promiſed unto the Church of God: And that the Inhabitants of theſe Regions, who were Originally Scytheans, and therein a notable fulfilment of the Prophecy, about the Enlargement of Japhet, will be the Gog and Magog whom the Devil will ſeduce to Invade the New-Jeruſalem, with an Envious Hope to gain the Angelical Circumſtances of the People there. All this is but Conjecture; and it may be 'twill appear unto ſome as little probable, as that of the later Pierre Poiret in his L'Oeconomy Divine, that by Gog and Magog are meant the Devils and the Damned, which he thinks will be let looſe at the end of the Thouſand Years, to make a furious, but a fruitleſs Attempt on the glorified Saints of the New-Jeruſalem. However, I am going to give unto the Chriſtian Reader an Hiſtory of ſome feeble Attempts made in the American Hemiſphere to anticipate the State of the New-Jeruſalem, ruſalem, as far as the unavoidable Vanity of Humane Affairs, and Influence of Satan upon them would allow of it; and of many worthy Perſons, whoſe Poſterity, if they make a Squadron in the Fleets of Gog and Magog, will be Apoſtates deſerving a Room, and a Doom with the Legions of the Grand Apoſtate, that will deceive the Nations to that Myſterious Enterprize.

CHAP. II.

Primordia: Or, The Voyage to NEW-ENGLAND, which produced the Firſt Settlement of NEW-PLYMOUTH; with an Account of many Remarkable and Memorable Providences relating to that Voyage.

§. 1. A Number of devout and ſerious Chriſtians in the Engliſh Nation, finding the Reformation of the Church in that Nation, according to the WORD OF GOD, and the Deſign of many among the Firſt Reformers, to labour under a ſort of hopeleſs Retardation, they did, Anno 1602. in the North of England, enter into a COVENANT, wherein expreſſing themſelves deſirous, not only to attend the Worſhip of our Lord Jeſus Chriſt, with a freedom from humane Inventions and Additions, but alſo to enjoy all the Evangelical Inſtitutions of that Worſhip, they did like thoſe Macedonians, that are therefore by the Apoſtle Paul commended, give themſelves up, firſt unto God, and then to one another. Theſe Pious People finding that their Brethren and Neighbours in the Church of England, as then eſtabliſhed by Law, took offence at theſe their Endeavours after a Scriptural Reformation; and being loth to live in the continual Vexations, which they felt ariſing from their Non-Conformity to things which their Conſciences accounted Superſtitious and Unwarrantable, they peaceably and willingly embraced a Baniſhment into the Netherlands; where they ſettled at the City of Leyden, about Seven or Eight Years after their Firſt Combination. And now in that City this People ſojourned, an Holy CHURCH of the Bleſſed JESUS, for ſeveral Years under the Paſtoral Care of Mr. John Robinſon, who had for his Help in the Government of the Church, a moſt Wiſe, Grave, good Man, Mr. William Brewſter, the ruling Elder. Indeed Mr. John Robinſon had been in his younger time, (as very good Fruit hath ſometimes been, before Age hath Ripened it) Sowred with the Principles of the moſt Rigid Separation, in the maintaining whereof he compoſed and publiſhed ſome little Treatiſes, and in the Management of the Controverſie made no Scruple to call the incomparable Dr. Ames himſelf, Dr. Amiſs, for oppoſing ſuch a Degree of Separation. But this worthy Man ſuffered himſelf at length to be ſo far convinced by his Learned Antagoniſt, that with a moſt Ingenious Retractation, he afterwards writ a little Book to prove the Lawfulneſs of one thing, which his miſtaken Zeal had formerly impugned ſeveral Years, even till 1625. and about the Fiftieth Year of his own Age, continued he a Bleſſing unto the whole Church of God, and at laſt, when he dy'd, he left behind him in his immortal Writings, a Name very much embalm'd among the People that are beſt able to judge of Merit; and even among ſuch, as about the Matters of Church-Diſcipline, were not of his Perſwaſion. Of ſuch an eminent Character was he, while he lived, that when Arminianiſm ſo much prevailed, as it then did in the low Countries, thoſe famous Divines, Polyander, and Feſtus Hommius, employed this our Learned Robinſon to diſpute publickly in the Univerſity of Leyden againſt Epiſcopius, and the other Champions of that Grand Choak-weed of true Chriſtianity: And when he Died, not only the Univerſity, and Miniſters of the City, accompanied him to his Grave, with all their accuſtomed Solemnities, but ſome of the Chief among them with ſorrowful Reſentments and Expreſſions affirmed, That all the Churches of our Lord Jeſus Chriſt had ſuſtained a great Loſs by the Death of this worthy Man.

§. 2. The Engliſh Church had not been very long at Leyden before they found themſelves encountred with many Inconveniencies. They felt that they were neither for Health, nor Purſe, nor Language well accommodated; but the concern which they moſt of all had, was for their Poſterity. They ſaw, that whatever Banks the Dutch had againſt the Inroads of the Sea, they had not ſufficient Ones againſt a Flood of manifold Profaneneſs. They could not with Ten Years Endeavour bring their Neighbours, particularly to any ſuitable Obſervation of the LORD's DAY; without which they knew, that all practical Religion muſt wither Miſerably. They beheld ſome of their Children, by the Temptations of the Place, which were eſpecially given in the licentious Ways of many Young People, drawn into dangerous Extravagancies. Moreover, they were very loth to loſe their Intereſt in the Engliſh Nation; but were deſirous rather to enlarge their King's Dominions. They found themſelves alſo under a very ſtrong diſpoſition of Zeal, to attempt the Eſtabliſhment of Congregational Churches in the remote Parts of the World; where they hoped they ſhould be reached by the Royal Influence of their Prince, in whoſe Allegiance they choſe to live and die; at the ſame time likewiſe hoping that the Eccleſiaſticks, who had thus driven them out of the Kingdom into a New World, for nothing in the World but their Non-Conformity to certain Rites, by the Impoſers confeſſed Indifferent, would be aſhamed ever to perſecute them with any further Moleſtations, at the diſtance of a Thouſand Leagues. Theſe Reaſons were deeply conſidered by the Church; and after many Deliberations, accompanied with the moſt ſolemn Humiliations and Supplications before the God of Heaven, they took up a Reſolution, under the conduct of Heaven, to REMOVE into AMERICA; the opened Regions whereof had now filled all Europe with Reports. It was reſolved, that part of the Church ſhould go before their Brethren, to prepare a place for the Reſt; and whereas the Minor part of younger and ſtronger Men were to go firſt, the Paſtor was to ſtay with the Major, till they ſhould ſee cauſe to follow. Nor was there any occaſion for this Reſolve, in any wearineſs which the States of Holland had of their Company, as was baſely whiſpered by their Adverſaries; therein like thoſe who of old aſſign'd the ſame cauſe for the Departure of the Iſraelites out of Egypt: For the Magiſtrates of Leyden in their Court, reproving the Walloons, gave this Teſtimony for our Engliſh; Theſe Engliſh have lived now Ten Years among us, and yet we never had any Accuſation againſt any one of them; whereas your Quarrels are continual.

§. 3. Theſe good People were now ſatisfy'd, they had as plain a command of Heaven to attempt a Removal, as ever their Father Abraham had for his leaving the Caldean Territories; and it was nothing but ſuch a Satisfaction that could have carried them thro' ſuch, otherwiſe inſuperable Difficulties, as they met withal. But in this Removal the Terminus ad Quem was not yet reſolved upon. The Country of Guiana flattered them with the Promiſes of a perpetual Spring, and a Thouſand other comfortable Entertainments. But the probable diſagreement of ſo Torrid a Climate unto Engliſh Bodies; and the more dangerous Vicinity of the Spaniards to that Climate; were Conſiderations which made them fear that Country would be too Hot for them. They rather propounded ſome Country bordering upon Virginia; and unto this purpoſe, they ſent over Agents into England, who ſo far treated not only with the Virginia Company, but with ſeveral great Perſons about the Court; unto whom they made Evident their Agreement with the French reformed Churches in all things whatſoever, except in a few ſmall accidental Points; that at laſt, after many tedious Delays, and after the loſs of many Friends and Hopes in thoſe delays, they obtained a Patent for a quiet Settlement in thoſe Territories; and the Archbiſhop of Canterbury himſelf gave them ſome Expectations that they ſhould never be diſturbed in that Exerciſe of Religion, at which they aimed in their Settlement; yea, when Sir Robert Nanton, then Principal Secretary of State unto King James, moved his Majeſty to give way, that ſuch a People might enjoy their Liberty of Conſcience under his gracious Protection in America, where they would endeavour the Advancement of his Majeſty's Dominions, and the Enlargement of the Intereſts of the Goſpel; the King ſaid, it was a good and honeſt Motion. All this notwithſtanding, they never made uſe of that Patent: But being inform'd of NEW-ENGLAND, thither they diverted their Deſign, thereto induced by ſundry Reaſons; but particularly by this, that the Coaſt being extreamly well circumſtanced for Fiſhing, they might therein have ſome immediate Aſſiſtance againſt the hardſhips of their Firſt Encounters. Their Agents then again ſent over to England, concluded Articles between them and ſuch Adventures, as would be concerned with them in their preſent Undertakings. Articles, that were indeed ſufficiently hard for thoſe poor Men, that were now to tranſplant themſelves into an horrid Wilderneſs. The Diverſion of their Enterprize from the Firſt State and Way of it, caus'd an unhappy Diviſion among thoſe that ſhould have Encourag'd it; and many of them hereupon fell off. But the Removers having already ſold their Eſtates, to put the Money into a Common Stock, for the welfare of the Whole; and their Stock as well as their Time, ſpending ſo faſt as to threaten them with an Army of Straits, if they delayed any longer; they nimbly diſpatcht the beſt Agreements they could, and came away furniſhed with a Reſolution for a large Tract of Land in the South-Weſt Parts of New-England.

§. 4. All things now being in ſome Readineſs, and a couple of Ships, one called, The Speedwell, t'other, The May-flower, being hired for their Tranſportation, they ſolemnly ſet apart a Day for Faſting and Prayer; wherein their Paſtor preached unto them upon Ezra 8. 21. I proclaimed a Faſt there, at the River Ahava, that we might afflict our ſelves before our God, to ſeek of him a right way for us, and for our little ones, and for all our ſubſtance.

After the fervent Supplications of this Day, accompanied by their affectionate Friends, they took their leave of the pleaſant City, where they had been Pilgrims and Strangers now for Eleven Years. Delft-Haven was the Town, where they went on Board one of their Ships, and there they had ſuch a mournful parting from their Brethren, as even drowned the Dutch Spectators themſelves, then ſtanding on the Shore, in Tears. Their excellent Paſtor, on his Knees, by the Sea-ſide, poured out their mutual Petitions unto God; and having wept in one another's Arms, as long as the Wind and the Tide would permit them, they bad Adieu. So ſailing to Southampton in England, they there found the other of their Ships come from London, with the reſt of their Friends that were to be the Companions of the Voyage. Let my Reader place the Chronology of this Buſineſs on July 2. 1620. And know, that the faithful Paſtor of this People immediately ſent after them a Paſtoral Letter; a Letter filled with Holy Counſels unto them, to ſettle their Peace with God in their own Conſciences, by an exact Repentance of all Sin whatſoever, that ſo they might more eaſily bear all the Difficulties that were now before them; and then to maintain a good

Peace with one another, and beware of giving or taking Offences; and avoid all Diſcoveries of a Touchy Humour; but uſe much Brotherly Forbearance, [whereby the way he had this remarkable Obſervation, In my own experience few or none have been found that ſooner give Offence, than thoſe that eaſily take it; neither have they ever proved ſound and profitable Members of Societies, who have nouriſhed this Touchy Humour;] as alſo to take heed of a private Spirit, and all retiredneſs of Mind in each Man, for his own proper Advantage; and likewiſe to be careful, that the Houſe of God, which they were, might not be ſhaken with unneceſſary Novelties or Oppoſitions: Which LETTER afterwards produced moſt happy Fruits among them.

§. 5. On Auguſt 5th, 1620. they ſet Sail from Southampton; but if it ſhall, as I believe it will, afflict my Reader to be told what Heartbreaking Diſaſters befel them, in the very beginning of their Undertaking, let him glorifie God, who carried them ſo well through their greater Affliction.

They were by bad Weather twice beaten back, before they came to the Land's End: But it was judged, that the Badneſs of the Weather did not retard them ſo much as the deceit of a Maſter, who grown Sick of the Voyage, made ſuch Pretences about the Leakineſs of his Veſſel, that they were forced at laſt wholly to diſmiſs that leſſer Ship from the Service. Being now all ſtowed into one Ship, on the Sixth of September they put to Sea; but they met with ſuch terrible Storms, that the principal Perſons on Board had ſerious Deliberations upon returning Home again; however, after long beating upon the Atlantick Ocean, they fell in with the Land at Cape-Cod, about the Ninth of November following, where going on Shore they fell upon their Knees, with many and hearty Praiſes unto God, who had been their Aſſurance, when they were afar off upon the Sea, and was to be further ſo, now that they were come to the Ends of the Earth.

But why at this Cape? Here was not the Port which they intended; this was not the Land for which they had provided. There was indeed a moſt wonderful Providence of God, over a Pious and a Praying People, in this Diſappointment! The moſt crooked Way that ever was gone, even that of Iſrael's Peregrination thro' the Wilderneſs, may be called a right Way, ſuch was the way of this little Iſrael, now going into a Wilderneſs.

§. 6. Their deſign was to have ſat down ſomewhere about Hudſon's River; but ſome of their Neighbours in Holland having a Mind themſelves to ſettle a Plantation there, ſecretly and ſinfully contracted with the Maſter of the Ship, employed for the Tranſportation of theſe our Engliſh Exiles, by a more Northerly Courſe, to put a Trick upon them. 'Twas in the purſuance of this Plot, that not only the Goods, but alſo the Lives of all on Board were now hazarded, by the Ships falling among the Shoals of Cape-Cod: Where they were ſo entangled among dangerous Breakers, thus late in the Year, that the Company got at laſt into the Cape-Harbour, Brake off their Intentions of going any further. And yet behold the watchful Providence of God over them that ſeek him! This Falſe-dealing proved a Safe-dealing for the good People againſt whom it was uſed. Had they been carried according to their deſire unto Hudſon's River, the Indians in thoſe Parts were at this time ſo Many, and ſo Mighty, and ſo Sturdy, that in probability all this little feeble Number of Chriſtians had been Maſſacred by theſe bloody Salvages, as not long after ſome others were: Whereas the good Hand of God now brought them to a Country wonderfully prepared for their Entertainment, by a ſweeping Mortality that had lately been among the Natives. We have heard with our Ears, O God, our Fathers have told us, what work thou didſt in their Days, in the times of Old; how thou draveſt out the Heathen with thy Hand, and planted'ſt them; how thou did'ſt afflict the People, and caſt them out! The Indians in theſe Parts had newly, even about a Year or Two before, been viſited with ſuch a prodigious Peſtilence; as carried away not a Tenth, but Nine Parts of Ten, (yea, 'tis ſaid, Nineteen of Twenty) among them: So that the Woods were almoſt cleared of thoſe pernicious Creatures, to make Room for a better Growth. It is Remarkable, that a Frenchman who not long before theſe Tranſactions, had by a Shipwreck been made a Captive among the Indians of this Country, did, as the Survivers reported, juſt before he dy'd in their Hands, tell thoſe Tawny Pagans, that God being angry with them for their Wickedneſs, would not only deſtroy them all, but alſo People the place with another Nation, which would not live after their Brutiſh Manners. Thoſe Infidels then Blaſphemouſly reply'd, God could not kill them; which Blaſphemous miſtake was confuted by an horrible and unuſual Plague, whereby they were conſumed in ſuch vaſt Multitudes, that our firſt Planters found the Land almoſt covered with their unburied Carcaſes; and they that were left alive, were ſmitten into awful and humble Regards of the Engliſh, by the Terrors which the Remembrance of the Frenchman's Propheſie had Imprinted on them.

§. 7. Inexpreſſible the Hardſhips to which this choſen Generation was now expoſed! Our Saviour once directed his Diſciples to deprecate a flight in the Winter; but theſe Diſciples of our Lord were now arrived at a very Cold Country, in the beginning of a Rough and Bleak Winter; the Sun was withdrawn into Sagittarius, whence he ſhot the penetrating Arrows of Cold; feathered with nothing but Snow, and pointed with Hail; and the Days left them to behold the Froſt-bitten and Weather-beaten face of the Earth, were grown ſhorter than the Nights, wherein they had yet more trouble to get ſhelter from the increaſing Injuries of the Froſt and Weather. It was a relief to thoſe Primitive Believers, who were caſt on Shore at Malta, That the Barbarous People ſhow'd them no little Kindneſs, becauſe of the preſent Rain, and becauſe of the Cold. But theſe Believers in our Primitive Times, were more afraid of the Barbarous People among whom they were now caſt, than they were of the Rain, or Cold: Theſe Barbarians were at the firſt ſo far from accommodating them with Bundles of Sticks to Warm them, that they let Fly other ſorts of Sticks (that is to ſay, Arrows) to Wound them: And the very Looks and Shouts of thoſe Grim Salvages, had not much leſs of Terrour in them, than if they had been ſo many Devils. It is not long ſince I compared this remove of our Fathers, to that of Abraham, whereas I muſt now add, that if our Father Abraham, called out of Ur, had been directed unto the Deſarts of Arabia, inſtead of the Land flowing with Milk and Honey, the Trial of his Faith had been greater than it was; but ſuch was the Trial of the Faith in theſe holy Men, who followed the Call of God into Deſarts full of diſmal Circumſtances. All this they chearfully underwent, in hope, that they ſhould ſettle the Worſhip and Order of the Goſpel, and the Kingdom of our Lord Jeſus Chriſt in theſe Regions, and that thus enlarging the Dominion, they ſhould thereby ſo Merit the Protection of the Crown of England, as to be never abandoned unto any further Perſecutions, from any Party of their Fellow-Subjects, for their Conſciencious Regards unto the Reformation. Their Propoſal was,

Exiguam ſedem Sacris, Littuſque rogamus,
Innocuum, & cunctis undamq; auramq; Patentem.

§. 8. Finding at their Arrival, that what other Powers they had, were made uſeleſs by the undeſigned Place of their Arrival; they did, as the Light of Nature it ſelf directed them, immediately in the Harbour, ſign an Inſtrument, as a Foundation of their future and needful Government; wherein Declaring themſelves the Loyal Subjects of the Crown of England, they did combine into a Body Politick, and ſolemnly engage Submiſſion and Obedience to the Laws, Ordinances, Acts, Conſtitutions and Officers, that from time to time ſhould be thought moſt convenient for the general Good of the Colony. This was done on Nov. 11th, 1620. and they choſe one Mr. John Carver, a Pious and Prudent Man, their Governour.

Hereupon they ſent Aſhore to look a convenient Seat for their intended Habitation: And while the Carpenter was fitting of their Shallop, Sixteen Men tender'd themſelves, to go, by Land, on the Diſcovery. Accordingly on Nov. 16th, 1620. they made a dangerous Adventure; following five Indians, whom they ſpied Flying before them, into the Woods for many Miles; from whence, after two or three Days Ramble, they returned with ſome Ears of Indian Corn, which were an Eſhcol for their Company; but with a poor and ſmall Encouragement, as unto any Scituation. When the Shallop was fitted, about thirty more went in it upon a further Diſcovery; who proſpered little more, than only to find a little Indian Corn, and bring to the Company ſome Occaſions of doubtful Debate, whether they ſhould here fix their Stakes. Yet theſe Expeditions on Diſcovery had this one Remarkable Smile of Heaven upon them; that being made before the Snow covered the Ground, they met with ſome Indian Corn; for which, 'twas their purpoſe honeſtly to pay the Natives on demand; and this Corn ſerved them for Seed in the Spring following, which elſe they had not been ſeaſonably furniſhed withal. So that it proved, in Effect, their Deliverance from the Terrible Famine.

§. 9. The Month of November being ſpent in many Supplications to Almighty God, and Conſultations one with another, about the Direction of their Courſe; at laſt, on Dec. 6. 1620. they manned the Shallop with about eighteen or twenty Hands, and went out upon a third Diſcovery. So bitterly Cold was the Seaſon, that the Spray of the Sea lighting on their Cloaths, glazed them with an immediate Congelation; yet they kept Cruiſing about the Bay of Cape-Cod, and that Night they got ſafe down the Bottom of the Bay. There they Landed, and there they tarried that Night; and unſucceſsfully Ranging about all the next Day, at Night they made a little Barricado of Boughs and Logs, wherein the moſt weary ſlept. The next Morning after Prayers, they ſuddenly were ſurrounded with a Crue of Indians, who let Fly a Show'r of Arrows among them; whereat our diſtreſſed handful of Engliſh happily recovering their Arms, which they had laid by from the Moiſture of the Weather, they vigorouſly diſcharged their Muskets upon the Salvages, who aſtoniſhed at the ſtrange Effects of ſuch Dead-doing Things, as Powder and Shot, fled apace into the Woods; but not one of ours was wounded by the Indian Arrows that flew like Hail about their Ears, and pierced through ſundry of their Coats: For which they returned their ſolemn Thanks unto God their Saviour; and they call'd the place by the Name of, The Firſt Encounter. From hence they coaſted along, till an horrible Storm aroſe, which tore their Veſſel at ſuch a rate, and threw them into the midſt of ſuch dangerous Breakers, it was reckoned little ſhort of Miracle, that they eſcaped alive. In the End they got under the Lee of a ſmall Iſland, where going Aſhore, they kindled Fires for their ſuccour againſt the Wet and Cold; it was the Morning before they found it was an Iſland, whereupon they rendred their Praiſes to him, that hitherto had helped them; and the Day following, which was, The Lord's-Day, the difficulties now upon them, did not hinder them from ſpending it in the devout and pious Exerciſes of a Sacred Reſt. On the next Day they ſounded the Harbour, and found it fit for Shipping; they viſited the Main Land alſo, and found it accommodated with pleaſant Fields and Brooks; whereof they carried an encouraging Report unto their Friends on Board. So they reſolved that they would here pitch their Tents; and Sailing up to the Town of Plymouth [as with an hopeful Pro- lepſis, my Reader ſhall now call it; for otherwiſe, by the Indians 'twas called, Patuxet;] on the Twenty-fifth Day of December they began to erect the Firſt Houſe that ever was in that memorable Town; an Houſe for the general Entertainment of their Perſons and Eſtates: And yet it was not long before an unhappy Accident burnt unto the Ground their Houſe, wherein ſome of their principal Perſons then lay Sick; who were forced nimbly to Fly out of the fired Houſe, or elſe they had been blown up with the Powder then Lodged there. After this, they ſoon went upon the Building of more little Cottages; and upon the ſettling of good Laws, for the better Governing of ſuch as were to Inhabit thoſe Cottages. They then reſolved, that until they could be further ſtrengthned in their Settlement, by the Authority of England, they would be governed by Rulers choſen from among themſelves, who were to proceed according to the Laws of England, as near as they could, in the Adminiſtration of their Government; and ſuch other By-Laws, as by Common Conſent ſhould be judged neceſſary for the Circumſtances of the Plantation.

§. 10. If the Reader would know, how theſe good People fared the reſt of the Melancholy Winter; let him know, That beſides the Exerciſes of Religion, with other Work enough, there was the care of the Sick to take up no little part of their Time. 'Twas a moſt heavy Trial of their Patience, whereto they were called the firſt Winter of this their Pilgrimage, and enough to convince them, and remind them, that they were but Pilgrims. The Hardſhips which they encountred, were attended with, and productive of deadly Sickneſſes; which in two or three Months carried off more than Half their Company. They were but meanly provided againſt theſe unhappy Sickneſſes; but there died ſometimes Two, ſometimes Three in a Day; till ſcarce Fifty of them were left alive; and of thoſe Fifty, ſometimes there were ſcarce Five well at a time to look after the Sick. Yet their profound Submiſſion to the Will of God, their Chriſtian Readineſs to help one another, accompanied with a joyful Aſſurance of another and better World, carried them chearfully thro' the Sorrows of this Mortality: Nor was there heard among them a continual Murmur againſt thoſe who had by unreaſonable Impoſitions driven them into all theſe Diſtreſſes. And there was this Remarkable Providence further in the Circumſtances of this Mortality, that if a Diſeaſe had not more eaſily fetcht ſo many of this Number away to Heaven, a Famine would probably have deſtroy'd them all, before their expected Supplies from England were Arrived. But what a wonder was it that all the Bloody Salvages far and near did not cut off this little Remnant! If he that once muzzled the Lions ready to devour the Man of Deſires, had not Admirably, I had almoſt ſaid, Miraculouſly reſtrained them, Theſe had been all devoured! But this People of God were come into a Wilderneſs to Worſhip Him; and ſo He kept their Enemies from ſuch Attempts, as would otherwiſe have ſoon annihilated this Poor Handful of Men, thus far already diminiſhed. They ſaw no Indians all the Winter long, but ſuch as at the firſt Sight always ran away; yea, they quickly found, that God had ſo turned the Hearts of theſe Babarians, as more to Fear, than to Hate his People thus caſt among them. This bleſſed People was as a little Flock of Kids, while there were many Nations of Indians left ſtill as Kennels of Wolves in every Corner of the Country. And yet the little Flock ſuffered no damage by thoſe Rapid Wolves! We may and ſhould ſay, This is the Lord's Doing, 'tis marvellous in our Eyes.

But among the many Cauſes to be aſſigned for it, one was This. It was afterwards by Them confeſſed, that upon the Arrival of the Engliſh in theſe Parts, the Indians employ'd their Sorcerers, whom they call Powaws, like Balaam, to Curſe them, and let looſe their Demons upon them, to Shipwreck them, to Diſtract them, to Poiſon them, or any way to Ruin them. All the noted Powaws in the Country ſpent three Days together in Diabolical Conjurations, to obtain the Aſſiſtances of the Devils againſt the Settlement of theſe our Engliſh; but the Devils at length acknowledged unto them, that they could not hinder thoſe People from their becoming the Owners and Maſters of the Country; whereupon the Indians reſolved upon a good Correſpondence with our New-Comers; and God convinced them, that there was no Enchantment or Divination againſt ſuch a People.

§. 11. The doleful Winter broke up ſooner than was uſual. But our crippled Planters were not more comforted with the early advance of the Spring, than they were ſurpriz'd with the appearance of two Indians, who in broken Engliſh bade them, Welcome Engliſhmen! It ſeems that one of theſe Indians had been in the Eaſtern Parts of New-England, acquainted with ſome of the Engliſh Veſſels that had been formerly Fiſhing there; but the other of the Indians, and he from whom they had moſt of Service, was a Perſon provided by the very ſingular Providence of God for that Service. A moſt wicked Ship-maſter being on this Coaſt a few Years before, had wickedly Spirited away more than Twenty Indians; whom having enticed them aboard, he preſently ſtowed them under Hatches, and carried them away to the Streights, where he ſold as many of them as he could for Slaves. This avaritious and pernicious Felony laid the Foundation of grievous Annoyances to all the Engliſh Endeavours of Settlements, eſpecially in the Northern Parts of the Land for ſeveral Years enſuing. The Indians would never forget or forgive this Injury; but when the Engliſh afterwards came upon this Coaſt, in their Fiſhing-Voyages, they were ſtill aſſaulted in an Hoſtile manner, to the Killing and Wounding of many poor Men by the angry Natives, in revenge of the wrong that had been done them; and ſome intended Plantations here were hereby utterly nipt in the Bud. But our good God ſo order'd it, that one of the ſtoln Indians, called Squanto, had eſcaped out of Spain into England; where he lived with one Mr. Slany, from whom he had found a way to return into his own Country, being brought back by one Mr. Dermer, about half a Year before our honeſt Plymotheans were caſt upon this Continent. This Indian (with the other) having received much Kindneſs from the Engliſh, who he ſaw generally condemned the Man that firſt betrayed him, now made unto the Engliſh a return of that Kindneſs: And being by his Acquaintance with the Engliſh Language, fitted for a Converſation with them, he very kindly informed them what was the preſent Condition of the other Indians; inſtructed them in the way of ordering their Corn; and acquainted them with many other things, which it was neceſſary for them to underſtand. But Squanto did for them a yet greater benefit than all this: For he brought Maſſaſoit, the chief Sachim, or Prince of the Indians within many Miles, with ſome Scores of his Attenders, to make our People a kind Viſit; the Iſſue of which Viſit was, that Maſſaſoit not only entred into a firm Agreement of Peace with the Engliſh, but alſo they declared and ſubmitted themſelves to be Subjects of the King of England; into which Peace and Subjection many other Sachims quickly after came, in the moſt voluntary manner that could be expreſſed. It ſeems this unlucky Squanto having told his Countrymen how eaſie it was for ſo great a Monarch as K. James to deſtroy them all, if they ſhould hurt any of his People, he went on to terrifie them with a ridiculous Rhodomantado, which they Believed, that this People kept the Plague in a Cellar (where they kept their Powder) and could at their pleaſure let it looſe to make ſuch Havock among them, as the Diſtemper had already made among them a few Years before. Thus was the Tongue of a Dog made uſeful to a feeble and ſickly Lazarus! Moreover, our Engliſh Guns, eſpecially the great ones, made a formidable Report among theſe Ignorant Indians; and the hopes of enjoying ſome Defence by the Engliſh, againſt the Potent Nation of Narraganſet-Indians, now at War with theſe, made them yet more to Court our Friendſhip. This very ſtrange Diſpoſition of things, was extreamly advantageous to our diſtreſſed Planters: And who ſees not herein the ſpecial Providence of the God who diſpoſeth all?

CHAP. III.

Conamur Tenues Grandia: Or, A Brief Account of the Difficulties, the Deliverances, and other Occurrences, thro' which the Plantation of New-Plymouth arrived unto the Conſiſtency of a Colony.

§. 1. Setting aſide the juſt and great Grief of our new Planters for the immature Death of their Excellent Governour, ſucceeded by the Worthy Mr. Bradford, early in the Spring after their firſt Arrival, they ſpent their Summer ſomewhat comfortably, Trading with the Indians to the Northward of their Plantation; in which Trade they were not a little aſſiſted by Squanto, who within a Year or two Dy'd among the Engliſh; but before his Death, deſired them to Pray for him, That he might go to the Engliſhman's God in Heaven. And beſides the aſſiſtance of Squanto, they had alſo the help of another Indian, called Hobbamok, who continued faithful unto the Engliſh Intereſts as long as he liv'd; tho' he ſometimes went in Danger of his Life among his Countrymen for that Fidelity. So they jogg'd on till the Day Twelvemonth after their firſt Arrival; when there now arrived unto them a good Number more of their old Friends from Holland, for the ſtrengthening of their new Plantation: But inaſmuch as they brought not a ſufficient ſtock of Proviſions with them, they rather weakened it, than ſtrengthened it.

If Peter Martyr could magnifie the Spaniards, of whom he reports, They led a miſerable Life for three days together with parched Grain of Maize only, and that not unto ſatiety; what ſhall I ſay of our Engliſhmen, who would have thought a little parched Indian Corn a mighty Feaſt? But they wanted it, not only three Days together; no, for two or three Months together, they had no kind of Corn among them: Such was the ſcarcity, accompanied with the diſproportion of the Inhabitants to the Proviſions. However, Peter Martyr's Concluſion may be ours, With their Miſeries this People opened a way to thoſe new Lands, and afterwards other Men came to Inhabit them with eaſe, in reſpect of the Calamities which theſe Men have ſuffered. They were indeed very often upon the very point of Starving; but in their Extremity the God of Heaven always furniſhed them with ſome ſudden Reliefs; either by cauſing ſome Veſſels of Strangers occaſionally to look in upon them, or by putting them into a way to catch Fiſh in ſome convenient Quantities, or by ſome other ſurprizing Accidents; for which they render'd unto Heaven the Solemn Thanks of their Souls. They kept in ſuch good Working-caſe, that beſides their Progreſs in Building, and Planting, and Fiſhing, they formed a ſort of a Fort, wherein they kept a Nightly Watch for their ſecurity againſt any Treachery of the Indians; being thereto awakened by an horrible Maſſacre, which the Indians lately made upon ſeveral Hundreds of the Engliſh in Virginia.

§. 2. In one of the firſt Summers after their ſitting down at Plymouth, a terrible Drought threatned the Ruin of all their Summers Huſbandry. From about the middle of May to the middle of July, an extream hot Sun beat upon their Fields, without any Rain, ſo that all their Corn began to Wither and Languiſh, and ſome of it was irrecoverably parched up. In this Diſtreſs they ſet apart a Day for Faſting and Prayer, to deprecate the Calamity that might bring them to Faſting thro' Famine; in the Morning of which Day there was no ſign of any Rain; but before the Evening the Sky was overcaſt with Clouds, which went not away without ſuch eaſie, gentle, and yet plentiful Showers, as reviv'd a great part of their decay'd Corn, for a comfortable Harveſt. The Indians themſelves took notice of this Anſwer given from Heaven to the Supplications of this Devout People; and one of them ſaid, Now I ſee that the Engliſhman's God is a good God; for he hath heard you, and ſent you Rain, and that without ſuch Tempeſt and Thunder as we uſe to have with our Rain; which after our Powawing for it, breaks down the Corn; whereas your Corn ſtands whole and good ſtill; ſurely, your God is a good God. The Harveſt which God thus gave to this pious People, cauſed them to ſet apart another Day for Solemn Thankſgiving to the glorious Hearer of Prayers!

§. 3. There was another moſt wonderful Preſervation, vouchſafed by God unto this little Knot of Chriſtians. One Mr. Weſton, a Merchant of good Note, intereſted at firſt in the Plymouth Deſign, afterwards deſerted it; and in the Year 1622, ſent over two Ships with about Sixty Men, to begin a Plantation in the Maſſachuſet-Bay. Theſe Beginners being well refreſhed at Plymouth, travelled more Northward unto a place known ſince by the Name of Weymouth; where theſe Weſtonians, who were Church of England-men, did not approve themſelves like the Plymotheans, a pious, honeſt, induſtrious People; but followed ſuch bad Courſes, as had like to have brought a Ruin upon their Neighbours, as well as themſelves. Having by their Idleneſs brought themſelves to Penury, they ſtole Corn from the Indians, and many other ways provoked them; although the Governour of Plymouth Writ them his very ſharp diſapprobation of their Proceedings. To ſatisfie the exaſperated Salvages, divers of the Thieves were Stockt and Whipt, and one of them at laſt put to Death by this miſerable Company; which did no other Service than to afford an occaſion for a Fable to the Roguiſh Hudibras, for all Accommodation was now too late. The Indians far and near entred into a Conſpiracy to cut off theſe abuſive Engliſh; and leaſt the Inhabitants of Plymouth ſhould revenge that Exciſion of their Countrymen, they reſolv'd upon the Murther of them alſo. In purſuance of this Plot, Captain Standiſh, the Commander of the Militia of Plymouth, Lodging on a Night, with Two or Three Men in an Indian Houſe, the Indians propoſed that they might begin the Execution of their Malice by the Aſſaſſination of the Captain, as ſoon as ever he ſhould be fallen aſleep. However, the watchful Providence of God ſo ordered it, that the Captain could not Sleep all that Night; and ſo they durſt not meddle with him. Thus was the beginning of the Plot put by: But the whole Plot came another way to be diſcovered and prevented. Maſſaſoit, the Southern Sachim, falling Sick, the Governour of Plymouth deſired a couple of Gentlemen, whereof one was that good Man, Mr. Winſlow, to viſit this poor Sachim: Whom, after their long Journey, they found lying at the point of Death with a Crue of Helliſh Powaws, uſing their ineffectual Spells and Howls about him to Recover him. Upon the taking of ſome Engliſh Phyſick, he preſently revived; and thus regaining his loſt Health, the Fees he Paid his Engliſh Doctor were, A Confeſſion of the Plot among ſeveral Nations of the Indians, to deſtroy the Engliſh. He ſaid, that they had in vain ſollicited him to enter into that bloody Combination; but his Advice was, that the Governour of Plymouth ſhould immediately take off the principal Actors in this Buſineſs, whereupon the reſt being terrify'd, would ſoon deſiſt. There was a Concurrence of many things to confirm the Truth of this Information; wherefore Captain Standiſh took Eight reſolute Men with him to the Weſtonian Plantation; where pretending to Trade with the Indians, divers of the Conſpirators began to Treat him in a manner very Inſolent. The Captain, and his little Army of Eight Men, (Reader, allow them for their Courage to be called ſo) with a prodigious Reſolution, preſently killed ſome of the Chief among theſe Indians, while the reſt, after a ſhort Combate, ran before him as faſt as their Legs could carry them; nevertheleſs, in the midſt of the Skirmiſhes, an Indian Youth ran to the Engliſh, deſiring to be with them; and declaring that the Indians waited but for their finiſhing Two Canoo's, to have ſurprized the Ship in the Harbour, and have Maſſacred all the People; which had been finiſhed, if the Captain had not arrived among them juſt in the nick of Time when he did: And an Indian Spy detained at Plymouth, when he ſaw the Captain return from this Expedition, with the Head of a famous Indian in his Hand, then with a faln and frighted Countenance, acknowledged the whole Miſchief intended by the Indians againſt the Engliſh. Releaſing this Fellow, they ſent him to the Sachim of the Maſſachuſets, with Advice of what he muſt look for, in Caſe he committed any Hoſtility upon the Subjects of the King of England; whereof there was this Effect, that not only that Sachim hereby terrified, moſt humbly begg'd for Peace, and pleaded his Ignorance of his Mens Intentions; but the reſt of the Indians, under the ſame Terror, withdrew themſelves to Live in the unhealthful Swamps, which prov'd Mortal to many of them. One of the Weſtonians was endeavouring to carry unto Plymouth a Report of the Straits and Fears which were come upon them, and this Man loſing his Way, ſaved his Life; taking a wrong Track, he eſcaped the Hands of the Two Indians, who went on hunting after him; however e're he reached Plymouth, care had been already taken for theſe wretched Weſtonians by the earlier and fuller Communications of Maſſaſoit. So was the Peace of Plymouth preſerved, and ſo the Weſtonian Plantation broke up, went off, and came to nothing: Altho' 'twas much wiſhed by the Holy Robinſon, that ſome of the poor Heathen had been converted before any of them had been Slaughtered.

§. 4. A certain Gentleman [if nothing in the following Story contradict that Name] was employed in obtaining from the Grand Council of Plymouth and England, a Patent in the Name of theſe Planters for a convenient quantity of the Country, where the Providence of God had now diſpoſed them. This Man ſpeaking one Word for them, ſpake two for himſelf: And ſurreptitiouſly procured the Patent in his own Name, reſerving for himſelf and his Heirs an huge Tract of the Land; and intending the Plymotheans to hold the reſt as Tenants under him. Hereupon he took on Board many Paſſengers with their Goods; but having Sailed no further than the Downs, the Ship ſprang a Leak; and beſides this Diſſaſter, which alone was enough to have ſtopt the Voyage, one Strand of their Cable was accidentally cut; by which means it broke in a ſtreſs of Wind; and they were in extream danger of being wrack'd upon the Sands. Having with much Coſt recruited their Loſs, and encreaſed the Number of their Paſſengers, they put out again to Sea; but after they had got half Way, one of the ſaddeſt and longeſt Storms that had been known ſince the Days of the Apoſtle Paul, drove them home to England again, with a Veſſel well nigh torn to pieces, tho' the Lives of the People, which were above an Hundred, mercifully preſerved. This Man, by all his tumbling backward and forward, was by this time grown ſo Sick of his Patent, that he vomited it up; he aſſigned it over to the Company, but they afterwards obtained another, under the Umbrage whereof they could now more effectually carry on the Affairs of their New Colony. The Paſſengers went over afterwards in another Veſſel; and quickly after that another Veſſel of Paſſengers alſo arrived in the Country: Namely, in the Year 1623. Among theſe Paſſengers were divers Worthy and Uſeful Men, who were come to ſeek the Welfare of this little Iſrael; tho' at their coming they were as diverſly affected, as the Rebuilders of the Temple at Jeruſalem: Some were grieved when they ſaw how bad the Circumſtances of their Friends were, and others were glad that they were no worſe.

§. 5. The Immature Death of Mr. Robinſon in Holland, with many enſuing Diſaſters, hindred a great part of the Engliſh Congregation at Leyden, from coming over to the Remnant here ſeparated from their Brethren. Hence it was, that altho' this Remnant of that Church were bleſſed with an Elder ſo apt to Teach, that he attended all the other Works of a Miniſter; yet they had not a Paſtor to diſpence the Sacraments among them, till the Year 1629. when one Mr. Ralph Smith undertook the Paſtoral Charge of this Holy Flock. But long before that, namely, in the Year 1624. the Adventurers in England, with whom this Company held a Correſpondence, did ſend over unto them a Miniſter, who did them no manner of good; but by his Treacherous and Miſchievous Tricks at laſt utterly deſtroyed that Correſpondence. The firſt Neat-Cattel, namely, Three Heifers and a Bull, that ever were brought into this Land, now coming with him, did the Land certainly better Service than was ever done by him, who ſufficiently forgot that Scriptural Emblem of a Miniſter, The Ox Treading out the Corn. This Miniſter at his firſt arrival did careſs them with ſuch extream Showers of Affection and Humility, that they were very much taken with him; nevertheleſs, within a little while, he uſed moſt malignant Endeavours to make Factions among them, and confound all their Civil and Sacred Order. At laſt there fell into the Hands of the Governour his Letters home to England, filled with wicked and lying Accuſations againſt the People; of which things being ſhamefully Convicted, the Authority Sentenced him to be expell'd the Plantation, only they allowed him to ſtay Six Months, with ſecret Reſervations and Expectations to releaſe him from that Sentence, if he approved himſelf ſound in the Repentance which he now expreſſed. Repentance, I ſay; for he did now publickly in the Church confeſs with Tears, that the Cenſure of the Church was leſs than he deſerved; he acknowledged, That he had ſlanderouſly abus'd the good People, and that God might juſtly lay Innocent Blood to his Charge; for he knew not what hurt might have come thro' his Writings; for the Interception whereof he now bleſſed God; and that it had been his manner to pick up all the Evil that was ever ſpoken againſt the People; but he ſhut his Ears and Eyes againſt all the Good; and that if God ſhould make him a Vagabond in the Earth, he were juſt in doing ſo; and that thoſe Three things, Pride, Vain-glory, and Self-love, had been the Cauſes of his Miſcarriages. Theſe things he uttered ſo Pathetically, that they again permitted him to Preach among them; and ſome were ſo perſwaded of his Repentance, that they profeſs'd they would fall down on their Knees, that the Cenſure paſs'd on him ſhould be remitted. But, Oh the deceitful Heart of Man! After Two Months time, he ſo notoriouſly renewed the Miſcarriages which he had thus bewailed, that his own Wife, through her Affliction of Mind at his Hypocriſie, could not forbear declaring her Fears, that God would bring ſome heavy Judgment upon their Family, not only for theſe, but ſome former Wickedneſſes by him committed, eſpecially as to fearful Breaches of the Seventh Commandment, which he had with an Oath denied, tho' they were afterwards evinced. Wherefore upon the whole, being baniſhed from hence, becauſe his Reſidence here was utterly Inconſiſtent with the Life of this Infant-Plantation ; he went into Virginia, where he ſhortly after ended his own Life. Quickly after theſe Difficulties, the Company of Adventurers for the ſupport of this Plantation, became rather Adverſaries to it ; or at leaſt, a, Be you warmed and filled ; a few good Words were all the help they afforded it ; they broke to pieces, but the God of Heaven ſtill ſupported it.

§. 6. After theſe many Difficulties were thus a little ſurmounted, the Inhabitants of this Colony Proſecuted their Affairs at ſo vigorous and ſucceſsful a rate, that they not only fell into a comfortable way, both of Planting and of Trading ; but alſo in a few Years there was a notable number of Towns to be ſeen ſettled among them, and very conſiderable Churches walking, ſo far as they had attained, in the Faith and Order of the Goſpel. Their Churches, flouriſhed ſo conſiderably, that in the Year 1642. there were above a dozen Miniſters, and ſome of thoſe Miniſters were Stars of the firſt Magnitude, ſhining in their ſeveral Orbs among them. And as they proceeded in the Evangelical Service and Worſhip of our Lord Jeſus Chriſt, ſo they proſpered in their Secular Concernments. When they firſt began to divide their Lands, they wiſely contrived the Diviſion ſo, that they might keep cloſe together for their mutual Defence ; and then their Condition was very like that of the Romans in the time of Romulus, when every Man contented himſelf with Two Acres of Land ; and as Pliny tells us, It was thought a great Reward for one to receive a Pint of Corn from the People of Rome, which Corn they alſo pounded in Mortars. But ſince then their Condition is marvellouſly altered and amended : Great Farms are now ſeen among the Effects of this good Peoples Planting ; and in their Fiſhing, from the catching of Cod, and other Fiſh of leſs Dimenſions, they are ſince paſſed on to the catching of Whales, whoſe Oil is become a Staple-Commodity of the Country : Whales, I ſay, which living and moving Iſlands, do now find a way to this Coaſt, where, notwithſtanding the deſperate hazards run by the Whale-Catchers in their thin Whale-Boats, often torn to pieces by the ſtroaks of thoſe enraged Monſters ; yet it has been rarely known that any of them have miſcarried. And within a few Days of my Writing this Paragraph, a Cow and a Calf were caught at Yarmouth in this Colony ; the Cow was Fifty Five Foot long, the Bone was Nine or Ten Foot wide ; a Cart upon Wheels might have gone in at the Mouth of it ; the Calf was Twenty Foot long, for unto ſuch vaſt Calves, the Sea-Monſters draw forth their Breaſts. But ſo does the good God here give his People to ſuck the abundance of the Seas !

§. 7. If my Reader would have the Religion of theſe Planters more exactly deſcribed unto him ; after I have told him that many Hundreds of Holy Souls, having been ripened for Heaven under the Ordinances of God in this Colony ; and having left an Example of wonderful Prayerfulneſs, Watchfulneſs, Thankfulneſs, Uſefulneſs, exact Conſcienciouſneſs, Piety, Charity, Weanedneſs from the things of this World, and Affection to the things that are above, are now at reſt with the Bleſſed Jeſus, whoſe Names, tho' not Recorded in this Book, are yet entred in the Book of Life ; and I hope there are ſtill many Hundreds of their Children, even of the Third and Fourth Generation, reſolving to follow them as they followed Chriſt. I muſt refer him to an account given thereof by the Right Worſhipful Edward Winſlow, Eſq ; who was for ſome time the Governour of the Colony. He gives us to underſtand, that they are entirely of the ſame Faith with the Reformed Churches in Europe, only in their Church-Government they are Endeavourous after a Reformation more thorough than what is in many of them ; yet without any uncharitable Separation from them. He gives Inſtances of their admitting to Communion among them the Communicants of the French, the Dutch, the Scotch Churches, meerly by Virtue of their being ſo ; and ſays, We ever placed a large difference between thoſe that grounded their Practice on the Word of God, tho' differing from us in the Expoſition and Underſtanding of it, and thoſe that hated ſuch Reformers and Reformation, and went on in Antichriſtian Oppoſition to it, and Perſecution of it : After which, he adds, 'Tis true, we profeſs and deſire to practice a Separation from the World, and the Works of the World ; and as the Churches of Chriſt are all Saints by Calling, ſo we deſire to ſee the Grace of God ſhining forth (at leaſt ſeemingly, leaving ſecret things to God) in all we admit into Church-Fellowſhip with us, and to keep off ſuch as openly wallow in the Mire of their Sins, that neither the Holy things of God, nor the Communion of Saints, may be leavened or polluted thereby. And if any joining to us formerly, either when we lived at Leyden in Holland, or ſince we came to New-England, have with the Manifeſtation of their Faith, and Profeſſion of Holineſs, held forth therewith Separation from the Church of England ; I have divers times, both in the one place, and in the other, heard either Mr. Robinſon our Paſtor, or Mr. Brewſter our Elder, ſtop them forthwith, ſhewing them that we required no ſuch thing at their Hands ; but only to hold forth Faith in Chriſt Jeſus, Holineſs in the Fear of God, and Submiſſion to every Ordinance and Appointment of God. Thus he. It is true there have been ſome Varieties among this People, but ſtill I ſuppoſe the Body of them do with Integrity eſpouſe and maintain the Principles upon which they were firſt Eſtabliſhed : However, I muſt without Fear of offending expreſs my Fear, that the Leaven of that rigid Thing, they call Browniſm, has prevailed ſometimes a little of the furtheſt in the Adminiſtrations of this Pious People. Yea, there was an Hour of Temptation, wherein the fondneſs of the People for the Prophecyings of the Brethren, as they called thoſe Exerciſes; that is to ſay, the Preachments of thoſe whom they call'd Gifted Brethren, produced thoſe Diſcouragements unto their Miniſters, that almoſt all the Miniſters left the Colony; apprehending themſelves driven away by the Inſupportable Neglect and Contempt, with which the People on this occaſion treated them. And this dark Hour of Eclipſe, upon the Light of the Goſpel, in the Churches of the Colony, continued until their Humiliation and Reformation before the Great Shepherd of the Sheep, who hath ſince then bleſſed them with a Succeſſion of as Worthy Miniſters as moſt in the Land. Moreover, there has been among them one Church, that have Queſtioned and Omitted the Uſe of Infant-Baptiſm; nevertheleſs, there being many good Men among thoſe that have been of this Perſwaſion, I do not know that they have been Perſecuted with any harder Means, than thoſe of kind Conferences to reclaim them. There have been alſo ſome unhappy Sectaries, namely, Quakers and Seekers, and other ſuch Energumens, [pardon me, Reader, that I have thought them ſo] which have given uggly Diſturbances to theſe Good-Spirited Men in their Temple-Work; but they have not prevailed unto the Subverſion of the Firſt Intereſt.

Some little Controverſies likewiſe have now and then ariſen among them in the Adminiſtration of their Diſcipline; but Synods then regularly called, have uſually and preſently put into Joint all that was apprehended out. Their chief Hazard and Symptom of Degeneracy, is in the Verification of that Old Obſervation, Religio peperit Divitias, & Filia devoravit Matrem: Religion brought forth Proſperity, and the Daughter deſtroy'd the Mother. The one would expect, that as they grew in their Eſtates, they would grow in the Payment of their Quit-rents unto the God who gives them Power to get Wealth, by more liberally ſupporting his Miniſters and Ordinances among them; the moſt likely way to ſave them from the moſt miſerable Apoſtacy; the neglect whereof in ſome former Years, began for a while to be puniſhed with a ſore Famine of the Word; nevertheleſs, there is danger leſt the Enchantments of this World make them to forget their Errand into the Wilderneſs: And ſome woful Villages in the Skirts of the Colony, beginning to live without the Means of Grace among them, are ſtill more Ominous Intimations of the danger. May the God of New-England preſerve them from ſo great a Death!

§. 8. Going now to take my leave of this little Colony, that I may Converſe for a while with her Younger Siſters, which yet have outſtript her in growth exceedingly, and ſo will now draw all the Streams of her Affairs into their Channels, I ſhall repeat the Counſel which their Faithful Robinſon gave the firſt Planters of the Colony, at their parting from him in Holland. Said he, [to this purpoſe.]

'Brethren, We are now quickly to part from one another; and whether I may ever live to ſee your Faces on Earth any more, the God of Heaven only knows. But whether the Lord have appointed that or no, I charge you before God, and before his Bleſſed Angels, that you follow me no further than you have ſeen me follow the Lord Jeſus Chriſt.

'If God reveal any thing to you by any other Inſtrument of his, be as ready to receive it, as ever you were to receive any Truth by my Miniſtry; for I am verily perſwaded, I am very confident the Lord hath more Truth yet to break forth out of his Holy Word. For my part, I cannot ſufficiently bewail the Condition of the Reformed Churches, who are come to a Period in Religion; and will go at preſent no further than the Inſtruments of their firſt Reformation. The Lutherans can't be drawn to go beyond what Luther ſaw: Whatever part of his Will our good God has imparted amd revealed unto Calvin, they will rather Die than Embrace it. And the Calviniſts, you ſee, ſtick faſt where they were left by that great Man of God, who yet ſaw not all things.

'This is a Miſery much to be lamented; for tho' they were Burning and Shining Lights in their Times, yet they penetrated not into the whole Counſel of God; but were they now living, they would be as willing to embrace further Light, as that which they firſt received. I beſeech you to remember it; it is an Article of your Church-Covenant, That you will be ready to receive whatever Truth ſhall be made known unto you from the Written Word of God. Remmber that, and every other Article of your moſt Sacred Covenant. But I muſt herewithal exhort you to take heed what you receive as Truth; examine it, conſider it, compare it with the other Scriptures of Truth, before you do receive it. For it is not poſſible the Chriſtian World ſhould come ſo lately out of ſuch thick Antichriſtian Darkneſs, and that Perfection of Knowledge ſhould break forth at once. I muſt alſo adviſe you to abandon, avoid and ſhake off the Name of Browniſt: It is a meer Nick-Name, and a Brand for the making of Religion, and the Profeſſors of Religion, odious unto the Chriſtian World. Unto this End, I ſhould be extreamly glad, if ſome Godly Miniſter would go with you, or come to you, before you can have any Company. For there will be no difference between the Unconformable Miniſters of England and you, when you come to the practice of Evangelical Ordinances out of the Kingdom. And I would wiſh you by all Means to cloſe with the Godly People of England; ſtudy Union with them in all things, wherein you can have it without Sin, rather than in the leaſt meaſure to affect a Diviſion or Separation from them. Neither would I have you loth to take another Paſtor beſides my ſelf; in as ‘much as a Flock that hath Two Shepherds ‘is not thereby endangered, but ſecured.

So adding ſome other things of great Conſequence, he concluded moſt affectionately, commending his departing Flock unto the Grace of God, which now I alſo do the Offſpring of that Holy Flock.

CHAP. IV.

Paulo Majora! Or, The Eſſays and Cauſes which produced the Second, but largeſt Colony of NEW-ENGLAND; and the manner wherein the Firſt Church of this New-Colony was gathered.

§. 1. WORDS full of Emphaſis, are thoſe which my Reader may find Written by a Learned and Pious Miniſter of the Church of England; and I hope I may without offence tender to the Reader the Words of ſuch an Author.

‘Some among us (writes he) are angry with ‘Calvin for calling Humane Rites, Tolerabiles ‘Ineptias; they will not at the great Day be ‘ſuch unto the rigorous Impoſers, who made ‘them the Terms of Communion. How will ‘you at that Day lift up your Faces before ‘your Maſter and your Judge, when he ſhall ‘demand of you, what is become of thoſe his ‘Lambs which you drove into the Wilderneſs ‘by needleſs Impoſitions?

The Story of the Flocks thus driven into the Wilderneſs has begun to be related: And we would relate it without all Intemperate Expreſſions of our anger againſt our Drivers, before whom the People muſt needs go, as they did: It becomes not an Hiſtorian, and it leſs becomes a Chriſtian, to be Paſſionate. Nevertheleſs, Poetry may dare to do ſomething at the Deſcription of that which drove thoſe Drivers; and with a few Lines fetch'd from the moſt famous Epic Poem of Dr. Blackmore, we will deſcribe the Fury.

——A Fury crawl'd from out her Cell,
The Bloodieſt Miniſter of Death and Hell.
A monſtrous Shape, a foul and hideous Sight,
Which did all Hell with her dire Looks affright.
Huge full-gorg'd Snakes on her lean Shoulders hung,
Her Teeth and Claws were Iron, and her Breath
Like Subterranean Damps, gave preſent Death.
Flames worſe than Hell's, ſhot from her Bloody Eyes,
And Fire! and Sword! Eternally ſhe cries.
No certain Shape, no Feature regular,
No Limbs diſtinct in th' odious Fiend appear.
Her Squalid, Bloated Belly did ariſe,
Swoll'n with black Gore to a prodigious Size:
Diſtended vaſtly by a mighty Flood
Of ſlaughter'd Saints, and conſtant Martyr's Blood.
A Monſter ſo deform'd, ſo fierce as this,
It ſelf a Hell, ne're ſaw the dark Abyſs!
Horrow till now, the uggelieſt Shape eſteem'd,
So much out-done, an harmleſs Figure ſeem'd.
Envy, and Hate, and Malice bluſh'd to ſee
Themſelves Eclips'd by ſuch Deformity.
Her Feav'riſh Heat drinks down a Sea of Blood,
Not of the Impious, but the Juſt and Good:
'Gainſt whom ſhe burns with unextinguiſh'd Rage,
Nor can th' Exhauſted World her Wrath aſſwage.

It was PERSECUTION; a Fury which we conſider not as poſſeſſing the Church of England, but as inſpiring a Party which have unjuſtly Challenged the Name of the Church of England, and which, whenever the Church of England ſhall any more encourage her Fall, will become like that of the Houſe which our Saviour ſaw Built upon the Sand.

§. 2. There were more than a few attempts of the Engliſh, to People and Improve the Parts of New-England, which were to the Northward of New-Plymouth; but the Deſigns of thoſe Attempts being aim'd no higher than the Advancement of ſome Worldly Intereſts, a conſtant Series of Diſaſters has confounded them, until there was a Plantation erected upon the nobler Deſigns of Chriſtianity; and that Plantation, tho' it has had more Adverſaries than perhaps any one upon Earth; yet, having obtained help from God, it continues to this Day. There have been very fine Settlements in the North-Eaſt Regions; but what is become of them? I have heard that one of our Miniſters once Preaching to a Congregation there, urged them to approve themſelves a Religious People from this Conſideration, That otherwiſe they would contradict the main end of Planting this Wilderneſs; whereupon a well-known Perſon, then in the Aſſembly, cry'd out, Sir, You are miſtaken, you think you are Preaching to the People at the Bay; our main End was to catch Fiſh. Truly 'twere to have been wiſhed, that ſomething more excellent had been the main End of the Settlements in that brave Country, which we have, even long ſince the arrival of that more Pious Colony at the Bay, now ſeen dreadfully unſettled, no leſs than twice at leaſt, by the Sword of the Heathen, after they had been repleniſhed with many Hundreds of People, who had thriven to many Thouſands of Pounds; and had all the force of the Bay too, to aſſiſt them in the maintaining of their Settlements. But the ſame or the like inauſpicious cious things attended many other Endeavours, to make Plantations upon ſuch a Main End in ſeveral other Parts of our Country, before the Arrival of thoſe by whom the Maſſachuſet Colony was at laſt formed upon more glorious Aims: All proving like the Habitations of the fooliſh, curſed before they had taken root. Of all which Cataſtrophe's, I ſuppoſe none was more ſudden than that of Monſieur Finch, whom in a Ship from France, trucking with the Maſſachuſet-Natives; thoſe Bloody Salvages, coming on Board without any other Arms, but Knives concealed under Flaps, immediately Butchered with all his Men, and ſet the Ship on Fire. Yea, ſo many Fatalities attended the Adventurers in their Eſſays, that they began to ſuſpect that the Indian Sorcerers had laid the place under ſome Faſcination; and that the Engliſh could not proſper upon ſuch Enchanted Ground, ſo that they were almoſt afraid of Adventuring any more.

§. 3. Several Perſons in the Weſt of England, having by Fiſhing-Voyages to Cape Ann, the Northern Promontory of the Maſſachuſet-Bay, obtained ſome Acquaintance with thoſe Parts; the News of the good Progreſs made in the New Plantation of Plymouth, inſpired the renowned Mr. White, Miniſter of Dorcheſter, to proſecute the Settlement of ſuch another Plantation here for the Propagation of Religion. This good Man engaged ſeveral Gentlemen about the Year 1624. in this Noble Deſign; and they employ'd a moſt Religious, Prudent, Worthy Gentleman, one Mr. Roger Conant, in the Government of the Place, and of their Affairs upon the Place; but thro' many Diſcouragements, the Deſign for a while almoſt fell unto the Ground. That great Man greatly grieved hereat, wrote over to this Mr. Roger Conant, that if he and three Honeſt Men more would yet ſtay upon the Spot, he would procure a Patent for them, and ſend them over Friends, Goods, Proviſions, and what was neceſſary to aſſiſt their Undertakings. Mr. Conant, then looking out a Scituation more Commodious for a Town, gave his Three diſheartned Companions to underſtand, that he did believe God would make this Land a Receptacle for his People, and that if they ſhould leave him, yet he would not ſtir; for he was confident he ſhould not long want Company; which Confidence of his cauſed them to abandon the thoughts of leaving him. Well, it was not long before the Council of Plymouth in England, had by a Deed bearing Date, March 19. 1627. Sold unto ſome Knights and Gentlemen about Dorcheſter, viz. Sir Henry Roſwel, Sir John Young, Thomas Southcott, John Humphrey, John Endicot, and Simon Whetcomb, and their Heirs and Aſſigns, and their Aſſociates for ever, that Part of New-England which lyes between a great River call'd Merimack, and a certain other River there call'd Charles River, in the bottom of the Maſſachuſet-Bay. But ſhortly after this, Mr. White brought the aforeſaid Honourable Perſons into an Acquaintance with ſeveral other Perſons of Quality about London; as, namely, Sir Richard Saltonſtall, Iſaac Johnſon, Samuel Adderly, John Ven, Matthew Cradock, George Harwood, Increaſe Nowel, Richard Perry, Richard Bellingham, Nathanael Wright, Samuel Vaſſal, Theophilus Eaton, Thomas Goff, Thomas Adams, John Brown, Samuel Brown, Thomas Hutchings, William Vaſſal, William Pinchon, and George Foxcraft. Theſe Perſons being aſſociated unto the former, and having bought of them all their Intereſt in New-England aforeſaid, now conſulted about ſettling a Plantation in that Country, whither ſuch as were then called Non-Conformiſts, might with the Grace and Leave of the King make a peaceable Seceſſion, and enjoy the Liberty and the Exerciſe of their own Perſwaſions, about the Worſhip of the Lord Jeſus Chriſt. Whereupon Petitioning the King to confirm what they had thus purchaſed with a New Patent, he granted them one, bearing Date from the Year 1628. which gave them a Right unto the Soil, holding their Titles of Lands, as of the Mannor of Eaſt Greenwich in Kent, and in common Soccage. By this Charter they were empowered yearly to Elect their own Governour, Deputy-Governour and Magiſtrates; as alſo to make ſuch Laws they ſhould think ſuitable for the Plantation: But as an acknowledgment of their dependance upon England, they might not make any Laws Repugnant unto thoſe of the Kingdom; and the Fifth part of all the Oar of Gold or Silver found in the Territory, belong'd unto the Crown. So, ſoon after Mr. Cradock being by the Company choſen Governour, they ſent over Mr. Endicott in the Year 1628. to carry on the Plantation, which the Dorcheſter-Agents had lookt out for them, which was at a Place called Nahumkeick. Of which place I have ſomewhere met with an odd Obſervation, that the Name of it was rather Hebrew than Indian; for נחום Nahum, ſignifies Comfort, and חיק Keik, ſignifies an Haven; and our Engliſh not only found it an Haven of Comfort, but happened alſo to put an Hebrew Name upon it; for they call'd it Salem, for the Peace which they had and hoped in it; and ſo it is called unto this Day.

§. 4. An Entrance being thus made upon the Deſign of Planting a Country of Engliſh and Reformed Churches; they that were concerned for the Plantation, made their Application to Two Non-Conformiſts Miniſters, that they would go over to ſerve the Cauſe of God and of Religion in the beginning of thoſe Churches. The one of theſe was Mr. Higginſon, a Miniſter in Leiceſterſhire, ſilenced for his Non-Conformity; the other was Mr. Skelton, a Miniſter of Lincolnſhire, ſuffering alſo for his Non-Conformity: Both of which were Men eminent for Learning and Virtue, and who thus driven out of their Native Country, ſought their Graves on the American-Strand, whereon the Epitaph might be inſcribed that was on Scipio's, Ingrata Patria, ne

Mortui quidem habebis Oſſa. Theſe Miniſters came over to Salem, in the Summer of the Year 1629. and with theſe there came over a conſiderable number of Excellent Chriſtians, who no ſooner arrived, but they ſet themſelves about the Church-Work, which was their Errand hither.

'Tis true, there were two other Clergy-Men, who came over about the ſame time; nevertheleſs, there has been very little Account given of their Circumſtances; except what a certain little Narrative-Writer has offered us, by ſaying, There were Two that began to hew Stones in the Mountains, for the Building of the Temple here; but when they ſaw all ſorts of Stones would not fit in the Building, the one betook himſelf to the Seas again, and the other to Till the Land; for which cauſe, burying all further mention of them among the Rubbiſh, in the Foundation of the Colony, we will proceed with our Story; which is now to tell us, That the Paſſage of theſe our Pilgrims was attended with many Smiles of Heaven upon them. They were bleſſed with a Company of honeſt Seamen; with whom the Miniſters and Paſſengers conſtantly ſerved God, Morning and Evening; Reading, Expounding and Applying the Word of God, ſinging of His Praiſe, and ſeeking of His Peace; to which Exerciſes they added on the Lord's Day two Sermons, and a Catechiſing: And ſometimes they ſet apart an whole Day for Faſting and Prayer, to obtain from Heaven a good ſucceſs in their Voyage, eſpecially when the Weather was much againſt them, whereto they had very Remarkable Anſwers; but the Seamen ſaid, That they believed theſe were the Firſt Sea-Faſts that ever were kept in the World. At length, Per varios Caſus, per Tot Diſcrimina Rerum, they Landed at the Haven of Reſt provided for them.

§. 5. The perſecuted Servants of God, under the Engliſh Hierarchy, had been in a Sea of Ice mingled with Fire; tho' the Fire ſcalded them, yet ſuch Cakes of Ice were over their Heads, that there was no getting out: But the Ice was now broken, by the American Offers of a Retreat for the pure Worſhippers of the Lord into a Wilderneſs.

The Report of the Charter granted unto the Governour and Company of the Maſſachuſet-Bay, and the Entertainment and Encouragement, which Planters began to find in that Bay, came with a, —Patrias, age, deſere Sedes, and cauſed many very deſerving Perſons to tranſplant themſelves and their Families into New-England. Gentlemen of Ancient and Worſhipful Families, and Miniſters of the Goſpel, then of great Fame at Home, and Merchants, Husbandmen, Artificers, to the Number of ſome Thouſands, did for Twelve Years together carry on this Tranſplantation. It was indeed a Baniſhment, rather than a Removal, which was undergone by this glorious Generation, and you may be ſure ſufficiently Afflictive to Men of Eſtate, Breeding and Converſation. As the Hazard which they ran in this Undertaking was of ſuch Extraordinarineſs, that nothing leſs than a ſtrange and ſtrong Impreſſion from Heaven could have thereunto moved the Hearts of ſuch as were in it; ſo the Expence with which they carried on the Undertaking was truly Extraordinary. By Computation, the Paſſage of the Perſons that peopled New-England, coſt at leaſt Ninety Five Thouſand Pound: The Tranſportation of their firſt ſmall Stock of Cattel great and ſmall, coſt no leſs than Twelve Thouſand Pound, beſides the Price of the Cattel themſelves: The Proviſions laid in for Subſiſtence, till Tillage might produce more, coſt Forty Five Thouſand Pounds; the Materials for their firſt Cottages coſt Eighteen Thouſand Pounds; their Arms, Ammunition and Great Artillery, coſt Twenty Two Thouſand Pounds; beſides which Hundred and Ninety Two Thouſand Pounds, the Adventurers laid out in England, what was not Inconſiderable. About an Hundred and Ninety Eight Ships were employed in paſſing the Perils of the Seas, in the Accompliſhment of this Renowned Settlement; whereof, by the way, but one miſcarried in thoſe Perils.

Briefly, The God of Heaven ſerved as it were, a Summons upon the Spirits of His People in the Engliſh Nation; ſtirring up the Spirits of Thouſands which never ſaw the Faces of each other, with a moſt Unanimous Inclination to leave all the Pleaſant Accommodations of their Native Country, and go over a Terrible Ocean, into a more Terrible Deſart, for the pure Enjoyment of all his Ordinances. It is now Reaſonable that before we paſs any further, the Reaſons of this Undertaking ſhould be more exactly made known unto Poſterity, eſpecially unto the Poſterity of thoſe that were the Undertakers, leſt they come at length to Forget and Neglect the true Intereſt of New-England. Wherefore I ſhall now Tranſcribe ſome of them from a Manuſcript, wherein they were then tendred unto Conſideration.

General Conſiderations for the Plantation of New-England.

'Firſt, It will be a Service unto the Church of great Conſequence, to carry the Goſpel into thoſe Parts of the World, and Raiſe a Bulwark againſt the Kingdom of Antichriſt, which the Jeſuites labour to Rear up in all Parts of the World.

'Secondly, All other Churches of Europe have been brought under Deſolations; and it may be feared that the like Judgments are coming upon Us; and who knows but God hath provided this place to be a Refuge for many, whom he means to ſave out of the General Deſtruction.

'Thirdly, The Land grows weary of her Inhabitants, inſomuch that Man, which is the moſt precious of all Creatures, is here more vile and baſe than the Earth he treads upon: Children, Neighbours and Friends, eſpecially the Poor, are counted the greateſt Burdens, which if things were right, would be the chiefeſt Earthly Bleſſings.

‘Fourthly, We are grown to that Intemperance in all Exceſs of Riot, as no mean Eſtate almoſt will ſuffice a Man to keep Sail with his Equals, and he that fails in it, muſt live in Scorn and Contempt: Hence it comes to paſs, that all Arts and Trades are carried in that Deceitful Manner, and Unrighteous Courſe, as it is almoſt Impoſſible for a good upright Man to maintain his conſtant Charge, and live comfortably in them.

‘Fifthly, The Schools of Learning and Religion are ſo corrupted, as (beſides the unſupportable Charge of Education) moſt Children, even the Beſt, Witteſt, and of the Faireſt Hopes, are perverted, corrupted, and utterly overthrown, by the multitude of evil Examples and Licentious Behaviours in theſe Seminaries.

‘Sixthly, The whole Earth is the Lord's Garden, and he hath given it to the Sons of Adam, to be Tilled and Improved by them: Why then ſhould we ſtand Starving here for Places of Habitation, and in the mean time ſuffer whole Countries, as profitable for the uſe of Man, to lye waſte without any Improvement?

‘Seventhly, What can be a better or nobler Work, and more worthy of a Chriſtian, than to erect and ſupport a reformed particular Church in its Infancy, and unite our Forces with ſuch a Company of Faithful People, as by a timely Aſſiſtance may grow Stronger and Proſper; but for want of it, may be put to great Hazards, if not be wholly Ruined.

‘Eighthly, If any ſuch as are known to be Godly, and live in Wealth and Proſperity here, ſhall forſake all this to join with this Reformed Church, and with it run the Hazard of an hard and mean Condition, it will be an Example of great Uſe, both for the removing of Scandal, and to give more Life unto the Faith of God's People in their Prayers for the Plantation, and alſo to encourage others to join the more willingly in it.

§. 6. Mr. Higginſon, and Mr. Skelton, and other good People that arrived at Salem, in the Year 1629. reſolved, like their Father Abraham, to begin their Plantation with calling on the Name of the Lord. The great Mr. Hilderſham had adviſed our firſt Planters to agree fully upon their Form of Church Government, before their coming into New-England; but they had indeed agreed little further than in this general Principle, That the Reformation of the Church was to be endeavoured according to the written Word of God. Accordingly ours, now arrived at Salem, conſulted with their Brethren at Plymouth, what Steps to take for the more exact Acquainting of themſelves with, and Conforming themſelves to, that written Word: And the Plymotheans, to their great Satisfaction, laid before them what Warrant, they judged, that they had in the Laws of our Lord Jeſus Chriſt, for every Particular in their Church Order.

Whereupon having the Concurrence and Countenance of their Deputy Governour, the Worſhipful John Endicot, Eſq; and the approving Preſence of Meſſengers from the Church of Plymouth, they ſet apart the Sixth Day of Auguſt, after their Arrival, for Faſting and Prayer, for the ſettling of a Church-State among them, and for their making a Confeſſion of their Faith, and entering into an Holy Covenant, whereby that Church-State was formed.

Mr. Higginſon then became the Teacher, and Mr. Skelton the Paſtor, of the Church thus conſtituted at Salem; and they lived very peaceably in Salem together, till the Death of Mr. Higginſon, which was about a Twelvemonth after, and then of Mr. Skelton, who did not long ſurvive him. Now the Covenant whereto theſe Chriſtians engaged themſelves, which was about Seven Years after ſolemnly renewed among them, I ſhall here lay before all the Churches of God, as it was then expreſſed and inforced.

We Covenant with our Lord, and one with another; and we do Bind our ſelves in the preſence of God, to walk together in all his Ways, according as he is pleaſed to reveal himſelf unto us in his bleſſed Word of Truth; and do explicitely, in the Name and Fear of God, profeſs and proteſt to walk as followeth, thro' the Power and Grace of our Lord Jeſus Chriſt.

We Avouch the Lord to be our God, and our ſelves to be his People, in the truth and ſimplicity of our Spirits.

We Give our ſelves to the Lord Jeſus Chriſt, and the Word of his Grace for the Teaching, Ruling and Sanctifying of us in Matters of Worſhip and Converſation, reſolving to cleave unto him alone for Life and Glory, and to reject all contrary Ways, Canons, and Conſtitutions of Men in his Worſhip.

We Promiſe to walk with our Brethren, with all Watchfulneſs and Tenderneſs, avoiding Jelouſies and Suſpicions, Back-Bitings, Cenſurings, Provokings, ſecret Riſings of Spirit againſt them; but in all Offences to follow the Rule of our Lord Jeſus, and to bear and forbear, give and forgive, as he hath taught us.

In Publick or Private, we will willingly Do nothing to the Offence of the Church; but will be willing to take Advice for our ſelves and ours, as occaſion ſhall be preſented.

We will not in the Congregation be forward either to ſhow our own Gifts and Parts in Speaking or Scrupling, or there diſcover the Weakneſs or Failings of our Brethren; but attend an orderly Call thereunto, knowing how much the Lord may be diſhonoured, and his Goſpel, and the Profeſſion of it, ſlighted by our Diſtempers and Weakneſſes in Publick.

We Bind our ſelves to ſtudy the Advancement of the Goſpel in all Truth and Peace; both in Regard of thoſe that are within or without; no way ſlighting our Siſter Churches, but uſing their Counſel, as need ſhall be; not laying a Stumbling-block before any, no, not the Indians, whoſe good we deſire to promote; and ſo to converſe, as we may avoid the very appearance of Evil.

We do hereby promiſe to carry our ſelves in all lawful Obedience to thoſe that are over us, in Church or Commonwealth, knowing how well-pleaſing ſing it will be to the Lord, that they ſhould have Encouragement in their Places, by our not grieving their Spirits thro' our Irregularities.

We Reſolve to approve our ſelves to the Lord in our particular Callings; ſhunning Idleneſs, as the Bane of any State; nor will we deal hardly or oppreſſingly with any, wherein we are the Lord's Stewards.

Promiſing alſo unto our beſt Ability to Teach our Children and Servants the Knowledge of God, and of His Will, that they may ſerve Him alſo; and all this not by any ſtrength of our own, but by the Lord Chriſt; whoſe Blood we deſire may ſprinkle this our Covenant made in His Name.

By this Inſtrument was the Covenant of Grace Explained, Received, and Recognized, by the Firſt Church in this Colony, and applied unto the Evangelical Deſigns of a Church-Eſtate before the Lord: This Inſtrument they afterwards often read over, and renewed the Conſent of their Souls unto every Article in it; eſpecially when their Days of Humiliation invited them to lay hold on particular Opportunities for doing ſo.

So you have ſeen the Nativity of the Firſt Church in the Maſſachuſet-Colony.

§. 7. As for the Circumſtances of Admiſſion into this Church, they left it very much unto the Diſcretion and Faithfulneſs of their Elders, together with the Condition of the Perſons to be admitted. Some were admitted by expreſſing their Conſent unto their Confeſſion and Covenant; ſome were admitted after their firſt Anſwering to Queſtions about Religion, propounded unto them; ſome were admitted, when they had preſented in Writing ſuch things, as might give Satisfaction unto the People of God concerning them; and ſome that were admitted, Orally addreſſed the People of God in ſuch Terms, as they thought proper to ask their Communion with; which Diverſity was perhaps more Beautiful, than would have been a more Punctilious Uniformity: But none were admitted without regard unto a Blameleſs and Holy Converſation. They did all agree with their Brethren of Plymouth in this Point, That the Children of the Faithful were Church-Members, with their Parents; and that their Baptiſm was a Seal of their being ſo; only before their admiſſion to Fellowſhip in a Particular Church, it was judged Neceſſary, that being free from Scandal, they ſhould be examined by the Elders of the Church, upon whoſe Approbation of their Fitneſs, they ſhould Publickly and Perſonally own the Covenant; ſo they were to be received unto the Table of the Lord: And accordingly the Eldeſt Son of Mr. Higginſon, being about Fifteen Years of Age, and laudably Anſwering all the Characters expected in a Communicant, was then ſo Received.

§. 8. It is to be Remembred, that ſome of the Paſſengers, who came over with thoſe of our firſt Salemites, obſerving that the Miniſters did not uſe the Book of Common-Prayer in their Adminiſtrations; that they Adminiſtred the Baptiſm and the Supper of the Lord, without any unſcriptural Ceremonies; that they reſolved upon uſing Diſcipline in the Congregation againſt Scandalous Offenders, according to the Word of God; and that ſome Scandalous Perſons had been denied Admiſſion into the Communion of the Church; they began (Frankford-Faſhion) to raiſe a deal of Trouble hereupon. Herodiana Malitia, naſcentem perſequi Religionem! Of theſe there were eſpecially Two Brothers; the one a Lawyer, the other a Merchant, both Men of Parts, Eſtate and Figure in the Place. Theſe gather'd a Company together, ſeparate from the publick Aſſembly; and there the Common-Prayer-Worſhip was after a ſort upheld among ſuch as would reſort unto them. The Governour perceiving a Diſturbance to ariſe among the People on this Occaſion, ſent for the Brothers; who accuſed the Miniſters, as departing from the Orders of the Church of England; adding, That they were Separatiſts, and would be ſhortly Anabaptiſts; but for themſelves, They would hold unto the Orders of the Church of England. The Anſwer of the Miniſters to theſe Accuſations, was, That they were neither Separatiſts nor Anabaptiſts; that they did not ſeparate from the Church of England, nor from the Ordinances of God there, but only from the Corruptions and Diſorders of that Church: That they came away from the Common-Prayer and Ceremonies, and had ſuffered much for their Non-conformity in their Native Land; and therefore being in a place where they might have their Liberty, they neither could nor would uſe them; inaſmuch as they judged the Impoſition of theſe things to be a ſinful Violation of the Worſhip of God. The Governour, the Council, the People, generally approved of the Anſwer thus given by the Miniſters; but theſe Perſons returned into England with very furious Threatnings againſt the Church thus Eſtabliſhed; however the threatned Folks have lived ſo long, that the Church has out-lived the grand Climacterical Year of Humane Age; it now Flouriſhing more than Sixty-three Years after its firſt Gathering under the Paſtoral Care of a moſt Reverend and Ancient Perſon, even Mr. John Higginſon, the Son of that excellent Man who laid the Foundations of that Society.

CHAP. V.

Peregrini Deo Curæ : Or, The Progreſs of the New-Colony ; with ſome Account of the Perſons, the Methods, and the Troubles, by which it came to Something.

§. 1. THE Governour and Company of the Maſſachuſet-Bay then in London, did in the Year 1629. after exact and mature Debates, Conclude, that it was moſt Convenient for the Government, with the Charter of the Plantation, to be transferred into the Plantation it ſelf; and an Order of Court being drawn up for that End, there was then Choſen a New Governour, and a New Deputy-Governour, that were willing to remove themſelves with their Families thither on the firſt Occaſion. The Governour was John Winthrop, Eſq; a Gentleman of that Wiſdom and Virtue, and thoſe manifold Accompliſhments, that After-Generations muſt reckon him no leſs a Glory, than he was a Patriot of the Country. The Deputy-Governour was Thomas Dudley, Eſq; a Gentleman, whoſe Natural and Acquired Abilities, joined with his excellent Moral Qualities, Entitled him to all the great Reſpects with which his Country on all Opportunities treated him. Several moſt Worthy Aſſiſtants were at the ſame time choſen to be in this Tranſportation; moreover, ſeveral other Gentlemen of prime Note, and ſeveral famous Miniſters of the Goſpel, now likewiſe embarked themſelves with theſe Honourable Adventurers: Who Equipped a Fleet, conſiſting of Ten or Eleven Ships, whereof the Admiral was, The Arabella (ſo called in Honour of the Right Honourable the Lady Arabella Johnſon, at this time on Board) a Ship of Three Hundred and Fifty Tuns; and in ſome of the ſaid Ships there were Two Hundred Paſſengers; all of which Arrived before the middle of July, in the Year 1630. ſafe in the Harbours of New-England. There was a time when the Britiſh Sea was by Clements, and the other Ancients, called, 'Ωκεανος ἀπέρατος, The unpaſſable Ocean. What then was to be thought of the vaſt Atlantick Sea on the Weſtward of Britain? But this Ocean muſt now be paſſed! An Heart of Stone muſt have diſſolved into Tears at the Affectionate Farewel, which the Governour and other Eminent Perſons took of their Friends, at a Feaſt which the Governour made for them, a little before their going off; however they were acted by Principles that could carry them thro' Tears and Oceans; yea, thro' Oceans of Tears: Principles that enabled them to leave, Dulcia Limina, atq; amabilem Larem, quem & parentum memoria, atq; ipſius (to uſe Stupius words) Infamiæ Rudimenta Confirmant. Some very late Geographers do aſſure us, that the Breadth of the Atlantick Sea is commonly over-reckoned by Six, by Eight, by Ten Degrees. But let that Sea be as narrow as they pleaſe, I can aſſure the Reader the paſſing of it was no little Trial unto thoſe worthy People that were now to paſs it.

§. 2. But the moſt notable Circumſtance in their Farewel, was their Compoſing and Publiſhing of what they called, The humble requeſt of His Majeſties Loyal Subjects, the Governour and Company lately gone for New-England, to the reſt of their Brethren in and of the Church of England; for the obtaining of their Prayers, and the removal of Suſpicions and Miſconſtructions of their Intentions. In this Addreſs of theirs, notwithſtanding the trouble they had undergone for deſiring to ſee the Church of England Reformed of ſeveral things, which they thought its Deformities, yet they now called the Church of England their Dear Mother; acknowledging that ſuch Hope and Part as they had obtained in the Common Salvation they had ſucked from her Breaſts; therewithal entreating their many Reverend Fathers and Brethren to recommend them unto the Mercies of God, in their conſtant Prayers, as a Church now ſpringing out of their own Bowels. You are not Ignorant (ſaid they) that the Spirit of God ſtirred up the Apoſtle Paul, to make a continual mention of the Church at Philippi, which was a Colony from Rome; let the ſame Spirit, we beſeech you, put you in Mind, that are the Lord's Remembrancers, to pray for us without ceaſing, who are the weak Colony from your ſelves. And after ſuch Prayers, they Concluded, What Goodneſs you ſhall extend unto us, in this or any other Chriſtian Kindneſs, we your Brethren in Chriſt ſhall Labour to Repay, in what Duty we are or ſhall be able to perform; promiſing ſo far as God ſhall enable us, to give him no reſt on your Behalfs; wiſhing our Heads and Hearts may be Fountains of Tears for your everlaſting Welfare, when we ſhall be in our Poor Cottages in the Wilderneſs, overſhadowed with the Spirit of Supplication, thro' the manifold Neceſſities and Tribulations, which may not altogether unexpectedly, nor we hope unprofitably, befal us.

§. 3. Reader, If ever the Charity of a Right Chriſtian, and Enlarged Soul, were exemplarily ſeen in its proper Expanſions, 'twas in the Addreſs which thou haſt now been Reading: But if it now puzzel the Reader to Reconcile theſe Paſſages with the Principles declared, the Practices followed, and the Perſecutions undergone, by theſe American Reformers, let him know, that there was more than one Diſtinction, whereof theſe excellent Perſons were not Ignorant. Firſt, They were able to Diſtinguiſh between the Church of England, as it contained the whole Body of the Faithful, ſcattered throughout the Kingdoms, tho' of different Perſwaſions about ſome Rites and Modes in Religion; many Thouſands of whom our Nor-Angles knew could comply with many things, to which our Conſciences otherwiſe enlightned and perſwaded could not yeild ſuch a Compliance: And the Church of England, as it was confined unto a certain Conſtitution by Canons, which pronounced Ipſo Facto, Excommunicate all thoſe who ſhould affirm that the Worſhip contained in the Book of Common-Prayer, and Adminiſtrations of Sacraments, is unlawful, or that any of the Thirty Nine Articles are Erroneous, or that any of the Ceremonies commanded by the Authority of the Church might not be Approved, Uſed and Subſcribed; and which will have to be Accurſed all thoſe, who maintain that there are in the Realm any other Meetings, Aſſemblies or Congregations of the King's Born Subjects, than ſuch as by the Laws of the Land are allowed, which may rightly Challenge to themſelves the Name of True and Lawful Churches: And by which, all thoſe that refuſe to Kneel at the Reception of the Sacrament, and to be preſent at Publick Prayers, according to the Orders of the Church, about which there are preſcribed many Formalities of Reſponſes, with Bowing at the Name of Jeſus, are to be denied the Communion; and all who dare not ſubmit their Children to be Baptized by the Undertaking of God-Fathers, and receive the Croſs as a dedicating Badge of Chriſtianity, muſt not have Baptiſm for their Children: Beſides an Et-Cætera of how many more Impoſitions! Again, they were able to diſtinguiſh between the Church of England, as it kept the true Doctrine of the Proteſtant Religion, with a Diſpoſition to purſue the Reformation begun in the former Century, among whom we may Reckon ſuch Men, as the famous Aſſembly of Divines at Weſtminſter, who all but Eight or Nine, and the Scots, had before then lived in Conformity; and the Church of England, as limiting that Name unto a certain Faction, who together with a Diſcipline very much Unſcriptural, vigorouſly proſecuted the Tripartite Plot of Arminianiſm and Conciliation with Rome, in the Church, and unbounded Prerogative in the State; who ſet themſelves to Cripple as faſt as they could the more Learned, Godly, Painful Miniſters of the Land, and Silence and Ruin ſuch as could not Read a Book for Sports on the Lord's Days; or did but uſe a Prayer of their own Conceiving, before or after Sermon; or did but Preach in an Afternoon, as well as in a Morning, or on a Lecture, or on a Market, or in aniwiſe diſcountenance Old Superſtitions, or New Extravagancies; and who at laſt threw the Nation into the lamentable Confuſions of a Civil War. By the Light of this Diſtinction, we may eaſily perceive what Church of England it was, that our New-England Exiles called, Their Mother; though their Mother had been ſo harſh to them, as to turn them out of Doors, yet they highly honoured Her; believing that it was not ſo much their Mother, but ſome of their angry Brethren, abuſing the Name of their Mother, who ſo harſhly treated them; and all the harm they wiſhed her, was to ſee her put off thoſe Ill Trimmings, which at her firſt coming out of the Popiſh Babylon, ſhe had not ſo fully laid aſide. If any of thoſe envious Brethren do now call theſe Diſſenters, as not very long ſince a great Prelate in a Sermon did, The Baſtards of the Church of England, I will not make the Return which was made upon it by a Perſon of Quality then preſent; but inſtead thereof humbly Demand, who are the Truer Sons to the Church of England; they that hold all the Fundamentals of Chriſtianity embraced by that Church, only Queſtioning and Forbearing a few Diſciplinary Points, which are confeſſed Indifferent by the greateſt Zealots for them; or they that have made Britain more unhabitable than the Torrid Zone? For the poor Non-Conformiſts, by their hot preſſing of thoſe Indifferencies, as if they had been the only Neceſſaries, in the mean time utterly ſubverting the Faith in the important Points of Predeſtination, Free-will, Juſtification, Perſeverance, and ſome other things, which that Church requires all her Children to give their Aſſent and Conſent unto? If the Former; then, ſay I, the Firſt Planters of New England were Truer Sons to the Church of England, than that part of the Church, which, then by their miſemploying their heavy Church-keys, baniſhed them into this Plantation. And indeed, the more Genuine among the moſt Conformable Sons of the Church, did then accordingly wiſh all Proſperity to their New-Engliſh Brethren; in the Number of whom I would particularly Reckon that faithful Man, Mr. Edward Symons, Miniſter of Rayn in Eſſex; who in a Diſcourſe printed Anno 1637, does thus Expreſs himſelf, Many now promiſe to themſelves nothing but ſucceſſive Happineſs at New-England; which for a time, thro' God's Mercy, they may enjoy; and I pray God, they may a long time, but in this World there is no Happineſs perpetual. Nor would I on this Occaſion leave unquoted ſome notable Words of the Learned, Witty, and Famous Dr. Fuller, in his Comment on Ruth, Page 16. Concerning our Brethren which of late left this Kingdom, to advance a Plantation in New-England, I think the Counſel beſt, that King Joaſh preſcribed unto Amaziah, Tarry at Home: Yet as for thoſe that are already gone, far be it from us to conceive them to be ſuch, to whom we may not ſay, God ſpeed: But let us Pity them, and Pray for them. I conclude of the two Englands, what our Saviour ſaith of the two Wines, No Man having taſted of the Old, preſently deſireth the New; for he ſaith, The Old is better.

§. 4. Being happily arrived at New-England, our new Planters found the difficulties of a rough and hard Wilderneſs preſently aſſaulting them: Of which the worſt was the Sicklineſs which many of them had contracted by their other difficulties. Of thoſe who ſoon dy'd after their firſt Arrival, not the leaſt conſiderable was the Lady Arabella, who left an Earthly Paradice in the Family of an Earldom, to Encounter the Sorrows of a Wilderneſs, for the Entertainments of a pure Worſhip in the Houſe of God; and then immediately left that Wilder- neſs for the Heavenly Paradiſe, whereto the Compaſſionate Jeſus, of whom ſhe was a Follower, called her. We have Read concerning a Noble Woman of Bohemia, who forſook her Friends, her Plate, her Houſe and All; and becauſe the Gates of the City were Guarded, crept through the Common-Sewer, that ſhe might enjoy the Inſtitutions of our Lord at another Place where they might be had. The Spirit which acted that Noble Woman, we may ſuppoſe carried this Bleſſed Lady thus to and thro' the Hardſhips of an American Deſart. But as for her Virtuous Husband, Iſaac Johnſon, Eſq;

———He try'd
To Live without her, lik'd it not, and Dy'd.

His Mourning for the Death of his Honourable Conſort was too bitter to be extended a Year; about a Month after her Death, his enſued, unto the extream loſs of the whole Plantation. But at the End of this perfect and upright Man, there was not only Peace, but Joy; and his Joy particularly expreſſed it ſelf, That God had kept his Eyes open ſo long as to ſee One Church of the Lord Jeſus Chriſt gathered in theſe Ends of the Earth, before his own going away to Heaven. The Mortality thus threatning of this New Plantation, ſo enlivened the Devotions of this good People, that they ſet themſelves by Faſting and Prayer to obtain from God the removal of it; and their Brethren at Plymouth alſo attended the like Duties on their Behalf: The Iſſue whereof was, that in a little time they not only had Health reſtored, but they likewiſe enjoyed the ſpecial Direction and Aſſiſtance of God in the further Proſecution of their Undertakings.

§. 5. But there were Two terrible Diſtreſſes more, beſides that of Sickneſs, whereto this People were expoſed in the beginning of their Settlement: Tho' a moſt ſeaſonable and almoſt unexpected Mercy from Heaven ſtill reſcued them out of thoſe Diſtreſſes. One thing that ſometimes extreamly exerciſed them, was a Scarcity of Proviſions; in which 'twas wonderful to ſee their Dependance upon God, and God's Mindfulneſs of them. When the parching Droughts of the Summer divers times threatned them with an utter and a total Conſumption to the Fruits of the Earth, it was their manner, with Heart-melting, and I may ſay, Heaven-melting Devotions, to Faſt and Pray before God; and on the very Days, when they poured out the Water of their Tears before him, he would ſhower down the Water of his Rain upon their Fields; while they were yet ſpeaking, he would hear them; inſomuch that the Salvages themſelves would on that Occaſion admire the Engliſhman's God! But the Engliſhmen themſelves would Celebrate their Days of Thankſgiving to him. When their Stock was likewiſe waſted ſo far, which divers times it was, that they were come to the laſt Meal in the Barrel, juſt then, unlook'd for, arrived ſeveral Ships from other Parts of the World loaden with Supplies, among which, One was by the Lord Deputy of Ireland ſent hither, altho' he did not know the Neceſſities of the Country, to which he ſent her; and if he had known them, would have been thought as unlikely as any Man living to have helpt them: In theſe Extremities, 'twas marvellous to ſee how Helpful theſe good People were to one another, following the Example of their moſt liberal Governour Winthrop, who made an equal Diſtribution of what he had in his own Stores among the Poor, taking no thought for to Morrow! And how Content they were; when an Honeſt Man, as I have heard, inviting his Friends to a Diſh of Clams, at the Table gave Thanks to Heaven, who had given them to ſuck the abundance of the Seas, and of the Treaſures hid in the Sands!

Another thing that gave them no little Exerciſe, was the Fear of the Indians, by whom they were ſometimes Alarm'd. But this Fear was wonderfully prevented, not only by Inteſtine Wars happening then to fall out among thoſe Barbarians, but chiefly by the Small-Pox, which prov'd a great Plague unto them, and particularly to one of the Princes in the Maſſachuſet-Bay, who yet ſeemed hopefully to be Chriſtianiz'd before he Dy'd. This Diſtemper getting in, I know not how, among them, ſwept them away with a moſt prodigious Deſolation, inſomuch that altho' the Engliſh gave them all the aſſiſtances of Humanity in their Calamities, yet there was, it may be, not One in Ten among them left alive, of thoſe few that liv'd; many alſo fled from the Infection, leaving the Country a meer Golgotha of unburied Carcaſes; and as for the reſt, the Engliſh treated them with all the Civility imaginable; among the Inſtances of which Civility, let this be reckoned for One, that notwithſtanding the Patent which they had for the Country, they fairly purchaſed of the Natives the ſeveral Tracts of Land which they afterwards poſſeſſed.

§. 6. The People in the Fleet that arriv'd at New-England, in the Year 1630, left the Fleet almoſt, as the Family of Noah did the Ark, having a whole World before them to be peopled. Salem was already ſupplied with a competent Number of Inhabitants; and therefore the Governour, with moſt of the Gentlemen that Accompanied him in his Voyage, took their firſt Opportunity to proſecute further Settlements about the bottom of the Maſſachuſet-Bay: But where-ever they ſat down, they were ſo mindful of their Errand into the Wilderneſs, that ſtill one of their Firſt Works was to gather a Church into the Covenant and Order of the Goſpel. Firſt, There was a Church thus gathered at Charles-Town, on the North ſide of Charles's River; where keeping a Solemn Faſt on Auguſt 27. 1630, to Implore the Conduct and Bleſſing of Heaven on their Eccleſiaſtical Proceedings, they choſe Mr. Wilſon, a moſt Holy and Zealous Man, formerly a Miniſter of Sudbury, in the County of Suffolk, to be their Teacher; and altho' he now ſubmitted unto an Ordination, with an Impoſition of ſuch Hands as were by the Church invited ſo to pronounce the Benediction of Heaven upon him; yet it was done with a Proteſtation by all, that it ſhould be only as a ſign of his Election to the Charge of his New Flock, without any Intention that he ſhould thereby Renounce the Miniſtry he had received in England. After the gathering of the Church at Charles-Town, there quickly followed another at the Town of Dorcheſter.

And after Dorcheſter there followed another at the Town of Boſton, which Iſſued out of Charles-Town; one Mr. James took the Care of the Church at Charles-Town, and Mr. Wilſon went over to Boſton, where they that formerly belonged unto Charles-Town, with Univerſal Approbation became a diſtinct Church of themſelves. To Boſton ſoon ſucceeded a Church at Roxbury; to Roxbury, one at Lyn; to Lyn, one at Watertown; ſo that in one or two Years time there were to be ſeen Seven Churches in this Neighbourhood, all of them attending to what the Spirit in the Scripture ſaid unto them; all of them Golden Candelſticks, illuſtrated with a very ſenſible Preſence of our Lord Jeſus Chriſt amoug them.

§. 7. It was for a matter of Twelve Years together, that Perſons of all Ranks, well affected unto Church-Reformation, kept ſometimes Dropping, and ſometimes Flocking into New-England, tho' ſome that were coming into New-England were not ſuffered ſo to do. The Perſecutors of thoſe Puritans, as they were called, who were now Retiring into that Cold Country from the Heat of their Perſecution, did all that was poſſible to hinder as many as was poſſible from enjoying of that Retirement. There were many Countermands given to the Paſſage of People that were now ſteering of this Weſtern Courſe; and there was a ſort of Uproar made among no ſmall part of the Nation, that this People ſhould not be let go. Among thoſe bound for New-England, that were ſo ſtopt, there were eſpecially Three Famous Perſons, whom I ſuppoſe their Adverſaries would not have ſo ſtudiouſly detained at Home, if they had foreſeen Events; thoſe were Oliver Cromwel, and Mr. Hambden, and Sir Arthur Haſelrig: Nevertheleſs, this is not the only Inſtance of Perſecuting Church-mens not having the Spirit of Prophecy. But many others were diverted from an intended Voyage hither by the pure Providence of God, which had provided other Improvements for them; and of this take one Inſtance inſtead of many. Before the woful Wars which broke forth in the Three Kingdoms, there were divers Gentlemen in Scotland, who being uneaſie under the Eccleſiaſtical Burdens of the Times, wrote unto New-England their Enquiries, Whether they might be there ſuffered freely to Exerciſe their Presbyterian Church-Government? And it was freely anſwered, That they might. Hereupon they ſent over an Agent, who pitched upon a Tract of Land near the Mouth of Merimack River, whither they intended then to Tranſplant themſelves: But altho' they had ſo far proceeded in their Voyage, as to be Half-Seas thorough; the manifold Croſſes they met withal, made them give over their Intentions; and the Providence of God ſo ordered it, that ſome of thoſe very Gentlemen were afterwards the Revivers of that well-known Solemn League and Covenant, which had ſo great an Influence upon the following Circumſtances of the Nations. However, the number of thoſe who did actually arrive at New-England before the Year 1640. have been computed about Four Thouſand; ſince which time far more have gone out of the Country than have come to it; and yet the God of Heaven ſo ſmiled upon the Plantation, while under an eaſie and equal Government, the Deſigns of Chriſtianity in well-formed Churches have been carried on, that no Hiſtory can parallel it. That ſaying of Eutropius about Rome, which hath been ſometimes applied unto the Church, is capable of ſome Application to this little part of the Church: Nec Minor ab Exordio, nec major Incrementis ulla. Never was any Plantation brought unto ſuch a Conſiderableneſs, in a ſpace of time ſo Inconſiderable! An Howling Wilderneſs in a few Years became a Pleaſant Land, accommodated with the Neceſſaries, yea, and the Conveniencies of Humane Life; the Goſpel has carried with it a fulneſs of all other Bleſſings; and (albeit, that Mankind generally, as far as we have any Means of enquiry, have increaſed, in one and the ſame given Proportion, and ſo no more than doubled themſelves in about Three-Hundred and Sixty Years, in all the paſt Ages of the World, ſince the fixing of the preſent Period of Humane Life) the Four-Thouſand Firſt Planters, in leſs than Fifty Years, notwithſtanding all Tranſportations and Mortalities, increaſed into, they ſay, more than an Hundred Thouſand.

CHAP. VI.

----Qui Tranſmare Currunt.---- Or, The Addition of ſeveral other Colonies to the former; with ſome other Conſiderables in the Condition of theſe later Colonies.

§. 1. IT was not long before the Maſſachuſet Colony was become like an Hive, overſtock'd with Bees; and many of the new Inhabitants entertained thoughts of ſwarming into Plantations extended further into the Country. The Colony might fetch its own Deſcription from the Diſpenſations of the Great God, unto his Ancient Iſrael, and ſay, O God of Hoſts, Thou haſt brought a Vine out of England; Thou haſt caſt out the Heathen and planted it; Thou preparedſt room before it, and didſt cauſe it to take deep root, and it filled the Land; the Hills were covered with the ſhadow of it, and the Boughs thereof were like the goodly Cedars; ſhe ſent out her Boughs unto the Sea. But ſtill there was one ſtroak wanting for the compleat Accommodations of the Deſcription; to wit, She ſent forth her Branches unto the River; and this therefore is to be next attended. The Fame of Connecticut River, a Long, Freſh, Rich River (as indeed the Name Connecticut is Indian for a long River) had made a little Nilus of it, in the Expectations of the good People about the Maſſachuſet-Bay: Whereupon many of the Planters belonging eſpecially to the Towns of Cambridge, Dorcheſter, Watertown and Roxbury, took up Reſolutions to Travel an Hundred Miles Weſtward from thoſe Towns, for a further Settlement upon this Famous River. When the Learned Fernandius had been in the Indies, he did in his Preface to his Commentaries afterwards publiſhed, give this Account of it; Deo ſic volente, prodii in remotiſſimos uſq; Indos, tam non avidus lucis & gloriæ, ut eam vere dixerim, ultro elegerim mei ipſius adhuc viventis veriſſimam Sepulturam. Reader, come with me now to behold ſome Worthy, and Learned, and Genteel Perſons going to be Buried Alive on the Banks of Connecticut, having been firſt Slain by the Eccleſiaſtical Impoſitions and Perſecutions of Europe.

§. 2. It was in the Year 1635. that this Deſign was firſt formed; and the Diſpoſition of the Celebrated Mr. Thomas Hooker, with his People now in Cambridge, to engage in the Deſign, was that which gave moſt Life unto it. They then ſent their Agents to view the Country, who returned with ſo Advantageous a Report, that the next Year there was a great Remove of good People thither: On this Remove, they that went from Cambridge became a Church upon a Spot of Ground now called Hartford; they that went from Dorcheſter became a Church at Windſor; they that went from Watertown ſat down at Wethersfield; and they that left Roxbury were In-Churched higher up the River at Springfield, a place which was afterwards found within the Line of the Maſſachuſet-Charter. Indeed the firſt Winter after their going thither proved an hard one; and the grievous Diſappointments which befel them, thro' the unſeaſonable Freezing of the River, whereby their Veſſel of Proviſions was detained at the Mouth of the River, Threeſcore Miles below them, cauſed them to Encounter with very Diſaſtrous Difficulties. Divers of them were hereby obliged in the Depth of Winter to Travel back into the Bay; and ſome of them were frozen to Death in the Journey.

However, ſuch was their Courage, that they Proſecuted their Plantation-Work with ſpeedy and bleſſed Succeſſes; and when Bloody Salvages in their Neighbourhood, known by the Name of Pequots, had like to have nipt the Plantation in the Bud by a cruel War, within a Year or two after their Settlement, the marvellous Providence of God immediately extinguiſhed that War, by proſpering the New-Engliſh Arms, unto the utter ſubduing of the Quarrelſome Nation, and affrightning of all the other Natives.

§. 3. It was with the Countenance and Aſſiſtance of their Brethren in the Maſſachuſet-Bay, that the Firſt Planters of Connecticut made their Eſſays thus to Diſcover and Cultivate the remoter Parts of this mighty Wilderneſs; and accordingly ſeveral Gentlemen went furniſhed with ſome kind of Commiſſion from the Government of the Maſſachuſet-Bay, for to maintain ſome kind of Government among the Inhabitants, till there could be a more orderly Settlement. But the Inhabitants quickly perceiving themſelves to be without the Line of the Maſſachuſet-Charter, entred into a Combination among themſelves, whereby with mutual Conſent they became a Body-Politick, and framed a Body of neceſſary Laws and Orders, to the Execution whereof they choſe all neceſſary Officers, very much, tho' not altogether after the form of the Colony from whence they Iſſued. So they jogg'd on for many Years; and whereas before the Year 1644. that Worthy Gentleman, George Fenwick, Eſq; did on the behalf of ſeveral Perſons of Quality begin a Plantation about the Mouth of the River, which was called Say-Brook, in Remembrance of thoſe Right Honourable Perſons, the Lord Say, and the Lord Brook, who laid a Claim to the Land thereabouts, by Virtue of a Patent granted by the Earl of Warwick; the Inhabitants of Connecticut that Year purchaſed of Mr. Fenwick this Tract of Land. But the Confuſions then Embaraſſing the Affairs of the Engliſh Nation, hindered our Connecticotians from ſeeking of any further Settlement, until the Reſtoration of K. Charles II. when they made their Application to the King for a Charter, by the Agency of their Honourable Governour, John Winthrop, Eſq; the moſt accompliſhed Son of that Excellent Perſon, who had been ſo Conſiderable in the Foundations of the Maſſachuſet-Colony. This Renowned Virtuoſo had juſtly been the Darling of New-England, if they had only conſidered his Eminent Qualities, as he was a Chriſtian, a Gentleman, and a Philoſopher, well worthy to be, as he was, a Member of the Royal-Society; but it muſt needs further endear his Memory to his Country, that God made him the Inſtrument of obtaining for them, as he did from the King of England, as amply priviledged a Charter as was ever enjoy'd perhaps by any People under the Cope of Heaven. Under the Protection and Encouragement of this Charter they flouriſhed many Years; and many Towns being ſucceſſively erected among them, their Churches had Reſt, and walked in the Fear of God, and in the Comfort of the Holy Spirit.

§. 4. The Church-Order obſerved in the Churches of Connecticut, has been the ſame that is obſerved by their Siſters in the Maſſachuſet-Bay; and in this Order they lived exceeding peaceably all the Eleven Years that Mr. Hooker lived among them. Nevertheleſs there aroſe at length ſome unhappy Conteſts in one Town of the Colony, which grew into an Alienation that could not be cured without ſuch a Parting, and yet, indeed, hardly ſo kind a Parting, as that whereto once Abraham and Lot were driven. However, theſe Little, Idle, Angry Controverſies, proved Occaſions of Enlargements to the Church of God; for ſuch of the Inhabitants as choſe a Cottage in a Wilderneſs, before the moſt beautiful and furniſhed Edifice, overheated with the Fire of Contention, removed peaceably higher up the River, where a whole County of Holy Churches has been added unto the number of our Congregations.

§. 5. But there was one thing that made this Colony to become very conſiderable; which thing remains now to be conſidered. The well-known Mr. Davenport, and Mr. Eaton, and ſeveral Eminent Perſons that came over to the Maſſachuſet-Bay, among ſome of the Firſt Planters, were ſtrongly urged, that they would have ſettled in this Bay; but hearing of another Bay to the South-Weſt of Connecticut, which might be more capable to entertain thoſe that were to follow them, they deſired that their Friends at Connecticut would purchaſe of the Native Proprietors for them, all the Land that lay between themſelves and Hudſon's River, which was in part effected. Accordingly removing thither in the Year 1637. they ſeated themſelves in a pleaſant Bay, where they ſpread themſelves along the Sea-Coaſts; and one might have been ſuddenly, as it were ſurprized with the ſight of ſuch notable Towns, as firſt New-Haven; then Guilford; then Milford; then Stamford; and then Brainford: where our Lord Jeſus Chriſt is Worſhipped in Churches of an Evangelical Conſtitution; and from thence, if the Enquirer make a Salley over to Long Iſland, he might there alſo have ſeen the Churches of our Lord beginning to take root in the Eaſtern Parts of that Iſland. All this while this Fourth Colony wanted the legal Baſis of a Charter to build upon; but they did by mutual Agreement form themſelves into a Body-Politick, as like as they judg'd fit unto the other Colonies in their Neighbourhood; and as for their Church-Order, it was generally, Secundum Uſum Maſſachuſettenſem.

§. 6. Behold, a Fourth Colony of New-Engliſh Chriſtians, in a manner ſtoln into the World, and a Colony, indeed, conſtellated with many Stars of the Firſt Magnitude. The Colony was under the Conduct of as Holy, and as Prudent, and as Genteel Perſons as moſt that ever viſited theſe Nooks of America; and yet theſe too were Try'd with very humbling Circumſtances. Being Londoners, or Merchants, and Men of Traffick and Buſineſs, their Deſign was in a manner wholly to apply themſelves unto Trade; but the Deſign failing, they found their great Eſtates to ſink ſo faſt, that they muſt quickly do ſomething. Whereupon in the Year 1646. gathering together almoſt all the Strength which was left 'em, they Built one Ship more, which they fraighted for England with the beſt part of their Tradable Eſtates; and ſundry of their Eminent Perſons Embarked themſelves in her for the Voyage. But, alas, the Ship was never after heard of! She foundred in the Sea; and in her were loſt, not only the Hopes of their future Trade, but alſo the Lives of ſeveral Excellent Perſons, as well as divers Manuſcripts of ſome great Men in the Country, ſent over for the Service of the Church, which were now buried in the Ocean. The fuller Story of that grievous Matter, let the Reader with a juſt Aſtoniſhment accept from the Pen of the Reverend Perſon, who is now the Paſtor of New-Haven. I wrote unto him for it, and was thus Anſwered.

Reverend and Dear Sir,

‘IN Compliance with your Deſires, I now ‘give you the Relation of that Apparition ‘of a Ship in the Air, which I have received ‘from the moſt Credible, Judicious and Curious Surviving Obſervers of it.

‘In the Year 1647. beſides much other Lading, a far more Rich Treaſure of Paſſengers, ‘(Five or Six of which were Perſons of chief ‘Note and Worth in New-Haven) put themſelves on Board a New Ship, built at Rhode-Iſland, of about 150 Tuns; but ſo walty, ‘that the Maſter, (Lamberton) often ſaid ſhe ‘would prove their Grave. In the Month of ‘January, cutting their way thro' much Ice, on ‘which they were accompanied with the Reverend Mr. Davenport, beſides many other ‘Friends, with many Fears, as well as Prayers ‘and Tears, they ſet Sail. Mr. Davenport in ‘Prayer with an obſervable Emphaſis uſed theſe ‘Words, Lord, if it be thy pleaſure to bury ‘theſe our Friends in the bottom of the Sea, ‘they are thine; ſave them! The Spring ‘following no Tidings of theſe Friends arrived ‘with the Ships from England: New-Haven's ‘Heart began to fail her: This put the Godly ‘People on much Prayer, both Publick and ‘Private, That the Lord would (if it was his ‘Pleaſure) let them hear what he had done ‘with their dear Friends, and prepare them ‘with a ſuitable Submiſſion to his Holy Will. ‘In June next enſuing, a great Thunder-ſtorm ‘aroſe out of the North-Weſt; after which, ‘(the Hemiſphere being ſerene) about an Hour ‘before Sun-ſet a SHIP of like Dimenſions ‘with the aforeſaid, with her Canvas and ‘Colours abroad (tho' the Wind Northernly) ‘appeared in the Air coming up from our ‘Harbour's Mouth, which lyes Southward from ‘the Town, ſeemingly with her Sails filled ‘under a freſh Gale, holding her Courſe North, ‘and continuing under Obſervation, Sailing againſt the Wind for the ſpace of half an Hour. Many were drawn to behold this great Work of God; yea, the very Children cry'd out, There's a Brave Ship! At length, crouding up as far as there is uſually Water, ſufficient for ſuch a Veſſel, and ſo near ſome of the Spectators, as that they imagined a Man might hurl a Stone on Board her, her Maintop ſeem'd to be blown off, but left hanging in the Shrouds; then her Miſſen-top; then all her Maſting ſeemed blown away by the Board: Quickly after the Hulk brought unto a Careen, ſhe overſet, and ſo vaniſhed into a ſmoaky Cloud, which in ſome time diſſipated, leaving, as everywhere elſe, a clear Air. The admiring Spectators could diſtinguiſh the ſeveral Colours of each Part, the Principal Rigging, and ſuch Proportions, as cauſed not only the generality of Perſons to ſay, This was the Mould of their Ship, and thus was her Tragick End: But Mr. Davenport alſo in publick declared to this Effect, That God had condeſcended, for the quieting of their afflicted Spirits, this Extraordinary Account of his Soveraign Diſpoſal of thoſe for whom ſo many Fervent Prayers were made continually. Thus I am, Sir,

Your Humble Servant,

James Pierpont.

Reader, There being yet living ſo many Credible Gentlemen, that were Eye-Witneſſes of this Wonderful Thing, I venture to Publiſh it for a thing as undoubted, as 'tis wonderful.

But let us now proceed with our Story. Our Colony of New Haven apprehended themſelves Diſadvantageouſly ſeated for the Affairs of Husbandry; and therefore upon theſe Diſaſters they made many Attempts of removing into ſome other Parts of the World. One while they were invited unto Delaware-Bay, another while they were invited unto Jamaica; they had offers made them from Ireland alſo, after the Wars there were over; and they entred into ſome Treaties about the City of Galloway, which they were to have had as a ſmall Province to themſelves. But the God of Heaven ſtill ſtrangely diſappointed all theſe Attempts; and whereas they were concerned how their Poſterity ſhould be able to live, if they muſt make Husbandry their main ſhift for their Living; that Poſterity of theirs by the good Providence of God, inſtead of coming to Beggary and Miſery, have thriven wonderfully: The Colony is improved with many Wealthy Husbandmen, and is become no ſmall part of the beſt Granary for all New-England. And the ſame good Providence has all along ſo preſerved them from annoyance by the Indians, that altho' at their firſt ſetting down there were few Towns but what wiſely perſwaded a Body of Indians to dwell near them; whereby ſuch Kindneſſes paſſed between them, that they always dwelt peaceably together; nevertheleſs there are few of thoſe Towns, but what have ſeen their Body of Indians utterly Extirpated by nothing but Mortality waſting them.

§. 7. But what is now become of New-Haven Colony? I muſt Anſwer, It is not: And yet it has been growing ever ſince it firſt was. But when Connecticut-Colony Petitioned the Reſtored King for a Charter, they procured New-Haven Colony to be annexed unto them in the ſame Charter; and this, not without having firſt the private Concurrence of ſome Leading Men in the Colony; tho' the Minds of others were ſo uneaſie about the Coalition, that it coſt ſome time after the Arrival of the Charter for the Colony, like Jephtah's Daughter, to bewail her Condition before it could be quietly complied withal. Nevertheleſs they have lived ever ſince, One Colony, very happily together, and the God of Love and Peace has remarkably dwelt among them: However, theſe Children of God have not been without their Chaſtiſements, eſpecially in the Malignant Fevers and Agues, which have often proved very Mortal in moſt or all of their Plantations.

§. 8. While the South-Weſt Parts of New-England were thus filled with New Colonies, the North-Eaſt Parts of the Country were not forgotten. There were ample Regions beyond the Line of the Maſſachuſet-Patent, where new Settlements were attempted, not only by ſuch as deſigned a Fiſhing-Trade at Sea, or a Bever-Trade on Shore; nor only by ſome that were uneaſie under the Maſſachuſet-Government in a Day of Temptation, which came upon the Firſt Planters; but alſo by ſome very ſerious Chriſtians, who propounded the Enlargement and Enjoyment of our Lord's Evangelical Intereſts in thoſe Territories. The Effect of theſe Excurſions were, That ſeveral well-conſtituted Churches were gathered in the Province of Eaſt-Hampſhire, beſides one or two in the Province of Main, whereto were added a large number of other Congregations, wherein weekly Prayers and Sermons were made, altho' the Inhabitants belonging to thoſe Congregations, proceeded not ſo far as to all the Ordinances of a more compleat Church-State among them. That which contributed more than a little to the growth of Chriſtianity in thoſe Parts of New-England, was the Application, which the People being tired with many Quarrelſome Circumſtances about their Government, made unto the General Court of the Maſſachuſet-Bay, to be taken under their Protection; which Petition of theirs being anſwered by that General Court, ſurely after a more Charitable and Accountable manner, than ſuch Authors as Ogilby in his America have repreſented it, [Vos magis Hiſtoricis, Lectores, Credite veris!] there followed many Succeſsful Endeavours to ſpread the good Effects and Orders of the Goſpel along that Coaſt.

But thus was the Settlement of New-England brought about; theſe were the Beginnings, theſe the Foundations of thoſe Colonies, which have not only enlarged the Engliſh Empire in ſome Regards more than any other Outgoings of our Nation, but alſo afforded a Singular Proſpect of Churches erected in an American Corner of the World, on purpoſe to expreſs and purſue the Proteſtant Reformation.

REMARKS upon the Catalogue of Plantations.

§. 1. THere are few Towns to be now ſeen in our Liſt, but what were exiſting in this Land before the dreadful Indian War, which befel us Twenty Years ago; and there are few Towns broken up within the then Maſſachuſet-Line by that War, but what have revived out of their Aſhes. Nevertheleſs the many Calamities, which have ever ſince been waſting of the Country, have ſo nipt the growth of it, that its later Progreſs hath held no Proportion with what was from the Beginning; but yet with ſuch variety, that while the Trained Companies of ſome Towns are no bigger than they were Thirty or Forty Years ago, others are as big again.

§. 2. The Calamities that have carried off the Inhabitants of our ſeveral Towns have not been all of one ſort; nor have all our Towns had an equal ſhare in any ſort. Peſtilential Sickneſſes have made fearful Havock in divers Places, where the Sound perhaps have not been enough to tend the Sick; while others have not had one touch from that Angel of Death. And the Sword hath cut off Scores in ſundry Places, when others, it may be, have not loſt a Man by that Avenger.

§. 3. 'Tis no unuſual, though no univerſal Experiment among us, that while an excellent, laborious, illuminating Miniſtry has been continued in a Town, the place has thriven to admiration; but ever ſince that Man's time, they have gone down the Wind in all their Intereſts. The Goſpel has evidently been the making of our Towns, and the Bleſſings of the Upper have been accompanied with the Bleſſings of the Nether-ſprings. Memorable alſo is the Remark of Slingsby Bethel, Eſq; in his moſt Judicious Book of The Intereſt of Europe. Were not the cold Climate of New-England ſupplied by good Laws and Diſcipline, the Barrenneſs of that Country would never have brought People to it, nor have advanced it in Conſideration and Formidableneſs above the other Engliſh Plantations, exceeding it much in Fertility, and other Inviting Qualities.

§. 4. Well may New-England lay claim to the Name it wears, and to a Room in the tendereſt Affections of its Mother, the Happy Iſland! For as there are few of our Towns but what have their Names-ſakes in England; ſo the Reaſon why moſt of our Towns are called what they are, is becauſe the Chief of the Firſt Inhabitants would thus bear up the Names of the particular Places there from whence they came.

§. 5. I have heard an Aged Saint near his Death chearfully thus Expreſs himſelf; 'Well, I am going to Heaven, and I will there tell the Faithful, who are gone long ſince from New-England, thither, that though they who gathered our Churches are all Dead and gone, yet the Churches are ſtill Alive, with as numerous Flocks of Chriſtians as ever were among them. Concerning the moſt of the Churches in our Catalogue, the Report thus carried unto Heaven, I muſt now alſo ſend through the Earth; but if with, As Numerous, we could in every Reſpect ſay, As Gracious, what Joy unto all the Saints, both in Heaven and on Earth, might be from thence occaſioned!

The Hiſtory of BOSTON, Related and Improved.

At Boſton Lecture, 7. d. 2. m. 1698.

Remarkable and Memorable was the Time, when an Army of Terrible Deſtroyers was coming againſt one of the Chief Towns in the Land of Iſrael. God reſcued the Town from the Irreſiſtible Fury and Approach of thoſe Deſtroyers, by an immediate Hand of Heaven upon them. Upon that Miraculous Reſcue of the Town, and of the whole Country, whoſe Fate was much enwrapped in it, there follow'd that Action of the Prophet SAMUEL, which is this Day to be, with ſome Imitation, Repeated in the midſt of thee, O BOSTON, Thou Helped of the Lord.

1 SAM.

1 SAM. VII. 12.

Then SAMUEL took a Stone, and ſet it up, —— and called the Name of it, Ebenezer, ſaying, Hitherto the Lord hath Helped us.

THE thankful Servants of God have uſed ſometimes to Erect Monuments of Stone, as durable Tokens of their Thankfulneſs to God for Mercies received in the places thus diſtinguiſhed. Jacob did ſo; Joſhua did ſo; and Samuel did ſo; but they ſo did it, as to keep clear of the Tranſgreſſion forbidden in Lev. 26. 1. Ye ſhall not ſet up an Image of Stone in your Land, for to Bow down unto it.

The Stone Erected by Samuel, with the Name of Ebenezer, which is as much as to ſay, A Stone of Help; I know not whether any-thing might be Writ upon it, but I am ſure there is one thing to be now Read upon it, by our ſelves, in the Text where we find it: Namely, thus much,

That a People whom the God of Heaven hath remarkably helped in their Diſtreſſes, ought greatly and gratefully to acknowledge what Help of Heaven they have received.

Now 'tis not my Deſign to lay the Scene of my Diſcourſe as far off as Bethcar, the place where Samuel ſet up his Ebenezer. I am immediately to transfer it into the Heart of Boſton, a place where the Remarkable Help received from Heaven by the People, does loudly call for an Ebenezer. And I do not ask you to change the Name of the Town into that of Help-Stone, as there is a Town in England of that Name, which may ſeem the Engliſh of Ebenezer, but my Sermon ſhall be this Day, your Ebenezer, if you will with a Favourable and a Profitable Attention Entertain it. May the Lord Jeſus Chriſt accept me, and aſſiſt me now to Glorifie him in the Town where I drew my firſt ſinful Breath; a Town whereto I am under great Obligations for the precious Opportunities to glorifie him, which I have quietly and publickly enjoy'd therein for near Eighteen Years together. O my Lord God, remember me, I pray thee, and ſtrengthen me this once, to ſpeak from thee unto thy People!

And now, Sirs, That I may ſet up an EBENEZER among you, there are theſe things to be Inculcated.

I. Let us Thankfully, and Agreeably, aud Particularly acknowledge what Help we have received from the God of Heaven, in the Years that have rouled over us. While the Bleſſed Apoſtle Paul, was, as it ſhould ſeem, yet ſhort of being Threeſcore Years Old, how affectionately did he ſet up an Ebenezer, with an acknowledgment in Acts 26. 22. Having obtained help of God, I continue to this Day! Our Town is now Threeſcore and Eight Years Old; and certainly 'tis time for us, with all poſſible Affection, to ſet up our Ebenezer, ſaying, Having obtained help from God, the Town is continued until almoſt the Age of Man is paſſed over it! The Town hath indeed Three Elder Siſters in this Colony, but it hath wonderfully outgrown them all; and her Mother, Old Boſton, in England alſo; yea, within a few Years after the firſt Settlement it grew to be The Metropolis of the whole Engliſh America. Little was this expected by them that firſt ſettled the Town, when for a while Boſton was proverbially called, Loſt Town, for the mean and ſad Circumſtances of it. But, O Boſton, it is becauſe thou haſt obtained help from God, even from the Lord Jeſus Chriſt, who for the ſake of his Goſpel, Preached and once prized here, undertook thy Patronage. When the World and the Church of God had ſeen Twenty-Six Generations, a Pſalm was Compoſed, wherein that Note occurs with Twenty-Six Repetitions; His Mercy endureth for ever. Truly there has not one Year paſſed over this Town, Ab Urbe Condita, upon the Story whereof we might not make that Note, our Ebenezer; His Mercy endureth for ever. It has been a Town of great Experiences. There have been ſeveral Years wherein the Terrible Famine hath terribly ſtared the Town in the Face: We have been brought ſometimes unto the laſt Meal in the Barrel; we have cry'd out with the Diſciples, We have not Loaves enough to feed a Tenth Part of us! But the fear'd Famine has always been kept off; always we have had Seaſonable and Sufficient Supplies after a ſurprizing manner ſent in unto us: Let the Three laſt Years in this thing moſt eminently Proclaim the Goodneſs of our Heavenly Shepherd and Feeder. This has been the help of our God; Becauſe his Mercy endureth for ever! The Angels of Death have often Shot the Arrows of Death into the midſt of the Town; the Small-Pox has eſpecially Four Times been a great Plague upon us: How often have there been Bills deſiring Prayers for more than an Hundred Sick on one Day in one of our Aſſemblies? In one Twelve-month, about one Thouſand of our Neighbours have one way or other been carried unto their long Home: And yet we are after all, many more than Seven Thouſand Souls of us at this Hour living on the Spot. Why is not, a, Lord, have Mercy upon us, written on the Doors of our abandon'd Habitations? This hath been the help of our God, becauſe his Mercy endureth for ever. Never was any Town under the Cope of Heaven more liable to be laid in Aſhes, either through the Careleſneſs, or through the Wickedneſs of them that Sleep in it. That ſuch a Combuſtible heap of Contiguous Houſes yet ſtands, it may be called, A Standing Miracle; it is not becauſe the Watchman keeps the City: Perhaps there may be too much cauſe of Reflection in that thing, and of Inſpection too; no, It is from thy watchful Protection, O thou keeper of Boſton, who neither Slumbers nor Sleeps. Ten Times has the Fire made notable Ruins among us, and our good Servant been almoſt our Maſter: But the Ruins have moſtly and quickly been Rebuilt. I ſuppoſe, that many more than a Thouſand Houſes are to be ſeen on this little piece of Ground, all fill'd with the undeſerved Favours of God. Whence this Preſervation? This hath been the help of our God; becauſe his Mercy endureth for ever! But if ever this Town ſaw a Year of Salvations, tranſcendently ſuch was the Laſt Year unto us. A Formidable French Squadron hath not Shot one Bomb into the midſt of thee, O thou Munition of Rocks; our Streets have not run with Blood and Gore, and horrible devouring Flames have not raged upon our Subſtance: Thoſe are Ignorant, and Unthinking, and Unthankful Men, who do not own that we have narrowly eſcaped as dreadful things, as Carthagena, or Newfoundland, have ſuffered. I am ſure our more conſiderate Friends Beyond-Sea were very Suſpicious, and well nigh Deſpairing, that Victorious Enemies had ſwallowed up the Town. But thy Soul is eſcaped, O Boſton, as a Bird out of the Snare of the Fowlers. Or if you will be Inſenſible of this, ye vain Men, yet be ſenſible, That an Engliſh Squadron hath not brought among us the tremendous Peſtilence, under which a Neighbouring Plantation hath undergone prodigious Deſolations. Boſton, 'tis a marvellous thing a Plague has not laid thee Deſolate! Our Deliverance from our Friends has been as full of aſtoniſhing Mercy, as our Deliverance from our Foes. We read of a certain City in Iſa. 19. 18. called, The City of Deſtruction. Why ſo? ſome ſay, Becauſe delivered from Deſtruction. If that be ſo, then haſt thou been a City of Deſtruction: Or I will rather ſay, A City of Salvation: And this by the help of God; becauſe his Mercy endureth for ever. Shall I go on? I will. We have not had the Bread of Adverſity and the Water of Affliction, like many other places. But yet all this while Our Eyes have ſeen our Teachers. Here are ſeveral Golden Candleſticks in the Town. Shining and Burning Lights have illuminated them. There are gone to ſhine in an higher Orb Seven Divines that were once the Stars of this Town, in the Paſtoral Charge of it; beſides many others, that for ſome Years gave us tranſient Influences. Churches flouriſhing with much Love, and Peace, and many Comforts of the Holy Spirit, have hitherto been our greateſt Glory. I wiſh that ſome ſad Eclipſe do not come e're long upon this Glory! The Diſpenſations of the Goſpel were never enjoy'd by any Town with more Liberty and Purity for ſo long a while together. Our Opportunities to draw near unto the Lord Jeſus Chriſt in his Ordinances, cannot be parallell'd. Boſton, thou haſt been lifted up to Heaven; there is not a Town upon Earth, which, on ſome Accounts, has more to anſwer for. Such, O ſuch has been our help from our God, becauſe his Mercy endureth for ever.

II. Let us acknowledge Whoſe Help it is that we have received, and not Give the Glory of our God unto another. Poorly Helped had we been, I may tell you, if we had none but Humane Help all this while to depend upon. The Favours of our Superiors we deny not; we forget not the Inſtruments of our Help. Nevertheleſs, this little outcaſt Zion, ſhall, with my Conſent, Engrave the Name of no MAN upon her Ebenezer! It was well confeſs'd in Pſal. 108. 12. Vain is the help of Man! It was well counſell'd in Pſal. 146. 3. Put not your truſt in Princes, nor in the Son of man, in whom there is no Help.

Wherefore, Firſt, Let God in our Lord Jeſus Chriſt, have the Glory of beſtowing on us all the help that we have had. When the Spirit of God came upon a Servant of his, he cried out unto David, in 1 Chron. 12. 18. Thy God helpeth thee. This is the voice of God from Heaven to Boſton this Day, Thy God hath helped thee: Thou haſt by thy Sin deſtroyed thy ſelf, but in thy God hath been thy help. A Great Man once building an Edifice, cauſed an Inſcription of this Importance to be written on the Gates of it, Such a place Planted me, ſuch a place Watered me, and Cæſar gave the Increaſe. One that paſs'd by with a witty Sacarſm, wrote under it, Hic Deus nihil fecit; i. e. God, it ſeems, did nothing for this Man. But the Inſcription upon our Ebenezer, owning what help this Town hath had, ſhall ſay, Our God hath done all that is done! Say then, O helped Boſton, ſay as in Pſal. 121. 2. My help is from the Lord which made Heaven and Earth. Say as in Pſal. 94. 17. Unleſs the Lord had been my help, my Soul had quickly dwelt in ſilence. And boldly ſay, 'Tis only becauſe the Lord has been my helper, that Earth and Hell have never done all that they would unto me.

Let our Lord JESUS CHRIST be praiſed as our Bleſſed Helper: That Stone which the Fooliſh Builders have refuſed, Oh! Set up that Stone; even that high Rock; ſet him on high in our Praiſes, and ſay, That That is our Ebenezer. 'Tis our Lord JESUS CHRIST, who in his Infinite Compaſſions for the Town hath ſaid, as in Iſa. 63. 5. I looked, and there was none to help; therefore my own Arm hath brought Salvation unto it It is foretold concerning the Idolatrous Roman Catholicks, That together with the Lord Jeſus Chriſt, they ſhall Worſhip other Mauzzim; that is to ſay, other Protectors. Accordingly, all their Towns ordinarily have ſingled out their Protectors among the Saints of Heaven; ſuch a Saint is Entituled unto the Patronage of ſuch a Town among them, and ſuch a Saint for another: Old Boſton, by Name, was but Saint Botolph's Town. Whereas Thou, O Boſton, ſhalt have but one Protector in Heaven, and that is our Lord JESUS CHRIST. Oh! Rejoice in him alone, and ſay, The Lord is my Fortreſs and my Deliverer! There was a Song once made for a Town, which in its Diſtreſſes had been helped wondrouſly; and the Firſt Clauſe in that Song, [you have it in Iſa. 26. 1.] may be ſo rendred, We have a ſtrong Town; Salvation [or JESUS the Lord, whoſe Name hath Salvation in it] will appoint Walls and Bulwarks. Truly what help we have had we will Sing, 'Tis our JESUS that hath appointed them. The Old Pagan Towns were ſometimes mightily Solicitous to conceal the Name of the particular God that they counted their Protector, Ne ab hoſtibus Evocatus, alio commigraret. But I ſhall be far from doing my Town any damage, by Publiſhing the Name of its Protector; no, let all Mankind know, that the Name of our Protector is JESUS CHRIST: For, Among the Gods there is none like unto thee, O LORD: Nor is any help like unto thine: And there is no Rock like to our God.

Yea, when we aſcribe the Name of Helper unto our Lord JESUS CHRIST, let us alſo acknowledge that the Name is not ſufficiently Expreſſive, Emphatical and Significant. Lactantius of old blamed the Heathen for giving the higheſt of their Gods no higher a Title than that of Jupiter, or Juvans Pater, i. e. An helping Father; and he ſays, Non intelligit Divina Beneficia, qui ſe a Deo tantummodo Juvari putat: The Kindneſſes of God are not underſtood by that Man, who makes no more than an Helper of him. Such indeed is the penury of our Language, that we cannot Coin a more Expreſſive Name. Nevertheleſs, when we ſay, The Lord JESUS CHRIST hath been our Helper, let us intend more than we expreſs; Lord, thou haſt been All unto us.

Secondly, Let the Sacrifice of our Lord Jeſus Chriſt moſt Explicitely have the Glory of Purchaſing for us all our Help. What was it that procured an Ebenezer for the People of God? We read in 2 Sam. 7. 9. Samuel took a Sucking Lamb, and offered it a Burnt-Offering wholly unto the Lord; and Samuel cried unto the Lord for Iſrael, and the Lord heard him. Shall I tell you? Our Lord Jeſus Chriſt is that Lamb of God; and he has been a Lamb ſlain as a Sacrifice; and he is a Sacrifice pleadable not only for Perſons, but alſo for Peoples that belong unto him. To teach us this Evangelical and Comfortable Myſtery, there was a Sacrifice for the whole Congregation preſcribed in the Moſaic Pædagogy. 'Tis notorious that the Sins of this Town have been many Sins, and mighty Sins; the Cry thereof hath gone up to Heaven. If the Almighty God ſhould from Heaven Rain down upon the Town an horrible Tempeſt of Thunderbolts, as he did upon the Cities which he overthrew in his Anger, and repented not, it would be no more than our unrepented Sins deſerve. How comes it then to paſs that we have had ſo much help from Heaven after all? Truly the Sacrifice of our Lord Jeſus Chriſt has been pleaded for Boſton, and therefore ſay, Therefore it is that the Town is not made a Sacrifice to the Vengeance of God. God ſent help to the Town that was the very Heart and Life of the Land that he had a pity for: But why ſo? He ſaid in Iſa. 37. 35. I will defend this Town, to ſave it for my Servant David*'s ſake.* Has this Town been Defended? It has been for the ſake of the Beloved JESUS; therefore has the Daughter of Boſton ſhaken her Head at you, O ye Calamities that have been Impending over her Head. O helped and happy Town! Thou haſt had thoſe Believers in the midſt of thee, that have pleaded this with the great God; Ah! Lord, Thou haſt been more Honoured by the Sufferings of our Lord Jeſus Chriſt, than thou couldſt be Honoured by overwhelming this Town with all the Plagues of thy Juſt Indignation. If thou wilt Spare, and Feed, and Keep, and Help this poor Town, the Sufferings of our Lord Jeſus Chriſt ſhall be own'd as the Prize of all our help. 'Tis this that hath procured us all our Help: 'Tis this that muſt have all our Praiſe.

Thirdly, Let the Lord be in a ſpecial manner Glorified for the Miniſtry of his good Angels, in that help that has been Miniſtred unto us. A Jacob lying on a Stone, ſaw the Angels of God helping him. We are ſetting up an Ebenezer; but when we lay our Heads and our Thoughts upon the Stone, let us then ſee, The Angels of God have helped us. When Macedonia was to have ſome help from God, an Angel, whom the Apoſtle in Acts 16. 9. ſaw Habited like a Man of Macedonia, was a Mean of its being brought unto them. There is abundant Cauſe to think, That every Town in which the Lord Jeſus Chriſt is Worſhipped, hath an Angel to watch over it. The Primitive Chriſtians were perſwaded from the Scriptures of Truth to make no doubt of this, Quod per Civitates diſtributæ ſunt Angelorum præfecturæ. When the Capital Town of Judea was reſcued from an Invaſion, we read in 2 Kings 19. 35. The Angel of the Lord WENT OUT, and ſmote the Camp of the Aſſyrians. It ſhould ſeem there was an Angel which did Reſide in, and Preſide over the Town, who went out for that amazing Exploit. And is it not likely, that the Angel of the Lord WENT OUT for to ſmite the Fleet of the Aſſyrians with a Sickneſs, which the laſt Summer hindred their Invading of this Town? The Angel of BOSTON was concerned for it! Why have not the Deſtroyers broke in upon us, to Prey upon us with ſore Deſtruction? 'Tis becauſe we have had a Wall of Fire about us; that is to ſay, a Guard of Angels, thoſe Flames of Fire have been as a Wall unto us. It was an Angel that help'd a Daniel when the Lions would elſe have ſwallowed him up. It was an Angel that help'd a Lot out of the Fires that were coming to conſume his Habitation. It was an Angel that help'd an Elias to Meat when he wanted it. They were Angels that help'd the whole People of God in the Wilderneſs to their Daily Bread: Their Manna was Angel's Food: And is it nothing that ſuch Angels have done for this Town, think you? Oh! Think not ſo. Indeed if we ſhould go to thank the Angels for doing theſe things, they would zealouſly ſay, See thou do it not! But if we thank their Lord and ours for his employing them to do theſe things, it will exceedingly gratifie them. Wherefore, Bleſs ye the Lord, ye his Angels; and Bleſs the Lord, O my Town, for thoſe his Angels.

III. Let the help which we have hitherto had from our God, encourage us to hope in him for More Help hereafter, as the Matter may require. The help that God had given to his People of Old was Commemorated, as with Monumental Pillars, conveying down the Remembrance of it unto their Children. And what for? We are told in Pſal. 78. 7. That they might ſet their hope in God, and not forget the Works of God. I am not willing to ſay how much this Town may be threatned, even with an Utter Extirpation. But this I will ſay, The Motto upon all our Ebenezers, is, Hope in God! Hope in God! The Uſe of the former help that we have had from God, ſhould be an hope for future help from him, that is a preſent help in the time of Trouble. As in the Three Firſt Verſes of the Eighty-fifth Pſalm Six times over there occurrs, Thou haſt, Thou haſt: All to uſher in this; Therefore thou WILT ſtill do ſo. O let our Faith proceed in that way of Arguing in 2 Cor. 1. 10. The Lord hath delivered, and he doth deliver, and in him we truſt that he will ſtill deliver. We are to Day Writing, Hitherto the Lord hath helped us; let us Write under it, And we hope the Lord has more help for us in the time of need! It may be ſome are purpoſing ſuddenly and haſtily to leave the Town through their Fears of the Straits that may come upon it. But I would not have you be too ſudden and haſty in your Purpoſes, as too many have been unto their After-Sorrow. There was a time when People were ſo Diſcouraged about a Subſiſtence in the Principal Town of the Jews, that they talk'd of plucking up Stakes and flying away; but the Miniſter of God came to them, [and ſo do I to you this Day!] Saying, in Iſa. 30. 7. I cried concerning this, their ſtrength is to ſit ſtill! Boſton was no ſooner come to ſome Conſiſtence Threeſcore Years ago, but the People found themſelves plunged into a ſad Non-plus what way to take for a Subſiſtence. God then immediately put them into a way, and hitherto the Lord has helped us! The Town is at this Day full of Widows and Orphans, and a multitude of them are very helpleſs Creatures. I am aſtoniſh'd how they live! In that Church whereof I am the Servant, I have counted the Widows make about a Sixth Part of our Communicants, and no doubt in the whole Town the proportion differs not very much. Now ſtand ſtill, my Friends, and behold the help of God! Were any of theſe ever ſtarved yet? No, theſe Widows are every one in ſome ſort provided for. And let me tell you, ye Handmaids of the Lord, you ſhall be ſtill provided for! The Lord, whoſe Family you belong unto, will conveniently and wonderfully provide for you; if you ſay, and Oh! Say of him, The Lord is my Helper, I will not fear!

What ſhall I ſay? When Moſes was ready to faint in his Prayers for his People, we read in Exod. 17. 12. They took a Stone, and put it under him. Chriſtians, there are ſome of you who abound in Prayers, that the help of God may be granted unto the Town; the Town is much upheld by thoſe Prayers of yours. Now that you may not faint in your Prayers, I bring you a Stone: The Stone, 'tis our Ebenezer; or, The Relation of the help that hitherto the Lord hath given us.

IV. Let all that bear Publick Office in the Town contribute all the help they can, that may continue the help of God unto us. Auſtin in his Confeſſions gives thanks to God, that when he was an helpleſs Infant, he had a Nurſe to help him, and one that was both able and willing to help him. Infant-Boſton, thou haſt thoſe whom the Bible calls Nurſing-Fathers. Oh be not froward, as thou art in thy Treating of thy Nurſes; but give thanks to God for them. I forget my ſelf; 'tis with the Fathers themſelves that I am concerned.

When it was demanded of Demoſthenes, what it was that ſo long preſerved Athens in a flouriſhing State, he made this Anſwer, The Orators are Men of Learning and Wiſdom, the Magiſtrates do Juſtice, the Citizens love Quiet, and the Laws are kept among them all. May Boſton flouriſh in ſuch happy Order!

And firſt, You may aſſure your ſelves that the Miniſters of the Lord Jeſus Chriſt among you will be Joyful to approve themſelves, as the Book of God has called them, The Helpers of your Joy. O our dear Flocks, we owe you our All; all our Love, all our Strength, all our Time; we watch for you as thoſe that muſt give an account: And I am very much miſtaken if we are not willing to Die for you too, if called unto it. If our Lord Jeſus Chriſt ſhould ſay to us, My Servant, if you'll Die to Night, you ſhall have this Reward; The People that you Preach to ſhall be all Converted unto me! I think we ſhould with Triumphing Souls reply, Ah! Lord, Then I'll Die with all my Heart. Sirs, we ſhould go away Rejoycing with Joy unſpeakable and full of Glory. I am ſatisfied, that the moſt Furious and Foul-mouth'd Reviler that God may give any of us to be Buffeted withal, if he will but come to ſober Thoughts, he will ſay, That there is not any One Man in the Town, but the Miniſters wiſh that Man as well as they do their own Souls, and would gladly ſerve that Man by Day or by Night, in any thing that it were poſſible to do for him. Wherefore, O our beloved People, I beſeech you leave off, leave off to throw Stones at your Ebenezers. Inſtead of that pray for us, and ſtrive together with us in your Prayers to God for us. Then with the help of Chriſt we'll promiſe you, we will ſet our ſelves to obſerve what Special Truths may be moſt needful to be Inculcated upon you, and we will Inculcate them. We will ſet our ſelves to obſerve the Temptations that beſet you, the Afflictions that aſſault you, and the Duties that are incumbent on you; and we will accommodate our ſelves unto them. We will ſet our ſelves to obſerve what Souls among you do call for our more particular Addreſſes, and we will Addreſs them faithfully, and even Travel in Birth for them. Nor will we give over Praying, and Faſting, and Crying to our great LORD for you until we Die. Whatever other Helpers the Town enjoys, they ſhall have that Convenience in Ezra 5. 2. With them were the Prophets of God, helping them. Well then, let the reſt of our Worthy Helpers lend an helping Hand for the promoting of thoſe things wherein the Weal of the Town is wrapped up! When the Jews thought that a Defiling thing was breaking in among them, in Acts 21. 28. They cried out, Men of Iſrael, help. Truly there is Cauſe to make that Cry, Men of Boſton, help! For Ignorance, and Prophaneneſs, and Bad Living, and the worſt things in World, are breaking in upon us.

And now will the JUSTICES of the Town ſet themſelves to conſider, How they may help to ſuppreſs all growing Vices among us?

Will the CONSTABLES of the Town ſet themſelves to conſider, How they may help to prevent all Evil Orders among us?

There are ſome who have the Eye of the Town ſo much upon them, that the very Name of TOWNS-MEN is that by which they are diſtinguiſhed. Sirs, Will you alſo conſider how to help the Affairs of the Town, ſo as that all things may go well among us?

Moreover, may not SCHOOL-MASTERS do much to inſtil Principles of Religion and Civility, as well as other Points of good Education into the Children of the Town? Only let the Town well Encourage its well deſerving School-Maſters.

There are ſome other Officers; but concerning all, there are theſe Two things to be deſired. Firſt, It is to be deſired, That ſuch Officers as are Choſen among us, may be choſen in the Fear of God. May none but Pious and Prudent Men, and ſuch as Love the Town, be choſen to ſerve it. And, Secondly, It is to be deſired, That Officers of ſeveral ſorts would often come together for Conſultation. Each of the ſorts by themſelves, may they often come together to conſult, What ſhall we do to ſerve the Town in thoſe Intereſts which are committed unto our Charge? Oh! What a Deplorable thing will it be for Perſons to be entruſted with Talents, [your Opportunities to ſerve the Town are ſo many Talents!] and they never ſeriouſly conſider, What good ſhall I do with my Talents in the place where God hath Stati-on'd me?

And will the REPRESENTATIVES of the Town be conſidered among the reſt, as entruſted with ſome ſingular Advantages for our help! The Lord give you Underſtanding in all things.

V. God help the Town to manifeſt all that Piety, which a Town ſo helped of him is obliged unto! When the People of God had been carried by his help through their Difficulties, they ſet up Stones to keep in mind how he had helped them: And ſomething was Written on the Stones: But what was Written! See Joſh. 8. 32. Joſhua wrote upon the Stones a Copy of the Law. Truly upon thoſe Ebenezers which we ſet up, we ſhould Write the Law of our God, and Recognize the Obligations which the help of our God has laid upon us to keep it.

We are a very Unpardonable Town, if after all the help which our God has given us, we do not ingenuouſly enquire, What ſhall we render to the Lord for all his Benefits? Render! Oh! Let us our ſelves thus anſwer the Enquiry; Lord, we will render all Poſſible and Filial Obedience unto thee, becauſe hitherto thou haſt helped us: Only do thou alſo help us to render that Obedience! Mark what I ſay; if there be ſo much as one Prayerleſs Houſe in ſuch a Town as this, 'tis Inexcuſable! How Inexcuſable then will be all Flagitious Outrages? There was a Town, ['twas the Town of Sodom!] that had been wonderfully ſaved out of the Hands of their Enemies. But after the help that God ſent unto them, the Town went on to Sin againſt God in very prodigious Inſtances. At laſt a provoked God ſent a Fire upon the Town that made it an Eternal Deſolation. Ah, Boſton, beware, beware, leſt the Sins of Sodom get footing in thee! And what were the Sins of Sodom? We find in Ezek. 16. 49. Behold, this was the Iniquity of Sodom; Pride, Fulneſs of Bread, and Abundance of Idleneſs was in her; neither did ſhe ſtrengthen the Hand of the Poor and the Needy; there was much Oppreſſion there. If you know of any Scandalous Diſorders in the Town, do all you can to ſuppreſs them, and redreſs them: And let not thoſe that ſend their Sons hither from other Parts of the World, for to be improved in Virtue, have cauſe to complain, That after they came to Boſton they loſt what little Virtue was before Budding in them: That in Boſton they grew more Debauched and more Malignant than ever they were before! It was noted concerning the Famous Town of Port-Royal in Jamaica, which you know was t'other Day ſwallow'd up in a Stupendous Earthquake, that juſt before the Earthquake the People were violently and ſcandalouſly ſet upon going to Fortune-Tellers upon all Occaſions: much notice was taken of this Impiety generally prevailling among the People: But none of thoſe wretched Fortune-Tellers could foreſee, or foreſtal the direful Cataſtrophe. I have heard that there are Fortune-Tellers in this Town ſometimes conſulted by ſome of the ſinful Inhabitants. I wiſh the Town could be made too Hot for theſe Dangerous Tranſgreſſors. I am ſure the preſervation of the Town from horrendous Earthquakes, is one thing that beſpeaks our Ebenezers; 'tis from the Merciful help of our God unto us. But beware, I beſeech you, of thoſe provoking Evils that may expoſe us to a Plague, exceeding all that are in the Catalogue of the Twenty-eighth of Deuteronomy. Let me go on to ſay, What, ſhall there be any Bawdy-Houſes in ſuch a Town as this! It may be the Neighbours, that could Smoke 'em, and Rout 'em, if they would, are loth to Stir, for fear of being reputed Ill Neighbours. But I ſay unto you, that you are Ill Neighbours becauſe you do it not: All the Neighbours are like to have their Children and Servants Poiſoned, and their Dwellings laid in Aſhes, becauſe you do it not. And Oh! That the Drinking-Houſes in the Town might once come under a laudable Regulation. The Town has an Enormous Number of them; will the Haunters of thoſe Houſes hear the Counſels of Heaven? For You that are the Town-Dwellers, to be oft, or long in your Viſits of the Ordinary, 'twill certainly expoſe you to Miſchiefs more than ordinary. I have ſeen certain Taverns, where the Pictures of horrible Devourers were hang'd out for the Signs; and, thought I, 'twere well if ſuch Signs were not ſometimes too too Significant: Alas, Men have their Eſtates devoured, their Names devoured, they Hours devoured, and their very Souls devoured, when they are ſo beſotted, that they are not in their Element, except they be Tipling at ſuch Houſes. When once a Man is bewitched with the Ordinary, what uſually becomes of him? He is a gone Man; and when he comes to Die, he'll cry out as many have done, Ale-Houſes are Hell-Houſes! Ale Houſes are Hell-Houſes! But let the Owners of thoſe Houſes alſo now hear our Counſels. Oh! Hearken to me, that God may hearken to you another Day! It is an Honeſt, and a Lawful, tho' it be not a very Deſireable Employment, that you have undertaken: You may Glorifie the Lord Jeſus Chriſt in your Employment if you will, and benefit the Town conſiderably. There was a very godly Man that was an Innkeeper, and a great Miniſter of God could ſay to that Man, in 3 John 2. Thy Soul proſpereth. O let it not be ſaid of you, ſince you are fallen into this Employment, Thy Soul withereth! It is thus with too many: Eſpecially, when they that get a Licenſe perhaps to Sell Drink out of Doors, do ſtretch their Licenſe to Sell within Doors. Thoſe Private Houſes, when once a Profeſſor of the Goſpel comes to Steal a Living out of them, it commonly precipitates them into abundance of wretchedneſs and confuſion. But I pray God aſſiſt you that keep Ordinaries, to keep the Commandments of God in them. There was an Inn at Bethlehem where the Lord JESUS CHRIST was to be met withal. Can Boſton boaſt of many ſuch? Alas, too ordinarily it may be ſaid, There is no Room for him in the Inn! My Friends, let me beg it of you, baniſh the unfruitful works of Darkneſs from your Houſes, and then the Sun of Righteouſneſs will ſhine upon them. Don't countenance Drunkenneſs, Revelling, and Miſ-ſpending of precious Time in your Houſes: Let none have the Snares of Death laid for them in your Houſes. You'll ſay, I ſhall Starve then! I ſay, better Starve than Sin: But you ſhall not. It is the Word of the Moſt High, Truſt in the Lord, and do Good, and verily thou ſhalt be Fed. And is not Peace of Conſcience, with a Little, better than thoſe Riches, that will ſhortly melt away, and then run like Scalding Metal down the very Bowels of thy Soul?

What ſhall I ſay more? There is one Article of Piety more to be Recommended unto us all; and it is an Article which all Piety does exceedingly turn upon, that is, The Sanctification of the Lord's Day. Some very Judicious Perſons have obſerved, that as they ſanctified the Lord's Day, Remiſly or Carefully, juſt ſo their Affairs uſually proſpered all the enſuing Week. Sirs, you cannot more conſult the Proſperity of the Town, in all its Affairs, than by Endeavouring that the Lord's Day may be exemplarily Sanctified. When People about Jeruſalem took too much Liberty on the Sabbath, the Ruler of the Town Contended with them, and ſaid, Ye bring wrath upon Iſrael, by prophaning the Sabbath. I fear, I fear there are many among us, to whom it may be ſaid, Ye bring wrath upon Boſton, by prophaning the Sabbath. And what Wrath? Ah, Lord, prevent it! But there is an awful Sentence in Jer. 17. 27. If ye will not hearken unto me, to ſanctifie the Sabbath Day, then will I kindle a Fire on the Town, and it ſhall Devour, and ſhall not be Quenched.

Finally, Let the Piety of the Town manifeſt it ſelf in a due Regard unto the Inſtitutions of him whoſe help has hitherto been a Shield unto us. Let the Ark be in the Town, and God will Bleſs the Town! I believe it may be found, that in the Mortal Scourges of Heaven, which this Town has felt, there has been a diſcernable Diſtinction of thoſe that have come up to attend all the Ordinances of the Lord Jeſus Chriſt, in the Communion of his Churches. Though theſe have had, as 'tis fit they ſhould, a Share in the Common Deaths, yet the Deſtroying Angel has not had ſo great a proportion of theſe in his Commiſſion, as he has had of others. Whether this be ſo, or no, to uphold, and ſupport, and attend the Ordinances of the Lord Jeſus Chriſt in Reforming Churches, this will Entitle the Town to the help of Heaven; for, Upon the Glory there ſhall be a defence! There were the Victorious Forces of Alexander; that in going backward and forward, paſs'd by Jeruſalem without Hurting it. Why ſo? Said the Lord in Zech. 9. 8. I will encamp about my Houſe, becauſe of the Army. If our God have an Houſe here, he'll Encamp about it. Nazianzen, a famous Miniſter of the Goſpel, taking his farewel of Conſtantinople, an old Man that had ſat under his Miniſtry, cried out, Oh! My Father, Don't you dare to go away, you'll carry the whole Trinity with you! How much more may it be cried out; If we loſe or ſlight the Ordinances of the Lord Jeſus Chriſt, we forego the help of all the Trinity with them!

VI. Extraordinary Equity and Charity, as well as Piety, well becomes a Town that hath been by the help of God ſo Extraordinarily ſignalized. A Town marvellouſly helped by God, has this foretold concerning it, in Iſa. 1. 26. Afterward thou ſhalt be called, the City of Righteouſneſs, the faithful City. May the Ebenezers of this Town render it a Town of Equity, and a Town of Charity! Oh! There ſhould be none but fair Dealings in a Town wherewith Heaven has dealt ſo favourably. Let us Deal fairly in Bargains; Deal fairly in Taxes; Deal fairly in paying Reſpects to ſuch as have been Benefactors unto the Town. 'Tis but Equity, that they who have been old Standers in the Town, and both with Perſon and Eſtate ſerved the Town unto the utmoſt for many Years together, ſhould on all proper Occaſions be conſidered. For Charity, I may indeed ſpeak it without Flattery, this Town has not many Equals on the Face of the Earth. Our Lord Jeſus Chriſt from Heaven wrote unto the good People of a Town in the leſſer Aſia, [Rev. 2. 19.] I know thy Works and Charity. From that Bleſſed Lord I may venture to bring that Meſſage unto the good People of this Town; the glorious Lord of Heaven knows thy works, O Boſton, and all thy Charity. This is a poor Town, and yet it may be ſaid of the Boſtonians, as it was of the Macedonians, their deep Poverty hath abounded unto the Riches of their Liberality. O ye bountiful People of God, all your daily Bounties to the Needy, all your Subſcriptions to ſend the Bread of Life abroad unto places that are periſhing in Wickedneſs, all your Collections in your Aſſemblies as often as they are called for; all theſe Alms are come up for a Memorial before God! The Lord Jeſus Chriſt in Heaven hath beheld your helpfulneſs, and readineſs to every good Work; and he hath requited it with his helpful Ebenezers. It was ſaid, in Iſa. 32. 8. The Liberal deviſeth Liberal things, and by Liberal things he ſhall ſtand. There are ſome in this Town that are always deviſing Liberal things, and our Lord Jeſus Chriſt lets the Town ſtand for the ſake of thoſe! Inſtead of exhorting you to Augment your Charity, I will rather utter an Exhortation, or at leaſt a Supplication, that you may not abuſe your Charity by miſapplying of it. I remember I have Read, that an Inhabitant of the City Piſa being asked why their Town ſo went, as it then did, unto decay? He fetched a deep ſigh, and ſaid, Our young Men are too Prodigal, our old Men are too Affectionate, and we have no Puniſhment for thoſe that ſpend their Years in Idleneſs. Ah! the laſt ſtroak of that complaint I muſt here ſigh it over again. Idleneſs, alas! Idleneſs increaſes in the Town exceedingly: Idleneſs, of which there never came any Goodneſs; Idleneſs, which is a reproach to any People. We work hard all Summer, and the Drones count themſelves wrong'd if they have it not in the Winter divided among them. The Poor that can't Work, are Objects for your Liberality. But the Poor that can Work and won't, the beſt Liberality to them is to make them. I beſeech you, Sirs, find out a Method quickly, that the Idle Perſons in the Town may earn their Bread; it were the beſt piece of Charity that could be ſhown unto them, and Equity unto us all. Our Beggars do ſhamefully grow upon us, and ſuch Beggars too as our Lord Jeſus Chriſt himſelf hath expreſly forbidden us to Countenance. I have Read a Printed Sermon which was Preached before Both Houſes of Parliament, the Lord Mayor and Aldermen of London, and the Aſſembly of Divines; the greateſt Audience then in the World: And in that Sermon the Preacher had this paſſage; I have lived in a Country where in Seven Years I never ſaw a Beggar, nor heard an Oath, nor looked upon a Drunkard. Shall I tell you where that Utopia was? 'Twas NEW-ENGLAND! But they that go from hence muſt now tell another Story.

VII. May the Changes, and eſpecially the Judgments that have come upon the Town, direct us what help to petition from the God of our Salvations. The Iſraelites had formerly ſeen Diſmal Things, where they now ſet up their Ebenezer: The Philiſtines had no leſs than Twice beaten them there, and there taken from them the Ark of God. Now we are ſetting up our Ebenezer, let us a little call to mind ſome Diſmal Things that we have ſeen; the Ebenezer will go up the better for it.

We read in 1 Sam. 6. 18. concerning the Great Stone of Abel. Some ſay, That Adam erected that Stone, as a Grave-ſtone for his Abel, and wrote that Epitaph upon it, Here was poured out the Blood of the Righteous ABEL. I know nothing of This; the Names, I know, differ in the Original; but as we may erect many a Stone for an Ebenezer, ſo we may erect many a Great Stone of ABEL, that is to ſay, we may write MOURNING and SORROW, upon the Condition of the Town in various Examples. Now from the Stones of Abel, we will a little gather what we ſhould wiſh to write upon the Stones of our Ebenezer.

What Changes have we ſeen in point of Religion? It was noted by Luther, He could never ſee good Order in the Church laſt more than Fifteen Years together in the Purity of it. Bleſſed be God, Religion hath here flouriſhed in the Purity of it for more than Fifteen Years together. But certainly the Power of Godlineſs is now grievouſly decay'd among us. As the Prophet of old Exclaimed in Joel 1. 2. Hear this, ye old Men, and give Ear, ye Inhabitants; has this been in your Days? Thus may I ſay, Hear this, ye old Men, that are the Inhabitants of the Town: Can't you Remember that in your Days, a Prayerful, a Watchful, a Fruitful Chriſtian, and a well Governed Family, was a more common Sight, than it is now in our Days? Can't you Remember that in your Days thoſe abominable Things did not ſhow their Heads, that are now Bare-faced among us? Here then is a Petition to be made unto our God; Lord, help us to Remember whence we are fallen, and to Repent, and to do the firſt Works.

Again, What Changes have we ſeen in Point of Mortality? By Mortality almoſt all the Old Race of our Firſt Planters here are carried off; the Old Stock is in a manner expired. We ſee the fulfilment of that Word in Eccl. 1. 4. One Generation paſſeth away, and another Generation cometh. It would be no unprofitable thing for you to paſs over the ſeveral Streets, and call to mind, Who lived here ſo many Years ago? Why? In that place lived ſuch an one; and in that place lived ſuch an one. But, Where are they Now? Oh! They are Gone; they are Gone into that Eternal World, whither we muſt quickly follow them. Here is another Petition to be made unto our God; Lord, help us to Number our Days, and Apply our Hearts unto Wiſdom, that when the places that now know us, do know us no more, we may be gone into the City of God.

Furthermore, What Changes have we ſeen in point of Poſſeſſions? If ſome that are now Rich, were once Low in the World, 'tis poſſible, more that were once Rich, are now brought very Low. Ah! Boſton, Thou haſt ſeen the Vanity of all Worldly Poſſeſſions. One fatal Morning, which laid Fourſcore of thy Dwelling-houſes, and Seventy of thy Ware-houſes, in a Ruinous Heap, not Nineteen Years ago, gave thee to Read it in Fiery Characters. And an huge Fleet of thy Veſſels, which they would make if they were all together, that have miſcarried in the late War, has given thee to Read more of it. Here is one Petition more to be made unto our God Lord, help us to enſure a better and a laſting Subſtance in Heaven, and the good part that cannot be taken away.

In fine, How dreadfully have the Young People of Boſton periſhed under the Judgments of God! A renowned Writer among the Pagans could make this Remark; There was a Town ſo Irreligious and Atheiſtical, that they did not pay their Firſt-fruits unto God: (which the Light of Nature taught the Pagans to do!) and, ſays he, they were by a ſudden Deſolation ſo ſtrangely deſtroy'd, that there were no Remainders either of the Perſons, or of the Houſes, to be ſeen any more. Ah, my Young Folks, there are few Firſt-fruits paid unto the Lord Jeſus Chriſt among you. From hence it comes to paſs, that the conſuming Wrath of God is every Day upon you. New-England has been like a Tott'ring Houſe, the very Foundations of it have been ſhaking: But the Houſe thus over-ſetting by the Whirlwinds of the Wrath of God, hath been like Job's Houſe; It falls upon the Young Men, and they are Dead! The Diſaſters on our Young Folks have been ſo multiplied, that there are few Parents among us, but what will go with Wounded Hearts down unto their Graves: Their daily Moans are, Ah, my Son cut off in his Youth! My Son, my Son! Behold then the help that we are to ask of our God; and why do we, with no more Days of Prayer with Faſting, ask it? Lord, help the young People of Boſton to Remember thee in the Days of their Youth, and ſanctifie unto the Survivers the terrible things that have come upon ſo many of that Generation.

And now as Joſhua having reaſoned with his People, a little before he Died, in Joſh. 24. 26, 27. Took a Great STONE, and ſet it up, and ſaid unto all the People, Behold, this Stone ſhall be a witneſs unto you, leſt ye deny your God. Thus we have been this Day ſetting up a STONE, even an Ebenezer among you; and I conclude, earneſtly teſtifying unto you, Behold this Stone ſhall be a witneſs unto you, that the Lord JESUS CHRIST has been a good Lord unto you; and if you ſeek him, he will be ſtill found of you; but if you forſake him, he will caſt you off for ever.

INTRODUCTION.

'TWERE to be wiſh'd that there might never be any Engliſh Tranſlation of that Wicked Poſition in Machiavel, Non requiri in Principe veram pietatem, ſed ſufficere illius quandam umbram, & ſimulationem Externam. It may be there never was any Region under Heaven happier than poor New-England hath been in Magiſtrates, whoſe True Piety was worthy to be made the Example of After-Ages.

Happy haſt thou been, O Land! in Magiſtrates, whoſe Diſpoſition to ſerve the Lord Jeſus Chriſt, unto whom they ſtill conſidered themſelves accountable, anſwered the good Rule of Agapetus, Quo quis in Republica Majorem Dignitatis gradum adeptus eſt, eo Deum Colat Submiſſius: Magiſtrates, whoſe Diſpoſition to ſerve the People that choſe them to Rule over them, argued them ſenſible of that great Stroak in Cicero, Nulla Re propius Homines ad Deum Accedunt, quam ſalute Hominibus danda: Magiſtrates, acted in their Adminiſtrations by the Spirit of a Joſhua. When the Wiſe Man obſerves unto us, That Oppreſſions makes a Wiſe Man Mad, it may be worth conſidering, whether the Oppreſſor is not intended rather than the Oppreſſed in the Obſervation. 'Tis very certain that a Diſpoſition to Oppreſs other Men, does often make thoſe that are otherwiſe very Wiſe Men, to forget the Rules of Reaſon, and commit moſt Unreaſonable Exorbitancies. Rehoboam in ſome things acted wiſely; but this Admonition of his Inſpired Father could not reſtrain him from acting madly, when the Spirit of Oppreſſion was upon him. The Rulers of New-England have been Wiſe Men, whom that Spirit of Oppreſſion betray'd not into this Madneſs.

The Father of Themiſtocles diſſwading him from Government, ſhow'd him the Old Oars which the Marriners had now thrown away upon the Sea-ſhores with Neglect and Contempt; and ſaid, That People would certainly treat their Old Rulers with the ſame Contempt. But, Reader, let us now take up our Old Oars with all poſſible Reſpect, and ſee whether we can't ſtill make uſe of them to ſerve our little Veſſel. But this the rather, becauſe we may with an eaſie turn change the Name into that of Pilots.

The Word GOVERNMENT, properly ſignifies the Guidance of a Ship: Tully uſes it for that purpoſe; and in Plutarch, the Art of Steering a Ship, is, Τεχνη κυβερνητικη. New-England is a little Ship, which hath Weathered many a Terrible Storm; and it is but reaſonable that they who have ſat at the Helm of the Ship, ſhould be remembred in the Hiſtory of its Deliverances.

Prudentius calls Judges, The Great Lights of the Sphere; Symmachus calls Judges, The better part of Mankind. Reader, Thou art now to be entertained with the Lives of Judges which have deſerved that Character. And the Lives of thoſe who have been called, Speaking Laws, will excuſe our Hiſtory from coming under the Obſervation made about the Work of Homer, That the Word, LAW, *is never ſo much as once occurring in them. Galeacius Secundus. The LIFE of WILLIAM BRADFORD, Eſq; Governour of PLYMOUTH COLONY.

Omnium Somnos, illius vigilantia defendit, omnium otium illius Labor, omnium Delitias illius Induſtria, omnium vacationem illius occupatio.

§. 1. IT has been a Matter of ſome Obſervation, that although Yorkſhire be one of the largeſt Shires in England, yet, for all the Fires of Martyrdom which were kindled in the Days of Queen Mary, it afforded no more Fuel than one poor Leaf; namely, John Leaf, an Apprentice, who ſuffered for the Doctrine of the Reformation at the ſame Time and Stake with the Famous John Bradford. But when the Reign of Queen Elizabeth would not admit the Reformation of Worſhip to proceed unto thoſe Degrees, which were propoſed and purſued by no ſmall number of the Faithful in thoſe Days, Yorkſhire was not the leaſt of the Shires in England that afforded Suffering Witneſſes thereunto. The Churches there gathered were quickly moleſted with ſuch a raging Perſecution, that if the Spirit of Separation in them did carry them unto a further Extream than it ſhould have done, one blameable Cauſe thereof will be found in the Extremity of that Perſecution. Their Troubles made that Cold Country too Hot for them, ſo that they were under a neceſſity to ſeek a Retreat in the Low Countries; and yet the watchful Malice and Fury of their Adverſaries rendred it almoſt impoſſible for them to find what they ſought. For them to leave their Native Soil, their Lands and their Friends, and go into a Strange Place, where they muſt hear Forreign Language, and live meanly and hardly, and in other Imployments than that of Husbandry, wherein they had been Educated, theſe muſt needs have been ſuch Diſcouragements as could have been Conquered by none, ſave thoſe who ſought firſt the Kingdom of God, and the Righteouſneſs thereof. But that which would have made theſe Diſcouragements the more Unconquerable unto an ordinary Faith, was the terrible Zeal of their Enemies to Guard all Ports, and Search all Ships, that none of them ſhould be carried off. I will not relate the ſad things of this kind, then ſeen and felt by this People of God; but only exemplifie thoſe Trials with one ſhort Story. Divers of this People having Hired a Dutchman then lying at Hull, to carry them over to Holland, he promiſed faithfully to take them in between Grimſly and Hull; but they coming to the Place a Day or Two too ſoon, the appearance of ſuch a Multitude alarmed the Officers of the Town adjoining, who came with a great Body of Soldiers to ſeize upon them. Now it happened that one Boat full of Men had been carried Aboard, while the Women were yet in a Bark that lay Aground in a Creek at Low-Water. The Dutchman perceiving the Storm that was thus beginning Aſhore, ſwore by the Sacrament that he would ſtay no longer for any of them; and ſo taking the Advantage of a Fair Wind then Blowing, he put out to Sea for Zealand. The Women thus left near Grimſly-Common, bereaved of their Husbands, who had been hurried from them, and forſaken of their Neighbours, of whom none durſt in this Fright ſtay with them, were a very rueful Spectacle; ſome crying for Fear, ſome ſhaking for Cold, all dragg'd by Troops of Armed and Angry Men from one Juſtice to another, till not knowing what to do with them, they e'en diſmiſs'd them to ſhift as well as they could for themſelves. But by their ſingular Afflictions, and by their Chriſtian Behaviours, the Cauſe for which they expoſed themſelves did gain conſiderably. In the mean time, the Men at Sea found Reaſon to be glad that their Families were not with them, for they were ſurprized with an horrible Tempeſt, which held them for Fourteen Days together, in Seven whereof they ſaw not Sun, Moon or Star, but were driven upon the Coaſt of Norway. The Mariners often deſpaired of Life, and once with doleful ſhrieks gave over all, as thinking the Veſſel was Foundred: But the Veſſel roſe again, and when the Mariners with ſunk Hearts often cried out, We Sink! We Sink! The Paſſengers without ſuch Diſtraction of Mind, even while the Water was running into their Mouths and Ears, would chearfully Shout, Yet, Lord, thou canſt ſave! Yet Lord, thou canſt ſave! And the Lord accordingly brought them at laſt ſafe unto their Deſired Haven: And not long after helped their Diſtreſſed Relations thither after them, where indeed they found upon almoſt all Accounts a new World, but a World in which they found that they muſt live like Strangers and Pilgrims.

§. 2. Among thoſe Devout People was our William Bradford, who was Born Anno 1588. in an obſcure Village call'd Auſterfield, where the People were as unacquainted with the Bible, as the Jews do ſeem to have been with part of it in the Days of Joſiah; a moſt Ignorant and Licentious People, and like unto their Prieſt. Here, and in ſome other Places, he had a Comfortable Inheritance left him of his Honeſt Parents, who died while he was yet a Child, and caſt him on the Education, firſt of his Grand Parents, and then of his Uncles, who devoted him, like his Anceſtors, unto the Affairs of Husbandry. Soon and long Sickneſs kept him, as he would afterwards thankfully ſay, from the Vanities of Youth, and made him the fitter for what he was afterwards to undergo. When he was about a Dozen Years Old, the Reading of the Scriptures began to cauſe great Impreſſions upon him; and thoſe Impreſſions were much aſſiſted and improved, when he came to enjoy Mr. Richard Cliſton's Illuminating Miniſtry, not far from his Abode; he was then alſo further befriended, by being brought into the Company and Fellowſhip of ſuch as were then called Profeſſors; though the Young Man that brought him into it, did after become a Prophane and Wicked Apoſtate. Nor could the Wrath of his Uncles, nor the Scoff of his Neighbours now turn'd upon him, as one of the Puritans, divert him from his Pious Inclinations.

§. 3. At laſt beholding how fearfully the Evangelical and Apoſtolical Church-Form, whereinto the Churches of the Primitive Times were caſt by the good Spirit of God, had been Deformed by the Apoſtacy of the Succeeding Times; and what little Progreſs the Reformation had yet made in many Parts of Chriſtendom towards its Recovery, he ſet himſelf by Reading, by Diſcourſe, by Prayer, to learn whether it was not his Duty to withdraw from the Communion of the Pariſh-Aſſemblies, and engage with ſome Society of the Faithful, that ſhould keep cloſe unto the Written Word of God, as the Rule of their Worſhip. And after many Diſtreſſes of Mind concerning it, he took up a very Deliberate and Underſtanding Reſolution of doing ſo; which Reſolution he chearfully Proſecuted, although the provoked Rage of his Friends tried all the ways imaginable to reclaim him from it; unto all whom his Anſwer was, Were I like to endanger my Life, or conſume my Eſtate by any ungodly Courſes, your Counſels to me were very ſeaſonable: But you know that I have been Diligent and Provident in my Calling, and not only deſirous to augment what I have, but alſo to enjoy it in your Company; to part from which will be as great a Croſs as can befal me. Neverthleſs, to keep a good Conſcience, and walk in ſuch a Way as God has preſcribed in his Word, is a thing which I muſt prefer before you all, and above Life it ſelf. Wherefore, ſince 'tis for a good Cauſe that I am like to ſuffer the Diſaſters which you lay before me, you have no Cauſe to be either angry with me, or ſorry for me; yea, I am not only willing to part with every thing that is dear to me in this World for this Cauſe, but I am alſo thankful that God has given me an Heart ſo to do, and will accept me ſo to ſuffer for him. Some lamented him, ſome derided him, all diſſwaded him: Neverthleſs the more they did it, the more fixed he was in his Purpoſe to ſeek the Ordinances of the Goſpel, where they ſhould be diſpenſed with moſt of the Commanded Purity; and the ſudden Deaths of the chief Relations which thus lay at him, quickly after convinced him what a Folly it had been to have quitted his Profeſſion, in Expectation of any Satisfaction from them. So to Holland he attempted a removal.

§. 4. Having with a great Company of Chriſtians Hired a Ship to Tranſport them for Holland, the Maſter perfidiouſly betrayed them into the Hands of thoſe Perſecutors, who Rifled and Ranſack'd their Goods, and clapp'd their Perſons into Priſon at Boſton, where they lay for a Month together. But Mr. Bradford being a Young Man of about Eighteen, was diſmiſſed ſooner than the reſt, ſo that within a while he had Opportunity with ſome others to get over to Zealand, through Perils both by Land and Sea not inconſiderable; where he was not long Aſhore e're a Viper ſeized on his Hand, that is, an Officer, who carried him unto the Magiſtrates, unto whom an envious Paſſenger had accuſed him as having fled out of England. When the Magiſtrates underſtood derſtood the True Cauſe of his coming thither, they were well ſatisfied with him; and ſo he repaired joyfully unto his Brethren at Amſterdam, where the Difficulties to which he afterwards ſtooped in Learning and Serving of a Frenchman at the Working of Silks, were abundantly Compenſated by the Delight wherewith he ſat under the Shadow of our Lord in his purely diſpenſed Ordinances. At the end of Two Years, he did, being of Age to do it, convert his Eſtate in England into Money; but Setting up for himſelf, he found ſome of his Deſigns by the Providence of God frowned upon, which he judged a Correction beſtowed by God upon him for certain Decays of Internal Piety, whereinto he had fallen; the Conſumption of his Eſtate he thought came to prevent a Conſumption in his Virtue. But after he had reſided in Holland about half a Score Years, he was one of thoſe who bore a part in that Hazardous and Generous Enterprize of removing into New-England, with part of the Engliſh Church at Leyden, where at their firſt Landing, his deareſt Conſort accidentally falling Overboard, was drowned in the Harbour; and the reſt of his Days were ſpent in the Services, and the Temptations, of that American Wilderneſs.

§. 5. Here was Mr. Bradford in the Year 1621. Unanimouſly choſen the Governour of the Plantation: The Difficulties whereof were ſuch, that if he had not been a Perſon of more than Ordinary Piety, Wiſdom and Courage, he muſt have ſunk under them. He had with a Laudable Induſtry been laying up a Treaſure of Experiences, and he had now occaſion to uſe it: Indeed nothing but an Experienced Man could have been ſuitable to the Neceſſities of the People. The Potent Nations of the Indians, into whoſe Country they were come, would have cut them off, if the Bleſſing of God upon his Conduct had not quell'd them; and if his Prudence, Juſtice and Moderation had not over-ruled them, they had been ruined by their own Diſtempers. One Specimen of his Demeanour is to this Day particularly ſpoken of. A Company of Young Fellows that were newly arrived, were very unwilling to comply with the Governour's Order for Working abroad on the Publick Account; and therefore on Chriſtmaſs-Day, when he had called upon them, they excuſed themſelves, with a pretence that it was againſt their Conſcience to Work ſuch a Day. The Governour gave them no Anſwer, only that he would ſpare them till they were better informed; but by and by he found them all at Play in the Street, ſporting themſelves with various Diverſions; whereupon Commanding the Inſtruments of their Games to be taken from them, he effectually gave them to underſtand, That it was againſt his Conſcience that they ſhould play whilſt others were at Work; and that if they had any Devotion to the Day, they ſhould ſhow it at Home in the Exerciſes of Religion, and not in the Streets with Paſtime and Frolicks; and this gentle Reproof put a final ſtop to all ſuch Diſorders for the future.

§. 6. For Two Years together after the beginning of the Colony, whereof he was now Governour, the poor People had a great Experiment of Man's not living by Bread alone; for when they were left all together without one Morſel of Bread for many Months one after another, ſtill the good Providence of God relieved them, and ſupplied them, and this for the moſt part out of the Sea. In this low Condition of Affairs, there was no little Exerciſe for the Prudence and Patience of the Governour, who chearfully bore his part in all: And that Induſtry might not flag, he quickly ſet himſelf to ſettle Propriety among the New-Planters; foreſeeing that while the whole Country labour'd upon a Common Stock, the Husbandry and Buſineſs of the Plantation could not flouriſh, as Plato and others long ſince dream'd that it would, if a Community were eſtabliſhed. Certainly, if the Spirit which dwelt in the Old Puritans, had not inſpired theſe New-Planters, they had ſunk under the Burden of theſe Difficulties; but our Bradford had a double Portion of that Spirit.

§. 7. The Plantation was quickly thrown into a Storm that almoſt overwhelmed it, by the unhappy Actions of a Miniſter ſent over from England by the Adventurers concerned for the Plantation; but by the Bleſſing of Heaven on the Conduct of the Governour, they Weathered out that Storm. Only the Adventurers hereupon breaking to pieces, threw up all their Concernments with the Infant Colony; whereof they gave this as one Reaſon, That the Planters diſſembled with His Majeſty, and their Friends in their Petition, wherein they declared for a Church-Diſcipline, agreeing with the French and others of the Reforming Churches in Europe. Whereas 'twas now urged, that they had admitted into their Communion a Perſon, who at his Admiſſion utterly renounced the Churches of England, (which Perſon by the way, was that very Man who had made the Complaints againſt them) and therefore though they denied the Name of Browniſts, yet they were the Thing. In Anſwer hereunto, the very Words written by the Governour were theſe; Whereas you Tax us with diſſembling about the French Diſcipline, you do us wrong, for we both hold and practice the Diſcipline of the French and other Reformed Churches (as they have publiſhed the ſame in the Harmony of Confeſſions) according to our Means, in Effect and Subſtance. But whereas you would tie us up to the French Diſcipline in every Circumſtance, you derogate from the Liberty we have in Chriſt Jeſus. The Apoſtle Paul would have none to follow him in any thing, but wherein he follows Chriſt; much leſs ought any Chriſtian or Church in the World to do it. The French may err, we may err, and other Churches may err, and doubtleſs do in many Circumſtances. That Honour therefore belongs only only to the Infallible Word of God, and pure Teſtament of Chriſt, to be propounded and followed as the only Rule and Pattern for Direction herein to all Churches and Chriſtians. And it is too great Arrogancy for any Men or Church to think, that he or they have ſo ſounded the Word of God unto the bottom, as preciſely to ſet down the Churches Diſcipline without Error in Subſtance or Circumſtance, that no other without blame may digreſs or differ in any thing from the ſame. And it is not difficult to ſhew that the Reformed Churches differ in many Circumſtances among themſelves. By which Words it appears how far he was free from that Rigid Spirit of Separation, which broke to pieces the Separatiſts themſelves in the Low Countries, unto the great Scandal of the Reforming Churches. He was indeed a Perſon of a well-temper'd Spirit, or elſe it had been ſcarce poſſible for him to have kept the Affairs of Plymouth in ſo good a Temper for Thirty Seven Years together; in every one of which he was choſen their Governour, except the Three Years, wherein Mr. Winſlow, and the Two Years, wherein Mr. Prince, at the choice of the People, took a turn with him.

§. 8. The Leader of a People in a Wilderneſs had need be a Moſes; and if a Moſes had not led the People of Plymouth-Colony, when this Worthy Perſon was their Governour, the People had never with ſo much Unanimity and Importunity ſtill called him to lead them. Among many Inſtances thereof, let this one piece of Self-denial be told for a Memorial of him, whereſoever this Hiſtory ſhall be conſidered. The Patent of the Colony was taken in his Name, running in theſe Terms, To William Bradford, his Heirs, Aſſociates and Aſſigns: But when the number of the Freemen was much Increaſed, and many New Townſhips Erected, the General Court there deſired of Mr. Bradford, that he would make a Surrender of the ſame into their Hands, which he willingly and preſently aſſented unto, and confirmed it according to their Deſire by his Hand and Seal, reſerving no more for himſelf than was his Proportion, with others, by Agreement. But as he found the Providence of Heaven many ways Recompencing his many Acts of Self-denial, ſo he gave this Teſtimony to the Faithfulneſs of the Divine Promiſes; That he had forſaken Friends, Houſes and Lands for the ſake of the Goſpel, and the Lord gave them him again. Here he proſpered in his Eſtate; and beſides a Worthy Son which he had by a former Wife, he had alſo Two Sons and a Daughter by another, whom he Married in this Land.

§. 9. He was a Perſon for Study as well as Action; and hence, notwithſtanding the Difficulties through which he paſſed in his Youth, he attained unto a notable Skill in Languages; the Dutch Tongue was become almoſt as Vernacular to him as the Engliſh; the French Tongue he could alſo manage; the Latin and the Greek he had Maſtered; but the Hebrew he moſt of all ſtudied, Becauſe, he ſaid, he would ſee with his own Eyes the Ancient Oracles of God in their Native Beauty. He was alſo well ſkill'd in Hiſtory, in Antiquity, and in Philoſophy; and for Theology he became ſo verſed in it, that he was an Irrefragable Diſputant againſt the Errors, eſpecially thoſe of Anabaptiſm, which with Trouble he ſaw riſing in his Colony; wherefore he wrote ſome Significant things for the Confutation of thoſe Errors. But the Crown of all was his Holy, Prayerful, Watchful and Fruitful Walk with God, wherein he was very Exemplary.

§. 10. At length he fell into an Indiſpoſition of Body, which rendred him unhealthy for a whole Winter; and as the Spring advanced, his Health yet more declined; yet he felt himſelf not what he counted Sick, till one Day; in the Night after which, the God of Heaven ſo fill'd his Mind with Ineffable Conſolations, that he ſeemed little ſhort of Paul, rapt up unto the Unutterable Entertainments of Paradiſe. The next Morning he told his Friends, That the good Spirit of God had given him a Pledge of his Happineſs in another World, and the Firſt-fruits of his Eternal Glory: And on the Day following he died, May 9. 1657. in the 69th Year of his Age. Lamented by all the Colonies of New-England, as a Common Bleſſing and Father to them all.

Inter Omnia quæ Rempublicam, ejuſq; fœlicitatem conſervant, quid utilius, quid præſtantius, quam Viros ad Magiſtratus gerendos Eligere, ſumma prudentia & Virtute preditos, quiq; ad Honores obtinendos, non Ambitione, non Largitionibus, ſed Virtute & Modeſtia ſibi parent adytum!

§. 1. THE Merits of Mr. Edward Winſlow, the Son of Edward Winſlow, Eſq; of Draughtwich, in the Country of Worceſter, obliged the Votes of the Plymouthean Colony (whereto he arrived in the Year 1624. after his Prudent and Faithful Diſpatch of an Agency in England, on the behalf of that Infant Colony) to chuſe him for many Years a Magiſtrate, and for Two or Three their Governour. Travelling into the Low-Countries, he fell into Acquaintance with the Engliſh Church at Leyden, and joining himſelf to them, he Shipped himſelf with that part of them which firſt came over into America; from which time he was continually engaged in ſuch extraordinary Actions, as the aſſiſtance of that People to encounter their more than ordinary Difficulties, called for. But their Publick Affairs then requiring an Agency of as wiſe a Man as the Country could find at Whitehall for them, he was again prevail'd withal in the Year 1635. to appear for them at the Council-board; and his appearance there proved as Effectual, as it was very Seaſonable, not only for the Colony of Plymouth, but for the Maſſachuſets alſo, on very important Accounts. It was by the Bleſſing of God upon his wary and proper Applications, that the Attempts of many Adverſaries to overthrow the whole Settlement of New-England, were themſelves wholly overthrown; and as a ſmall Acknowledgment for his great Service therein, they did, upon his return again, chuſe him their Governour. But in the Year 1646. the place of Governour being reaſſumed by Mr. Bradford, the Maſſachuſet-Colony Addreſſed themſelves unto Mr. Winſlow to take another Voyage for England, that he might there procure their Deliverance from the Deſigns of many Troubleſome Adverſaries that were Petitioning unto the Parliament againſt them; and this Hercules having been from his very early Days accuſtomed unto the cruſhing of that ſort of Serpents, generouſly undertook another Agency, wherein how many good Services he did for New-England, and with what Fidelity, Diſcretion, Vigour and Succeſs he purſued the Intereſts of that Happy People, it would make a large Hiſtory to relate, an Hiſtory that may not now be expected until the Reſurrection of the Juſt. After this he returned no more unto New-England; but being in great Favour with the greateſt Perſons then in the Nation, he fell into thoſe Imployments wherein the whole Nation fared the better for him. At length he was imployed as one of the Grand Commiſſioners in the Expedition againſt Hiſpaniola, where a Diſeaſe (rendred yet more uneaſie by his Diſſatisfaction at the ſtrange miſcarriage of that Expedition) arreſting him, he died between Domingo and Jamaica, on May 8. 1655. in the Sixty-firſt Year of his Life, and had his Body Honourably committed unto the Sea.

§. 2. Sometimes during the Life, but always after the Death of Governour Bradford, even until his own, Mr. Thomas Prince was choſen Governour of Plymouth. He was a Gentleman whoſe Natural Parts exceeded his Acquired; but the want and worth of Acquired Parts was a thing ſo ſenſible unto him, that Plymouth perhaps never had a greater Mecænas of Learning in it: It was he that in ſpite of much Contradiction, procured Revenues for the Support of Grammar-Schools in that Colony. About the time of Governour Bradford's Death, Religion it ſelf had like to have died in that Colony, through a Libertine and Browniſtick Spirit then prevailing among the People, and a ſtrange Diſpoſition to Diſcountenance the Goſpel-Miniſtry, by ſetting up the Gifts of Private Brethren in Oppoſition thereunto. The good People being in extream Diſtreſs from the Proſpect which this matter gave to them, ſaw no way ſo likely and ready to ſave the Churches from Ruin, as by the Election of Mr. Prince to the place of Governour; and this Point being by the Gracious and Marvellous Providence of the Lord Jeſus Chriſt gained at the next Election; the Adverſe Party from that very time ſunk into Confuſion. He had Sojourned for a while at Eaſtham, where a Church was by his means gathered; but after this time he returned unto his former Scituation at Plymouth, where he reſided until he died, which was March 29. 1673. when he was about Seventy-Three Years of Age: Among the many Excellent Qualities which adorned him as Governour of the Colony, there was much notice taken of that Integrity, wherewith indeed he was moſt exemplarily qualified: Whence it was that as he ever would refuſe any thing that look'd like a Bribe; ſo if any Perſon having a Caſe to be heard at Court, had ſent a Preſent unto his Family in his abſence, he would preſently ſend back the value thereof in Money unto the Perſon. But had he been only a private Chriſtian, there would yet have been ſeen upon him thoſe Ornaments of Prayerfulneſs, and Peaceableneſs, and profound Reſignation to the Conduct of the Word of God, and a ſtrict Walk with God, which might juſtly have been made an Example to a whole Colony.

§. 3. Reader, If thou would'ſt have ſeen the true Picture of Wiſdom, Courage and Generoſity, the Succeſſor of Mr. Thomas Prince in the Government of Plymouth would have repreſented it. It was the truly Honourable Joſiah Winſlow, Eſq; the firſt Governour that was Born in New-England, and one well worthy to be an Example to all that ſhould come after him: A True Engliſh Gentleman, and (that I may ſay all at once) the True Son of that Gentleman whom we parted withal no more than Two Paragraphs ago. His Education and his Diſpoſition was that of a Gentleman; and his many Services to his Country in the Field, as well as on the Bench, ought never to be Buried in Oblivion. All that Homer deſired in a Ruler, was in the Life of this Gentleman expreſſed unto the Life; to be, Fortes in Hoſtes, and, Bonus in Cives. Though he hath left an Off-ſpring, yet I muſt ask for One Daughter to be remembred above the reſt. As of Old, Epaminondas being upbraided with want of Iſſue, boaſted that he left behind him one Daughter, namely, the Battel of Leuctra, which would render him Immortal; ſo our General Winſlow hath left behind him his Battel at the Fort of the Narraganſets, to Immortalize him: There did he with his own Sword make and ſhape a Pen to Write his Hiſtory. But ſo large a Field of Merit is now before me, that I dare not give my ſelf the liberty to Range in it leſt I loſe my ſelf. He died on Dec. 18. 1680.

§. 4. And what Succeſſor had he? Methinks of the Two laſt Words in the wonderful Prediction of the Succeſſion, Oracled unto King Henry VII. LEO, NULLUS, the Firſt would have well ſuited the Valiant Winſlow of Plymouth; and the laſt were to have been wiſh'd for him that followed.

Patres Conſcripti: Or, ASSISTENTS.

THE GOVERNOURS of New-England have ſtill had Righteouſneſs the Girdle of their Loins, and Faithfulneſs the Girdle of their Reins, that is to ſay, Righteous and Faithful Men about them, in the Aſſiſtance of ſuch Magiſtrates as were called by the Votes of the Freemen unto the Adminiſtration of the Government, (according to their Charters) and made the Judges of the Land. Theſe Perſons have been ſuch Members of the Churches, and ſuch Patrons to the Churches, and generally been ſuch Examples of Courage, Wiſdom, Juſtice, Goodneſs and Religion, that it is fit our Church-Hiſtory ſhould remember them. The Bleſſed Apollonius, who in a ſet Oration Generouſly and Eloquently Pleaded the Cauſe of Chriſtianity before the Roman Senate, was not only a Learned Perſon, but alſo (if Jerom ſay right) a Senator of Rome. The Senators of New-England alſo have pleaded the Cauſe of Chriſtianity, not ſo much by Orations, as by Practiſing of it, and by Suffering for it. Nevertheleſs, as the Sicyonians would have no other Epitaphs written on the Tombs of their Kings, but only their Names, that they might have no Honour, but what the Remembrance of their Actions and Merits in the Minds of the People ſhould procure for them; ſo I ſhall content my ſelf with only reciting the Names of theſe Worthy Perſons, and the Times when I find them firſt choſen unto their Magiſtracy.

Quicunq; Venti erunt, Ars noſtra certe non aberit. Cicer.

§. 1. LET Greece boaſt of her patient Lycurgus, the Lawgiver, by whom Diligence, Temperance, Fortitude and Wit were made the Faſhions of a therefore Long-laſting and Renowned Commonwealth: Let Rome tell of her Devout Numa, the Lawgiver, by whom the moſt Famous Commonwealth ſaw Peace Triumphing over extinguiſhed War, and cruel Plunders, and Murders giving place to the more mollifying Exerciſes of his Religion. Our New-England ſhall tell and boaſt of her Winthrop, a Lawgiver, as patient as Lycurgus, but not admitting any of his Criminal Diſorders; as Devout as Numa, but not liable to any of his Heatheniſh Madneſſes; a Governour in whom the Excellencies of Chriſtianity made a moſt improving Addition unto the Virtues, wherein even without thoſe he would have made a Parallel for the Great Men of Greece, or of Rome, which the Pen of a Plutarch has Eternized.

§. 2. A ſtock of Heroes by right ſhould afford nothing but what is Heroical; and nothing but an extream Degeneracy would make any thing leſs to be expected from a Stock of Winthrops. Mr. Adam Winthrop, the Son of a Worthy Gentleman wearing the ſame Name, was himſelf a Worthy, a Diſcreet, and a Learned Gentleman, particularly Eminent for Skill in the Law, nor without Remark for Love to the Goſpel, under the Reign of King Henry VIII. And Brother to a Memorable Favourer of the Reformed Religion in the Days of Queen Mary, into whoſe Hands the Famous Martyr Philpot committed his Papers, which afterwards made no Inconſiderable part of our Martyr-Books. This Mr. Adam Winthrop had a Son of the ſame Name alſo, and of the ſame Endowments and Imployments with his Father; and this Third Adam Winthrop was the Father of that Renowned John Winthrop, who was the Father of New-England, and the Founder of a Colony, which upon many Accounts, like him that Founded it, may challenge the Firſt Place among the Engliſh Glories of America. Our John Winthrop thus Born at the Manſion-Houſe of his Anceſtors, at Groton in Suffolk, on June 12. 1587. enjoyed afterwards an agreeable Education. But though he would rather have Devoted himſelf unto the Study of Mr. John Calvin, than of Sir Edward Cook; nevertheleſs, the Accompliſhments of a Lawyer, were thoſe wherewith Heaven made his chief Opportunities to be Serviceable.

§. 3. Being made, at the unuſually early Age of Eighteen, a Juſtice of Peace, his Virtues began to fall under a more general Obſervation; and he not only ſo Bound himſelf to the Behaviour of a Chriſtian, as to become Exemplary for a Conformity to the Laws of Chriſtianity in his own Converſation, but alſo diſcovered a more than ordinary Meaſure of thoſe Qualities, which adorn an Officer of Humane Society. His Juſtice was Impartial, and uſed the Ballance to weigh not the Caſh, but the Caſe of thoſe who were before him: Proſopolatria, he reckoned as bad as Idololatria: His Wiſdom did exquiſitely Temper things according to the Art of Governing, which is a Buſineſs of more Contrivance than the Seven Arts of the Schools: Oyer ſtill went before Terminer in all his Adminiſtrations: His Courage made him Dare to do right, and fitted him to ſtand among the Lions, that have ſometimes been the Supporters of the Throne: All which Virtues he rendred the more Illuſtrious, by Emblazoning them with the Conſtant Liberality and Hoſpitality of a Gentleman. This made him the Terror of the Wicked, and the Delight of the Sober, the Envy of the many, but the Hope of thoſe who had any Hopeful Deſign in Hand for the Common Good of the Nation, and the Intereſts of Religion.

§. 4. Accordingly when the Noble Deſign of carrying a Colony of Choſen People into an American Wilderneſs, was by ſome Eminent Perſons undertaken, This Eminent Perſon was, by the Conſent of all, Choſen for the Moſes, who muſt be the Leader of ſo great an Undertaking: And indeed nothing but a Moſaic Spirit could have carried him through the Temptations, to which either his Farewel to his own Land, or his Travel in a Strange Land, muſt needs expoſe a Gentleman of his Education. Wherefore having Sold a fair Eſtate of Six or Seven Hundred a Year, he Tranſported himſelf with the Effects of it into New-England in the Year 1630. where he ſpent it upon the Service of a famous Plantation founded and formed for the Seat of the moſt Reformed Chriſtianity: And continued there, conflicting with Temptations of all ſorts, as many Years as the Nodes of the Moon take to diſpatch a Revolution. Thoſe Perſons were never concerned in a New-Plantation, who know not that the unavoidable Difficulties of ſuch a thing, will call for all the Prudence and Patience of a Mortal Man to Encounter therewithal; and they muſt be very inſenſible of the Influence, which the Juſt Wrath of Heaven has permitted the Devils to have upon this World, if they do not think that the Difficulties of a New-Plantation, devoted unto the Evangelical Worſhip of our Lord Jeſus Chriſt, muſt be yet more than Ordinary. How Prudently, how Patiently, and with how much Reſignation to our Lord Jeſus Chriſt, our brave Winthrop waded through theſe Difficulties, let Poſterity Conſider with Admiration. And know, that as the Picture of this their Governour, was, after his Death, hung up with Honour in the State-Houſe of his Country, ſo the Wiſdom, Courage, and Holy Zeal of his Life, were an Example well-worthy to be Copied by all that ſhall ſucceed in Government.

§. 5. Were he now to be conſider'd only as a Chriſtian, we might therein propoſe him as greatly Imitable. He was a very Religious Man; and as he ſtrictly kept his Heart, ſo he kept his Houſe, under the Laws of Piety; there he was every Day conſtant in Holy Duties, both Morning and Evening, and on the Lord's Days, and Lectures; though he wrote not after the Preacher, yet ſuch was his Attention, and ſuch his Retention in Hearing, that he repeated unto his Family the Sermons which he had heard in the Congregation. But it is chiefly as a Governour that he is now to be conſider'd. Being the Governour over the conſiderableſt Part of New-England, he maintain'd the Figure and Honour of his Place with the Spirit of a true Gentleman; but yet with ſuch obliging Condeſcention to the Circumſtances of the Colony, that when a certain troubleſome and malicious Calumniator, well known in thoſe Times, printed his Libellous Nick-Names upon the chief Perſons here, the worſt Nick-Name he could find for the Governour, was John Temper-well; and when the Calumnies of that ill Man cauſed the Arch-Biſhop to Summon one Mr. Cleaves before the King, in hopes to get ſome Accuſation from him againſt the Country, Mr. Cleaves gave ſuch an Account of the Governour's laudable Carriage in all Reſpects, and the ſerious Devotion wherewith Prayers were both publickly and privately made for His Majeſty, that the King expreſſed himſelf moſt highly Pleaſed therewithal, only Sorry that ſo Worthy a Perſon ſhould be no better Accommodated than with the Hardſhips of America. He was, indeed, a Governour, who had moſt exactly ſtudied that Book, which pretending to Teach Politicks, did only contain Three Leaves, and but One Word in each of thoſe Leaves, which Word was, Moderation. Hence, though he were a Zealous Enemy to all Vice, yet his Practice was according to his Judgment thus expreſſed; In the Infancy of Plantations, Juſtice ſhould be adminiſtred with more Lenity than in a ſettled State; becauſe People are more apt then to Tranſgreſs; partly out of Ignorance of new Laws and Orders, partly out of Oppreſſion of Buſineſs, and other Straits. [Lento Gradu,] was the old Rule; and if the Strings of a new Inſtrument be wound up unto their heighth, they will quickly crack. But when ſome Leading and Learned Men took Offence at his Conduct in this Matter, and upon a Conference gave it in as their Opinion, That a ſtricter Diſcipline was to be uſed in the beginning of a Plantation, than after its being with more Age eſtabliſhed and confirmed, the Governour being readier to ſee his own Errors than other Mens, profeſſed his Purpoſe to endeavour their Satiſfaction with leſs of Lenity in his Adminiſtrations. At that Conference there were drawn up ſeveral other Articles to be obſerved between the Governour and the reſt of the Magiſtrates, which were of this Import: That the Magiſtrates, as far as might be, ſhould aforehand ripen their Conſultations, to produce that Unanimity in their Publick Votes, which might make them liker to the Voice of God; that if Differences fell out among them in their Publick Meetings, they ſhould ſpeak only to the Caſe, without any Reflection, with all due Modeſty, and but by way of Queſtion; or Deſire the deferring of the Cauſe to further time; and after Sentence to imitate privately no Diſlike; that they ſhould be more Familiar, Friendly and Open unto each other, and more frequent in their Viſitations, and not any way expoſe each other's Infirmities, but ſeek the Honour of each other, and all the Court; that One Magiſtrate ſhall not croſs the Proceedings of another, without firſt adviſing with him; and that they ſhould in all their Appearances abroad, be ſo circumſtanced as to prevent all Contempt of Authority; and that they ſhould Support and Strengthen all Under Officers. All of which Articles were obſerved by no Man more than by the Governour himſelf.

§. 6. But whilſt he thus did as our New-Engliſh Nehemiah, the part of a Ruler in Managing the Publick Affairs of our American Jeruſalem, when there were Tobijahs and Sanballats enough to vex him, and give him the Experiment of Luther's Obſervation, Omnis qui regit, eſt tanquam ſignum, in quod omnia Jacula, Satan & Mundus dirigunt; he made himſelf ſtill an exacter Parallel unto that Governour of Iſrael, by doing the part of a Neighbour among the diſtreſſed People of the New-Plantation. To teach them the Frugality neceſſary for thoſe times, he abridged himſelf of a Thouſand comfortable things, which he had al-

allow'd himſelf elſewhere: His Habit was not that ſoft Raiment, which would have been diſagreeable to a Wilderneſs; his Table was not covered with the Superfluities that would have invited unto Senſualities: Water was commonly his own Drink, though he gave Wine to others. But at the ſame time his Liberality unto the Needy was even beyond meaſure Generous; and therein he was continually cauſing The Bleſſing of him that was ready to Periſh to come upon him, and the Heart of the Widow and the Orphan to ſing for Joy: But none more than thoſe of Deceas'd Miniſters, whom he always treated with a very ſingular Compaſſion; among the Inſtances whereof we ſtill enjoy with us the Worthy and now Aged Son of that Reverend Higginſon, whoſe Death left his Family in a wide World ſoon after his arrival here, publickly acknowledging the Charitable Winthrop for his Foſter-Father. It was oftentimes no ſmall Trial unto his Faith, to think, How a Table for the People ſhould be furniſhed when they firſt came into the Wilderneſs! And for very many of the People, his own good Works were needful, and accordingly employed for the anſwering of his Faith. Indeed, for a while the Governour was the Joſeph, unto whom the whole Body of the People repaired when their Corn failed them: And he continued Relieving of them with his open-handed Bounties, as long as he had any Stock to do it with; and a lively Faith to ſee the return of the Bread after many Days, and not Starve in the Days that were to paſs till that return ſhould be ſeen, carried him chearfully through thoſe Expences. Once it was obſervable, that on Feb. 5. 1630. when he was diſtributing the laſt Handful of the Meal in the Barrel unto a Poor Man diſtreſſed by the Wolf at the Door, at that Inſtant they ſpied a Ship arrived at the Harbour's Mouth Laden with Proviſions for them all. Yea, the Governour ſometimes made his own private Purſe to be the Publick; not by ſucking into it, but by ſqueezing out of it; for when the Publick Treaſure had nothing in it, he did himſelf defray the Charges of the Publick. And having learned that Leſſon of our Lord, That it is better to Give, than to Receive, he did, at the General Court when he was a Third time choſen Governour, made a Speech unto this purpoſe, That he had received Gratuities from divers Towns, which he accepted with much Comfort and Content; and he had likewiſe received Civilities from particular Perſons, which he could not refuſe without Incivility in himſelf: Nevertheleſs, he took them with a trembling Heart, in regard of God's Word, and the Conſcience of his own Infirmities; and therefore he deſired them that they would not hereafter take it Ill if he refuſed ſuch Preſents for the time to come. 'Twas his Cuſtom alſo to ſend ſome of his Family upon Errands, unto the Houſes of the Poor about their Meal time, on purpoſe to ſpy whether they wanted; and if it were found that they wanted, he would make that the Opportunity of ſending Supplies unto them. And there was one Paſſage of his Charity that was perhaps a little unuſual: In an hard and long Winter, when Wood was very ſcarce at Boſton, a Man gave him a private Information, that a needy Perſon in the Neighbourhood ſtole Wood ſometimes from his Pile; whereupon the Governour in a ſeeming Anger did reply, Does he ſo? I'll take a Courſe with him; go, call that Man to me, I'll warrant you I'll cure him of Stealing! When the Man came, the Governour conſidering that if he had Stoln, it was more out of Neceſſity than Diſpoſition, ſaid unto him, Friend, It is a ſevere Winter, and I doubt you are but meanly provided for Wood; wherefore I would have you ſupply your ſelf at my Wood-Pile till this cold Seaſon be over. And he then Merrily asked his Friends, Whether he had not effectually cured this Man of Stealing his Wood?

§. 7. One would have imagined that ſo good a Man could have had no Enemies; if we had not had a daily and woful Experience to Convince us, that Goodneſs it ſelf will make Enemies. It is a wonderful Speech of Plato, (in one of his Books, De Republica) For the trial of true Vertue, 'tis neceſſary that a good Man μηδὲν αδικῶν, δόξαν ἔχει τῆς μεγίστην ἀδικιας· Tho' he do no unjuſt thing, ſhould ſuffer the Infamy of the greateſt Injuſtice. The Governour had by his unſpotted Integrity, procured himſelf a great Repntation among the People; and then the Crime of Popularity was laid unto his Charge by ſuch, who were willing to deliver him from the Danger of having all Men ſpeak well of him. Yea, there were Perſons eminent both for Figure and for Number, unto whom it was almoſt Eſſential to diſlike every thing that came from him; and yet he always maintained an Amicable Correſpondence with them; as believing that they acted according to their Judgment and Conſcience, or that their Eyes were held by ſome Temptation in the worſt of all their Oppoſitions. Indeed, his right Works were ſo many, that they expoſed him unto the Envy of his Neighbours; and of ſuch Power was that Envy, that ſometimes he could not ſtand before it; but it was by not ſtanding that he moſt effectually withſtood it all. Great Attempts were ſometimes made among the Freemen, to get him left out from his Place in the Government upon little Pretences, leſt by the too frequent Choice of One Man, the Government ſhould ceaſe to be by Choice; and with a particular aim at him, Sermons were Preached at the Anniverſary Court of Election, to diſſwade the Freemen from chuſing One Man Twice together. This was the Reward of his extraordinary Serviceableneſs! But when theſe Attempts did ſucceed, as they ſometimes did, his Profound Humility appeared in that Equality of Mind, wherewith he applied himſelf cheerfully to ſerve the Country in whatever Station their Votes had allotted for him. And one Year when the Votes came to be Numbered, there were found Six leſs for Mr. Winthrop, than for another Gentleman who then ſtood in Competition: But ſeveral other Perſons regularly Tendring their Votes before the Election was publiſhed, were, upon a very frivolous Objection, refuſed by ſome of the Magiſtrates, that were afraid leſt the Election ſhould at laſt fall upon Mr. Winthrop: Which though it was well perceived, yet ſuch was the Self-denial of this Patriot, that he would not permit any Notice to be taken of the Injury. But theſe Trials were nothing in Compariſon of thoſe harſher and harder Treats, which he ſometimes had from the Frowardneſs of not a few in the Days of their Paroxiſms; and from the Faction of ſome againſt him, not much unlike that of the Piazzi in Florence againſt the Family of the Medices: All of which he at laſt Conquered by Conforming to the Famous Judges Motto, Prudens qui Patiens. The Oracles of God have ſaid, Envy is rottenneſs to the Bones; and Gulielmus Pariſienſis applies it unto Rulers, who are as it were the Bones of the Societies which they belong unto: Envy, ſays he, is often found among them, and it is rottenneſs unto them. Our Winthrop Encountred this Envy from others, but Conquered it, by being free from it himſelf.

§. 8. Were it not for the ſake of introducing the Exemplary Skill of this Wiſe Man, at giving ſoft Anſwers, one would not chuſe to Relate thoſe Inſtances of Wrath, which he had ſometimes to Encounter with; but he was for his Gentleneſs, his Forbearance, and his Longanimity, a Pattern ſo worthy to be Written after, that ſomething muſt here be Written of it. He ſeemed indeed never to ſpeak any other Language than that of Theodoſius, If any Man ſpeak evil of the Governour, if it be thro' Lightneſs, 'tis to be contemned; if it be thro' Madneſs, 'tis to be pitied; if it thro' Injury, 'tis to be remitted. Behold, Reader, the Meekneſs of Wiſdom notably exemplified! There was a time when he received a very ſharp Letter from a Gentleman, who was a Member of the Court, but he delivered back the Letter unto the Meſſengers that brought it with ſuch a Chriſtian Speech as this, I am not willing to keep ſuch a matter of Provocation by me! Afterwards the ſame Gentleman was compelled by the ſcarcity of Proviſions to ſend unto him that he would Sell him ſome of his Cattel; whereupon the Governour prayed him to accept what he had ſent for as a Token of his Good Will; but the Gentleman returned him this Anſwer, Sir, your overcoming of your ſelf hath overcome me; and afterwards gave Demonſtration of it. The French have a ſaying, That Un Honeſte Homme, eſt un Homme meſle! A good Man is a mixt Man; and there hardly ever was a more ſenſible Mixture of thoſe Two things, Reſolution and Condeſcention, than in this good Man. There was a time when the Court of Election, being for fear of Tumult, held at Cambridge, May 17. 1637. The Sectarian part of the Country, who had the Year before gotten a Governour more unto their Mind, had a Project now to have confounded the Election, by demanding that the Court would conſider a Petition then tendered before their Proceeding thereunto. Mr. Winthrop ſaw that this was only a Trick to throw all into Confuſion, by putting off the Choice of the Governour and Aſſiſtents until the Day ſhould be over; and therefore he did, with a ſtrenuous Reſolution, procure a diſappointment unto that miſchievous and ruinous Contrivance. Neverthеleſs, Mr. Winthrop himſelf being by the Voice of the Freemen in this Exigence choſen the Governour, and all of the other Party left out, that ill-affected Party diſcovered the Dirt and Mire, which remained with them, after the Storm was over; particularly the Serjeants, whoſe Office 'twas to attend the Governour, laid down their Halberts; but ſuch was the Condeſcention of this Governour, as to take no preſent Notice of this Anger and Contempt, but only Order ſome of his own Servants to take the Halberts: And when the Country manifeſted their deep Reſentments of the Affront thus offered him, he prayed them to overlook it. But it was not long before a Compenſation was made for theſe things by the doubled Reſpects which were from all Parts paid unto him. Again, there was a time when the Suppreſſion of an Antinomian and Familiſtical Faction, which extreamly threatned the Ruin of the Country, was generally thought much owing unto this Renowned Man; and therefore when the Friends of that Faction could not wreak their Diſpleaſure on him with any Politick Vexations, they ſet themſelves to do it by Eccleſiſtical ones. Accordingly when a Sentence of Baniſhment was paſſed on the Ringleaders of thoſe Diſturbances, who

—Maria & Terras, Cœlumq; profundum, Quippe ferant, Rapidi, ſecum, vertantq; per Auras;

many at the Church of Boſton, who were then that way too much inclined, moſt earneſtly ſollicited the Elders of that Church, whereof the Governour was a Member, to call him forth as an Offender for paſſing of that Sentence. The Elders were unwilling to do any ſuch thing; but the Governour underſtanding the Ferment among the People, took that occaſion to make a Speech in the Congregation to this Effect. 'Brethren, Underſtanding that ſome of you have deſired that I ſhould Anſwer for an Offence lately taken among you; had I been called upon ſo to do, I would, Firſt, Have adviſed with the Miniſters of the Country, whether the Church had Power to call in Queſtion the Civil Court; and I would, Secondly, Have adviſed with the reſt of the Court, whether I might diſcover their Counſels unto the Church. But though I know that the Reverend Elders of this Church, and ſome others, do very well apprehend that the Church cannot enquire into the Proceedings of the Court; yet for the Satisfaction of the weaker who do not apprehend it, I will declare my Mind concerning it. If the Church have any ſuch Power, they have it from the Lord Jeſus Chriſt; but the ‘Lord Jeſus Chriſt hath diſclaimed it, not only by Practice, but alſo by Precept, which we have in his Goſpel, Mat. 20. 25, 26. It is true indeed, that Magiſtrates, as they are Church-Members, are accountable unto the Church for their Failings; but that is when they are out of their Calling. When Uzziah would go offer Incenſe in the Temple, the Officers of the Church called him to an account, and withſtood him; but when Aſa put the Prophet in Priſon, the Officers of the Church did not call him to an account for that. If the Magiſtrate ſhall in a private way wrong any Man, the Church may call him to an Account for it; but if he be in Purſuance of a Courſe of Juſtice, though the thing that he does be unjuſt, yet he is not accountable for it before the Church. As for my ſelf I did nothing in the Cauſes of any of the Brethren, but by the Advice of the Elders of the Church. Moreover, in the Oath which I have taken there is this Clauſe, In all Cauſes wherein you are to give your Vote, you ſhall do as in your Judgment and Conſcience you ſhall ſee to be Juſt, and for the publick Good. And I am ſatisfied, it is moſt for the Glory of God, and the publick Good, that there has been ſuch a Sentence paſſed; yea, thoſe Brethren are ſo divided from the reſt of the Country in their Opinions and Practices, that it cannot ſtand with the publick Peace for them to continue with us; Abraham ſaw that Hagar and Iſhmael muſt be ſent away. By ſuch a Speech he marvellouſly convinced, ſatisfied and mollified the uneaſie Brethren of the Church; Sic cunctus Pelagi cecidit Fragor—. And after a little patient waiting, the differences all ſo wore away, that the Church, meerly as a Token of Reſpect unto the Governour, when he had newly met with ſome Loſſes in his Eſtate, ſent him a Preſent of ſeveral Hundreds of Pounds. Once more there was a time, when ſome active Spirits among the Deputies of the Colony, by their endeavours not only to make themſelves a Court of Judicature, but alſo to take away the Negative by which the Magiſtrates might check their Votes, had like by over-driving to have run the whole Government into ſomething too Democratical. And if there were a Town in Spain undermined by Coneys, another Town in Thrace deſtroyed by Moles, a Third in Greece ranverſed by Frogs, a Fourth in Germany ſubverted by Rats; I muſt on this Occaſion add, that there was a Country in America like to be confounded by a Swine. A certain ſtray Sow being found, was claimed by Two ſeveral Perſons with a Claim ſo equally maintained on both ſides, that after Six or Seven Years Hunting the Buſineſs, from one Court unto another, it was brought at laſt into the General Court, where the final Determination was, that it was impoſſible to proceed unto any Judgment in the Caſe. However in the debate of this Matter, the Negative of the Upper-Houſe upon the Lower in that Court was brought upon the Stage; and agitated with ſo hot a Zeal, that a little more and all had been in the Fire. In theſe Agitations the Governour was informed that an offence had been taken by ſome eminent Perſons, at certain Paſſages in a Diſcourſe by him written thereabout; whereupon with his uſual Condeſcendency, when he next came into the General Court, he made a Speech of this Import. ‘I underſtand, that ſome have taken Offence at ſomething that I have lately written; which Offence I deſire to remove now, and begin this Year in a reconciled State with you all. As for the Matter of my Writing, I had the Concurrence of my Brethren; it is a Point of Judgment which is not at my own diſpoſing. I have examined it over and over again, by ſuch Light as God has given me, from the Rules of Religion, Reaſon and Cuſtom; and I ſee no cauſe to Retract any thing of it: Wherefore I muſt enjoy my Liberty in that, as you do your ſelves. But for the Manner, this, and all that was blame-worthy in it, was wholly my own; and whatſoever I might alledge for my own Juſtification therein before Men, I wave it, as now ſetting my ſelf before another Judgment-Seat. However, what I wrote was upon great Provocation, and to vindicate my ſelf and others from great Aſperſion; yet that was no ſufficient Warrant for me to allow any Diſtemper of Spirit in my ſelf; and I doubt I have been too prodigal of my Brethren’s Reputation; I might have maintained my Cauſe without caſting any Blemiſh upon others, when I made that my Concluſion, And now let Religion and ſound Reaſon give Judgment in the Caſe; it look’d as if I arrogated too much unto my ſelf, and too little to others. And when I made that Profeſſion, That I would maintain what I wrote before all the World, though ſuch Words might modeſtly be ſpoken, yet I perceive an unbeſeeming Pride of my own Heart breathing in them. For theſe Failings I aſk Pardon both of God and Man.

Sic ait, & dicto citius Tumida Æquora placat,
Collectaſq; fugat Nubes, Solemq; reducit.

This acknowledging Diſpoſition in the Governour, made them all acknowledge, that he was truly a Man of an excellent Spirit. In fine, the Victories of an Alexander, an Hannibal, or a Cæſar over other Men, were not ſo Glorious, as the Victories of this great Man over himſelf, which alſo at laſt prov’d Victories over other Men.

§. 9. But the ſtormieſt of all the Trials that ever befel this Gentleman, was in the Year 1645. when he was in Title no more than Deputy-Governour of the Colony. If the famous Cato were Forty-four times call’d into Judgment, but as often acquitted; let it not be wondred, and if our Famous Winthrop were one time ſo. There hapning certain Seditious and Mutinous Practices in the Town of Hingham, the Deputy-Governour as legally as prudently interpoſed his Authority for the checking of them: Whereupon there followed ſuch an Enchantment chantment upon the minds of the Deputies in the General Court, that upon a ſcandalous Petition of the Delinquents unto them, wherein a pretended Invaſion made upon the Liberties of the People was complained of the Deputy-Governour, was moſt Irregularly call'd forth unto an Ignominous Hearing before them in a vaſt Aſſembly; whereto with a Sagacious Humilitude he conſented, although he ſhew'd them how he might have Refuſed it. The reſult of that Hearing was, That notwithſtanding the touchy Jealouſie of the People about their Liberties lay at the bottom of all this Proſecution, yet Mr. Winthrop was publickly Acquitted, and the Offenders were ſeverally Fined and Cenſured. But Mr. Winthrop then reſuming the Place of Deputy-Governour on the Bench, ſaw cauſe to ſpeak unto the Root of the Matter after this manner. ‘I ſhall not now ſpeak any thing about the paſt Proceedings of this Court, or the Perſons therein concerned. Only I bleſs God that I ſee an Iſſue of this troubleſome Affair. I am well ſatisfied that I was publickly Accuſed, and that I am now publickly Acquitted. But though I am juſtified before Men, yet it may be the Lord hath ſeen ſo much amiſs in my Adminiſtrations, as calls me to be humbled; and indeed for me to have been thus charged by Men, is it ſelf a Matter of Humiliation, whereof I deſire to make a right uſe before the Lord. If Miriam's Father ſpit in her Face, ſhe is to be Aſhamed. But give me leave before you go, to ſay ſomething that may rectifie the Opinions of many People, from whence the Diſtempers have riſen that have lately prevailed upon the Body of this People. The Queſtions that have troubled the Country have been about the Authority of the Magiſtracy, and the Liberty of the People. It is You who have called us unto this Office; but being thus called, we have our Authority from God; it is the Ordinance of God, and it hath the Image of God ſtamped upon it; and the contempt of it has been vindicated by God with terrible Examples of his Vengeance. I intreat you to conſider, That when you chuſe Magiſtrates, you take them from among your ſelves, Men ſubject unto like Paſſions with your ſelves. If you ſee our Infirmities, reflect on your own, and you will not be ſo ſevere Cenſurers of Ours. We count him a good Servant who breaks not his Covenant: The Covenant between Us and You, is the Oath you have taken of us, which is to this Purpoſe, That we ſhall govern you, and judge your Cauſes, according to God's Laws, and our own, according to our beſt Skill. As for our Skill, you muſt run the hazard of it; and if there be an Error, not in the Will, but only in the Skill, it becomes you to bear it. Nor would I have you to miſtake in the Point of your own Liberty. There is a Liberty of corrupt Nature, which is affected both by Men and Beaſts, to do what they liſt; and this Liberty is inconſiſtent with Authority, impatient of all Reſtraint; by this Liberty, Sumus Omnes Deteriores: 'Tis the Grand Enemy of Truth and Peace, and all the Ordinances of God are bent againſt it. But there is a Civil, a Moral, a Federal Liberty, which is the proper End and Object of Authority; it is a Liberty for that only which is juſt and good; for this Liberty you are to ſtand with the hazard of your very Lives; and whatſoever Croſſes it, is not Authority, but a Diſtemper thereof. This Liberty is maintained in a way of Subjection to Authority; and the Authority ſet over you, will in all Adminiſtrations for your good be quietly ſubmitted unto, by all but ſuch as have a Diſpoſition to ſhake off the Yoke, and loſe their true Liberty, by their murmuring at the Honour and Power of Authority.

The Spell that was upon the Eyes of the People being thus diſſolved, their diſtorted and enraged notions of things all vaniſhed; and the People would not afterwards entruſt the Helm of the Weather-beaten Bark in any other Hands, but Mr. Winthrop's, until he Died.

§. 10. Indeed ſuch was the Mixture of diſtant Qualities in him, as to make a moſt admirable Temper; and his having a certain Greatneſs of Soul, which rendered him Grave, Generous, Courageous, Reſolved, Well-applied, and every way a Gentleman in his Deameanour, did not hinder him from taking ſometimes the old Romans way to avoid Confuſions, namely, Cedendo; or from diſcouraging ſome things which are agreeable enough to moſt that wear the Name of Gentlemen. Hereof I will give no Inſtances, but only oppoſe two Paſſages of his Life.

In the Year 1632. the Governour, with his Paſtor Mr. Wilſon, and ſome other Gentlemen, to ſettle a good underſtanding between the Two Colonies, travelled as far as Plymouth, more than Forty Miles, through an Howling Wilderneſs, no better accommodated in thoſe early Days, than the Princes that in Solomon's time ſaw Servants on Horſeback, or than Genus and Species in the old Epigram, going on Foot. The difficulty of the Walk, was abundantly compenſated by the Honourable, firſt Reception, and then Diſmiſſion, which they found from the Rulers of Plymouth; and by the good Correſpondence thus eſtabliſhed between the New Colonies, who were like the floating Bottels wearing this Motto, Si Collidimur, Frangimur. But there were at this time in Plymouth two Miniſters, leavened ſo far with the Humours of the Rigid Separation, that they inſiſted vehemently upon the Unlawfulneſs of calling any unregenerate Man by the Name of Good-man ſuch an One, until by their indiſcreet urging of this Whimſey, the place began to be diſquieted. The wiſer People being troubled at theſe Trifles, they took the opportunity of Governour Winthrop's being there, to have the thing publickly propounded in the Congregation; who in anſwer thereunto, diſtinguiſhed between a Theological and a Moral Goodneſs; adding, that when Juries were firſt uſed in England, land, it was uſual for the Crier, after the Names of Perſons fit for that Service were called over, to bid them all, Attend, Good Men, and True; whence it grew to be a Civil Cuſtom in the Engliſh Nation, for Neighbours living by one another, to call one another Good-man ſuch an One : And it was pity now to make a ſtir about a Civil Cuſtom, ſo innocently introduced. And that Speech of Mr. Winthrop's put a laſting ſtop to the Little, Idle, Whimſical Conceits, then beginning to grow Obſtreperous. Nevertheleſs there was one Civil Cuſtom uſed in (and in few but) the Engliſh Nation, which this Gentleman did endeavour to aboliſh in this Country; and that was, The uſage of Drinking to one another. For although by Drinking to one another, no more is meant than an act of Courteſie, when one going to Drink, does Invite another to do ſo too, for the ſame Ends with himſelf; nevertheleſs the Governour (not altogether unlike to Cleomenes, of whom 'tis reported by Plutarch, ἄκοντι οὐδεὶς ποτήριον προσέφερε, Nolenti poculum nunquam præbuit,) conſidered the Impertinency and Inſignificancy of this Uſage, as to any of thoſe Ends that are uſually pretended for it; and that indeed it ordinarily ſerved for no Ends at all, but only to provoke Perſons unto unſeaſonable, and perhaps unreaſonable Drinking, and at laſt produce that abominable Health-Drinking, which the Fathers of old ſo ſeverely rebuked in the Pagans, and which the Papiſts themſelves do Condemn, when their Caſuiſts pronounce it, Peccatum mortale, provocare ad Æquales Calices, & Nefas Reſpondere. Wherefore in his own moſt Hoſpitable Houſe he left it off; not out of any ſilly or ſtingy Fancy, but meerly that by his Example a greater Temperance, with Liberty of Drinking, might be Recommended, and ſundry Inconveniences in Drinking avoided; and his Example accordingly began to be much followed by the ſober People in this Country, as it now alſo begins to be among Perſons of the Higheſt Rank in the Engliſh Nation it ſelf; until an Order of Court came to be made againſt that Ceremony in Drinking, and then the old Wont violently returned, with a Nitimur in Vetitum.

§. 11. Many were the Afflictions of this Righteous Man! He loſt much of his Eſtate in a Ship, and in an Houſe, quickly after his coming to New-England, beſides the Prodigious Expence of it in the Difficulties of his firſt coming hither. Afterwards his aſſiduous Application unto the Publick Affairs, (wherein Ipſe ſe non habuit, poſtquam Reſpublica eum Gubernatorem habere cæpit) made him ſo much to neglect his own private Intereſts, that an unjuſt Steward ran him 2500 l. in Debt before he was aware; for the Payment whereof he was forced, many Years before his Deceaſe, to ſell the moſt of what he had left unto him in the Country. Albeit, by the obſervable Bleſſing of God upon the Poſterity of this Liberal Man, his Children all of them came to fair Eſtates, and lived in good Faſhion and Credit. Moreover, he ſucceſſively Buried Three Wives; the Firſt of which was the Daughter and Heireſs of Mr. Forth, of Much-Stambridge in Eſſex, by whom he had Wiſdom with an Inheritance; and an excellent Son. The Second was the Daughter of Mr. William Clopton, of London, who Died with her Child, within a very little while. The Third was the Daughter of the truly Worſhipful Sir John Tyndal, who made it her whole Care to pleaſe, Firſt God, and then her Husband; and by whom he had Four Sons, which Survived and Honoured their Father. And unto all theſe, the Addition of the Diſtempers, ever now and then raiſed in the Country, procured unto him a very ſingular ſhare of Trouble; yea, ſo hard was the Meaſure which he found even among Pious Men, in the Temptations of a Wilderneſs, that when the Thunder and Lightning had ſmitten a Wind-mill, whereof he was Owner, ſome had ſuch things in their Heads, as publickly to Reproach this Charitableſt of Men, as if the Voice of the Almighty had rebuked, I know not what Oppreſſion, which they judged him Guilty of: Which things I would not have mentioned, but that the Inſtances may fortifie the Expectations of my beſt Readers for ſuch Afflictions.

§. 12. He that had been for his Attainments, as they ſaid of the bleſſed Macarius, a Παιδαριογέρων, An old Man, while a young One, and that had in his young Days met with many of thoſe Ill Days, whereof he could ſay, he had little Pleaſure in them; now found old Age in its Infirmities advancing Earlier upon him, than it came upon his much longer lived Progenitors. While he was yet Seven Years off of that which we call the grand Climacterical, he felt the Approaches of his Diſſolution; and finding he could ſay, he then wrote this account of himſelf, Age now comes upon me, and Infirmities therewithal, which makes me apprehend, that the time of my departure out of this World is not far off. However our times are all in the Lord's Hand, ſo as we need not trouble our Thoughts how long or ſhort they may be, but how we may be found Faithful when we are called for. But at laſt when that Year came, he took a Cold which turned into a Feaver, whereof he lay Sick about a Month, and in that Sickneſs, as it hath been obſerved, that there was allowed unto the Serpent the bruiſing of the Heel; and accordingly at the Heel or the Cloſe of our Lives the old Serpent will be Nibbling more than ever in our Lives before; and when the Devil ſees that we ſhall ſhortly be, where the wicked ceaſe from troubling, that wicked One will trouble us more than ever; ſo this eminent Saint now underwent ſharp Conflicts with the Tempter, whoſe Wrath grew Great, as the Time to exert it grew Short; and he was Buffetted with the Diſconſolate Thoughts of Black and Sore Deſertions, wherein he could uſe that ſad Repreſentation of his own Condition.

Nuper Eram Judex; Jam Judicor; Ante Tribunat,
Subſiſtens paveo, Judicor ipſe modo.

But it was not long before thoſe Clouds were Diſpelled, and he enjoyed in his Holy Soul the Great Conſolations of God! While he thus lay Ripening for Heaven, he did out of Obedience unto the Ordinance of our Lord, ſend for the Elders of the Church to Pray with him; yea, they and the whole Church Faſted as well as Prayed for him; and in that Faſt the venerable Cotton Preached on Pſal. 35. 13, 14. When they were Sick, I humbled my ſelf with Faſting; I behaved my ſelf as though he had been my Friend or Brother; I bowed down heavily, as one that Mourned for his Mother: From whence I find him raiſing that Obſervation, The Sickneſs of one that is to us as a Friend, a Brother, a Mother, is a juſt occaſion of deep humbling our Souls with Faſting and Prayer; and making this Application, 'Upon this Occaſion we are now to attend this Duty for a Governour, who has been to us as a Friend in his Counſel for all things, and Help for our Bodies by Phyſick, for our Eſtates by Law, and of whom there was no fear of his becoming an Enemy, like the Friends of David: A Governour who has been unto us as a Brother; not uſurping Authority over the Church; often ſpeaking his Advice, and often contradicted, even by Young Men, and ſome of low degree; yet not replying, but offering Satisfaction alſo when any ſuppoſed Offences have ariſen; a Governour who has been unto us as a Mother, Parent-like diſtributing his Goods to Brethren and Neighbours at his firſt coming; and gently bearing our Infirmities without taking notice of them.

Such a Governour after he had been more than Ten ſeveral times by the People choſen their Governour, was New-England now to loſe; who having, like Jacob, firſt left his Council and Bleſſing with his Children gathered about his Bed-ſide; and, like David, ſerved his Generation by the Will of God, he gave up the Ghoſt, and fell aſleep on March 26. 1649. Having, like the dying Emperour Valentinian, this above all his other Victories for his Triumphs, His overcoming of himſelf.

The Words of Joſephus about Nehemiah, the Governour of Iſrael, we will now uſe upon this Governour of New-England, as his

§. 1. ONE as well acquainted with the Matter, as Iſocrates, informs us, That among the Judges of Areopagus none were admitted, πλὴν ὁι καλῶς γέγονότες, ϗ πολλὴν ἀρετὴν ϗ σωφροσύνην ἐν τῷ βίω ἐνδεδειγμένοι, unleſs they were Nobly Born, and Eminently Exemplary for a Virtuous and a Sober Life. The Report may be truly made concerning the Judges of New-England, tho' they were not Nobly Born, yet they were generally Well Born; and by being Eminently Exemplary for a Virtuous and a Sober Life, gave Demonſtration that they were New-born. Some Account of them is now more particularly to be Endeavoured.

We read concerning Saul, [1 Sam. 15. 12.] He ſet up himſelf a place. The Hebrew Word, יָד there uſed, ſignifies A Monumental Pillar. It is accordingly promiſed unto them who pleaſe God, [Iſa. 56. 5.] That they ſhall have a Place and a Name in the Houſe of God; that is to ſay, a Pillar Erected for Fame in the Church of God. And it ſhall be fulfilled in what ſhall now be done for our Governours in this our Church-Hiſtory. Even while the Maſſachuſettenſians had a Winthrop for their Governour, they could not reſtrain the Channel of their Affections from running towards another Gentleman in their Elections for the Year 1634. particularly, when they choſe unto the Place of Governour Thomas Dudley, Eſq; one whom after the Death of the Gentleman abovementioned, they again and again Voted into the Chief Place of Government. He was Born at the Town of Northampton, in the Year 1574. the only Son of Captain Roger Dudley, who being Slain in the Wars, left this our Thomas, with his only Siſter, for the Father of the Orphans, to take them up. In the Family of the Earl of Northampton he had opportunity perfectly to learn the Points of Good Behaviour; and here having fitted himſelf to do many other Benefits unto the World, he next became a Clerk unto Judge Nichols, who being his Kinſman by the Mother's Side, therefore took the more ſpecial notice of him. From his Relation to this Judge, he had and uſed an Advantage to attain ſuch a Skill in the Law, as was of great Advantage to him in the future changes of his Life; and the Judge would have preferred him unto the higher Employments, whereto his prompt Wit not a little recommended him, if he had not been by Death prevented. But before he could appear to do much at the Pen, for which he was very well Accompliſhed, he was called upon to do ſomething at the Sword; for being a Young Gentlemen well-known for his Ingenuity, Courage and Conduct, when there were Soldiers to be raiſed by Order from Queen Elizabeth for the French Service, in the time of King Henry the Fourth, the Young Sparks about Northampton were none of them willing to enter into the Service, until a Commiſſion was given unto our Young Dudley to be their Captain; and then preſently there were Fourſcore that Liſted under him. At the Head of theſe he went over into the Low Countries, which was then an Academy of Arms, as well as Arts; and thus he came to furniſh himſelf with Endowments for the Field, as well as for the Bench. The Poſt aſſigned unto him with his Company, was after at the Siege of Amiens, before which the King himſelf was now Encamped; but the Providence of God ſo Ordered it, that when both Parties were drawn forth in Order to Battel, a Treaty of Peace was vigorouſly ſet on Foot, which diverted the Battel that was expected. Captain Dudley hereupon returned into England, and ſettling himſelf about Northampton, he Married a Gentlewoman whoſe Extract and Eſtate were Conſiderable; and the Scituation of his Habitation after this helped him to enjoy the Miniſtry of Mr. Dod, Mr. Cleaver, Mr. Winſton, and Mr. Hilderſham, all of them Excellent and Renowned Men; which Puritan Miniſtry ſo ſeaſoned his Heart with a Senſe of Religion, that he was a Devout and Serious Chriſtian, and a Follower of the Miniſters that moſt effectually Preached Real Chriſtianity all the reſt of his Days. The Spirit of Real Chriſtianity in him now alſo diſpoſed him unto Sober Non-Conformity; and from this time, although none more hated the Fanaticiſms and Enthuſiaſms of Wild Opinioniſts, he became a Judicious Diſſenter from the Unſcriptural Ceremonies retained in the Church of England. It was not long after this that the Lord Say, the Lord Compton, and other Perſons of Quality, made ſuch Obſervations of him, as to commend him unto the Service of the Earl of Lincoln, who was then a Young Man, and newly come unto the Poſſeſſion of his Earldom, and of what belonged thereunto. The Grandfather of this Noble Perſon had left his Heirs under vaſt Entanglements, out of which his Father was never able to Extricate himſelf; ſo that the Difficulties and Incumbrances were now devolved upon this Theophilus, which cauſed him to apply himſelf unto this our Dudley for his Aſſiſtances, who proved ſo Able, and Careful, and Faithful a Steward unto him, that within a little while the Debts of near Twenty Thouſand Pounds, whereinto the Young Earl found himſelf deſperately Ingulphed, were happily waded through; and by his Means alſo a Match was procured between the Young Earl and the Daughter of the Lord Say, who proved a moſt Virtuous Lady, and a great Bleſſing to the whole Family. But the Earl finding Mr. Dudley to be a Perſon of more than ordinary Diſcretion, he would rarely, if ever, do any Matter of any Moment without his Advice; but ſome into whoſe Hands there fell ſome of his Manuſcripts after his leaving of the Earl's Family, found a Paſſage to this purpoſe. The Eſtate of the Earl of Lincoln, I found ſo, and ſo, much in Debt, which I have diſcharged, and have raiſed the Rents unto ſo many Hundreds Per Annum; God will, I truſt, bleſs me and mine in ſuch a manner. I can, as ſometimes Nehemiah did, appeal unto God, who knows the Hearts of all Men, that I have with Integrity diſcharged the Duty of my Place before him.

I had prepared and intended a more particular Account of this Gentleman; but not having any opportunity to commit it unto the Peruſal of any Deſcended from him, (unto whom I am told it will be unacceptable for me to Publiſh any thing of this kind, by them not Peruſed) I have laid it aſide, and ſummed all up in this more General Account.

It was about Nine or Ten Years, that Mr. Dudley continued a Steward unto the Earl of Lincoln; but then growing deſirous of a more private Life, he retired unto Boſton, where the Acquaintance and Miniſtry of Mr. Cotton became no little Satisfaction unto him. Nevertheleſs the Earl of Lincoln found that he could be no more without Mr. Dudley, than Pharaoh without his Joſeph, and prevailed with him to reſume his former Employment, until the Storm of Perſecution upon the Non-Conformiſts cauſed many Men of great Worth to Tranſport themſelves into New-England. Mr. Dudley was not the leaſt of the Worthy Men that bore a part in this Tranſportation, in hopes that in an American Wilderneſs they might peaceably attend and enjoy the pure Worſhip of the Lord Jeſus Chriſt. When the firſt Undertakers for that Plantation came to know him, they ſoon ſaw that in him, that cauſed them to chuſe him their Deputy-Governour, in which Capacity he arrived unto theſe Coaſts in the Year 1630. and had no ſmall ſhare in the Diſtreſſes of that Young Plantation, whereof an account by him written to the Counteſs of Lincoln has been ſince Publiſhed unto the World. Here his Wiſdom in managing the moſt weighty and thorny Affairs was often ſignalized: His Juſtice was a perpetual Terror to Evil Doers: His Courage procured his being the firſt Major-General of the Colony, when they began to put themſelves into a Military Figure. His Orthodox Piety had no little Influence into the Deliverance of the Country, from the Contagion of the Famaliſtical Errors, which had like to have overturned all. He dwelt firſt at Cambridge; bridge; but upon Mr. Hooker's removal to Hartford, he removed to Ipſwich; nevertheleſs, upon the Importunity and Neceſſity of the Government for his coming to dwell nearer the Center of the whole, he fixed his Habitation at Roxbury, Two Miles out of Boſton, where he was always at Hand upon the Publick Exigencies. Here he died, July 31. 1653. in the Seventy-Seventh Year of his Age; and there were found after his Death, in his Pocket, theſe Lines of his own Compoſing, which may ſerve to make up what may be wanting in the Character already given him.

Dim Eyes, Deaf Ears, Cold Stomach, ſhew
My Diſſolution is in View.
Eleven times Seven near liv'd have I,
And now God calls, I willing Die.
My Shuttle's ſhot, my Race is run,
My Sun is ſet, my Day is done.
My Span is meaſur'd, Tale is told,
My Flower is faded, and grown old.
My Dream is vaniſh'd, Shadow's fled,
My Soul with Chriſt, my Body Dead.
Farewel Dear Wife, Children and Friends,
Hate Hereſie, make Bleſſed Ends.
Bear Poverty, live with good Men;
So ſhall we live with Joy agen.
Let Men of God in Courts and Churches watch
O're ſuch as do a Toleration hatch,
Leſt that Ill Egg bring forth a Cockatrice,
To poiſon all with Hereſie and Vice.
If Men be left, and otherwiſe Combine,
My Epitaph's, I Dy'd no Libertine.

But when I mention the Poetry of this Gentleman as one of his Accompliſhments, I muſt not leave unmentioned the Fame with which the Poems of one deſcended from him have been Celebrated in both Englands. If the rare Learning of a Daughter, was not the leaſt of thoſe bright things that adorn'd no leſs a Judge of England than Sir Thomas More; it muſt now be ſaid, that a Judge of New-England, namely, Thomas Dudley, Eſq; had a Daughter (beſides other Children) to be a Crown unto him. Reader, America juſtly admires the Learned Women of the other Hemiſphere. She has heard of thoſe that were Tutoreſſes to the Old Profeſſors of all Philoſophy: She hath heard of Hippatia, who formerly taught the Liberal Arts; and of Sarocchia, who more lately was very often the Moderatrix in the Diſputations of the Learned Men of Rome: She has been told of the Three Corinna's, which equall'd, if not excell'd, the moſt Celebrated Poets of their Time: She has been told of the Empreſs Endocia, who Compoſed Poetical Paraphraſes on Divers Parts of the Bible; and of Roſuida, who wrote the Lives of Holy Men; and of Pamphilia, who wrote other Hiſtories unto the Life: The Writings of the moſt Renowned Anna Maria Schurnian, have come over unto her. But ſhe now prays, that into ſuch Catalogues of Authoreſſes, as Beverovicius, Hottinger, and Voetius, have given unto the World, there may be a room now given unto Madam Ann Bradſtreet, the Daughter of our Governour Dudley, and the Conſort of our Governour Bradſtreet, whoſe Poems, divers times Printed, have afforded a grateful Entertainment unto the Ingenious, and a Monument for her Memory beyond the Statelieſt Marbles. It was upon theſe Poems that an Ingenious Perſon beſtowed this Epigram:

Now I believe Tradition, which doth call
The Muſes, Virtues, Graces, Females all.
Only they are not Nine, Eleven, or Three;
Our Auth'reſs proves them but an Unity.
Mankind, take up ſome Bluſhes on the ſcore;
Monopolize Perfection hence no more.
In your own Arts confeſs your ſelves outdone;
The Moon hath totally Eclips'd the Sun:
Not with her Sable Mantle muffling him,
But her bright Silver makes his Gold look dim:
Juſt as his Beams force our pale Lamps to wink,
And Earthly Fires within their Aſhes ſhrink.

What elſe might be ſaid of Mr. Dudley, the Reader ſhall Conſtrue from the Enſuing

§. 2. In the Year 1635. at the Anniverſary Election, the Freemen of the Colony teſtified their grateful Eſteem of Mr. John Haines, a Worthy Gentleman, who had been very Serviceable to the Intereſts of the Colony, by chuſing him their Governour. Of him in an Ancient Manuſcript I find this Teſtimony given; To him is New-England many ways beholden; had he done no more but ſtilled a Storm of Diſſention, which broke forth in the beginning of his Government; he had done enough to Endear our Hearts unto him, and to account that Day happy when he took the Reins of Government into his Hands. But this Pious, Humble, Well-bred Gentleman, removing afterwards into Connecticut, he took his turn with Mr. Edward Hopkins, in being every other Year the Governour of that Colony. And as he was a great Friend of Peace while he lived, ſo at his Death he entred into that Peace which attends the End of the perfect and upright Man, leaving behind him the Character ſometimes given of a Greater, tho' not a Better, Man, [Veſpaſian] Bonis Legibus multa correxit, ſed exemplo probæ vitæ plus effecit apud populum.

§. 3. Near Twenty Ships from Europe viſited New-England in the Year 1635. and in one of them was Mr. Henry Vane, (afterward Sir Henry Vane) an Accompliſhed Young Gentleman, whoſe Father was much againſt his coming to New-England; but the King, upon Information of his Diſpoſition, commanded him to allow his Son's Voyage hither, with a Conſent for his continuing Three Years in this Part of the World. Although his Buſineſs had ſome Relation to the Plantation of Connecticut, yet in the Year 1636. the Maſſachuſet-Colony choſe him their Governour. And now, Reader, I am as much a Seeker for his Character, as many have taken him to be a Seeker in Religion, while no leſs Perſons than Dr. Manton have not been to ſeek for the Cenſure of A Wicked Book, with which they have noted the Myſtical Divinity, in the Book of this Knight, Entituled, The Retired Man's Meditations. There has been a ſtrange variety of Tranſlations beſtowed upon the Hebrew Names of ſome Animals mentioned in the Bible: Kippod, for Inſtance, which we tranſlate a Bittern; R. Salomon will have to be an Owl, but Luther will have it be an Eagle, while Paynin will have it be an Hedg-hog, but R. Kimchi will have it a Snail; ſuch a Variety of Opinions and Reſentments has the Name of this Gentleman fallen under; while ſome have counted him an Eminent Chriſtian, and others have counted him almoſt an Heretick; ſome have counted him a Renowned Patriot, and others an Infamous Traitor. If Barak ſignifie both to Bleſs and to Curſe; and Ευλογειν be of the ſame Significancy with Βλασφημειν, in ſuch Philology as that of Suidas and Heſychius; the Uſage which the Memory of this Gentleman has met withal, ſeems to have been Accommodated unto that Indifferency of Signification in the Terms for ſuch an Uſage.

On the one ſide, I find an Old New-Engliſh Manuſcript thus reflecting, His Election will remain as a Blemiſh to their Judgments who did Elect him, while New-England remains a Nation; for he coming from Old-England, a Young Unexperienced Gentleman, (and as young in Judgment as he was in Years) by the Induſtry of ſome that could do much, and thought by him to play their own Game, was preſently Elected Governour; and before he was ſcarce warm in his Seat, began to Broach New Tenets; and theſe were agitated with as much Violence, as if the Welfare of New-England muſt have been Sacrificed rather than theſe not take place. But the Wiſdom of the State put a Period to his Government; neceſſity cauſed them to undo the Works of their own Hands, and leave us a Caveat, that all good Men are not fit for Government. But on the other ſide, the Hiſtorian who has Printed The Trial of Sir Henry Vane, Knt. at the King's Bench, Weſtminſter, June 2. and 6. 1662. with other occaſional Speeches; alſo his Speech and Prayer on the Scaffold, has given us in him the Picture of nothing leſs than an Heroe. He ſeems indeed by that Story to have ſuffered Hardly enough, but no Man can deny that he ſuffered Bravely: the Engliſh Nation has not often ſeen more of Roman, (and indeed more than Roman) Gallantry, out-facing Death in the moſt pompous Terrors of it. A great Royaliſt, preſent, at his Decollation, ſwore, He died like a Prince: He could ſay, I bleſs the Lord I am ſo far from being affrighted at Death, that I find it rather ſhrink from me, than I from it! He could ſay, Ten Thouſand Deaths rather than Defile my Conſcience; the Chaſtity and Purity of which I value beyond all this World; I would not for Ten Thouſand Worlds part with the Peace and Satiſfaction I have in my own Heart. When mention was made of the Difficult Proceeding againſt him, all his reply was, Alas, what a Do do they keep to make a poor Creature like his Saviour! On the Scaffold they did, by the Blaſt of Trumpets in his Face, with much Incivility, hinder him from ſpeaking what he intended; which Incivility he aforehand ſuſpecting, committed a true Copy of it unto a Friend before his going thither; the laſt Words whereof were theſe, As my laſt Words I leave this with you, That as the Preſent Storm we now lye under, and the dark Clouds that yet hang over the Reformed Churches of Chriſt, (which are coming thicker and thicker for a Seaſon) were not unforeſeen by me for many Years paſt; (as ſome Writings of mine declare) ſo the coming of Chriſt in theſe Clouds, in Order to a ſpeedy and ſudden revival of his Cauſe, and ſpreading his Kingdom over the Face of the whole Earth, is moſt clear to the Eye of my Faith, even that Faith in which I Die. His Execution was June 14. 1662. about the Fiftieth Year of his Age.

§. 4. After the Death of Mr. Dudley, the Notice and Reſpect of the Colony fell chiefly on Mr. John Endicot, who after many Services done for the Colony, even before it was yet a Colony, as well as when he ſaw it grown into a Populous Nation, under his Prudent and Equal Government, expired in a good Old Age, and was Honourably Interr'd at Boſton, March 23. 1665.

The Gentleman that ſucceeded Mr. Endicot, was Mr. Richard Bellingham, one who was bred a Lawyer, and one who lived beyond Eighty, well eſteemed for his laudable Qualities; but as the Thebans made the Statues of their Magiſtrates without Hands, importing that they muſt be no Takers; in this faſhion muſt be formed the Statue for this Gentleman; for among all his Virtues, he was noted for none more, than for his notable and perpetual hatred of a Bribe, which gave him, with his Country, the Reputation of Old Claimed by Pericles, to be, φιλόπολίς τε καὶ χρημάτων κρείσσων· Civitatis Amans, & ad pecunias Invictus. And as he never took any from any one living; ſo he neither could nor would have given any to Death; but in the latter end of the Year 1672. he had his Soul gathered not with Sinners, whoſe Right Hand is full of Bribes, but with ſuch as walk in their uprightneſs.

The Gentleman that ſucceeded Mr. Bellingham, was Mr. John Leveret, one to whom the Affections of the Freemen were ſignalized, in his quick advances through the leſſer Stages of Office and Honour unto the higheſt in the Country; and one whoſe Courage had been as much Recommended by Martial Actions abroad in his Younger Years, as his Wiſdom and Juſtice were now at Home in his Elder. The Anniverſary Election conſtantly kept him at the Helm from the time of his firſt Sitting there, until March 16. 1678. when Mortality having firſt put him on ſevere Trials of his Paſſive-Courage, (much more difficult than the Active) in pains of the Stone, releaſed him.

Pater Patriæ: Or, The LIFE of SIMON BRADSTREET, Eſq;

-----Extinctus amabitur idem.

THE Gentleman that ſucceeded Mr. Leveret, was Mr. Simon Bradſtreet, the Son of a Miniſter in Lincolnſhire, who was always a Non-Conformiſt at home, as well as when Preacher at Middleburgh abroad. Him the New-Englanders in their Addreſſes full of profound Reſpects unto him, have with good reaſon called, The venerable Mordecai of his Country. He was born at Horbling, March 1603. His Father (who was the Son of a Suffolk Gentleman of a fine Eſtate) was one of the Firſt Fellows in Immanuel-Colledge, under Dr. Chaderton, and one afterwards highly eſteemed by Mr. Cotton, and by Dr. Preſton. Our Bradſtreet was brought up at the Grammar-School, until he was about Fourteen Years Old; and then the Death of his Father put a ſtop for the preſent unto the Deſigns of his further Education. But according to the Faith of his Dying Father, that he ſhould be well provided for, he was within Two or Three Years after this taken into the Religious Family of the Earl of Lincoln, (the beſt Family of any Nobleman then in England,) where he ſpent about Eight Years under the Direction of Mr. Thomas Dudley, ſuſtaining ſucceſſively divers Offices. Dr. Preſton then (who had been my Lord's Tutor) moved my Lord, that Mr. Bradſtreet might have their permiſſion to come unto Immanuel Colledge, in the Capacity of Governour to the Lord Rich, the Son of the Earl of Warwick; which they granting, he went with the Doctor to Cambridge, who provided a Chamber for him, with Advice that he ſhould apply himſelf to Study until my Lord's Arrival. But he afterwards in a Writing of his, now in my Hands, made this humble Complaint; I met with many Obſtacles to my Study in Cambridge; the Earl of Lincoln had a Brother there, who often called me forth upon Paſtimes. Divers Maſters of Art, and other Scholars alſo, conſtantly met, where we ſpent moſt part of the Afternoons many times in Diſcourſe to little purpoſe or profit; but that ſeemed an eaſie and pleaſant Life then, which too late I repented. My Lord Rich not coming to the Univerſity, Mr. Bradſtreet returned after a Year to the Earl of Lincolns; and Mr. Dudley then removing to Boſton, his Place of Steward unto the Earl was conferred on Mr. Bradſtreet. Afterwards he with much ado obtained the Earl's leave to Anſwer the Deſires of the Aged and Pious Counteſs of Warwick, that he would accept the Stewardſhip of her Noble Family, which as the former he diſcharged with an Exemplary Diſcretion and Fidelity. Here he Married the Daughter of Mr. Dudley, by whoſe perſwaſion he came in Company with him to New-England, where he ſpent all the reſt of his Days, Honourably ſerving his Generation. It was counted a ſingular Favour of Heaven unto Richard Chamond, Eſq; one of England's Worthies, that he was a Juſtice of Peace near Threeſcore Years; but of Simon Bradſtreet, Eſq; one of New-England's Worthies, there can more than this be ſaid; for he was choſen a Magiſtrate of New-England before New-England it ſelf came into New-England; even in their firſt great Voyage thither Anno 1630. and ſo he continued annually choſen; ſometimes alſo their Secretary, and at laſt their Governour, until the Colony had a ſhare in the general Shipwrack of Charters, which the Reign of King Charles II. brought upon the whole Engliſh Nation. Mr. Joſeph Dudley was placed, Anno 1685. as Preſident over the Territory for a few Months, when the Judgment that was entred againſt the Charter gave unto the late King James II. an opportunity to make what Alterations he pleaſed upon the Order of things, under which the Country had ſo long been Flouriſhing. But when the ſhort Preſidentſhip of that New-Engliſh and well Acccompliſhed Gentleman, the Son of Mr. Thomas Dudley abovementioned, was expired, I am not in a Diſpoſition here to relate what was the Condition of the Colony, until the Revolution whereto their Condition compell'd them. Only I have ſometimes, not without Amazement, thought of the Repreſentation which a Celebrated Magician made unto Catherine de Medicis, the French Queen, whoſe Impious Curioſity led her to deſire of him a Magical Exhibition of all the Kings that had hitherto Reigned in France, and yet were to Reign. The Shapes of all the Kings, even unto the Husband of that Queen ſucceſſively ſhowed themſelves, in the Enchanted Circle, in which that Conjurer had made his Invocations, and they took as many Turns as there had been Years in their Government. The Kings that were to come, did then in like manner ſucceſſively come upon the Stage, namely, Francis II. Charles IX. Henry III. Henry IV. which being done, then Two Cardinals, Richlieu and Mazarine, in Red Hats, became viſible in the Spectacle: But after thoſe Cardinals, there entred Wolves, Bears, Tygers, and Lions, to conſummate the Entertainment. If the People of New-England had not Imagined, that a Number of as Rapacious Animals were at laſt come into their Government, I ſuppoſe they would not have made ſuch a Revolution as they did, on April 18. 1689. in conformity to the Pattern which the Engliſh Nation was then ſetting before them. Nevertheleſs, I have nothing in this Paragraph of our Hiſtory to Report of it, but that Mr. Bradſtreet was at this time alive; whoſe Paternal Compaſſions for a Country, thus remarkably his own, would not permit him to decline his Return unto his former Seat in the Government, upon the Unanimous Invitation of the People thereunto. It was a Remark then generally made upon him, That though he were then well towards Ninety Years of Age, his intellectual force was hardly abated, but he retained a Vigour and Wiſdom that would have recommended a younger Man to the Government of a greater Colony. And the wonderful Difficulties, through which the Colony under his diſcreet Conduct waded, until the Arrival of his Excellency, Sir William Phips, with a Commiſſion for the Government, and a New Charter in the Year 1692. gave a Remarkable Demonſtration of it. Yea, this Honourable Neſtor of New-England, in the Year 1696. was yet alive; and as Georgius Leontinus, who lived until he was an Hundred and Eight Years of Age, being aſked by what means he attained unto ſuch an Age, anſwered, By my not Living Voluptuouſly; thus this excellent Perſon attained his good old Age, in part, By Living very Temperately. And the New-Englanders would have counted it their Satisfaction, if like Arganthonius, who had been Fourſcore Years the Governour of the Tarteſſians, he might have lived unto the Age of an Hundred and Twenty; or, even unto the Age of Johannes de Temporibus, who was Knighted by the Emperour Charlemaign, and yet was Living till the Emperour Conrade, and ſaw, they ſay, no fewer Years than Three Hundred Threeſcore and One. Though, To be Diſſolved and be with Chriſt, was the Satisfaction which this our Macrobius himſelf was with a weary Soul now waiting and longing for; and Chriſt at length granted it unto him, on March 27, 1697. Then it was, that one of the oldeſt Servants that God and the King had upon Earth, drew his Laſt, in the very place where he drew his Firſt, American Breath. He Died at Salem, in a Troubleſome Time, and entred into everlaſting Peace. And in Imitation of what the Roman Orator ſaid upon the Death of Craſſus, I will venture to ſay, Fuit hoc, luctuoſum ſuis, Acerbum Patriæ, Grave Bonis Omnibus: Sed ii tamen Rempublicam caſus Secuti ſunt, ut mihi non Erepta Bradſtreeto Vita, ſed donata mors eſſe videatur.

The Epitaph on that famous Lawyer, Simon Piſtorius, we will now Employ for this Eminently Prudent and Upright Adminiſtrator of our Laws.

THE Freemen of New-England had a great variety of Worthy Men, among whom they might pick and chuſe a Number of MAGISTRATES to be the Aſſiſtants of their GOVERNOURS, both in directing the General Affairs of the Land, and in diſpenſing of Juſtice unto the People. But they wiſely made few Alterations in their Annual Elections; and they thereby ſhew'd their Satisfaction in the wiſe and good Conduct of thoſe whom they had Elected. If they called ſome few of their Magiſtrates from the Plough to the Bench, ſo the Old Romans did ſome of their Dictators; yea, the greateſt Kings in the World once carried Plough-ſhares on the top of their Scepters. However, the Inhabitants of New-England never were ſo unhappy as the Inhabitants of Norcia, a Town ſcarce Ten Leagues from Rome; where they do at this Day chuſe their own Magiſtrates, but uſe an exact Care, That no Man who is able to Write, or to Read, ſhall be capable of any ſhare in the Government. The Magiſtrates of New-England have been of a better Education. Indeed, ſeveral deſerving Perſons, who were joined as Aſſociates and Commiſſioners unto theſe, for the more effectual Execution of the Laws in ſome Emergencies, cannot be brought into our Catalogue; but the Names of all our Magiſtrates, with the Times when I find their firſt Advancement unto that Character, are theſe.

That theſe Names are proper and worthy to be found in our Church-Hiſtory, will be acknowledged, when it is conſidered, not only that they were the Members of Congregational Churches, and by the Members of the Churches choſen to be the Rulers of the Commonwealth, and that their exemplary Behaviour in their Magiſtracy was generally ſuch as to adorn the Doctrine of God our Saviour, and according to the Old Jewiſh Wiſhes, prohibitum eſt Homini, inſtar principis Dominari ſuper populum, & cum elatione Spiritus, ſed, בעכוה ויראה cum manſuetudine ac Timore: But alſo that their Love to, and Zeal for, and Care of theſe Churches, was not the leaſt part of their Character.

The Inſtances of their Concern for the Welfare of the Churches were innumerable. I will ſingle out but one from the reſt, becauſe of ſome Singular Subſerviency to the Deſigns of our Church-Hiſtory, therein to be propoſ'd. I'll do it only by Tranſcribing an Inſtrument, publiſhed Anno 1668. in ſuch Terms as theſe.

To the Elders and Miniſters of every Town within the Juriſdiction of the Maſſachuſets in New-England, the Governour and Council ſendeth Greeting.

Reverend and Beloved in the Lord,

‘WE find in the Examples of Holy Scripture, that Magiſtrates have not only excited and commanded all the People under their Government, to ſeek the Lord God of their Fathers, and do the Law and Commandment, (2. Chron. 14. 2, 3, 4. Ezra 7. 25, 26, 27.) but alſo ſtirred up and ſent forth the Levites, accompanied with other Principal Men, to Teach the good Knowledge of the Lord throughout all the Cities, (2. Chron. 17. 6, 7, 8, 9.) which Endeavours have been Crowned with the Bleſſing of God.

‘Alſo we find that our Brethren of the Congregational Perſwaſion in England, have made a good Profeſſion in their Book, Entituled, A Declaration of their Faith and Order, (Page 59. Sect. 14.) where they ſay, That altho' Paſtors and Teachers ſtand eſpecially related unto their particular Churches, yet they ought not to neglect others Living within their Parochial Bounds; but beſides their conſtant publick Preaching to them, they ought to enquire after their profiting by the Word, Inſtructing them in, and Preſſing upon them, (whether Young or Old) the great Doctrines of the Goſpel, even perſonally and particularly, ſo far as their Strength and Time will permit.

‘We hope that ſundry of you need not a Spur in theſe things, but are conſcienciouſly careful to do your Duty. Yet, foraſmuch as we have cauſe to fear that there is too much Neglect in many places, notwithſtanding the Laws long ſince provided therein, we do therefore think it our Duty to emit this Declaration unto you, earneſtly Deſiring, and, in the Bowels of our Lord Jeſus, requiring you to be very Diligent and Careful to Catechiſe and Inſtruct all People (eſpecially the Youth) under your Charge, in the ſound Principles of Chriſtian Religion; and that not only in Publick, but privately from Houſe to Houſe, as Bleſſed Paul did; (Act. 20. 20.) or at leaſt, Three, Four, or more Families meeting together, as Time and Strength may permit; taking to your Aſſiſtance ſuch godly and grave Perſons as to you may ſeem moſt expedient: And alſo that you Labour to Inform your ſelves (as much as may be meet) how your Hearers do profit by the Word of God, and how their Converſations do agree therewith; and whether the Youth are Taught to Read the Engliſh Tongue: Taking all occaſions to apply ſuitable Exhortations particularly unto them, for the Rebuke of thoſe that do evil, and the Encouragement of them that do well.

‘The effectual and conſtant Proſecution hereof, we hope will have a Tendency to promote the Salvation of Souls; to ſuppreſs the Growth of Sin and Profaneneſs; to beget more Love and Unity among the People, and more Reverence and Eſteem of the Miniſtry: And it will aſſuredly be to the enlargement of your Crown, and Recompence in Eternal Glory.

Given at Boſton, the 10*th of* March, 1668.

Ordered to be Printed, and ſent accordingly.

Superiores ſint, qui ſuperiores eſſe ſciunt.

§. I. WHEN the Great God of Heaven had carried his Peculiar People into a Wilderneſs, the Theocracy, wherein he became (as he was for that Reaſon ſtiled) The Lord of Hoſts, unto them and the Four Squadrons of their Army, was moſt eminently diſplay'd in his Enacting of their Laws, his Directing of their Wars, and his Electing and Inſpiring of their Judges. In ſome reſemblance hereunto, when Four Colonies of Chriſtians had marched like ſo many Hoſts under the Conduct of the good Spirit of our Lord Jeſus Chriſt into an American Wilderneſs, there were ſeveral Inſtances wherein that Army of Confeſſors was under a Theocracy: For their Laws were ſtill Enacted, and their Wars were ſtill Directed by the Voice of God, as far as they underſtood it, ſpeaking from the Oracle of the Scriptures; and though their Judges were ſtill Elected by themſelves, and not Inſpired with ſuch extraordinary Influences as carried them of Old, yet theſe alſo being ſingularly furniſhed and offered by the ſpecial Providence of God unto the Government of his New-Engliſh People, were ſo eminently acted by His Graces, and His Precepts, in the Diſcharge of their Government, that the Bleſſed People were ſtill ſenſibly Governed by the Lord of All. Now among the Firſt Judges of New-England, was Edward Hopkins, Eſq; in whoſe time the Colony of Connecticut was favoured with Judges as at the firſt; and put under the Power of thoſe with whom it was a Maxim, Gratius eſt pietatis Nomen, quam poteſtatis.

§. 2. The Deſcent and Breeding of Mr. Edward Hopkins, (who was Born, I think, near Shrowsbury, about the Year 1600.) firſt fitted him for the Condition of a Turky-Merchant, in London; where he lived ſeveral Years in good Faſhion and Eſteem, until a powerful Party in the Church of England, then reſolving not only to ſeparate from the Communion of all the Faithful that were Averſe to certain confeſſedly unſcriptural and uninſtituted Rites in the Worſhip of God, but alſo to Perſecute with deſtroying Severities thoſe that were Non-Conformiſts thereunto, compelled a conſiderable Number of good Men to ſeek a ſhelter among the Salvages of America. Among theſe, and with his Excellent Father-in-Law, Mr. Theophilus Eaton, he came to New-England; where then removing from the Maſſachuſet-Bay unto Hartford upon Connecticut-River, he became a Ruler and Pillar of that Colony, during the time of his Abode in the Country.

§. 3 In his Government he acquitted himſelf as the Solomon of his Colony, to whom God gave Wiſdom and Knowledge, that he might go out and come in before the People; and as he was the Head, ſo he was the Heart of the People, for the Reſolution to do Well, which he maintained among them. An unjuſt Judge is, as one ſays, A cold Fire, a dark Sun, a dry Sea, an ungood God, a contradictio in Adjecto. Far from ſuch was our Hopkins; no, he was, δίκαιον ἔμψυχον, a meer piece of Living Juſtice. And as he had no ſeparate Intereſts of his own, ſo he purſued their Intereſts with ſuch an unſpotted and ſucceſsful Fidelity, that they might call him as the Tribe of Benjamin did their Leader in the Wilderneſs, Abid[illegible] that is to ſay, Our Father is Judge. Ne[illegible]gland ſaw little Dawnings, and Emblems, and Earneſts of the Day, That the greatneſs of the Kingdom under the whole Heaven ſhall be given unto the People of the Saints of the moſt High, when ſuch a Saint as our Hopkins was one of its Governours. And the Felicity which a Great Man has Prognoſticated for Europe, That God will ſtir up ſome happy Governour in ſome Country in Chriſtendom, indued with Wiſdom and Conſideration, who ſhall diſcern the true Nature of Godlineſs and Chriſtianity, and the Neceſſity and Excellency of ſerious Religion, and ſhall place his Honour and Felicity in pleaſing God, and doing Good, and attaining Everlaſting Happineſs, and ſhall ſubject all Worldly Reſpects unto theſe High and Glorious Ends: This was now Exemplified in America.

§. 4. Moſt Exemplary was his Piety and his Charity; and while he governed others by the Laws of God, he did himſelf yeild a profound Subjection unto thoſe Laws. He was exemplarily watchful over his own Behaviour, and made a continual Contemplation of, and Preparation for Death, to be the Character of his Life. It was his manner to Riſe early, even before Day, to enjoy the Devotions of his Cloſet; after which he ſpent a conſiderable time in Reading, and Opening, and Applying the Word of God unto his Family, and then Praying with them: And he had one particular way to cauſe Attention in the People of his Family, which was to ask any Perſon that ſeemed Careleſs in the midſt of his Diſcourſe, What was it that I Read or Spoke laſt? Whereby he Habituated them unto ſuch an Attention, that they were ſtill uſually able to give a ready Account. But as for his Prayers, they were not only frequent, but ſo fervent alſo, that he frequently fell a Bleeding at the Noſe through the Agony of Spirit with which he labour'd in them. And, eſpecially when imploring ſuch Spiritual Bleſſings, as, That God would grant in the End of our Lives, the End of our Hopes, even the Salvation of our Souls, he would be ſo Tranſported, that the Obſerving and Judicious Hearers would ſay ſometimes upon it, Surely this Man can't be long out of Heaven. Moreover, in his Neighbourhood he not only ſet himſelf to Encourage and Countenance real Godlineſs, but alſo would himſelf kindly viſit the Meetings that the Religious Neighbours privately kept for the Exerciſes of it; and where the leaſt Occaſion for Contention was offered, he would, with a prudent and ſpeedy Endeavour, Extinguiſh it. But the Poor he ſo conſidered, that beſides the Daily Reliefs which with his own Hands he diſpenced unto them, he would put conſiderable Sums of Money into the Hands of his Friends, to be by them employed as they ſaw Opportunity to do good unto all, eſpecially the Houſhold of Faith. In this thing he was like that Noble and Worthy Engliſh General, of whom 'tis noted, He never thought he had any thing but what he gave away; and yet after all, with much humility he would profeſs, as one of the moſt Liberal Men that ever was in the World often would, I have often turned over my Books of Accounts, but I could never find the Great God charged a Debtor there.

§. 5. But Suffering as well as Doing belongs to the Compleat Character of a Chriſtian; and there were ſeveral Trials wherein our Lord called this Eminently Patient Servant of his to Suffer the Will of God. He Conflicted with Bodily Infirmities, but eſpecially with a Waſting and a Bloody Cough, which held him for Thirty Years together. He had been by Perſecutions driven to croſs an Ocean, to which he had in his Nature an Antipathy; and then a Wilderneſs full of ſuch Croſſes as attend the beginning of a Plantation, exerciſed him. Nevertheleſs there was one Affliction which continually dropt upon him above all the reſt, and that was this, He Married a Daughter which the Second Wife of Mr. Eaton had by a former Husband; one that from a Child had been Obſervable for Deſirable Qualities. But ſome time after ſhe was Married ſhe fell into a Diſtempered Melancholly, which at laſt Iſſued in an Incurable Diſtraction, with ſuch Ill-ſhaped Ideas in her Brain, as uſe to be formed when the Animal Spirits are fired by Irregular Particles, fixed with Acid, Bilious, Venemous Ferments in the Blood. Very Grievous was this Affliction unto this her worthy Conſort, who was by temper a very Affectionate Perſon: And who now left no part of a tender Husband undone, to Eaſe, and, if it were poſſible, to Cure the Lamentable Deſolation thus come upon, The Deſire of his Eyes; but when the Phyſician gave him to underſtand, that no means would be likely to Reſtore her Senſe, but ſuch as would be alſo likely to Hazard her Life, he Replied with Tears, I had rather bear my Croſs unto the End that the Lord ſhall give! But upon this Occaſion he ſaid unto her Siſter, who, with all the reſt related unto her, were as dear unto him as his own; I have often thought, what ſhould be the meaning of the Lord, in chaſtiſing of me with ſo ſharp a Rod, and with ſo long a Stroke! Whereto, when ſhe Reply'd, Sir, nothing ſingular has, in this Caſe, befallen you; God hath afflicted others in the like way; and we muſt be content with our Portion: He Anſwered, Siſter, This is among the Lord's Rarities. For my part I cannot tell what Sore to lay my Hand upon: However, in General, my Sovereign Lord is Juſt, and I will juſtifie him for ever: But in Particular, I have thought the matter might lye here: I promiſed my ſelf too much Content in this Relation and Enjoyment; and the Lord will make me to know that this World ſhall not afford it me. So he wiſely, meekly, fruitfully bore this heavy Affliction unto his Dying Day; having been taught by the Affliction to Die Daily, as long as he Lived.

§. 6. About Governour Eaton, his Father-in-Law, he ſaw cauſe to ſay unto a Siſter-in-Law, whom he much valued; I have often wondred at my Father and your Father; I have heard him ſay, That he never had a Repenting, or a Repining Thought, about his coming to New-England: Surely, in this Matter he hath a Grace far out-ſhining Mine. But he is our Father! I cannot ſay, as he can, I have had hard work with my own Heart about it. But upon the Death of his Elder Brother, who was Warden of the Fleet, it was neceſſary for him to Return into England, that he might look after the Eſtate which then fell unto him; and accordingly, after a Tempeſtuous and a Terrible Voyage, wherein they were eminently endangered by Fire, accidentally enkindled on the Ship, as well as by Water, which tore it ſo to Pieces, that it was Towed in by another Ship, he at length, arrived there. There a great Notice was quickly taken of him: He was made Warden of the Fleet, Commiſſioner of the Admiralty, and the Navy-Office, a Parliament-Man; and he was placed in ſome other conſiderable Stations: In all which he more than anſwered the Expectations of thoſe who took him to be a Perſon Eminently Qualified for Publick Service. By theſe Employments, his deſign of Returning to New-England, with which he left it, was diverted ſo far, that he ſent for his Family; and about the time that he looked for them, he being advantaged by his great Places to employ certain Frigots for their ſafety on the Coaſt, by that means had them ſafely brought unto him. When they were with him in London, one of them told him how much his Friends in New-England Wiſh'd and Pray'd for his Return: And how that Paſſage had been uſed in our Publick Supplications for that Mercy, Lord, If we may win him in Heaven, we ſhall yet have him on Earth: But he Reply'd, I have had many Thoughts about my Return, and my Affections have been bent very ſtrongly that way; and tho' I have now, bleſſed be God, received my Family here, yet that ſhall be no hindrance to my Return. I will tell you, though I am little worth, yet I have that Love which will diſpoſe me to ſerve the Lord, and that People of his. But as to that matter, I incline to think they will not win it in Heaven; and I know not whether the Terrors of my dreadful Voyage hither might not be ordered by the Divine Providence, to Stake me in this Land, being in my Spirit ſufficiently loth to run the hazard of ſuch another. I muſt alſo ſay to you, I mourn exceedingly, and I fear, I fear, the Sins of New-England will e're long be read in its Puniſhments. The Lord has planted that Land with a Noble Vine; and Bleſſed haſt thou been, O Land, in thy Rulers! But, alas! for the generality they have not conſidered how they were to Honour the Rules of God, in Honouring of thoſe whom God made Rulers over them; and I fear they will come to ſmart by having them ſet over them, that it will be an hard Work to Honour, and that will hardly be capable to manage their Affairs.

Per Varios Caſus; per tot Diſcrimina Rerum,

§. 8. For the time now drew near that this Iſraelite was to Die! He had been in his Life troubled with many Fears of Death; and after he fell Sick, even when he drew very near his Death, he ſaid with Tears, Oh! Pray for me, for I am in extream Darkneſs! But at length, on a Lord's Day, about the very time when Mr. Caryl was publickly praying for him, his Darkneſs all vaniſhed, and he broke forth into theſe Expreſſions, Oh! Lord, thou haſt kept the beſt Wine until the laſt! Oh! Friends, could you believe this? I ſhall be bleſſed for ever, I ſhall quickly be in Eternal Glory. Now let the whole World count me Vile, and call me an Hypocrite, or what they will, I matter it not; I ſhall be bleſſed; there is reſerved for me a Crown of Glory. Oh! Bleſſed be God for Jeſus Chriſt! I have heretofore thought it an hard thing to die, but now I find that it is not ſo. If I might have my choice, I would now chuſe to die; Oh! my Lord, I pray thee ſend me not back again into this Evil World, I have enough of it; no, Lord, now take me to Glory, and the Kingdom that is prepared for me! Yea, the ſtanders by thought it not poſſible for them to utter exactly after him, the Heavenly Words which now proceeded from him; and when one of them ſaid, Sir, The Lord hath enlarged your Faith; he replied, Friend, this is Senſe; the Lord hath even ſatisfied my Senſe; I am ſenſibly ſatisfied of Everlaſting Glory! Two or Three Days he now ſpent in Prayers and Praiſes, and in Inexpreſſible Joys: In which time, when ſome Eminent Perſons of a very Publick Station and Imployment came to Viſit him, unto them he ſaid, Sirs, Take heed of your Hearts while you are in your Work for God, that there be no root of bitterneſs within you. It may be pretended your Deſires are to ſerve God, but if there are in you ſecret Aims at advancing of your ſelves, and your own Eſtates and Intereſts, the Lord will not accept your Services as pure before him.

But at length in the Month of March, 1657. at London he expired; when being opened, it was found that his Heart had been unaccountably, as it were, Boiled and Waſted in Water, until it was become a little brittle Skin, which being touch'd, preſently dropp'd in pieces. He had often wiſhed, upon ſome great Accounts, that he might live till the beginning of this Year; and now when he lay a dying, he ſaid, Lord! Thou haſt fulfilled my Deſires according to thy Word, that thou wilt fulfil the Deſires of them that fear thee.

Now from the Tombſtone of another Eminent Perſon, we will fetch what ſhall here be a proper

SUCCESSORS.

§. 1. ALternately, for the moſt part every other Year, Mr. Hains, whom we have already mentioned elſewhere, took a turn with Mr. Hopkins in the Chief place of Government. And beſides theſe, (Reader, the Oracle that once Predicted Government unto a ⊙, would now and here Predict it unto a W.) there were Mr. Willis, Mr. Wells, and Mr. Webſter, all of whom alſo had Opportunity to expreſs their Liberal and Generous Diſpoſitions, and the Governing Virtues of Wiſdom, Juſtice and Courage, by the Election of the Freemen in the Colony before its being United with Newhaven. Had the Surviving Relations of theſe Worthy Men ſent in unto me a Tenth Part of the Conſiderable and Imitable Things which occurr'd in their Lives, they might have made more of a Figure in this our Hiſtory; whereas I muſt now Sum up all, with aſſuring my Reader, that it is the want of Knowledge in Me, and not of Deſert in Them, that has confined us unto this Brevity.

§. 2. After the Union of Connecticut with Newhaven, there were in Chief Government Mr. Leet, whom we have already paid our Dues unto; and Mr. Treat, who is yet living, a Pious and a Valiant Man, and (if even Annoſa Quercus be an Honourable thing!) worthy to be Honoured for An Hoary Head found in the Way of Righteouſneſs: Beſides, Mr. Winthrop, of whom anon, Reader, expect a Compleater Hiſtory.

CHAP. IX.

Humilitas Honorata. The LIFE of THEOPHILUS EATON, Eſq; Governour of NEW-HAVEN COLONY.

Juſtitiæ Cultor, Rigidi Servator Honeſti,
In Commune Bonum.

§. 1. IT has been enquired, why the Evangeliſt Luke in the Firſt Sacred Hiſtory which he Addreſſed unto his Fellow-Citizen, gave him the Title of The moſt Excellent Theophilus, but in the next he uſed no higher a Stile than plain Theophilus? And though ſeveral other Anſwers might be given to that Enquiry, 'tis enough to ſay, That neither the Civility of Luke, nor Nobility of Theoplilus, were by Age abated; but Luke herein conſidered the Diſpoſition of Theophilus, as well as his own, with whom a reduced Age had render'd all Titles of Honour more Diſagreeable Superfluities. Indeed nothing would have been more unacceptable to the Governour of our New-Haven Colony, all the time of his being ſo, than to have been Advanced and Applauded above the reſt of Mankind; yet it muſt be now Publiſhed unto the Knowledge of Mankind, that New-England could not of his Quality ſhow a More Excellent Perſon, and this was Theophilus Eaton, Eſq; the firſt Governour of that Colony. Humility is a Virtue whereof Amyraldus obſerves, There is not ſo much as a Shadow of Commendation in all the Pagan Writers. But the Reader is now concerned with Writings which will Commend a Perſon for Humility; and therefore our EATON, in whom the ſhine of every Virtue was particularly ſet off with a more than ordinary Degree of Humility, muſt now be propos'd as Commendable.

§. 2. 'Tis Reported, that the Earth taken from the Banks of Nilus, will very ſtrangely Sympathize with the place from whence it was taken, and grow moiſt or dry according to the Increaſe and the Decreaſe of the River. And in ſpite of that Popiſh Lie which pretends to obſerve the contrary, this thing has been ſignally Moraliz'd in the daily Obſervation, that the Sons of Miniſters, though betaking themſelves to other Imployments, do ordinarily carry about with them an Holy and Happy Savour of their Miniſterial Education. 'Twas remarkably Exemplified in our Theophilus Eaton, who was Born at Stony-Stratford in Oxfordſhire, the Eldeſt Son to the Faithful and Famous Miniſter of the place. But the Words of Old uſed by Philoſtratus concerning the Son of a Great Man, As for his Son I have nothing elſe to ſay, but that he was his Son; they could not be uſed concerning our Theophilus, who having received a good Education from his Pious Parents, did live many Years to Anſwer that Education in his own Piety and Uſefulneſs.

§. 3. His Father being removed unto Coventry, he there at School fell into the Intimate Acquaintance of that Worthy John Davenport, with whom the Providence of God many Years after united him in the great Undertaking of ſettling a Colony of Chriſtian and Reformed Churches on the American Strand. Here his Ingenuity and Proficiency render'd him notable; and ſo vaſt was his Memory, that although he wrote not at the Church, yet when he came home, he would, at his Father's Call, repeat unto thoſe that met in his Father's Houſe, the Sermons which had been publickly Preached by others, as well as his own Father, with ſuch exactneſs, as aſtoniſhed all the Neighbourhood. But in their after Improvements, the Hands of Divine Providence were laid acroſs upon the Heads of Theophilus Eaton and John Davenport; for Davenport, whoſe Father was the Mayor of Coventry, became a Miniſter; and Eaton, whoſe Father was Miniſter of Coventry, contrary to his Intentions, became a Merchant. His Parents were very loth to have complied with his Inclinations; but their Compliance therewithal did at laſt appear to have been directed by a ſpecial Favour of Heaven unto the Family, when after the Death of his Father, he, by this means, became the Joſeph, by whom his Mother was maintained until ſhe died, and his Orphan Brethren and Siſters had no ſmall part of their Subſiſtence.

§. 4. During the time of his hard Apprenticeſhip he behaved himſelf wiſely; and his Wiſdom, with God's Favour, particularly appeared in his chaſte Eſcape from the Snares of a Young Woman in the Houſe where he lived, who would fain have taken him in the Pits by the Wiſe Man cautioned againſt, and who was herſelf ſo taken only with his moſt Comely Perſon, that ſhe dy'd for the Love of him, when ſhe ſaw him gone too far to be obtained: Whereas, by the like Snares, the Apprentice that next ſucceeded him was undone for ever. But being a Perſon herewithal moſt ſignally Diligent in his Buſineſs, it was not long before the Maxim of the Wiſe Man was moſt literally accompliſhed in his coming to Stand before Princes; for being made a Freeman of London, he applied himſelf unto the Eaſt-Country Trade, and was publickly choſen the Deputy-Governour of the Company, wherein he ſo acquitted himſelf as to become conſiderable. And afterwards going himſelf into the Eaſt-Country, he not only became ſo well Acquainted with the Affairs of the Baltick-Sea, but alſo became ſo well Improved in the Accompliſhments of a Man of Buſineſs, that the King of England imploy'd him as an Agent unto the King of Denmark. The Concerns of his Agency he ſo diſcreetly managed, that as he much obliged and engaged the Eaſt-Land Company, (who in Token thereof preſented his Wife with a Baſon and Ewer double gilt, and curiouſly wrought with Gold, and weighing above Sixty Pound,) ſo he found much Acceptance with the King of Denmark, and was afterwards uſed by that Prince to do him no little Services. Nevertheleſs he kept his Integrity amongſt the Temptations of that Court, whereat he was now a Reſident; and not ſeldom had he moſt Eminent Cauſe to acknowledge the Benignity and Interpoſal of Heaven for his Preſervations; once particularly, when the King of Denmark was beginning the King of England's Health, while Mr. Eaton, who diſliked ſuch Health-Drinking, was in his Preſence; the King fell down in a ſort of a Fit, with the Cup in his Hand, whereat all the Nobles and Courtiers wholly applied themſelves to convey the King into his Chamber, and there was no notice taken who was to Pledge his Health; whereby Mr. Eaton was the more eaſily deliver'd from any ſhare in the Debauch.

§. 5. Having arrived unto a fair Eſtate, (which he was firſt willing to do, he Married a moſt Virtuous Gentlewoman, to whom he had firſt Eſpouſed himſelf after he had ſpent Three Years in an Abſence from her in the Eaſt-Country. But this deareſt and greateſt of his Temporal Enjoyments proved but a Temporal one; for living no longer with him than to render him the Father of Two Children, ſhe almoſt killed him with her own Death; and yet at her Death ſhe expreſſed herſelf wondrous willing to be Diſſolved, and to be with Chriſt, from whom (ſhe ſaid) I would not be detained one Hour for all the Enjoyments upon Earth. He afterwards Married a Prudent and Pious Widow, the Daughter of the Biſhop of Cheſter; unto the Three former Children of whic Widow, he became a moſt Exemplary, Living and Faithful Father, as well as a moſt Worthy Husband unto herſelf, by whom he afterwards had Five Children, Two Sons and Three Daughters. But the Second of his Children by his latter Wife dying ſome while before, it was not long before his Two Children by his former Wife were ſmitten with the Plague, whereof the Elder died, and his Houſe thereupon ſhut up with a, Lord have Mercy! However the Lord had this Mercy on the Family, to let the Diſtemper ſpread no further; and ſo Mr. Eaton ſpent many Years a Merchant of great Credit and Faſhion in the City of London.

§. 6. At length Conformity to Ceremonies Humanely Invented and Impoſed in the Worſhip of God, was urged in the Church of England with ſo much Rigour, that Mr. Davenport was thereby driven to ſeek a Refuge from the Storm in the Cold and Rude Corners of America. Mr. Eaton had already aſſiſted the New Maſſachuſet-Colony, as being one of the Patentees for it; but had no purpoſe of removing thither himſelf, until Mr. Davenport, under whoſe Excellent Miniſtry he lived, was compelled unto a ſhare in this Removal. However, being fully ſatisfied in his own Conſcience, that Unlawful things were now violently demanded of him, he was willing to accompany his Perſecuted Paſtor in the Retreat from Violence now Endeavoured, and many Eminent Londoners chearfully engaged with him in this Undertaking. Unto New-England this Company of good Men came in the Year 1637. where chuſing to be a diſtinct Colony by themſelves, more Accommodated unto the Deſigns of Merchandize than of Husbandry, they ſought and bought a large Territory in the Southern Parts of the Country for their Habitations. In the Proſecution hereof, the chief Care was devolved upon Mr. Eaton, who with an Unexempled Patience took many tedious and hazardous Journies through a Deſolate Wilderneſs full of Barbarous Indians, until upon Mature Deliberation he pitched upon a place now called New-Haven, where they ſoon formed a very regular Town; and a number of other Towns along the Sea ſide were quickly added thereunto. But by the Difficulties attending theſe Journies, Mr. Eaton brought himſelf into an extream Sickneſs; from which he recovered not without a Fiſtula in his Breaſt, whereby he underwent much Affliction. When the Chirurgeon came to Inſpect the Sore, he told him, Sir, I know not how to go about what is neceſſary for your Cure; but Mr. Eaton anſwered him, God calls you to do, and me to ſuffer! And God accordingly ſtrengthened him to bear miſerable Cuttings and Launcings of his Fleſh with a moſt Invincible Patience. The Chirurgeon indeed made ſo many Wounds, that he was not able to Cure what he had made; another, and a better, Hand was neceſſarily imployed for it; but in the mean while great were the Trials with which the God of Heaven exerciſed the Faith of this his Holy Servant.

§. 7. Mr. Eaton and Mr. Davenport were the Moſes and Aaron of the Chriſtian Colony now Erected in the South-Weſt Parts of New-England; and Mr. Eaton being yearly and ever choſen their Governour, it was the Admiration of all Spectators to behold the Diſcretion, the Gravity, the Equity with which he ſtill managed all their Publick Affairs. He carried in his very Countenance a Majeſty which cannot be deſcribed; and in his Diſpenſations of Juſtice he was a Mirrour for the moſt Imitable Impartiality, but Ungainſayable Authority of his Proceedings, being awfully ſenſible of the Obligations which the Oath of a Judge lays upon him. Ils ſont plus tenus de raiſon de garder Leur Serment, doubter mort, ou aucutie forfeiture: And hence he, who would moſt patiently bear hard things offered unto his Perſon in private Caſes, yet would never paſs by any Publick Affronts, or Neglects offered, offered when he appeared under the Character of a Magiſtrate. But he ſtill was the Guide of the Blind, the Staff of the Lame, the Helper of the Widow and the Orphan, and all the Diſtreſſed; none that had a Good Cauſe was afraid of coming before him: On the one ſide, In his Days did the Righteous flouriſh; on the other ſide, He was the Terror of Evil Doers. As in his Government of the Commonwealth, ſo in the Government of his Family, he was Prudent, Serious, Happy to a Wonder; and albeit he ſometimes had a large Family, conſiſting of no leſs than Thirty Perſons, yet he managed them with ſuch an Even Temper, that Obſervers have affirmed, They never ſaw an Houſe ordered with more Wiſdom! He kept an Honourable and Hoſpitable Table; but one thing that ſtill made the Entertainment thereof the better, was the continual Preſence of his Aged Mother, by feeding of whom with an Exemplary Piety till ſhe died, he enſured his own Proſperity as long as he lived. His Children and Servants he would mightily Encourage unto the Study of the Scriptures, and Countenance their Addreſſes unto himſelf with any of their Enquiries; but when he diſcerned any of them ſinfully negligent about the Concerns either of their General or Particular Callings, he would admoniſh them with ſuch a Penetrating Efficacy, that they could ſcarce forbear falling down at his Feet with Tears. A Word of his was enough to ſteer them!

§. 8. So Exemplary was he for a Chriſtian, that one who had been a Servant unto him, could many Years after ſay, Whatever Difficulty in my daily Walk I now meet withal, ſtill ſomething that I either ſaw or heard in my Bleſſed Maſter Eaton's Converſation, helps me through it all; I have Reaſon to bleſs God that ever I knew him! It was his Cuſtom when he firſt roſe in a Morning, to repair unto his Study; a Study well Perfumed with the Meditations and Supplications of an Holy Soul. After this, calling his Family together, he would then read a Portion of the Scripture among them, and after ſome Devout and Uſeful Reflections upon it, he would make a Prayer not long, but Extraordinary Pertinent and Reverent; and in the Evening ſome of the ſame Exerciſes were again attended. On the Saturday Morning he would ſtill take notice of the Approaching Sabbath in his Prayer, and ask the Grace to be Remembring of it, and Preparing for it; and when the Evening arrived, he, beſides this, not only Repeated a Sermon, but alſo Inſtructed his People, with putting of Queſtions referring to the Points of Religion, which would oblige them to Study for an Anſwer; and if their Anſwer were at any time inſufficient, he would wiſely and gently Enlighten their Underſtandings; all which he concluded with Singing of a Pſalm. When the Lord's Day came, he called his Family together at the time for the Ringing of the Firſt Bell, and repeated a Sermon, whereunto he added a Fervent Prayer, eſpecially tending unto the Sanctification of the Day. At Noon he ſang a Pſalm, and at Night he retired an Hour into his Cloſet; adviſing thoſe in his Houſe to improve the ſame time for the good of their own Souls. He then called his Family together again, and in an obliging manner conferred with them about the things with which they had been Entertained in the Houſe of God, ſhutting up all with a Prayer for the Bleſſing of God upon them all. For Solemn Days of Humiliation, or of Thankſgiving, he took the ſame Courſe, and Endeavoured ſtill to make thoſe that belonged unto him, underſtand the meaning of the Services before them. He ſeldom uſed any Recreations, but being a great Reader, all the time he could ſpare from Company and Buſineſs, he commonly ſpent in his Beloved Study; ſo that he merited the Name which was once given to a Learned Ruler of the Engliſh Nation, the Name of Beauclerk: In Converſing with his Friends, he was Affable, Courteous, and generally Pleaſant, but Grave perpetually; and ſo Cautelous and Circumſpect in his Diſcourſes, and ſo Modeſt in his Expreſſions, that it became a Proverb for Inconteſtable Truth, Governour Eaton ſaid it.

But after all, his Humility appeared in his having always but Low Expectations, looking for little Regard and Reward from any Men, after he had merited as highly as was poſſible by his Univerſal Serviceableneſs.

§. 9. His Eldeſt Son he maintained at the Colledge until he proceeded Maſter of Arts; and he was indeed the Son of his Vows, and a Son of great Hopes. But a ſevere Catarrh diverted this Young Gentleman from the Work of the Miniſtry whereto his Father had once devoted him; and a Malignant Fever then raging in thoſe Parts of the Country, carried off him with his Wife within Two or Three Days of one another. This was counted the ſoreſt of all the Trials that ever befel his Father in the Days of the Years of his Pilgrimage; but he bore it with a Patience and Compoſure of Spirit which was truly admirable. His dying Son look'd earneſtly on him, and ſaid, Sir, What ſhall we do! Whereto, with a well-ordered Countenance, he replied, Look up to God! And when he paſſed by his Daughter drowned in Tears on this Occaſion, to her he ſaid, Remember the Sixth Commandment, Hurt not your ſelf with Immoderate Grief; Remember Job, who ſaid, The Lord hath given, and the Lord hath taken away, Bleſſed be the Name of the Lord! You may mark what a Note the Spirit of God put upon it; in all this Job ſinned not, nor charged God fooliſhly: God accounts it a charging of him fooliſhly, when we don't ſubmit unto his Will patiently. Accordingly he now governed himſelf as one that had attained unto the Rule of Weeping as if we wept not; for it being the Lord's Day, he repaired unto the Church in the Afternoon, as he had been there in the Forenoon, though he was never like to ſee his Deareſt Son alive any more in this World. And though before the Firſt Prayer began, a Meſſenger came to prevent Mr. Davenport's praying for the Sick Perſon, who was now Dead, yet his Affectionate Father alter'd not his Courſe, but Wrote after the Preacher as formerly; and when he came Home he held on his former Methods of Divine Worſhip in his Family, not for the Excuſe of Aaron, omitting any thing in the Service of God. In like ſort, when the People had been at the Solemn Interment of this his Worthy Son, he did with a very Unpaſſionate Aſpect and Carriage then ſay, Friends, I thank you all for your Love and Help, and for this Teſtimony of Reſpect unto me and mine: The Lord hath given, and the Lord hath taken; bleſſed be the Name of the Lord! Nevertheleſs, retiring hereupon into the Chamber where his Daughter then lay Sick, ſome Tears were obſerved falling from him while he uttered theſe Words, There is a difference between a ſullen Silence or a ſtupid Senſleſneſs under the Hand of God, and a Child-like Submiſſion thereunto.

§. 10. Thus continually he, for about a Score of Years, was the Glory and Pillar of New-Haven Colony. He would often ſay, Some count it a great matter to Die well, but I am ſure 'tis a great matter to Live well. All our Care ſhould be while we have our Life to uſe it well, and ſo when Death puts an end unto that, it will put an end unto all our Cares. But having Excellently managed his Care to Live well, God would have him to Die well, without any room or time then given to take any Care at all; for he enjoyed a Death ſudden to every one but himſelf! Having Worſhipped God with his Family after his uſual manner, and upon ſome Occaſion with much Solemnity charged all the Family to carry it well unto their Miſtreſs who was now confined by Sickneſs, he Supp'd, and then took a turn or two abroad for his Meditations. After that he came in to bid his Wife Good-night, before he left her with her Watchers; which when he did, ſhe ſaid, Methinks you look ſad! Whereto he reply'd, The Differences riſen in the Church of Hartford make me ſo; ſhe then added, Let us e'en go back to our Native Country again; to which he anſwered, You may, [and ſo ſhe did] but I ſhall Die here. This was the laſt Word that ever ſhe heard him ſpeak; for now retiring unto his Lodging in another Chamber, he was overheard about midnight fetching a Groan; and unto one, ſent in preſently to enquire how he did, he anſwered the Enquiry with only ſaying, Very Ill! And without ſaying any more, he fell aſleep in Jeſus: In the Year 1657. looſing Anchor from New-Haven for the better.

SUCCESSORS.

§. 1. WHEN the Day arrived in the Anniverſary Courſe for the Freemen of the Colony to Elect another Governour in the place of the Deceaſed Eaton, Mr. Davenport Preached on that Paſſage of the Divine Oracle, in Joſh. 1. 1, 2. Now after the Death of Moſes, the Servant of the Lord, it came to paſs that the Lord ſpake unto Joſhua, the Son of Nun, Moſes Miniſter, ſaying, Now ariſe thou and all this People. The Colony was abundantly ſenſible that their Eaton had been a Man of a Moſaic Spirit; and that while they choſe him, as they did every Year of his Life among them to be their Governour, they could not chuſe a better. But they now conſidered that Mr. Francis Newman, who had been for many Years the Secretary of the Colony, was there a Miniſter to their Moſes, as he had been otherwiſe his intimate Friend, Neighbour, Companion and Counſellor. For this Cauſe the Unanimous Choice of the Freemen fell upon this Gentleman to ſucceed in the Government. And I ſhall have given a ſufficient Hiſtory of his Government; which through Death was not ſuffered to continue above Three or Four Years, by only ſaying, That he walk'd exactly in the Steps of his Predeceſſor.

§. 2. Upon the ſetting of Mr. Francis Newman, there aroſe Mr. William Leet, of whom let not the Reader be diſpleaſed at this brief Account. This Gentleman was by his Education a Lawyer, and by his Imployment a Regiſter in the Biſhop's Court. In that Station, at Cambridge, he obſerved that there were Summoned before the Court certain Perſons to anſwer for the Crime of going to hear Sermons abroad, when there were none to be heard in their own Pariſh Churches at home; and that when any were brought before them for Fornication or Adultery, the Court only made themſelves merry with their Peccadillo's; and that theſe latter Tranſgreſſors were as favourably dealt withal, as ever the Wolf was when he came with an Auricular Confeſſion of his Murders to his Brother Fox for Abſolution; but the former found as hard meaſure as ever the poor Aſs, that had only taken a Straw by miſtake out of a Pilgrim's Pad, and yet upon Confeſſion, was by Chancellour Fox pronounced Unpardonable. This Obſervation extreamly ſcandalized Mr. Leet, who always thought, that Hearing a good Sermon had been a leſſer Fault than Lying with one's Neighbour's Wiſe: And had the ſame Reſentments that Auſtin ſometimes had of the Iniquity which made the Tranſgreſſion of a Ceremony more ſeverely reprehended than a Tranſgreſſion of the Law of God; but it made an Everlaſting Impreſſion upon his Heart, when the Judge of the Court furiouſly demanded of one then to be cenſured, How he durſt be ſo bold as to break the Laws of the Church, in going from his own Pariſh to hear Sermons abroad? And the Honeſt Man anſwered, Sir, How ſhould I get Faith elſe? For the Apoſtle ſaith, Faith comes by Hearing the Word Preached; which Faith is neceſſary to Salvation; and Hearing the Word is the Means appointed by God for the obtaining and encreaſing of it: And theſe Means I muſt uſe, whatever I ſuffer for it in this World. Theſe Words of that Honeſt Man were Bleſſed by God with ſuch an Effect upon the Mind of Mr. Leet, that he preſently left his Office in the Biſhop's Court, and forſaking that Untoward Generation of Men, he aſſociated himſelf with ſuch as would go Hear the Word, that they might get Faith; and in Hearing he did happily get the Like precious Faith. On this, and for this, he was expoſed unto the Perſecution, which cauſed him to retire into New-England with many Worthy Miniſters and other Chriſtians in the Year 1639. In that Country he ſettled himſelf under the Miniſtry of the Excellent Mr. Whitfield at Gilford, where being alſo choſen a Magiſtrate, and then Governour of the Colony; and being ſo at the Juncture of time, when the Royal Charter did join Connecticut and New-Haven, he became next unto Governour Winthrop, the Deputy-Governour of the whole; and after the Death of Mr. Winthrop, even until his own Death, the Annual Election for about a Decad of Years together ſtill made him Governour. But in his whole Government he gave continual Demonſtrations of an Excellent Spirit, eſpecially in that part of it where the Reconciliation and the Coalition of the Spirits of the People under it was to be accompliſhed. Mr. Robert Treat is the Follower of his Example, as well as the Succeſſor in his Government.

CHAP. XI.

Hermes Chriſtianus. The LIFE of JOHN WINTHROP, Eſq; Governour of CONNECTICUT and NEW-HAVEN United.

> ——Et Nos aliquod Nomenq; Decuſq;
> Geſſimus.——

§. 1. IF the Hiſtorian could give that Character of the beſt Roman Emperor, that he was Bonus a Bono, Pius a Pio, the Son of a Father like himſelf, our Hiſtory may affirm concerning a very good New-Engliſh Governour alſo, that he was the Father of a Son like himſelf. The Proverb of the Jews which doth obſerve, That Vinegar is the Son of Wine; and the Proverb of the Greeks, which doth obſerve, That the Sons of Heroes are Treſpaſſers, has been more than once contradicted in the happy Experience of the New-Englanders: But none of the leaſt remarkable Contradictions given to it has been in the Honourable Family of our Winthrops.

§. 2. The Eldeſt Son of John Winthrop, Eſq; the Governour of one Colony, was John Winthrop, Eſq; the Governour of another, in, therefore happy, New-England, born Feb. 12. 1605. at Groton in England. His Glad Father beſtowed on him a liberal Education at the Univerſity, firſt of Cambridge in England, and then of Dublin in Ireland; and becauſe Travel has been eſteemed no little Accompliſher of a Young Gentleman, he then Accompliſhed himſelf by Travelling into France, Holland, Flanders, Italy, Germany, and as far as Turky it ſelf; in which places he ſo improved his Opportunity of Converſing with all ſorts of Learned Men, that he returned home equally a Subject of much Experience, and of great Expectation.

§. 3. The Son of Scipio Africanus proving a degenerate Perſon, the People forced him to pluck off a Signet-Ring, which he wore with his Father's Face engraven on it. But the Son of our Celebrated Governour Winthrop, was on the other ſide ſo like unto his Excellent Father for early Wiſdom and Virtue, that arriving at New-England with his Father's Family, Nov. 4. 1631. he was, though not above Twenty Three Years of Age, by the Unanimous Choice of the People, choſen a Magiſtrate of the Colony, whereof his Father was the Governour. For this Colony he afterwards did many Services, yea, and he did them Abroad as well as at Home; very particularly in the Year 1634. when returning for England, he was by bad Weather forced into Ireland, where being invited unto the Houſe of Sir John Clotworthy, he met with many Conſiderable Perſons, by conferring with whom, the Affairs of New-England were not a little promoted; but it was another Colony for which the Providence of Heaven intended him to be ſuch another Father, as his own Honourable Father had been to this.

§. 4. In the Year 1635. Mr. Winthrop returned unto New-England, with Powers from the Lord Say and the Lord Brook, to ſettle a Plantation upon the Long River of Connecticut, and a Commiſſion to be himſelf the Governour of that Plantation. But inaſmuch as many good People of the Maſſachuſet-Colony had juſt before this taken Poſſeſſion of Land for a New-Colony thereabouts, this Courteous and Peaceable Gentleman gave them no Moleſtation; but having wiſely Accommodated the Matter with them, he ſent a convenient number of Men, with all Neceſſaries, to Erect a Fortification at the Mouth of the River, where a Town, with a Fort, is now diſtinguiſhed by the Name of Say-Brook; by which happy Action, the Planters further up the River had no ſmall Kindneſs done unto them; and the Indians, which might elſe have been more Troubleſome, were kept in Awe.

§. 5. The Self-denying Gentleman, who had imployed his Commiſſion of Governour ſo little to the Diſadvantage of the Infant-Colony at Connecticut, was himſelf, e're long, by Election made Governour of that Colony. And upon the Reſtoration of King Charles II. he willingly undertook another Voyage to England, on the behalf of the People under his Government, whoſe Affairs he managed with ſuch a Succeſsful Prudence, that he obtained a Royal Charter for them, which Incorporated the Colony of New-Haven with them, and Inveſted both Colonies, now happily United, with a firm Grant of Priviledges, beyond thoſe of the Plantations which had been ſettled before them. I have been informed, that while he was engaged in this Negotiation, being admitted unto a private Conference with the King, he preſented His Majeſty with a Ring, which King Charles I. had upon ſome Occaſion given to his Grandfather; and the King not only accepted his Preſent, but alſo declared, that he accounted it one of his Richeſt Jewels; which indeed was the Opinion that New-England had of the Hand that carried it. But having thus laid his Colony under Everlaſting Obligations of Gratitude, they did, after his return to New-England, expreſs of their Gratitude, by ſaying to him as the Iſraelites did unto Gideon, Rule thou over us, for thou haſt delivered us; chuſing him for their Governour twice Seven Years together.

§. 6. When the Governour of Athens was a Philoſopher, namely Demetrius, the Commonwealth ſo flouriſhed, that no leſs than Three Hundred Brazen Statues were afterward by the Thankful People Erected unto his Memory. And a Bleſſed Land was New-England, when there was over part of it a Governour, who was not only a Chriſtian and a Gentleman, but alſo an Eminent Philoſopher; for indeed the Government of the State is then moſt ſucceſsfully managed, when the meaſures of it are, by a Wiſe Obſerver, taken from the Government of the World; and very unreaſonable is the Jewiſh Proverb, Ne Habites in urbe ubi caput urbis eſt Medicus: But highly reaſonable the Sentence of Ariſtotle, Ubi præſes fuerit Philoſophus, ibi Civitas erit Fœlix; and this the rather for what is truly noted by Thucydides, Magiſtratus eſt Civitatis Medicus. Such an one was our Winthrop, whoſe Genius and Faculty for Experimental Philoſophy, was advanced in his Travels abroad, by his Acquaintance with many Learned Virtuoſi. One Effect of this Diſpoſition in him, was his being furniſhed with Noble Medicines, which he moſt Charitably and Generouſly gave away upon all Occaſions; inſomuch that where-ever he came, ſtill the Diſeaſed flocked about him, as if the Healing Angel of Betheſda had appeared in the place; and ſo many were the Cures which he wrought, and the Lives that he ſaved, that if Scanderbeg might boaſt of his having ſlain in his Time Two Thouſand Men with his own Hands, this Worthy Perſon might have made a far more deſirable Boaſt of his having in his Time Healed more than ſo many Thouſands; in which Beneficence to Mankind, there are of his Worthy Children, who to this Day do follow his Direction and Example. But it was not unto New-England alone that the Reſpects of this Accompliſhed Philoſopher were confined. For, whereas in purſuance of the Methods begun by that Immortally Famous Advancer of Learning, the moſt Illuſtrious Lord Chancellor Bacon, a Select Company of Eminent Perſons, uſing to meet in the Lodgings of Dr. Wilkins of Wadham Colledge in Oxford, had laid the Foundation of a Celebrated Society, which by the Year 1663. being Incorporated with a Royal Charter, hath ſince been among the Glories of England, yea, and of Mankind; and their Deſign was to make Faithful Records of all the Works of Nature or of Art, which might come under their Obſervation, and Correct what had been Falſe, Reſtore what ſhould be True, Preſerve what ſhould be Rare, and Render the Knowledge of the World, as well more Perfect as more Uſeful; and by multiplied Experiments both of Light and Fruit, advance the Empire of Man over the whole viſible Creation; it was the Honour of Mr. Winthrop to be a Member of this Royal Society. And accordingly among the Philoſophical Tranſactions Publiſhed by Mr. Oldenburgh, there are ſome notable Communications from this Inquiſitive and Intelligent Perſon, whoſe Inſight into many Parts of the Creation, but eſpecially of the Mineral Kingdom, was beyond what had been attained by the moſt in many Parts of America.

§. 7. If one would therefore deſire an exact Picture of this Worthy Man, the Deſcription which the moſt Sober and Solid Writers of the Great Philoſophick Work do give of thoſe Perſons, who alone are qualified for the Smiles of Heaven upon their Enterprizes, would have exactly fitted him. He was a Studious, Humble, Patient, Reſerved and Mortified Perſon, and one in whom the Love of God was Fervent, vent, the Love of Man ſincere: And he had herewithal a certain Extenſion of Soul, which diſpoſed him to a Generous Behaviour towards thoſe, who by Learning, Breeding and Virtue, deſerve Reſpects, though of a Perſwaſion and Profeſſion in Religion very different from his own; which was that of a Reformed Proteſtant, and a New-Engliſh Puritan. In ſum, he was not more an Adoptiſt in thoſe Noble and Secret Medicines, which would reach the Roots of the Diſtempers that annoy Humane Bodies, and procure an Univerſal Reſt unto the Archæus on all Occaſions of Diſturbance, than he was in thoſe Chriſtian Qualities, which appear upon the Cure of the Diſtempers in the Minds of Men, by the Effectual Grace of our Lord Jeſus Chriſt.

§. 8. In the Year 1643. after divers Eſſays made in ſome former Years, the ſeveral Colonies of New-England became in Fact, as well as Name, United Colonies. And an Inſtrument was formed, wherein having declared, That we all came into theſe parts of America with the ſame End and Aim, namely, to advance the Glory of our Lord Jeſus Chriſt, and enjoy the Liberties of the Goſpel with Purity and Peace, it was firmly agreed between the ſeveral Juriſdictions, that there ſhould yearly be choſen Two Commiſſioners out of each, who ſhould meet at fit Places appointed for that purpoſe, with full Powers from the General Courts in each, to Concert and Conclude Matters of General Concernment for Peace or War of the ſeveral Colonies thus Confederated. In purſuance of this Laudable Confederacy, this moſt Meritorious Governour of Connecticut Colony accepted the Trouble of appearing as a Commiſſioner for that Colony, with the reſt met at Boſton, in the Year 1676. when the Calamities of the Indian-War were diſtreſſing the whole Country: But here falling Sick of a Fever, he dy'd on April 5. of that Year, and was Honourably Interred in the ſame Tomb with his Honourable Father.

§. 9. His Father, as long ago as the Year 1643. had ſeen Cauſe to Write unto him an Excellent Letter, wherein there were theſe among other Paſſages.

'You are the Chief of Two Families; I had by your Mother Three Sons and Three Daughters, and I had with her a Large Portion of outward Eſtate. Theſe now are all gone; Mother gone; Brethren and Siſters gone; you only are left to ſee the Vanity of theſe Temporal things, and learn Wiſdom thereby, which may be of more uſe to you, through the Lord's Bleſſing, than all that Inheritance which might have befallen you: And for which this may ſtay and quiet your Heart, That God is able to give you more than this; and that it being ſpent in the furtherance of his Work, which hath here proſpered ſo well, through his Power hitherto, you and yours may certainly expect a liberal Portion in the Proſperity and Bleſſing thereof hereafter; and the rather, becauſe it was not forced from you by a Father's Power, but freely reſigned by your ſelf, out of a Living and Filial Reſpect unto me, and your own readineſs unto the Work it ſelf. From whence, as I do often take Occaſion to Bleſs the Lord for you, ſo do I alſo Commend you and yours to his Fatherly Bleſſing, for a plentiful Reward to be rendred unto you. And doubt not, my Dear Son, but let your Faith be built upon his Promiſe and Faithfulneſs, that as he hath carried you hitherto through many Perils, and provided liberally for you, ſo he will do for the time to come, and will never fail you, nor forſake you. ——— My Son, the Lord knows how Dear thou art to me, and that my Care has been more for thee than for my ſelf! But I know thy Proſperity depends not on my Care, nor on thine own, but upon the Bleſſing of our Heavenly Father; neither doth it on the things of this World, but on the Light of God's Countenance, through the Merit and Mediation of our Lord Jeſus Chriſt. It is that only which can give us Peace of Conſcience with Contentation; which can as well make our Lives Happy and Comfortable in a mean Eſtate, as in a great Abundance. But if you weigh things aright, and ſum up all the Turnings of Divine Providence together, you ſhall find great Advantage.—The Lord hath brought us to a Good Land; a Land, where we enjoy outward Peace and Liberty, and above all, the Bleſſings of the Goſpel, without the Burden of Impoſitions in Matters of Religion. Many Thouſands there are who would give Great Eſtates to enjoy our Condition. Labour therefore, my good Son, to increaſe our Thankfulneſs to God for all his Mercies to thee, eſpecially for that he hath revealed his Everlaſting Good-will to thee in Jeſus Chriſt, and joined thee to the viſible Body of his Church, in the Fellowſhip of his People, and hath ſaved thee in all thy Travails abroad, from being Infected with the Vices of theſe Countries where thou haſt been, (a Mercy vouchſafed but unto few Young Gentlemen Travellers.) Let him have the Honour of it who kept thee. He it was who gave thee Favour in the Eyes of all with whom thou hadſt to do, both by Sea and Land; He it was who ſaved thee in all Perils; and He it is who hath given thee a Gift in Underſtanding and Art; and he it is who hath provided thee a Bleſſing in Marriage, a Comfortable Help, and many Sweet Children; and hath hitherto provided liberally for you all: And therefore I would have you to Love him again, and Serve him, and Truſt him for the time to come. Love and Prize that Word of Truth, which only makes known to you the Precious and Eternal Thoughts and Councils of the Light Inacceſſible. Deny your own Wiſdom, that you may find his; and eſteem it the greateſt Honour to lye under the Simplicity of the Goſpel of Chriſt Crucified, without which you can never enter into the Secrets of his Tabernacle, nor enjoy thoſe ſweet things ‘which Eye hath not ſeen, nor Ear heard, nor can the Heart of Man conceive; but God hath granted unto ſome few to know them even in this Life. Study well, my Son, the ſaying of the Apoſtle, Knowledge puffeth up. It is a good Gift of God, but when it lifts up the Mind above the Croſs of Chriſt, it is the Pride of Life, and the High-way to Apoſtacy, wherein many Men of great Learning and Hopes have periſhed. — In all the Exerciſe of your Gifts, and Improvement of your Talents, have an Eye to your Maſter's End, more than your own; and to the Day of your Account, that you may then have your Quietus eſt, even, Well done, Good and Faithful Servant! But my laſt and chief Requeſt to you, is, that you be careful to have your Children brought up in the Knowledge and Fear of God, and in the Faith of our Lord Jeſus Chriſt. This will give you the beſt Comfort of them, and keep them ſure from any Want or Miſcarriage: And when you part from them, it will be no ſmall joy to your Soul, that you ſhall meet them again in Heaven!

Doubtleſs, the Reader conſiders the Hiſtorical Paſſages in this Extract of the Letter thus Recited. Now, but by making this Reflection upon the Reſt, that as the Prophetical Part of it was notably fulfilled in the Eſtate, whereto the good Providence of God Recovered this Worthy Gentleman and his Family, ſo the Monitory Part of it was moſt Exemplarily attended in his Holy and Uſeful Converſation, I ſhall therein briefly ſum up the Life of a Perſon whom we ſhall call a Second unto none of our Worthies, but as we call him our Second Winthrop.

Sir William Phips, Knt.

Late Captain General, and Governour in Chief of the Province of the Maſſachuſet-Bay,

NEW-ENGLAND.

Containing the Memorable Changes Undergone, and Actions Performed by Him.

Written by one intimately acquainted with Him.

Diſcite Virtutem ex Hoc, verumque Laborem.

To his Excellency the Earl of Bellomont, Baron of Coloony in Ireland, General Governour of the Province of Maſſachuſets in New-England, and the Provinces annexed.

May it pleaſe your Excellency,

THE Station in which the Hand of the God of Heaven hath diſpoſed His Majeſties Heart to place your Honour, doth ſo manifeſtly entitle your Lordſhip to this enſuing Narrative, that its being thus Preſented to your Excellencies Hand, is thereby both Apologized for and Juſtified. I believe, had the Writer of it, when he Penned it, had any Knowledge of your Excellency, he would himſelf have done it, and withal, would have amply and publickly Congratulated the People of New-England, on account of their having ſuch a Governour, and your Excellency, on account of your being made Governour over them. For though as to ſome other things it may poſſibly be a place to ſome Perſons not ſo deſirable, yet I believe this Character may be juſtly given of them, that they are the beſt People under Heaven; there being among them, not only leſs of open Profaneneſs, and leſs of Lewdneſs, but alſo more of the ſerious Profeſſion, Practice, and Power of Chriſtianity, in proportion to their number, than is among any other People upon the Face of the whole Earth. Not but I doubt, there are many bad Perſons among them, and too many diſtemper'd Humours, perhaps even among thoſe who are truly good. It would be a wonder if it ſhould be otherwiſe; for it hath of late Years, on various accounts, and ſome very ſingular and unuſual ones, been a Day of ſore Temptation with that whole People. Nevertheleſs, as I look upon it as a Favour from God to thoſe Plantations, that he hath ſet your Excellency over them, ſo I do account it a Favour from God to your Excellency, that he hath committed and truſted in your Hand ſo great a part of his peculiar Treaſure and precious Jewels, as are among that People. Beſides, that on other accounts the Lord Jeſus hath more of a viſible Intereſt in New-England, than in any of the Outgoings of the Engliſh Nation in America. They have at their own Charge not only ſet up Schools of lower Learning up and down the Country; but have alſo erected an Univerſity, which hath been the happy Nurſery of many Uſeful, Learned, and excellently Accompliſhed Perſons. And moreover, from them hath the bleſſed Goſpel been Preached to the Poor, Barbarous, Savage Heathen there; and it hath taken ſuch Root among them, that there were lately four and twenty Aſſemblies in which the Name of the Lord Jeſus was conſtantly called on, and celebrated in their own Language. In theſe things New-England outſhineth all the Colonies of the Engliſh in thoſe goings down of the Sun. I know your Excellency will Favour and Countenance their Univerſity, and alſo the Propagating of the Goſpel among the Natives; for the Intereſt of Chriſt in that Part of the Earth is much concerned in them. That the God of the Spirits of all Fleſh would abundantly repleniſh your Excellency with a ſuitable Spirit for the Service to which he hath called your Lordſhip, that he would give your Honour a proſperous Voyage thither, and when there, make your Excellency a rich Bleſſing to that People, and them a rejoicing to your Excellency, is the Prayer of,

NEW-ENGLAND.

§. 1. IF ſuch a Renowned Chymiſt, as Quercetanus, with a whole Tribe of Labourers in the Fire, ſince that Learned Man, find it no eaſie thing to make the common part of Mankind believe, That they can take a Plant in its more vigorous Conſiſtence, and after a due Maceration, Fermentation and Separation, extract the Salt of that Plant, which, as it were, in a Chaos, inviſibly reſerves the Form of the whole, with its vital Principle; and, that keeping the Salt in a Glaſs Hermetically ſealed, they can, by applying a Soft Fire to the Glaſs, make the Vegetable riſe by little and little out of its Aſhes, to ſurprize the Spectators with a notable Illuſtration of that Reſurrection, in the Faith whereof the Jews returning from the Graves of their Friends, pluck up the Graſs from the Earth, uſing thoſe Words of the Scripture thereupon, Your Bones ſhall flouriſh like an Herb: 'Tis likely, that all the Obſervations of ſuch Writers, as the Incomparable Borellus, will find it hard enough to produce our Belief, that the Eſſential Salts of Animals may be ſo Prepared and Preſerved, that an Ingenious Man may have the whole Ark of Noah in his own Study, and raiſe the fine Shape of an Animal out of its Aſhes at his Pleaſure: And, that by the like Method from the Eſſential Salts of Humane Duſt, a Philoſopher may, without any Criminal Necromancy, call up the Shape of any Dead Anceſtor from the Duſt whereinto his Body has been Incinerated. The Reſurrection of the Dead, will be as Juſt, as Great an Article of our Creed, although the Relations of theſe Learned Men ſhould paſs for Incredible Romances: But yet there is an Anticipation of that Bleſſed Reſurrection, carrying in it ſome Reſemblance of theſe Curioſities, which is performed, when we do in a Book, as in a Glaſs, reſerve the Hiſtory of our Departed Friends; and by bringing our Warm Affections unto ſuch an Hiſtory, we revive, as it were, out of their Aſhes, the true Shape of thoſe Friends, and bring to a freſh View, what was Memorable and Imitable in them. Now, in as much as Mortality has done its part upon a Conſiderable Perſon, with whom I had the Honour to be well acquainted, and a Perſon as Memorable for the Wonderful Changes which befel him, as Imitable for his Virtues and Actions under thoſe Changes; I ſhall endeavour, with the Chymiſtry of an Impartial Hiſtorian, to raiſe my Friend ſo far out of his Aſhes, as to ſhew him again unto the World; and if the Character of Heroick Virtue be for a Man to deſerve well of Mankind, and be great in the Purpoſe and Succeſs of Eſſays to do ſo, I may venture to promiſe my Reader ſuch Example of Heroick Virtue, in the Story whereto I Invite him, that he ſhall ſay, it would have been little ſhort of a Vice in me, to have withheld it from him. Nor is it any Partiality for the Memory of my Deceaſed Friend, or any other Siniſter Deſign whatſoever, that has Invited me to this Undertaking; but I have undertaken this Matter from a ſincere Deſire, that the Ever-Glorious Lord JESUS CHRIST may have the Glory of his Power and Goodneſs, and of his Providence, in what he did for ſuch a Perſon, and in what he diſpoſed and aſſiſted that Perſon to do for him. Now, May he aſſiſt my Writing, even he that prepared the Subject, whereof I am to Write!

§. 2. So obſcure was the Original of that Memorable Perſon, whoſe Actions I am going to relate, that I muſt, in a way of Writing, like that of Plutarch, prepare my Reader for the intended Relation, by firſt ſearching the Archives of Antiquity for a Parallel. Now, becauſe we will not Parallel him with Eumenes, who, though he were the Son of a Poor Carrier, became a Governour of Mighty Provinces; nor with Marius, whoſe mean Parentage did not hinder his becoming a Glorious Defender of his Country, and Seven times the Chief Magiſtrate of the Chiefeſt City in the Univerſe: Nor with Iphicrates, who became a Succeſsful and Renowned General of a Great People, though his Father were a Cobler: Nor with Diocleſian, the Son of a poor Scrivener: Nor with Bonoſus, the Son of a poor School-Maſter, who yet came to ſway the Scepter of the Roman Empire: Nor, laſtly, will I compare him to the more late Example of the Celebrated Mazarini, who though no Gentleman by his Extraction, and one ſo ſorrily Educated, that he might have wrote Man, before he could write at all; yet aſcended unto that Grandeur, in the Memory of many yet living, as to Umpire the moſt Important Affairs of Chriſtendom: We will decline looking any further in that Hemiſphere of the World, and make the Hue and Cry throughout the Regions of America, the New World, which He, that is becoming the Subject of our Hiſtory, by his Nativity, belong'd unto. And in America, the firſt that meets me, is Franciſco Pizarro, who, though a Spurious Offspring, expoſed when a Babe in a Church-Porch, at a ſorry Village of Navarre, and afterwards employ'd while he was a Boy, in keeping of Cattel, yet, at length, ſtealing into America, he ſo thrived upon his Adventures there, that upon ſome Diſcoveries, which with an handful of Men he had in a deſperate Expedition made of Peru, he obtain'd the King of Spain's Commiſſion for the Conqueſt of it, and at laſt ſo incredibly enrich'd himſelf by the Conqueſt, that he was made the firſt Vice-Roy of Peru, and created Marqueſs of Anatilla.

To the Latter and Higheſt Part of that Story, if any thing hindred His Excellency Sir WILLIAM PHIPS, from affording of a Parallel, it was not the want either of Deſign, or of Courage, or of Conduct in himſelf, but it was the Fate of a Premature Mortality. For my Reader now being ſatisfied, that a Perſon's being Obſcure in his Original, is not always a Juſt Prejudice to an Expectation of Conſiderable Matters from him; I ſhall now inform him, that this our PHIPS was Born Feb. 2. A. Dom. 1650. at a deſpicable Plantation on the River of Kennebeck, and almoſt the furtheſt Village of the Eaſtern Settlement of New-England. And as the Father of that Man, which was as great a Bleſſing as England had in the Age of that Man, was a Smith, ſo a Gun-Smith, namely, James Phips, once of Briſtol, had the Honour of being the Father to him, whom we ſhall preſently ſee, made by the God of Heaven as great a Bleſſing to New-England, as that Country could have had, if they themſelves had pleaſed. His fruitful Mother, yet living, had no leſs than Twenty-Six Children, whereof Twenty-One were Sons; but Equivalent to them all was WILLIAM, one of the youngeſt, whom his Father dying, left young with his Mother, and with her he lived, keeping of Sheep in the Wilderneſs, until he was Eighteen Years Old; at which time he began to feel ſome further Diſpoſitions of Mind from that Providence of God which took him from the Sheepfolds, from following the Ewes great with Young, and brought him to feed his People. Reader, enquire no further who was his Father? Thou ſhalt anon ſee, that he was, as the Italians expreſs it, A Son to his own Labours!

§. 3. His Friends earneſtly ſolicited him to ſettle among them in a Plantation of the Eaſt; but he had an Unaccountable Impulſe upon his Mind, perſwading him, as he would privately hint unto ſome of them, That he was Born to greater Matters. To come at thoſe greater Matters, his firſt Contrivance was to bind himſelf an Apprentice unto a Ship-Carpenter for Four Years; in which time he became a Maſter of the Trade, that once in a Veſſel of more than Forty Thouſand Tuns, repaired the Ruins of the Earth; Noah's, I mean; he then betook himſelf an Hundred and Fifty Miles further a Field, even to Boſton, the Chief Town of New-England; which being a Place of the moſt Buſineſs and Reſort in thoſe Parts of the World, he expected there more Commodiouſly to purſue the Spes Majorum & Meliorum, Hopes which had inſpir'd him. At Boſton, where it was that he now learn'd, firſt of all, to Read and Write, he followed his Trade for about a Year; and by a laudable Deportment, ſo recommended himſelf, that he Married a Young Gentlewoman of good Repute, who was the Widow of one Mr. John Hull, a well-bred Merchant, but the Daughter of one Captain Roger Spencer, a Perſon of good Faſhion, who having ſuffer'd much damage in his Eſtate, by ſome unkind and unjuſt Actions, which he bore with ſuch Patience, that for fear of thereby injuring the Publick, he would not ſeek Satiſfaction, Poſterity might afterward ſee the Reward of his Patience, in what Providence hath now done for one of his own Poſterity. Within a little while after his Marriage, he indented with ſeveral Perſons in Boſton, to Build them a Ship at Sheeps-coat River, Two or Three Leagues Eaſtward of Kennebeck; where having Lanched the Ship, he alſo provided a Lading of Lumber to bring with him, which would have been to the Advantage of all Concern'd. But juſt as the Ship was hardly finiſhed, the Barbarous Indians on that River, broke forth into an Open and Cruel War upon the Engliſh; and the miſerable People, ſurprized by ſo ſudden a ſtorm of Blood, had no Refuge from the Infidels, but the Ship now finiſhing in the Harbour. Whereupon he left his intended Lading behind him, and inſtead thereof, carried with him his old Neighbours and their Families, free of all Charges, to Boſton; ſo the firſt Action that he did, after he was his own Man, was to ſave his Father's Houſe, with the reſt of the Neighbourhood, from Ruin; but the Diſappointment which befel him from the Loſs of his other Lading, plunged his Affairs into greater Embaraſments with ſuch as had employ'd him.

§. 4. But he was hitherto no more than beginning to make Scaffolds for further and higher Actions! He would frequently tell the Gentlewoman his Wife, That he ſhould yet be Captain of a King's Ship; That he ſhould come to have the Command of better Men than he was now accounted himſelf; and, That he ſhould be Owner of a Fair Brick-Houſe in the Green-Lane of North-Boſton; and, That, it may be, this would not be all that the Providence of God would bring him to. She entertained theſe Paſſages with a ſufficient Incredulity; but he had ſo ſerious and poſitive an Expectation of them, that it is not eaſie to ſay, what was the Original thereof. He was of an Enterprizing Genius, and naturally diſdained Littleneſs: But his Diſpoſition for Buſineſs was of the Dutch Mould, where, with a little ſhew of Wit, there is as much Wiſdom demonſtrated, as can be ſhewn by any Nation. His Talent lay not in the Airs that ſerve chiefly for the pleaſant and ſudden Turns of Converſation; but he might ſay, as Themiſtocles, Though he could not play upon a Fiddle, yet he knew how to make a little City become a Great One. He would prudently contrive a weighty Undertaking, and then patiently purſue it unto the End. He was of an Inclination, cutting rather like a Hatchet, than like a Razor; he would propoſe very Conſiderable Matters to himſelf, and then ſo cut through them, that no Difficulties could put by the Edge of his Reſolutions. Being thus of the True Temper, for doing of Great Things, he betakes himſelf to the Sea, the Right Scene for ſuch Things; and upon Advice of a Spaniſh Wreck about the Bahama's, he took a Voyage thither; but with little more ſucceſs, than what juſt ſerved him a little to furniſh him for a Voyage to England; whither he went in a Veſſel, not much unlike that which the Dutchmen ſtamped on their Firſt Coin, with theſe Words about it, Incertum quo Fata ferant. Having firſt informed himſelf that there was another Spaniſh Wreck, wherein was loſt a mighty Treaſure, hitherto undiſcovered, he had a ſtrong Impreſſion upon his Mind that He muſt be the Diſcoverer; and he made ſuch Repreſentations of his Deſign at White-Hall, that by the Year 1683. he became the Captain of a King's Ship, and arrived at New-England Commander of the Algier-Roſe, a Frigot of Eighteen Guns, and Ninety-Five Men.

§. 5. To Relate all the Dangers through which he paſſed, both by Sea and Land, and all the Tireſome Trials of his Patience, as well as of his Courage, while Year after Year the moſt vexing Accidents imaginable delay'd the Succeſs of his Deſign, it would even Tire the patience of the Reader: For very great was the Experiment that Captain Phips made of the Italian Obſervation, He that cann't ſuffer both Good and Evil, will never come to any great Preferment. Wherefore I ſhall ſuperſede all Journal of his Voyages to and fro, with reciting one Inſtance of his Conduct, that ſhow'd him to be a Perſon of no contemptible Capacity. While he was Captain of the Algier-Roſe, his Men growing weary of their unſucceſsful Enterprize, made a Mutiny, wherein they approach'd him on the Quarter-Deck, with Drawn Swords in their Hands, and required him to join with them in Running away with the Ship, to drive a Trade of Piracy on the South Seas. Captain Phips, though he had not ſo much of a Weapon as an Ox-Goad, or a Jaw-bone in his Hands, yet like another Shamgar or Samſon, with a moſt undaunted Fortitude, he ruſh'd in upon them, and with the Blows of his bare Hands, Fell'd many of them, and Quell'd all the Reſt. But this is not the Inſtance which I intended: That which I intend is, That (as it has been related unto me) One Day while his Frigot lay Careening, at a deſolate Spaniſh Iſland, by the ſide of a Rock, from whence they had laid a Bridge to the Shoar, the Men, whereof he had about an Hundred, went all, but about Eight or Ten, to divert themſelves, as they pretended, in the Woods: Where they all entred into an Agreement, which they Sign'd in a Ring, That about ſeven a Clock that Evening they would ſeize the Captain, and thoſe Eight or Ten, which they knew to be True unto him, and leave them to periſh on this Iſland, and ſo be gone away unto the South Sea to ſeek their Fortune. Will the Reader now imagine, that Captain Phips having Advice of this Plot but about an Hour and half before it was to be put in Execution, yet within Two Hours brought all theſe Rogues down upon their Knees to beg for their Lives? But ſo it was! For theſe Knaves conſidering that they ſhould want a Carpenter with them in their Villanous Expedition, ſent a Meſſenger to fetch unto them the Carpenter, who was then at Work upon the Veſſel; and unto him they ſhew'd their Articles; telling him what he muſt look for if he did not ſubſcribe among them. The Carpenter being an honeſt Fellow, did with much importunity prevail for one half hours Time to conſider of the Matter; and returning to Work upon the Veſſel, with a Spy by them ſet upon him, he feigned himſelf taken with a Fit of the Cholick, for the Relief whereof he ſuddenly run unto the Captain in the Great Cabbin for a Dram; where, when he came, his buſineſs was only in brief, to tell the Captain of the horrible Diſtreſs which he was fallen into; but the Captain bid him as briefly return to the Rogues in the Woods, and Sign their Articles, and leave him to provide for the Reſt. The Carpenter was no ſooner gone, but Captain Phips calling together the few Friends (it may be ſeven or eight) that were left him aboard, whereof the Gunner was one, demanded of them, whether they would ſtand by him in the Extremity, which he informed them was now come upon him; whereto they reply'd, They would ſtand by him, if he could ſave them; and he Anſwer'd, By the help of God he did not fear it. All their Proviſions had been carried Aſhoar to a Tent, made for that purpoſe there; about which they had placed ſeveral Great Guns to defend it, in caſe of any Aſſault from Spaniards, that might happen to come that way. Wherefore Captain Phips immediately ordered thoſe Guns to be ſilently Drawn'd and Turn'd; and ſo pulling up the Bridge, he charged his Great Guns aboard, and brought them to Bear on every ſide of the Tent. By this Time the Army of Rebels comes out of the Woods; but as they drew near to the Tent of Proviſions, they ſaw ſuch a change of Circumſtances, that they cried out, We are Betray'd! And they were ſoon confirm'd in it, when they heard the Captain with a ſtern Fury call to them, Stand off, ye Wretches, at your Peril! He quickly ſaw them caſt into a more than ordinary Confuſion, when they ſaw Him ready to Fire his Great Guns upon them, if they offered one Step further than he permitted them: And when he had ſignified unto them his Reſolve to abandon them unto all the Deſolation which they had purpoſed for him, he cauſed the Bridge to be again laid, and his Men begun to take the Proviſions abroad. When the Wretches beheld what was coming upon them, they fell to very humble Entreaties; and at laſt fell down upon their Knees, proteſting, That they never had any thing againſt him, except only his unwillingneſs to go away with the King's Ship upon the South-Sea Deſign: But upon all other Accounts, they would chuſe rather to Live and Die with him, than with any Man in the World; however, ſince they ſaw how much he was diſſatisfied at it, they would inſiſt upon it no more, and humbly begg'd his Pardon. And when he judg'd that he had kept them on their Knees long enough, he having firſt ſecur'd their Arms, received them aboard; but he immediately weighed Anchor, and arriving at Jamaica, he Turn'd them off. Now with a ſmall Company of other Men he ſailed from thence to Hiſpaniola, where by the Policy of his Addreſs, he fiſhed out of a very old Spaniard, (or Portugueſe) a little Advice about the true Spot where lay the Wreck which he had been hitherto ſeeking, as unproſperouſly, as the Chymiſts have their Auriſick Stone: That it was upon a Reef of Shoals, a few Leagues to the Northward of Port de la Plata, upon Hiſpaniola, a Port ſo call'd, it ſeems, from the Landing of ſome of the Shipwreck'd Company, with a Boat full of Plate, ſaved out of their Sinking Frigot: Neverthele&szlig;, when he had ſearched very narrowly the Spot, whereof the old Spaniard had adviſed him, he had not hitherto exactly lit upon it. Such Thorns did vex his Affairs while he was in the Roſe-Frigot; but none of all theſe things could retund the Edge of his Expectations to find the Wreck; with ſuch Expectations he return'd then into England, that he might there better furniſh himſelf to Proſecute a New Diſcovery; for though he judged he might, by proceeding a little further, have come at the right Spot, yet he found his preſent Company too ill a Crew to be confided in.

§. 6. So proper was his Behaviour, that the beſt Noble Men in the Kingdom now admitted him into their Converſation; but yet he was oppoſed by powerful Enemies, that Clogg'd his Affairs with ſuch Demurrages, and ſuch Diſappointments, as would have wholly Diſcouraged his Deſigns, if his Patience had not been Invincible. He who can wait, hath what he deſireth. This his Indefatigable Patience, with a proportionable Diligence, at length overcame the Difficulties that had been thrown in his way; and prevailing with the Duke of Albemarle, and ſome other Perſons of Quality, to fit him out, he ſet Sail for the Fiſhing-Ground, which had been ſo well baited half an Hundred Years before: And as he had already diſcovered his Capacity for Buſineſs in many conſiderable Actions, he now added unto thoſe Diſcoveries, by not only providing all, but alſo by inventing many of the Inſtruments neceſſary to the proſecution of his intended Fiſhery. Captain Phips arriving with a Ship and a Tender at Port de la Plata, made a ſtout Canoo of a ſtately Cotton-Tree, ſo large as to carry Eight or Ten Oars, for the making of which Periaga (as they call it) he did, with the ſame induſtry that he did every thing elſe, employ his own Hand and Adſe, and endure no little hardſhip, lying abroad in the Woods many Nights together. This Periaga, with the Tender, being Anchored at a place Convenient, the Periaga kept Busking to and again, but could only diſcover a Reef of Riſing Shoals thereabouts, called, The Boilers, which Riſing to be within Two or Three Foot of the Surface of the Sea, were yet ſo ſteep, that a Ship ſtriking on them, would immediately ſink down, who could ſay, how many Fathom into the Ocean? Here they could get no other Pay for their long peeping among the Boilers, but only ſuch as cauſed them to think upon returning to their Captain with the bad News of their total Diſappointment. Neverthele&szlig;, as they were upon the Return, one of the Men looking over the ſide of the Periaga, into the calm Water, he ſpied a Sea Feather, growing, as he judged, out of a Rock; whereupon they bad one of their Indians to Dive and fetch this Feather, that they might however carry home ſomething with them, and make, at leaſt, as fair a Triumph as Caligula's.

The Diver bringing up the Feather, brought therewithal a ſurprizing Story, That he perceived a Number of Great Guns in the Watry World where he had found his Feather; the Report of which Great Guns exceedingly aſtoniſhed the whole Company; and at once turned their Deſpondencies for their ill ſucceſs into Aſſurances, that they had now lit upon the true Spot of Ground which they had been looking for; and they were further confirmed in theſe Aſſurances, when upon further Diving, the Indian fetcht up a Sow, as they ſtil'd it, or a Lump of Silver, worth perhaps Two or Three Hundred Pounds. Upon this they prudently Buoy'd the place, that they might readily find it again; and they went back unto their Captain whom for ſome while they diſtreſſed with nothing but ſuch Bad News, as they formerly thought they muſt have carried him: Nevertheleſs, they ſo ſlipt in the Sow of Silver on one ſide under the Table, where they were now ſitting with the Captain, and hearing him expreſs his Reſolutions to wait ſtill patiently upon the Providence of God under theſe Diſappointments, that when he ſhould look on one ſide, he might ſee that Odd Thing before him. At laſt he ſaw it; ſeeing it, he cried out with ſome Agony, Why? What is this? Whence comes this? And then, with changed Countenances, they told him how, and where they got it: Then, ſaid he, Thanks be to God! We are made; and ſo away they went, all hands to Work; wherein they had this one further piece of Remarkable Proſperity, that whereas if they had firſt fallen upon that part of the Spaniſh Wreck, where the Pieces of Eight had been ſtowed in Bags among the Ballaſt, they had ſeen a more laborious, and leſs enriching time of it: Now, moſt happily, they firſt fell upon that Room in the Wreck where the Bullion had been ſtored up; and they ſo proſpered in this New Fiſhery, that in a little while they had, without the loſs of any Man's Life, brought up Thirty Two Tuns of Silver; for it was now come to meaſuring of Silver by Tuns. Beſides which, one Adderly of Providence, who had formerly been very helpful to Captain Phips in the Search of this Wreck, did upon former Agreement meet him now with a little Veſſel here; and he, with his few hands, took up about Six Tuns of Silver; whereof nevertheleſs he made ſo little uſe, that in a Year or Two he Died at Bermudas, and as I have heard, he ran Diſtracted ſome while before he Died. Thus did there once again come into the Light of the Sun, a Treaſure which had been half an Hundred Years groaning under the Waters: And in this time there was grown upon the Plate a Cruſt like Limeſtone, to the thickneſs of ſeveral Inches; which Cruſt being broken open by Irons contrived for that purpoſe, they knockt out whole Buſhels of ruſty Pieces of Eight which were grown thereinto. Beſides that incredible Treaſure of Plate in various Forms, thus fetch'd up, from Seven or Eight Fathom under Water, there were vaſt Riches of Gold, and Pearls, and Jewels, which they alſo lit upon; and indeed, for a more Comprehenſive Invoice, I muſt but ſummarily ſay, All that a Spaniſh Frigot uſes to be enricht withal. Thus did they continue Fiſhing till their Proviſions failing them, 'twas time to be gone; but before they went, Captain Phips cauſed Adderly and his Folk to ſwear, That they would none of them Diſcover the Place of the Wreck, or come to the Place any more till the next Year, when he expected again to be there himſelf. And it was alſo Remarkable, that though the Sows came up ſtill ſo faſt, that on the very laſt Day of their being there, they took up Twenty, yet it was afterwards found, that they had in a manner wholly cleared that Room of the Ship where thoſe Maſſy things were Stowed.

But there was one extraordinary Diſtreſs which Captain Phips now found himſelf plunged into: For his Men were come out with him upon Seamens Wages, at ſo much per Month; and when they ſaw ſuch vaſt Litters of Silver Sows and Pigs, as they call them, come on Board them at the Captain's Call, they knew not how to bear it, that they ſhould not ſhare all among themſelves, and be gone to lead a ſhort Life and a merry, in a Climate where the Arreſt of thoſe that had hired them ſhould not reach them. In this terrible Diſtreſs he made his Vows unto Almighty God, that if the Lord would carry him ſafe home to England with what he had now given him, to ſuck of the Abundance of the Seas, and of the Treaſures hid in the Sands, he would for ever Devote himſelf unto the Intereſts of the Lord Jeſus Chriſt, and of his People, eſpecially in the Country which he did himſelf Originally belong unto. And he then uſed all the obliging Arts imaginable to make his Men true unto him, eſpecially by aſſuring them, that beſides their Wages, they ſhould have ample Requitals made unto them; which if the reſt of his Employers would not agree unto, he would himſelf diſtribute his own ſhare among them. Relying upon the Word of One whom they had ever found worthy of their Love, and of their Truſt, they declared themſelves Content: But ſtill keeping a moſt careful Eye upon them, he haſtned back for England with as much Money as he thought he could then ſafely Truſt his Veſſel withal; not counting it ſafe to ſupply himſelf with neceſſary Proviſions at any nearer Port, and ſo return unto the Wreck, by which delays he wiſely feared leſt all might be loſt, more ways than one. Though he alſo left ſo much behind him, that many from divers Parts made very conſiderable Voyages of Gleanings after his Harveſt: Which came to paſs by certain Bermudians, compelling of Adderly's Boy, whom they ſpirited away with them, to tell them the exact place where the Wreck was to be found. Captain Phips now coming up to London in the Year 1887. with near Three Hundred Thouſand Pounds Sterling aboard him, did acquit himſelf with ſuch an Exemplary Honeſty, that partly by his fulfilling his Aſſurances to the Seamen, and partly by his exact and punctual Care to have his Employers defrauded of nothing that might conſcienciouſly belong unto them, he had leſs than Sixteen Thouſand Pounds left unto himſelf: As an acknowledgment of which Honeſty in him, the Duke of Albemarle made unto his Wife, whom he never ſaw, a Preſent of a Golden Cup, near a Thouſand Pound in value. The Character of an Honeſt Man he had ſo merited in the whole Courſe of his Life, and eſpecially in this laſt act of it, that this, in Conjunction with his other ſerviceable Qualities, procured him the Favours of the Greateſt Perſons in the Nation; and he that had been ſo diligent in his Buſineſs, muſt now ſtand before Kings, and not ſtand before mean Men. There were indeed certain mean Men, if baſe, little, dirty Tricks, will entitle Men to Meanneſs, who urged the King to ſeize his whole Cargo, inſtead of the Tenths, upon his firſt Arrival; on this pretence, that he had not been rightly inform'd of the True ſtate of the Caſe, when he Granted the Patent, under the Protection whereof theſe particular Men had made themſelves Maſters of all this Mighty Treaſure; but the King replied, That he had been rightly informed by Captain Phips of the whole Matter, as it now proved; and that it was the Slanders of one then preſent, which had, unto his Damnage, hindred him from hearkning to the Information: Wherefore he would give them, he ſaid, no Diſturbance; they might keep what they had got; but Captain Phips, he ſaw, was a Perſon of that Honeſty, Fidelity and Ability, that he ſhould not want his Countenance. Accordingly the King, in Conſideration of the Service done by him, in bringing ſuch a Treaſure into the Nation, conferr'd upon him the Honour of Knighthood; and if we now reckon him, A Knight of the Golden Fleece, the Stile might pretend unto ſome Circumſtances that would juſtifie it. Or call him, if you pleaſe, The Knight of Honeſty; for it was Honeſty with Induſtry that raiſed him; and he became a Mighty River, without the running in of Muddy Water to make him ſo. Reader, now make a Pauſe, and behold One Raiſed by God!

§. 7. I am willing to Employ the Teſtimonies of others, as much as may be, to ſupport the Credit of my Hiſtory: And therefore, as I have hitherto related no more than what there are others Others enough to avouch; thus I ſhall chuſe the Words of an Ingenious Perſon Printed at London ſome Years ago, to expreſs the Sum of what remains, whoſe Words are theſe; 'It has always been Sir William Phips's 'Diſpoſition to ſeek the Wealth of his People 'with as great Zeal and Unweariedneſs, as 'our Publicans uſe to ſeek their Loſs and Ruin. 'At firſt it ſeems they were in hopes to gain 'this Gentleman to their Party, as thinking him 'Good Natur'd, and eaſie to be flattered out of 'his Underſtanding; and the more, becauſe 'they had the advantage of ſome, no very good, 'Treatment that Sir William had formerly met 'with from the People and Government of 'New-England. But Sir William ſoon ſhewed 'them, that what they expected would be his 'Temptation to lead them into their little Tricks, 'he embraced as a Glorious Opportunity to 'ſhew his Generoſity and Greatneſs of Mind; 'for, in Imitation of the Greateſt Worthies that 'have ever been, he rather choſe to join in the 'Defence of his Country, with ſome Perſons 'who formerly were none of his Friends, than 'become the Head of a Faction, to its Ruin and 'Deſolation. It ſeems this Noble Diſpoſition of 'Sir William, joined with that Capacity and 'good Succeſs wherewith he hath been attended, in Raiſing himſelf by ſuch an Occaſion, 'as it may be, all things conſidered, has never 'happened to any before him, makes theſe Men 'apprehenſive;——And it muſt needs heighten 'their trouble to ſee, that he neither hath, nor 'doth ſpare himſelf, nor any thing that is near 'and dear unto him, in promoting the Good of 'his Native Country.

When Sir William Phips was per ardua & aſpera, thus raiſed into an Higher Orb, it might eaſily be thought that he could not be without Charming Temptations to take the way on the left hand. But as the Grace of God kept him in the midſt of none of the ſtricteſt Company, unto which his Affairs daily led him, from abandoning himſelf to the lewd Vices of Gaming, Drinking, Swearing and Whoring, which the Men that made England to Sin, debauch'd ſo many of the Gentry into, and he deſerved the Salutations of the Roman Poet:

Cum Tu, inter ſcabiem tantam, & Contagia Lucri,
Nil parvum ſapias, & adhuc Sublimia cures:

Thus he was worthy to paſs among the Inſtances of Heroick Vertue for that Humility that ſtill Adorned him: He was Raiſed, and though he prudently accommodated himſelf to the Quality whereto he was now Raiſed, yet none could perceive him to be Lifted up. Or, if this were not Heroick, yet I will Relate one Thing more of him that muſt certainly be accounted ſo. He had in his own Country of New-England met with Provocations that were enough to have Alienated any Man Living, that had no more than Fleſh and Blood in him, from the Service of it; and ſome that were Enemies to that Country, now lay hard at him to join with them in their Endeavours to Raviſh away their Ancient Liberties. But this Gentleman had ſtudied another way to Revenge himſelf upon his Country, and that was to ſerve it in all its Intereſts, with all of his, even with his Eſtate, his Time, his Care, his Friends, and his very Life! The old Heathen Virtue of PIETAS IN PATRIAM, or, LOVE TO ONES COUNTRY, he turned into Chriſtian; and ſo notably exemplified it, in all the Reſt of his Life, that it will be an Eſſential Thread which is to be now interwoven into all that remains of his Hiſtory, and his Character. Accordingly though he had the Offers of a very Gainful Place among the Commiſſioners of the Navy, with many other Invitations to ſettle himſelf in England, nothing but a Return to New-England would content him. And whereas the Charters of New-England being taken away, there was a Governour Impoſed upon the Territories with as Arbitrary and as Treaſonable a Commiſſion, perhaps, as ever was heard of; a Commiſſion, by which the Governour, with Three or Four more, none of whom were choſen by the People, had Power to make what Laws they would, and Levy Taxes, according to their own Humours, upon the People; and he himſelf had Power to ſend the beſt Men in the Land more than Ten Thouſand Miles out of it, as he pleaſed: And in the Execution of his Power, the Country was every Day ſuffering Intollerable Invaſions upon their Proprieties, yea, and the Lives of the beſt Men in the Territory began to be practiſed upon: Sir William Phips applied himſelf to Conſider what was the moſt ſignificant Thing that could be done by him for that poor People in their preſent Circumſtances. Indeed, when King James offered, as he did, unto Sir William Phips an Opportunity to Ask what he pleaſed of him, Sir William Generouſly prayed for nothing but this, That New-England might have its loſt Priviledges Reſtored. The King then Replied, Any Thing but that! Whereupon he ſet himſelf to Conſider what was the next Thing that he might ask for the Service, not of himſelf, but of his Country. The Reſult of his Conſideration was, That by Petition to the King, he Obtained, with expence of ſome Hundreds of Guinea's, a Patent, which conſtituted him The High Sheriff of that Country; hoping, by his Deputies in that Office, to ſupply the Country ſtill with Conſciencious Juries, which was the only Method that the New-Englanders had left them to ſecure any thing that was Dear unto them. Furniſhed with this Patent, after he had, in Company with Sir John Narborough, made a Second Viſit unto the Wreck, (not ſo advantageous as the former for a Reaſon already mentioned) in his way he Returned unto New-England, in the Summer of the Year 1688. able, after Five Years Abſence, to Entertain his Lady with ſome Accompliſhment of his Predictions; and then Built himſelf a Fair Brick Houſe in the very place which we foretold, the Reader can tell how many Sections ago. But the Infamous Government then Rampant there, found a way wholly to put by the Execution of this Patent; yea, he was like to have had his Perſon Aſſaſſinated in the Face of the Sun, before his own Door, which with ſome further Deſigns then in his Mind, cauſed him within a few Weeks to take another Voyage for England.

§. 8. It would require a long Summers-Day to Relate the Miſeries which were come, and coming in upon poor New-England, by reaſon of the Arbitrary Government then impoſed on them; a Government wherein, as old Wendover ſays of the Time, when Strangers were domineering over Subjects in England, Judicia committebantur Injuſtis, Leges Exlegibus, Pax Diſcordantibus, Juſtitia Injurioſis; and Foxes were made the Adminiſtrators of Juſtice to the Poultrey; yet ſome Abridgment of them is neceſſary for the better underſtanding of the Matters yet before us. Now to make this Abridgment Impartial, I ſhall only have Recourſe unto a little Book, Printed at London, under the Title of The Revolution of New-England Juſtified; wherein we have a Narrative of the Grievances under the Male Adminiſtrations of that Government, written and ſigned by the chief Gentlemen of the Governour's Council; together with the Sworn Teſtimonies of many good Men, to prove the ſeveral Articles of the Declaration, which the New-Englanders publiſhed againſt their Oppreſſors. It is in that Book demonſtrated.

That the Governour neglecting the greater Number of his Council, did Adhere principally to the Advice of a few Strangers, who were Perſons without any Intereſt in the Country, but of declared Prejudice againſt it, and had plainly laid their Deſigns to make an Unreaſonable Profit of the poor People: And four or five Perſons had the abſolute Rule over a Territory, the moſt Conſiderable of any belonging to the Crown.

That when Laws were propoſed in the Council, tho' the Major part at any time Diſſented from them, yet if the Governour were poſitive, there was no fair Counting the Number of Councellors Conſenting, or Diſſenting, but the Laws were immediately Engroſſed, Publiſhed and Executed.

That this Junto made a Law, which prohibited the Inhabitants of any Town to meet about their Town-Affairs above once in a Year; for fear, you muſt Note, of their having any opportunity to Complain of Grievances.

That they made another Law, requiring all Maſters of Veſſels, even Shallops and Woodboats, to give Security, that no Man ſhould be Tranſported in them, except his Name had been ſo many Days poſted up: Whereby the Pockets of a few Leeches had been filled with Fees, but the whole Trade of the Country deſtroyed; and all Attempts to obtain a Redreſs of theſe Things obſtructed; and when this Act had been ſtrenuouſly oppoſed in Council at Boſton, they carried it as far as New-York, where a Crew of them enacted it.

That without any Aſſembly, they Levied on the People a Penny in the Pound of all their Eſtates, and Twenty-pence per Head, as Poll-money, with a Penny in the Pound for Goods Imported, beſides a Vaſt Exciſe on Wine, Rum, and other Liquors.

That when among the Inhabitants of Ipſwich, ſome of the Principal Perſons modeſtly gave Reaſons why they could not chuſe a Commiſſioner to Tax the Town, until the King ſhould firſt be Petitioned for the Liberty of an Aſſembly, they were committed unto Goal for it, as an High Miſdemeanour, and were denied an Habeas Corpus, and were dragg'd many Miles out of their own County to anſwer it at a Court in Boſton; where Jurors were pickt for the Turn, that were not Freeholders, nay, that were meer Sojourners; and when the Priſoners pleaded the Priviledges of Engliſh-men, That they ſhould not be Taxed without their own conſent; they were told, That thoſe things would not follow them to the ends of the Earth: As it had been before told them in open Council, no one in the Council contradicting it, You have no more Priviledges left you, but this, that you are not bought and ſold for Slaves: And in fine, they were all Fined ſeverely, and laid under great Bonds for their good Behaviour; beſides all which, the hungry Officers extorted Fees from them that amounted unto an Hundred and Threeſcore Pounds; whereas in England, upon the like Proſecution, the Fees would not have been Ten Pounds in all. After which faſhion the Townſmen of many other Places were alſo ſerved.

That theſe Men giving out, That the Charters being loſt, all the Title that the People had unto their Lands was loſt with them; they began to compel the People every where to take Patents for their Lands: And accordingly Writs of Intruſion were iſſued out againſt the chief Gentlemen in the Territory, by the Terror whereof, many were actually driven to Petition for Patents, that they might quietly enjoy the Lands that had been Fifty or Sixty Years in their Poſſeſſion; but for theſe Patents there were ſuch exorbitant Prices demanded, that Fifty Pounds could not purchaſe for its Owner an Eſtate not worth Two Hundred, nor could all the Money and Moveables in the Territory have defrayed the Charges of Patenting the Lands at the Hands of theſe Crocodiles: Beſides the conſiderable Quit-Rents for the King. Yea, the Governour cauſed the Lands of particular Perſons to be meaſured out, and given to his Creatures: And ſome of his Council Petitioned for the Commons belonging to ſeveral Towns; and the Agents of the Towns going to get a voluntary Subſcription of the Inhabitants to maintain their Title at Law, they have been dragg'd Forty or Fifty Miles to anſwer as Criminals at the next Aſſizes; the Officers in the mean time extorting Three Pounds per Man for fetching them.

That if theſe Harpies, at any time, were a little out of Money, they found ways to Impriſon the beſt Men in the Country; and there appeared not the leaſt Information of any Crime exhibited againſt them, yet they were put unto Intollerable Expences by theſe Greedy Oppreſſors, and the Benefit of an Habeas Corpus not allowed unto them.

That packt and pickt Juries were commonly made uſe of, when under a pretended Form of Law, the Trouble of ſome Honeſt and Worthy Men was aimed at; and theſe alſo were hurried out of their own Counties to be tried, when Juries for the Turn were not like to be found there. The Greateſt Rigour being uſed ſtill towards the ſobereſt ſort of People, whilſt in the mean time the moſt horrid Enormities in the World, committed by Others, were overlook'd.

That the publick Miniſtry of the Goſpel, and all Schools of Learning, were diſcountenanced unto the Utmoſt.

And ſeveral more ſuch abominable things, too notorious to be denied, even by a Randolphian Impudence it ſelf, are in that Book proved againſt that unhappy Government. Nor did that moſt Ancient Set of the Phœnician Shepherds, who ſcrued the Government of Egypt into their Hands, as old Manethon tells us, by their Villanies, during the Reigns of thoſe Tyrants, make a Shepherd more of an Abomination to the Egyptians in all after Ages, than theſe Wolves under the Name of Shepherds have made the Remembrance of their French Government an Abomination to all Poſterity among the New-Englanders: A Government, for which, now, Reader, as faſt as thou wilt, get ready this Epitaph:

Nulla quæſita Scelere Potentia diuturna.

It was under the Reſentments of theſe Things that Sir William Phips returned into England in the Year 1688. In which Twice-Wonderful-Year ſuch a Revolution was wonderfully accompliſhed upon the whole Government of the Engliſh Nation, that New-England, which had been a Specimen of what the whole Nation was to look for, might juſtly hope for a ſhare in the General Deliverance. Upon this Occaſion Sir William offered his beſt Aſſiſtances unto that Eminent Perſon, who a little before this Revolution betook himſelf unto White-Hall, that he might there lay hold on all Opportunities to procure ſome Relief unto the Oppreſſions of that afflicted Country. But ſeeing the New-Engliſh Affairs in ſo able an Hand, he thought the beſt Stage of Action for him would now be New-England it ſelf; and ſo with certain Inſtructions from none of the leaſt conſiderable Perſons at White-Hall, what Service to do for his Country, in the Spring of the Year 1689. he haſtened back unto it. Before he left London, a Meſſenger from the Abdicated King tender'd him the Government of New-England, if he would accept it: But as that excellent Attorney General, Sir William Jones, when it was propoſed that the Plantations might be Governed without Aſſemblies, told the King, That he could no more Grant a Commiſſion to levy Money on his Subjects there, without their conſent by an Aſſembly, than they could Diſcharge themſelves from their Allegiance to the Engliſh Crown. So Sir William Phips thought it his Duty to refuſe a Government without an Aſſembly, as a thing that was Treaſon in the very Eſſence of it; and inſtead of Petitioning the ſucceeding Princes, that his Patent for High Sheriff might be rendred Effectual, he joined in Petitions, that New-England might have its own old Patent ſo Reſtored, as to render ineffectual that, and all other Grants that might cut ſhort any of its Ancient Priviledges. But when Sir William arrived at New-England, he found a new Face of things; for about an Hundred Indians in the Eaſtern Parts of the Country, had unaccountably begun a War upon the Engliſh in July, 1688. and though the Governour then in the Weſtern Parts had immediate Advice of it, yet he not only delayed and neglected all that was neceſſary for the Publick Defence, but alſo when he at laſt returned, he manifeſted a moſt Furious Diſpleaſure againſt thoſe of the Council, and all others that had forwarded any one thing for the ſecurity of the Inhabitants; while at the ſame time he diſpatched ſome of his Creatures upon ſecret Errands unto Canada, and ſet at Liberty ſome of the moſt Murderous Indians which the Engliſh had ſeized upon.

This Conduct of the Governour, which is in a Printed Remonſtrance of ſome of the beſt Gentlemen in the Council complained of, did extreamly diſſatisfie the Suſpicious People: Who were doubtleſs more extream in ſome of their Suſpicions, than there was any real Occaſion for: But the Governour at length raiſed an Army of a Thouſand Engliſh to Conquer this Hundred Indians; and this Army, whereof ſome of the chief Commanders were Papiſts, underwent the Fatigues of a long and a cold Winter, in the moſt Caucaſæan Regions of the Territory, till, without the killing of One Indian, there were more of the poor People killed, than they had Enemies there alive! This added not a little to the Diſſatisfaction of the People; and it would much more have done ſo, if they had ſeen what the World had not yet ſeen of the Suggeſtions made by the Iriſh Catholicks unto the Late King, publiſhed in the Year 1691. in the Account of the State of the Proteſtants in Ireland, Licenſed by the Earl of Nottingham, whereof one Article runs in theſe Expreſs Terms, That if any of the Iriſh cannot have their Lands in Specie, but Money in Lieu, ſome of them may Tranſport themſelves into America, poſſibly near New-England, to check the growing Independants of that Country: Or if they had ſeen what was afterwards ſeen in a Letter from K. James to His Holineſs, (as they ſtile his Fooliſhneſs) the Pope of Rome; that it was his full Purpoſe to have ſet up Roman-Catholick Religion in the Engliſh Plantations of America: Tho' after all, there is Cauſe to think that there was more made of the Suſpicions then flying like Wild-Fire about the Country, than a ſtrong Charity would have Countenanced. When the People were under theſe Frights, they had got by the Edges a little Intimation of the then Prince of Orange's glorious Undertaking to deliver England from the Feared Evils, which were already felt by New-England; but when the Perſon who brought over a Copy of the Prince's Declaration was Impriſoned for bringing into the Country a Treaſonable Paper, and the Governour, by his Proclamation, required all Perſons to uſe their utmoſt Endeavours to hinder the Landing of any whom the Prince might ſend thither, this put them almoſt out of Patience. And one thing that plunged the more Conſiderate Perſons in the Territory into uneaſie thoughts, was the Faulty Action of ſome Soldiers, who upon the Common Suſpicions, deſerted their Stations in the Army, and cauſed their Friends to gather together here and there in little Bodies, to protect from the Demands of the Governour their poor Children and Brethren, whom they thought bound for a Bloody Sacrifice: And there were alſo belonging to the Roſe-Frigot ſome that buzz'd ſurprizing Stories about Boſton, of many Miſchiefs to be thence expected. Wherefore, ſome of the Principal Gentlemen in Boſton conſulting what was to be done in this Extraordinary Juncture, They all agreed that they would, if it were poſſible, extinguiſh all Eſſays in the People towards an Inſurrection, in daily Hopes of Orders from England for their Safety: But that if the Country People by any violent Motions puſh'd the Matter on ſo far, as to make a Revolution unavoidable, then to prevent the ſhedding of Blood by an ungoverned Mobile, ſome of the Gentlemen preſent ſhould appear at the Head of the Action with a Declaration accordingly prepared. By the Eighteenth of April, 1689. Things were puſhed on ſo far by the People, that certain Perſons firſt Seized the Captain of the Frigot, and the Rumor thereof running like Lightning through Boſton, the whole Town was immediately in Arms, with the moſt Unanimous Reſolution perhaps that ever was known to have Inſpir'd any People. They then ſeized thoſe Wretched Men, who by their innumerable Extortions and Abuſes had made themſelves the Objects of Univerſal Hatred; not giving over till the Governour himſelf was become their Priſoner: The whole Action being managed without the leaſt Bloodſhed or Plunder, and with as much Order as ever attended any Tumult, it may be, in the World. Thus did the New-Englanders aſſert their Title to the Common Rights of Engliſhmen; and except the Plantations are willing to Degenerate from the Temper of True Engliſhmen, or except the Revolution of the whole Engliſh Nation be condemned, their Action muſt ſo far be juſtified. On their late Oppreſſors, now under juſt Confinement, they took no other Satiſfaction, but ſent them over unto White-Hall for the Juſtice of the King and Parliament. And when the Day for the Anniverſary Election, by their vacated Charter, drew near, they had many Debates into what Form they ſhould caſt the Government, which was till then Adminiſtred by a Committee for the Conſervation of the Peace, compoſed of Gentlemen whoſe Hap it was to appear in the Head of the late Action; but their Debates Iſſued in this Concluſion; That the Governour and Magiſtrates, which were in Power before the late Uſurpation, ſhould Reſume their Places, and apply themſelves unto the Conſervation of the Peace, and put forth what Acts of Government the Emergencies might make needful for them, and thus to wait for further Directions from the Authority of England. So was there Accompliſhed a Revolution which delivered New-England from grievous Oppreſſions, and which was moſt graciouſly Accepted by the King and Queen, when it was Reported unto their Majeſties. But there were new Matters for Sir William Phips, in a little while, now to think upon.

§. 9. Behold the great things which were done by the Sovereign God, for a Perſon once as little in his own Eyes, as in other Mens. All the Returns which he had hitherto made unto the God of his Mercies, were but Preliminaries to what remain to be related. It has been the Cuſtom in the Churches of New-England, ſtill to expect from ſuch Perſons as they admitted unto conſtant Communion with them, that they do not only Publickly and Solemnly Declare their Conſent unto the Covenant of Grace, and particularly to thoſe Duties of it, wherein a Particular Church-State is more immediately concerned, but alſo firſt relate unto the Paſtors, and by them unto the Brethren, the ſpecial Impreſſions which the Grace of God has made upon their Souls in bringing them to this Conſent. By this Cuſtom and Caution, though they cannot keep Hypocrites from their Sacred Fellowſhip, yet they go as far as they can, to render and preſerve themſelves Churches of Saints, and they do further very much Edifie one another. When Sir William Phips was now returned unto his own Houſe, he began to bethink himſelf, like David, concerning the Houſe of the God who had ſurrounded him with ſo many Favours in his own; and accordingly he applied himſelf unto the North Church in Boſton, that with his open Profeſſion of his Hearty Subjection to the Goſpel of the Lord Jeſus Chriſt, he might have the Ordinances and the Priviledges of the Goſpel added unto his other Enjoyments. One thing that quickned his Reſolution to do what might be in this Matter expected from him, was a Paſſage which he heard from a Miniſter Preaching on the Title of the Fifty-Firſt Pſalm: To make a publick and an open Profeſſion of Repentance, is a thing not miſbecoming the greateſt Man alive. It is an Honour to be found among the Repenting People of God, though they be in Circumſtances never ſo full of Suffering. A Famous Knight going with other Chriſtians to be Crowned with Martyrdom, obſerved, That his Fellow-Sufferers were in Chains, from which the Sacrificers had, becauſe of his Quality, excus'd him; whereupon he demanded, that he might wear Chains as well as they. For, ſaid he, I would be a Knight of that Order too; There is among our ſelves a Repenting People of God, who by their Confeſſions at their Admiſſions to his Table, do ſignalize their being ſo; and thanks be to God that we have ſo little of Suffering in our Circumſtances. But if any Man count himſelf grown too big to be a Knight of that Order, the Lord Jeſus Chriſt himſelf will one Day be aſhamed of that Man! Upon this Excitation, Sir William Phips made his Addreſs unto a Congregational-Church, and he had therein one thing to propound unto himſelf, which few Perſons of his Age, ſo well ſatisfied in Infant-Baptiſm as he was, have then to ask for. Indeed, in the Primitive Times, although the Lawfulneſs of Infant-Baptiſm, or the Precept and Pattern of Scripture for it, was never ſo much as once made a Queſtion, yet we find Baptiſm was frequently delayed by Perſons upon ſeveral ſuperſtitious and unreaſonable Accounts, againſt which we have ſuch Fathers as Gregory Nazianzen, Gregory Nyſſen, Baſil, Chryſoſtom, Ambroſe, and others, employing a variety of Argument. But Sir William Phips had hitherto delayed his Baptiſm, becauſe the Years of his Childhood were ſpent where there was no ſettled Miniſter, and therefore he was now not only willing to attain a good Satisfaction of his own Internal and Practical Chriſtianity, before his receiving that Mark thereof, but he was alſo willing to receive it among thoſe Chriſtians that ſeemed moſt ſenſible of the Bonds which it laid them under. Offering himſelf therefore, firſt unto the Baptiſm, and then unto the Supper of the Lord, he preſented unto the Paſtor of the Church, with his own Hand-Writing, the following Inſtrument; which becauſe of the Exemplary Devotion therein expreſſed, and the Remarkable Hiſtory which it gives of ſeveral Occurrences in his Life, I will here faithfully Tranſcribe it, without adding ſo much as one Word unto it.

'The firſt of God's making me ſenſible of my Sins, was in the Year 1674. by hearing your Father Preach concerning, The Day of Trouble near. It pleaſed Almighty God to ſmite me with a deep Sence of my miſerable Condition, who had lived until then in the World, and had done nothing for God. I did then begin to think what I ſhould do to be ſaved? And did bewail my Youthful Days, which I had ſpent in vain: I did think that I would begin to mind the things of God. Being then ſome time under your Father's Miniſtry, much troubled with my Burden, but thinking on that Scripture, Come unto me, you that are weary and heavy Laden, and I will give you Reſt; I had ſome thoughts of drawing as near to the Communion of the Lord Jeſus as I could; but the Ruins which the Indian Wars brought on my Affairs, and the Entanglements which my following the Sea laid upon me, hindred my purſuing the Welfare of my own Soul as I ought to have done. At length God was pleaſed to ſmile upon my Outward Concerns. The various Providences, both Merciful and Afflictive, which attended me in my Travels, were ſanctified unto me, to make me Acknowledge God in all my Ways. I have divers Times been in danger of my Life, and I have been brought to ſee that I owe my Life to him that has given a Life ſo often to me: I thank God, he hath brought me to ſee my ſelf altogether unhappy, without an Intereſt in the Lord Jeſus Chriſt, and to cloſe heartily with him, deſiring him to Execute All his Offices on my Behalf. I have now, for ſome time, been under ſerious Reſolutions, that I would avoid whatever I ſhould know to be Diſpleaſing unto God, and that I would Serve him all the Days of my Life. I believe no Man will Repent the Service of ſuch a Maſter. I find my ſelf unable to keep ſuch Reſolutions, but my ſerious Prayers are to the Moſt High, that he would enable me. God hath done ſo much for me, that I am ſenſible I owe my ſelf to him; To him would I give my ſelf, and all that he has given to me. I can't expreſs his Mercies to me. But as ſoon as ever God had ſmiled upon me with a Turn of my Affairs, I had laid my ſelf under the VOWS of the Lord, That I would ſet my ſelf to ſerve his People, and Churches here, unto the utmoſt of my Capacity. I have had great Offers made me in England; but the Churches of New-England were thoſe which my Heart was moſt ſet upon. I knew, That if God had a People any where, it was here: And I Reſolved to riſe and fall with them; neglecting very great Advantages for my Worldly Intereſt, that I might come and enjoy the Ordinances of the Lord Jeſus here. It has been my Trouble, that ſince I came Home I have made no more haſte to get into the Houſe of God, where I deſire to be: Eſpecially having heard ſo much about the Evil of that Omiſſion. I can do little for God, but I deſire to wait upon him in his Ordinances, and to live to his Honour and Glory. My being Born in a part of the Country, where I had not in my Infancy enjoyed the Firſt Sacrament of the New-Teſtament, has been ſomething of a Stumbling-Block unto me. But though I have had Profers of Baptiſm elſewhere made unto me, I reſolved rather to defer it, until I might enjoy it in the Communion of theſe Churches; and I have had awful Impreſſions from thoſe Words of the Lord Jeſus in Matth. 8. 38. Whoſoever ſhall be aſhamed of me, and of my Words, of him alſo ſhall the Son of Man be aſhamed. When God had bleſſed me with ſomething of the World, I had no Trouble ſo great as this, Leſt it ſhould not be in Mercy; and I trembled at nothing more than being put off with a Portion here. That I may make ſure of better things, I now offer my ſelf unto the Communion of this Church of the Lord JESUS.

Accordingly on March 23. 1690. after he had in the Congregation of North-Boſton given himſelf up, firſt unto the Lord, and then unto his People, he was Baptized, and ſo received into the Communion of the Faithful there.

§. 10. Several times, about, before and after this time, did I hear him expreſs himſelf unto this purpoſe: I have no need at all to look after any further Advantages for my ſelf in this World; I may ſit ſtill at Home, if I will, and enjoy my Eaſe for the reſt of my Life; but I believe that I ſhould offend God in my doing ſo: For I am now in the Prime of my Age and Strength, and, I thank God, I can undergo Hardſhip: He only knows how long I have to live; but I think 'tis my Duty to venture my Life in doing of good, before an uſeleſs Old Age comes upon me: Whereſore I will now expoſe my ſelf, while I am able, and as far as I am able, for the Service of my Country: I was Born for others, as well as my ſelf. I ſay, many a time have I heard him ſo expreſs himſelf: And agreeable to this Generous Diſpoſition and Reſolution was all the reſt of his Life. About this time New England was miſerably Briar'd in the Perplexities of an Indian War; and the Salvages, in the Eaſt part of the Country, iſſuing out from their inacceſſible Swamps, had for many Months made their Cruel Depredations upon the poor Engliſh Planters, and ſurprized many of the Plantations on the Frontiers, into Ruin. The New-Englanders found, that while they continued only on the Defenſive part, their People were thinned, and their Treaſures waſted, without any hopes of ſeeing a Period put unto the Indian Tragedies; nor could an Army greater than Xerxes's have eaſily come at the ſeemingly contemptible handful of Tawnies which made all this Diſturbance; or, Tamerlain, the greateſt Conqueror that ever the World ſaw, have made it a Buſineſs of no Trouble to have Conquered them: They found, that they were like to make no Weapons reach their Enſwamped Adverſaries, except Mr. Milton could have ſhown them how

To have pluckt up the Hills with all their Load,
Rocks, Waters, Woods, and by their ſhaggy tops,
Up-lifting, bore them in their Hands, therewith
The Rebel Hoſt to've over-whelm'd——

So it was thought that the Engliſh Subjects, in theſe Regions of America, might very properly take this occaſion to make an attempt upon the French, and by reducing them under the Engliſh Government, put an Eternal Period at once unto all their Troubles from the Frenchified Pagans. This was a Motion urged by Sir William Phips unto the General Court of the Maſſachuſet-Colony; and he then made unto the Court a brave Offer of his own Perſon and Eſtate, for the Service of the Publick in their preſent Extremity, as far as they ſhould ſee Cauſe to make uſe thereof. Whereupon they made a Firſt Eſſay againſt the French, by ſending a Naval Force, with about Seven Hundred Men, under the Conduct of Sir William Phips, againſt L'Acady and Nova Scotia; of which Action we ſhall give only this General and Summary Account; that Sir William Phips ſet Sail from Nantaſcot, April 28. 1690. Arriving at Port-Royal, May 11. and had the Fort quickly Surrender'd into his Hands by the French Enemy, who deſpaired of holding out againſt him. He then took Poſſeſſion of that Province for the Engliſh Crown, and having Demoliſhed the Fort, and ſent away the Garriſon, Adminiſtred unto the Planters an Oath of Allegiance to King William and Queen Mary, he left what Order he thought convenient for the Government of the Place, until further Order ſhould be taken by the Governour and Council of the Maſſachuſet-Colony, unto whom he returned May 30. with an acceptable Account of his Expedition, and accepted a Place among the Magiſtrates of that Colony, to which the Free-Men had choſen him at their Anniverſary Election Two Days before.

Thus the Country, once given by King James the Firſt unto Sir William Alexander, was now by another Sir William recovered out of the Hands of the French, who had afterwards got the Poſſeſſion of it; and there was added unto the Engliſh Empire, a Territory, whereof no Man can Read Monſieur Denys's Deſcription Geographique & Hiſtorique des Coſtes de l' Amerique Septentrionale, but he muſt reckon the Conqueſt of a Region ſo Improvable, for Lumber, for Fiſhing, for Mines, and for Furrs, a very conſiderable Service. But if a ſmaller Service has, e'er now, ever merited a Knighthood, Sir William was willing to Repeat his Merits by Actions of the greateſt Service poſſible:

Nil Actum credens, ſi quid ſupereſſet agendum.

§. 11. The Addition of this French Colony to the Engliſh Dominion, was no more than a little ſtep towards a greater Action, which was firſt in the Deſign of Sir William Phips, and which was, indeed, the greateſt Action that ever the New-Englanders Attempted. There was a time when the Philiſtines had made ſome Inroads and Aſſaults from the Northward, upon the Skirts of Goſhen, where the Iſraelites had a Reſidence, before their coming out of Egypt. The Iſraelites, and eſpecially that Active Colony of the Ephraimites, were willing to Revenge theſe Injuries upon their wicked Neighbours; they preſumed themſelves Powerful and Numerous enough to Encounter the Canaanites, even in their own Country; and they formed a briſk Expedition, but came off unhappy Loſers in it; the Jewiſh Rabbins tells us, they loſt no leſs than Eight Thouſand Men. The Time was not yet come; there was more Haſte than good Speed in the Attempt; they were not enough concerned for the Counſel and Preſence of God in the Undertaking; they mainly propounded the Plunder to be got among a People, whoſe Trade was that wherewith Beaſts enriched them; ſo the buſineſs miſcarried. This Hiſtory the Pſalmiſt going to recite, ſays, I will utter dark Sayings of old. Now that what befel Sir William Phips, with his whole Country of New-England, may not be almoſt forgotten among the dark Sayings of old, I will here give the true Report of a very memorable Matter.

It was Canada that was the chief Source of New-England's Miſeries. There was the main Strength of the French; there the Indians were moſtly ſupplied with Ammunition; thence Iſſued Parties of Men, who uniting with the Salvages, barbarouſly murdered many Innocent New-Englanders, without any Provocation on the New-Engliſh part, except this, that New-England had Proclaimed King William and Q. Mary, which they ſaid were Uſurpers; and as Cato could make no Speech in the Senate without that Concluſion, Delenda eſt Carthago; ſo it was the general Concluſion of all that Argued ſenſibly about the ſafety of that Country, Canada muſt be Reduced. It then became the concurring Reſolution of all New-England, with New-York, to make a Vigorous Attack upon Canada at once, both by Sea and Land.

And a Fleet was accordingly fitted out from Boſton, under the Command of Sir William Phips, to fall upon Quebeque, the chief City of Canada. They waited until Auguſt for ſome Stores of War from England, whither they had ſent for that purpoſe early in the Spring; but none at laſt arriving, and the Seaſon of the Year being ſo far ſpent, Sir William could not, without many Diſcouragements upon his Mind, proceed in a Voyage, for which he found himſelf ſo poorly provided. However, the Ships being taken up, and the Men on Board, his uſual Courage would not permit him to Deſiſt from the Enterprize; but he ſet Sail from Hull near Boſton, Auguſt 9. 1690. with a Fleet of Thirty Two Ships and Tenders; whereof one, called the Six Friends, carrying Forty Four great Guns, and Two Hundred Men, was Admiral. Sir William dividing the Fleet into ſeveral Squadrons, whereof there was the Six Friends, Captain Gregory Sugars Commander, with Eleven more of the Admiral's Squadron, of which one was alſo a Capital Ship, namely, The John and Thomas, Captain Thomas Carter Commander; of the Vice-Admirals, the Swan, Captain Thomas Gilbert Commander, with Nine more; of the Rear-Admirals, the America-Merchant, Captain Joſeph Eldridge Commander, with Nine more; and above Twenty Hundred Men on Board the whole Fleet: He ſo happily managed his Charge, that they every one of them Arrived ſafe at Anchor before Quebeck, although they had as dangerous, and almoſt untrodden a Path, to take Un-Piloted, for the whole Voyage, as ever any Voyage was undertaken with. Some ſmall French Prizes he took by the way, and ſet up Engliſh Colours upon the Coaſt, here and there, as he went along; and before the Month of Auguſt was out, he had ſpent ſeveral Days as far onward of his Voyage, as between the Iſland of Antecoſta, and the Main. But when they entred the mighty River of Canada, ſuch adverſe Winds encountred the Fleet, that they were Three Weeks diſpatching the way, which might otherwiſe have been gone in Three Days, and it was the Fifth of October, when a freſh Breeze coming up at Eaſt, carried them along by the North Shore, up to the Iſle of Orleans; and then haling Southerly, they paſſed by the Eaſt end of that Iſland, with the whole Fleet approaching the City of Quebeck. This loſs of Time, which made it ſo late before the Fleet could get into the Country, where a cold and fierce Winter was already very far advanced, gave no very good Proſpect of Succeſs to the Expedition; but that which gave a much worſe, was a moſt horrid Miſmanagement, which had, the mean while, happened in the Weſt. For a Thouſand Engliſh from New-York, and Albany, and Connecticut, with Fifteen Hundred Indians, were to have gone over-land in the Weſt, and fallen upon Mount-Royal, while the Fleet was to Viſit Quebeck in the Eaſt; and no Expedition could have been better laid than This, which was thus contrived. But thoſe Engliſh Companies in the Weſt, marching as far as the great Lake that was to be paſſed, found their Canoos not provided, according to Expectation; and the Indians alſo were [How? God knows, and will one Day Judge! Diſſuaded from Joining with the Engliſh; and the Army met with ſuch Diſcouragements, that they returned.

Had this Weſtern Army done but ſo much as continued at the Lake, the Diverſion thereby given to the French Quartered at Mount-Royal, would have rendered the Conqueſt of Quebeck eaſie and certain; but the Governour of Canada being Informed of the Retreat made by the Weſtern-Army, had opportunity, by the croſs Winds that kept back the Fleet, unhappily to get the whole Strength of all the Country into the City, before the Fleet could come up unto it. However, none of theſe Difficulties hindred Sir William Phips from ſending on Shoar the following Summons, on Monday the Sixth of October.

Sir William Phips, Knight, General and Commander in Chief, in and over Their Majeſties Forces of New-England, by Sea and Land;

To Count Frontenac, Lieutenant-General and Governour for the French King at Canada; or in his Abſence, to his Deputy, or Him, or Them, in Chief Command at Quebeck.

THE War between the Two Crowns of England and France, doth not only ſufficiently Warrant, but the Deſtruction made by the French and Indians, under your Command and Encouragement, upon the Perſons and Eſtates of Their Majeſties Subjects of New-England, without Provocation on their part, hath put them under the Neceſſity of this Expedition, for their own Security and Satisfaction. And although the Cruelties and Barbarities uſed againſt them, by the French and Indians, might, upon the preſent Opportunity, prompt unto a ſevere Revenge, yet being deſirous to avoid all Inhumane and Unchriſtian-like Actions, and to prevent ſhedding of Blood as much as may be;

I the aforeſaid Sir William Phips, Knight, do hereby, in the Name, and in the Behalf of Their Moſt Excellent Majeſties, William and Mary, King and Queen of England, Scotland, France and Ireland, Defenders of the Faith; and by Order of Their ſaid Majeſties Government of the Maſſachuſet-Colony in New-England, Demand a preſent Surrender of your Forts and Caſtles, undemoliſhed, and the King's, and other Stores, unimbezzelled, with a ſeaſonable Delivery of all Captives; together with a Surrender of all your Perſons and Eſtates to my Diſpoſe: Upon the doing whereof you may expect Mercy from me, as a Chriſtian, according to what ſhall be found for Their Majeſties Service, and the Subjects Security. Which if you Refuſe forthwith to do, I am come Provided, and am Reſolved, by the help of God, in whom I truſt, by Force of Arms, to Revenge all Wrongs and Injuries offered, and bring you under Subjection to the Crown of England; and when too late, make you wiſh you had accepted of the Favour tendered.

Your Anſwer Poſitive in an Hour, returned by your own Trumpet, with the Return of mine, is Required, upon the Peril that will enſue.

The Summons being Delivered unto Count Frontenac, his Anſwer was;

That Sir William Phips, and thoſe with him, were Hereticks and Traitors to their King, and had taken up with that Uſurper, the Prince of Orange, and had made a Revolution, which if it had not been made, New-England and the French had been all One; and that no other Anſwer was to be expected from him, but what ſhould be from the Mouth of his Cannon.

General Phips now ſaw that it muſt coſt him Dry Blows, and that he muſt Roar his Perſwaſions out of the Mouths of Great Guns, to make himſelf Maſter of a City which had certainly Surrender'd it ſelf unto him, if he had arrived but a little ſooner, and Summon'd it before the coming down of Count Frontenac with all his Forces, to Command the oppreſſed People there, who would have been, many of them, glader of coming under the Engliſh Government. Wherefore on the Seventh of October, the Engliſh, that were for the Land-Service, went on Board their leſſer Veſſels, in order to Land; among which there was a Bark, wherein was Captain Ephraim Savage, with ſixty Men, that ran a-ground upon the North-Shoar, near two Miles from Quebeck, and could not get off, but lay in the ſame Diſtreſs that Scæva did, when the Britains poured in their Numbers upon the Bark, wherein he, with a few more Soldiers of Cæſar's Army, were, by the diſadvantage of the Tide, left Aſhoar: The French, with Indians, that ſaw them lye there, came near, and Fired thick upon them, and were bravely Anſwered; and when two or Three Hundred of the Enemy, at laſt planted a Field-Piece againſt the Bark, while the Wind blew ſo hard, that no help could be ſent unto his Men, the General advanced ſo far, as to Level Two or Three great Guns, conveniently enough to make the Aſſailants Fly; and when the Flood came, the Bark happily got off, without the hurt of one Man aboard. But ſo violent was the Storm of Wind all this Day, that it was not poſſible for them to Land until the Eighth of October; when the Engliſh counting every Hour to be a Week until they were come to Battel, vigorouſly got Aſhoar, deſigning to enter the Eaſt-end of the City. The Small-Pox had got into the Fleet, by which Diſtemper prevailing, the number of Effective Men which now went Aſhoar, under the Command of Lieutenant General Walley, did not amount unto more than Fourteen Hundred; but Four Companies of theſe were drawn out as Forlorns, whom, on every ſide, the Enemy fired at; nevertheleſs, the Engliſh Ruſhing with a ſhout, at once upon them cauſed them to Run as faſt as Legs could carry them: So that the whole Engliſh Army, expreſſing as much Reſolution as was in Cæſar's Army, when they firſt landed on Britain, in ſpight of all oppoſition from the Inhabitants, marched on until it was dark, having firſt killed many of the French, with the loſs of but Four Men of their own; and frighted about Seven or Eight Hundred more of the French from an Ambuſcado, where they lay ready to fall upon them. But ſome thought, that by ſtaying in the Valley, they took the way never to get over the Hill: And yet for them to ſtay where they were, till the ſmaller Veſſels came up the River before them, ſo far as by their Guns to ſecure the Paſſage of the Army in their getting over, was what the Council of War had ordered. But the Violence of the Weather, with the General's being ſooner plunged into the heat of Action than was intended, hindred the ſmaller Veſſels from attending that Order. And this Evening a French Deſerter coming to them, aſſured them, that Nine Hundred Men were on their March from Quebeck to meet them, already paſſed a little Rivulet that lay at the end of the City, but ſeeing them Land ſo ſuddenly, and ſo valiantly run down thoſe that firſt Encounted them, they had Retreated: Nevertheleſs, That Count Frontenac was come down to Quebeck with no fewer than Thirty Hundred Men to defend the City, having left but Fifty Souldiers to defend Mount Real, becauſe they had underſtood, that the Engliſh Army on that ſide, were gone back to Albany. Notwithſtanding this diſ-ſpiriting Information, the common Souldiers did with much vehemency Beg and Pray, that they might be led on; profeſſing, that they had rather loſe their Lives on the Spot, than fail of taking the City; but the more wary Commanders conſidered how raſh a thing it would be, for about Fourteen Hundred Raw Men, tired with a long Voyage, to aſſault more than Twice as many Expert Souldiers, who were Galli in ſuo ſterquilinio, or Cocks Crowing on their own Dunghil. They were, in truth, now gotten into the grievous Caſe which Livy deſcribes, when he ſays, Ibi grave eſt Bellum gerere, ubi non conſiſtendi aut procedendi locus; quocunque aſpexeris Hoſtilia ſunt omnia; look on one ſide or t'other, all was full of Hoſtile Difficulties. And indeed, whatever Popular Clamour has been made againſt any of the Commanders, it is apparent that they acted conſiderately, in making a Pauſe upon what was before them; and they did a greater kindneſs to their Souldiers than they have ſince been thanked for. But in this time, General Phips and his Men of War, with their Canvas Wings, flew cloſe up unto the Weſt-end of the City, and there he behaved himſelf with the greateſt Bravery imaginable; nor did the other Men of War forbear to follow his brave Example: Who never diſcovered himſelf more in his Element, than when (as the Poet expreſſeth it,)

The Slaughter Breathing Braſs grew hot, and ſpoke
In Flames of Lightning, and in Clouds of Smoke:

He lay within Piſtol-ſhot of the Enemies Cannon, and beat them from thence, and very much batter'd the Town, having his own Ship ſhot through in almoſt an Hundred Places with Four and Twenty Pounders, and yet but one Man was killed, and only Two Mortally Wounded Aboard him, in this hot Engagement, which continued the greateſt part of that Night, and ſeveral Hours of the Day enſuing. But wondring that he ſaw no Signal of any Effective Action Aſhoar at the Eaſt-end of the City, he ſent that he might know the Condition of the Army there; and received Anſwer, That ſeveral of the Men were ſo frozen in their Hands and Feet, as to be diſabled from Service, and others were apace falling ſick of the Small-Pox. Whereupon he order'd them on Board immediately to refreſh themſelves, and he intended then to have renew'd his Attack upon the City, in the Method of Landing his Men in the Face of it, under the ſhelter of his great Guns; having to that purpoſe provided alſo a conſiderable number of well-ſhaped Wheel-Barrows, each of them carrying Two Petarraro's apiece, to March before the Men, and make the Enemy Fly, with as much Contempt as overwhelmed the Philiſtines, when undone by Foxes with Torches in their Tails; (remembred in an Anniverſary Diverſion every April among the Ancient Romans, taught by the Phenicians.)

While the Meaſures to be further taken were debating, there was made an Exchange of Priſoners, the Engliſh having taken ſeveral of the French in divers Actions, and the French having in their Hands divers of the Engliſh, whom the Indians had brought Captives unto them. The Army now on Board continued ſtill Reſolute and Couragious, and on fire for the Conqueſt of Quebeck; or if they had miſſed of doing it by Storm, they knew that they might, by poſſeſſing themſelves of the Iſle of Orleans, in a little while have ſtarved them out. Incredible Damage they might indeed have done to the Enemy before they Embarked, but they were willing to preſerve the more undefenſible Parts of the Country in ſuch a Condition, as might more ſenſibly Encourage the Submiſſion of the Inhabitants unto the Crown of England, whoſe Protection was deſired by ſo many of them. And ſtill they were loth to play for any leſſer Game than the immediate Surrender of Quebeck it ſelf. But e're a full Council of War could conclude the next Steps to be taken, a violent Storm aroſe that ſeparated the Fleet, and the Snow and the Cold became ſo extream, that they could not continue in thoſe Quarters any longer.

Thus, by an evident Hand of Heaven, ſending one unavoidable Diſaſter after another, as well-formed an Enterprize, as perhaps was ever made by the New-Englanders, moſt unhappily miſcarried; and General Phips under went a very mortifying Diſappointment of a Deſign, which his Mind was, as much as ever any, ſet upon. He arrived Nov. 19. at Boſton, where, although he found himſelf, as well as the Publick, thrown into very uneaſie Circumſtances, yet he had this to Comfort him, that neither his Courage nor his Conduct could reaſonably have been Taxed; nor could it be ſaid that any Man could have done more than he did, under ſo many Embaraſſments of his Buſineſs, as he was to Fight withal. He alſo relieved the uneaſineſs of his Mind, by conſidering, that his Voyage to Canada, diverted from his Country an Horrible Tempeſt from an Army of Boſs-Lopers, which had prepar'd themſelves, as 'tis affirmed, that Winter, to fall upon the New-Engliſh Colonies, and by falling on them, would probably have laid no little part of the Country deſolate. And he further conſidered, that in this Matter, like Iſrael engaging againſt Benjamin, it may be, we ſaw yet but the beginning of the matter: And that the way to Canada now being learnt, the Foundation of a Victory over it might be laid in what had been already done. Unto this purpoſe likewiſe, he was heard ſometimes applying the Remarkable Story reported by Bradwardine.

‘There was an Hermit, who being vexed with Blaſphemous Injections about the Juſtice and Wiſdom of Divine Providence, an Angel in Humane Shape invited him to Travel with him, That he might ſee the hidden Judgments of God. Lodging all Night at the Houſe of a Man who kindly entertain'd them, the Angel took away a valuable Cup from their Hoſt, at their going away in the Morning, and beſtowed this Cup upon a very wicked Man, with whom they lodged the Night enſuing. The Third Night they were moſt lovingly Treated at the Houſe of a very Godly Man, from whom, when they went in the Morning, the Angel meeting a Servant of his, threw him over the Bridge into the Water, where he was drowned. And the Fourth, being in like manner moſt courteouſly Treated at the Houſe of a very Godly Man, the Angel before Morning did unaccountably kill his only Child. The Companion of the Journey being wonderfully offended at theſe things, would have left his Guardian: But the Angel then thus Addreſſed him, Underſtand now the ſecret Judgments of God! The firſt Man that entertained us, did inordinately affect that Cup which I took from him; 'twas for the Advantage of his Interiour that I took it away, and I gave it unto the impious Man, as the preſent Reward of his good Works, which is all the Reward that he is like to have. As for our Third Hoſt, the Servant which I ſlew had formed a bloody Deſign to have ſlain his Maſter, but now, you ſee, I have ſaved the Life of the Maſter, and prevented ſomething of growth unto the Eternal Puniſhment of the Murderer. As for our Fourth Hoſt, before his Child was Born unto him, he was a very liberal and bountiful Perſon, and he did abundance of good with his Eſtate; but when he ſaw he was like to leave ſuch an Heir, he grew Covetous; wherefore the Soul of the Infant is Tranſlated into Paradiſe, but the occaſion of Sin is, you ſee, mercifully taken away from the Parent.

Thus General Phips, though he had been uſed unto Diving in his time, would ſay, That the things which had befallen him in this Expedition, were too deep to be Dived into!

§. 12. From the time that General Pen made his Attempt upon Hiſpaniola, with an Army that, like the New-Engliſh Forces againſt Canada, miſcarried after an Expectation of having little to do but to Poſſeſs and Plunder; even to this Day, the general Diſaſter which hath attended almoſt every Attempt of the European Colonies in America, to make any conſiderable Encroachments upon their Neighbours, is a Matter of ſome cloſe Reflection. But of the Diſaſter which now befel poor New-England in particular, every one will eaſily conclude none of the leaſt Conſequences to have been the Extream Debts which that Country was now plunged into; there being Forty Thouſand Pounds, more or leſs, now to be paid, and not a Penny in the Treaſury to pay it withal. In this Extremity they preſently found out an Expedient, which may ſerve as an Example for any People in other Parts of the World, whoſe Diſtreſſes may call for a ſudden ſupply of Money to carry them through any Important Expedition. The General Aſſembly firſt paſs'd an Act for the Levying of ſuch a Sum of Money as was wanted, within ſuch a Term of time as was judged convenient; and this Act was a Fund, on which the Credit of ſuch a Sum ſhould be rendered paſſable among the People. Hereupon there was appointed an able and faithful Committee of Gentlemen, who Printed, from Copper-Plates, a juſt Number of Bills, and Floriſhed, Indented, and and Contrived them in ſuch a manner, as to make it impoſſible to Counterfeit any of them, without a ſpeedy Diſcovery of the Counterfeit: Beſides which, they were all Signed by the Hands of Three belonging to that Committee. Theſe Bills being of ſeveral Sums, from Two Shillings, to Ten Pounds, did confeſs the Maſſachuſet Colony to be Endebted unto the perſon, in whoſe Hands they were, the Sums therein expreſſed; and Proviſion was made, that if any Particular Bills were Irrecoverable Loſt, or Torn, or Worn by the Owners, they might be Recruited without any Damage to the whole in general. The Publick Debts to the Sailors and Soldiers, now upon the point of Mutiny, (for, Arma Tenenti, Omnia dat, qui Juſta negat!) were in theſe Bills paid immediately: But that further Credit might be given thereunto, it was Ordered that they ſhould be accepted by the Treaſurer, and all Officers that were Subordinate unto him, in all Publick Payments, at Five per Cent. more than the Value expreſſed in them. The People knowing that the Tax-Act would, in the ſpace of Two Years at leaſt, fetch into the Treaſury as much as all the Bills of Credit, thence emitted, would amount unto, were willing to be furniſhed with Bills, wherein 'twas their Advantage to pay their Taxes, rather than in any other Specie; and ſo the Sailors and Soldiers put off their Bills, inſtead of Money, to thoſe with whom they had any Dealings, and they Circulated through all the Hands in the Colony pretty Comfortably. Had the Government been ſo ſettled, that there had not been any doubt of any Obſtruction, or Diverſion to be given to the Proſecution of the Tax-Act, by a Total Change of their Affairs then depending at Whitehall, 'tis very certain, that the Bills of Credit had been better than ſo much ready Silver; yea, the Invention had been of more uſe to the New-Englanders, than if all their Copper Mines had been opened, or the Mountains of Peru had been removed into theſe Parts of America. The Maſſachuſet Bills of Credit had been like the Bank Bills of Venice, where though there were not, perhaps, a Ducat of Money in the Bank, yet the Bills were eſteemed more than Twenty per Cent. better than Money, among the Body of the People, in all their Dealings. But many People being afraid, that the Government would in half a Year be ſo overturned, as to Convert their Bills of Credit altogether into Waſt Paper, the Credit of them was thereby very much impaired; and they, who firſt received them, could make them yield little more than Fourteen or Sixteen Shillings in the Pound; from whence there aroſe thoſe Idle Suſpicions in the Heads of many more Ignorant and Unthinking Folks concerning the uſe thereof, which, to the Incredible Detriment of the Province, are not wholly laid aſide unto this Day. However, this Method of paying the Publick Debts, did no leſs than ſave the Publick from a perfect Ruin: And e're many Months were expired, the Governour and Council had the Pleaſure of ſeeing the Treaſurer burn before their Eyes many a Thouſand Pounds Worth of the Bills, which had paſſed about until they were again returned unto the Treaſury; but before their being returned, had happily and honeſtly, without a Farthing of Silver Coin, diſcharged the Debts, for which they were intended. But that which helped theſe Bills unto much of their Credit, was the Generous Offer of many Worthy Men in Boſton, to run the Riſque of ſelling their Goods reaſonably for them: And of theſe, I think I may ſay, that General Phips was in ſome ſort the Leader; who at the very beginning, meerly to Recommend the Credit of the Bills unto other Perſons, chearfully laid down a conſiderable quantity of ready Money for an equivalent parcel of them. And thus in a little time the Country waded through the Terrible Debts which it was fallen into: In this, though unhappy enough, yet not ſo unhappy as in the Loſs of Men, by which the Country was at the ſame time conſumed. 'Tis true, there was very little Blood ſpilt in the Attack made upon Quebeck; and there was a Great Hand of Heaven ſeen in it. The Churches, upon the Call of the Government, not only obſerved a General Faſt through the Colony, for the Welfare of the Army ſent unto Quebeck, but alſo kept the Wheel of Prayer in a Continual Motion, by Repeated and Succeſſive Agreements, for Days of Prayer with Faſting, in their ſeveral Vicinities. On theſe Days the Ferventeſt Prayers were ſent up to the God of Armies, for the Safety and Succeſs of the New-Engliſh Army gone to Canada; and though I never underſtood that any of the Faithful did in their Prayers ariſe to any aſſurance that the Expedition ſhould proſper in all reſpects, yet they ſometimes in their Devotions on theſe Occaſions, uttered their Perſwaſion, that Almighty God had heard them in this thing, that the Engliſh Army ſhould not fall by the Hands of the French Enemy. Now they were marvellouſly delivered from doing ſo; though the Enemy had ſuch unexpected Advantages over them, yea, and though the horrid Winter was come on ſo far, that it is a Wonder the Engliſh Fleet, then Riding in the River of Canada, fared any better than the Army which a while ſince beſieged Poland, wherein, of Seventy Thouſand Invaders, no leſs than Forty Thouſand ſuddenly periſhed by the ſeverity of the Cold, albeit it were but the Month of November with them. Nevertheleſs, a kind of Camp-Fever, as well as the Small-Pox, got into the Fleet, whereby ſome Hundreds came ſhort of Home. And beſides this Calamity, it was alſo to be lamented, that although the moſt of the Fleet arrived ſafe at New-England, whereof ſome Veſſels indeed were driven off by Croſs-Winds as far as the Weſt-Indies, before ſuch Arrival; yet there were Three or Four Veſſels which totally miſcarried: One was never heard of, a Second was Wreck'd, but moſt of the Men were ſaved by another in Company; a third was Wreck'd ſo, that all the Men were either ſtarv'd, or drown'd, or ſlain by the Indians, except one, which a long while after was by means of the French reſtored: And a fourth met with Accidents, which, it may be, my Reader will by and by pronounce not unworthy to have been Related.

A Brigantine, whereof Captain John Rainsford was Commander, having about Threeſcore Men aboard, was in a very ſtormy Night, Octob. 28. 1690. ſtranded upon the deſolate and hideous Iſland of Antecoſta, an Iſland in the mouth of the Mighty River of Canada; but through the ſingular Mercy of God unto them, the Veſſel did not, immediately, ſtave to pieces, which if it had happened, they muſt have, one way or another, quickly periſhed. There they lay for divers Days, under abundance of bitter Weather, trying and hoping to get off their Veſſel; and they ſolemnly ſet apart one Day for Prayer with Faſting, to obtain the Smiles of Heaven upon them in the midſt of their Diſtreſſes; and this eſpecially, That if they muſt go Aſhoar, they might not, by any ſtreſs of Storm, loſe the Proviſions which they were to carry with them. They were at laſt convinced, that they muſt continue no longer on Board, and therefore, by the Seventh of November, they applied themſelves, all Hands, to get their Proviſions Aſhoar upon the diſmal Iſland, where they had nothing but a ſad and cold Winter before them; which being accompliſhed, their Veſſel overſet ſo, as to take away from them all expectation of getting off the Iſland in it. Here they now built themſelves Nine ſmall Chimney-leſs things that they called Houſes; to this purpoſe employing ſuch Boards and Planks as they could get from their ſhattered Veſſel, with the help of Trees, whereof that ſqualid Wilderneſs had enough to ſerve them; and they built a particular Store-Houſe, wherein they carefully Lodg'd and Lock'd the poor quantity of Proviſions, which though ſcarce enough to ſerve a very abſtemious Company for one Month, muſt now be ſo ſtinted, as to hold out Six or Seven; and the Allowance agreed among them could be no better than for One Man, Two Biskets, half a pound of Pork, half a pound of Flower, one Pint and a quarter of Peaſe, and two Salt Fiſhes per Week. This little Handful of Men were now a ſort of Commonwealth, extraordinarily and miſerably ſeparated from all the reſt of Mankind; (but I believe, they thought little enough of an Utopia: Wherefore they conſulted and concluded ſuch Laws among themſelves, as they judged neceſſary to their ſubſiſtence, in the doleful Condition whereinto the Providence of God had caſt them; now

——Penitus toto diviſos Orbe.

They ſet up Good Orders, as well as they could, among themſelves; and beſides their daily Devotions, they Obſerved the Lord's Days, with more ſolemn Exerciſes of Religion.

But it was not long before they began to feel the more mortal effects of the Straits whereinto they had been Reduced: Their ſhort Commons, their Drink of Snow-Water, their Hard, and Wet, and Smoaky Lodgings, and their Grievous Deſpair of Mind, overwhelmed ſome of them at ſuch a rate, and ſo ham-ſtring'd them, that ſooner than be at the pains to go abroad, and cut their one Fuel, they would lye after a Sottiſh manner in the Cold; theſe things quickly brought Sickneſſes among them. The firſt of their Number who Died was their Doctor, on the 20th of December; and then they dropt away, one after another, till between Thirty and Forty of the Sixty were buried by their diſconſolate Friends, whereof every one look'd ſtill to be the next that ſhould lay his Bones in that Forſaken Region. Theſe poor Men did therefore, on Monday the Twenty Seventh of January, keep a Sacred Faſt (as they did, in ſome ſort, a Civil one, every Day, all this while) to beſeech of Almighty God, that his Anger might be turned from them, that he would not go on to cut them off in his Anger, that the Extremity of the Seaſon might be mitigated, and that they might be proſpered in ſome Eſſay to get Relief as the Spring ſhould Advance upon them; and they took Notice that God gave them a Gracious Anſwer to every one of theſe Petitions.

But while the Hand of God was killing ſo many of this little Nation (and yet uncapable to become a Nation, for it was, Res unius Ætatis, populus virorum!) they apprehended, that they muſt have been under a moſt uncomfortable Neceſſity to kill One of their Company.

Whatever Penalties they Enacted for other Crimes, there was One, for which, like that of Parricide among the Antients, they would have promiſed themſelves, that there ſhould not have been Occaſion for any Puniſhments; and that was, the Crime of Stealing from the Common-Stock of their Proviſions. Nevertheleſs they found their Store-Houſe divers times broken open, and their Proviſions therefrom Stolen by divers unnatural Children of the Leviathan, while it was not poſſible for them to preſerve their feeble Store-Houſe from the Stone-Wall-breaking Madneſs of theſe unreaſonable Creatures. This Trade of Stealing, if it had not been ſtopp'd by ſome exemplary Severity, they muſt in a little while, by Lot or Force, have come to have Canibally devoured one another; for there was nothing to be done, either at Fiſhing, or Fowling, or Hunting, upon that Rueful Iſland, in the depth of a Frozen Winter; and though they ſent as far as they could upon Diſcovery, they could not find on the Iſland any Living thing in the World, beſides themſelves. Wherefore, though by an Act they made Stealing to be ſo Criminal, that ſeveral did Run the Gantlet for it, yet they were not far from being driven, after all, to make one Degree and Inſtance of it Capital. There was a wicked Iriſhman among them, who had ſuch a Voracious Devil in him, that after divers Burglaries upon the Store-Houſe, committed by him, at laſt he Stole, and Eat with ſuch a Pamphagous Fury, as to Cram himſelf with no leſs than Eighteen Biskets at one Stolen Meal, and he was fain to have his Belly ſtrok'd and bath'd before the Fire, leſt he ſhould otherwiſe have burſt. This Amazing, and indeed Murderous Villany of the Iriſhman, brought them all to their Wits Ends, how to defend themſelves from the Ruin therein threatned unto them; and whatever Methods were propoſed, it was feared that there could be no ſtop given to his Furacious Exorbitancies any way but One; he could not be paſt Stealing, unleſs he were paſt Eating too. Some think therefore they might have Sentenced the Wretch to Die, and after they had been at pains, upon Chriſtian and Spiritual Accounts, to prepare him for it, have Executed the Sentence, by Shooting him to Death: Concluding Matters come to that paſs, that if they had not Shot him, he muſt have Starved them unavoidably. Such an Action, if it were done, will doubtleſs meet with no harder a Cenſure, than that of the Seven Engliſhmen, who being in a Boat carried off to Sea from St. Chriſtopher's, with but one Days Proviſion aboard for Seventeen, Singled out ſome of their Number by Lot, and Slew them, and Eat them; for which, when they were afterwards accuſed of Murder, the Court, in conſideration of the inevitable Neceſſity, acquitted them. Truly the inevitable Neceſſity of Starving, without ſuch an Action, ſufficiently grievous to them all, will very much plead for what was done (whatever it were!) by theſe poor Antecoſtians. And Starved indeed they muſt have been, for all this, if they had not Contrived and Performed a very deſperate Adventure, which now remains to be Related. There was a very diminutive kind of Boat belonging to their Brigantine, which they recovered out of the Wreck, and cutting this Boat in Two, they made a ſhift, with certain odd Materials preſerved among them, to lengthen it ſo far, that they could therein form a little Cuddy, where Two or Three Men might be ſtowed, and they ſet up a little Maſt, whereto they faſtened a little Sail, and accommodated it with ſome other little Circumſtances, according to their preſent poor Capacity.

On the Twenty Fifth of March, Five of the Company Shipped themſelves upon this Doughty Fly-Boat, intending, if it were poſſible, to carry unto Boſton the Tidings of their woful Plight upon Antecoſta, and by help from their Friends there, to return with ſeaſonable Succours for the reſt. They had not Sail'd long before they were Hemm'd in by prodigious Cakes of Ice, whereby their Boat ſometimes was horribly wounded, and it was a Miracle that it was not Cruſh'd into a Thouſand Pieces, if indeed a Thouſand Pieces could have been Splintred out of ſo minute a Cock-Boat. They kept labouring, and fearfully Weather-beaten, among enormous Rands of Ice, which would ever now and then rub formidably upon them, and were enough to have broken the Ribs of the ſtrongeſt Frigot that ever cut the Seas; and yet the ſignal Hand of Heaven ſo preſerved this petty Boat, that by the Eleventh of April they had got a quarter of their way, and came to an Anchor under Cape St. Lawrence, having ſeen Land but once before, and that about ſeven Leagues off, ever ſince their firſt ſetting out; and yet having ſeen the open and Ocean Sea not ſo much as once in all this while, for the Ice that ſtill encompaſſed them. For their ſupport in this Time, the little Proviſions they brought with them would not have kept them alive; only they killed Seale upon the Ice, and they melted the upper part of the Ice for Drink; but fierce, wild, ugly Sea-Horſes, would often ſo approach them upon the Ice, that the fear of being devoured by them was not the leaſt of their Exerciſes. The Day following they weighed Anchor betimes in the Morning but the Norweſt Winds perſecuted them, with the raiſed and raging Waves of the Sea, which almoſt continually poured into them; and Monſtrous Iſlands of Ice, that ſeemed almoſt as big as Antecoſta it ſelf, would ever now and then come athwart them. In ſuch a Sea they lived by the ſpecial aſſiſtance of God, until, by the Thirteenth of April, they got into an Iſland of Land, where they made a Fire, and killed ſome Fowl, and ſome Seale, and found ſome Gooſe-Eggs, and ſupplied themſelves with what Billets of Wood were neceſſary and carriageable for them; and there they ſtayed until the Seventeenth. Here their Boat lying near a Rock, a great Sea hove it upon the Rock, ſo that it was upon the very point of overſetting, which if it had, ſhe had been utterly diſabled for any further Service, and they muſt have called that Harbour by the Name, which, I think, one a little more Northward bears, The Cape without Hope. There they muſt have ended their weary Days! But here the good Hand of God again interpoſed for them; they got her off; and though they loſt their Compaſs in this Hurry, they ſufficiently Repaired another defective one that they had aboard. Sailing from thence, by the Twenty-fourth of April, they made Cape Brittoon; when a thick Fog threw them into a new Perplexity, until they were ſafely gotten into the Bay of Iſlands, where they again wooded, and watred, and killed a few Fowl, and catched ſome Fiſh, and began to reckon themſelves as good as half way home. They reached Cape Sables by the Third of May, but by the Fifth all their Proviſion was again ſpent, and they were out of ſight of Land; nor had they any proſpect of catching any thing that lives in the Atlantick: which while they were lamenting one unto another, a ſtout Halibut comes up to the top of the Water, by their ſide; whereupon they threw out the Fiſhing-Line, and the Fiſh took the Hook; but he proved ſo heavy, that it required the help of ſeveral Hands to hale him in, and a thankful Supper they made on't. By the Seventh of May ſeeing no Land, but having once more ſpent all their Proviſion, they were grown almoſt moſt wholly hopeleſs of Deliverance, but then a Fiſhing Shallop of Cape Ann came up with them, Fifteen Leagues to the Eaſtward of that Cape. And yet before they got in, they had ſo Tempeſtuous a Night, that they much feared periſhing upon the Rocks after all: But God carried them into Boſton Harbour the Ninth of May, unto the great ſurprize of their Friends that were in Mourning for them: And there furniſhing themſelves with a Veſſel fit for their Undertaking, they took a Courſe in a few Weeks more to fetch home their Brethren that they left behind them at Antecoſta.

But it is now time for us to return unto Sir William!

§. 13. All this while CANADA was as much written upon Sir William's Heart, as CALLICE, they ſaid once, was upon Queen Mary's. He needed not one to have been his daily Monitor about Canada: It lay down with him, it roſe up with him, it engroſſed almoſt all his thoughts; he thought the ſubduing of Canada to be the greateſt Service that could be done for New-England, or for the Crown of England, in America. In purſuance whereof, after he had been but a few Weeks at Home, he took another Voyage for England, in the very depth of Winter, when Sailing was now dangerous; conflicting with all the Difficulties of a tedious and a terrible Paſſage, in a very little Veſſel, which indeed was like enough to have periſhed, if it had not been for the help of his generous Hand aboard, and his Fortunes in the bottom.

Arriving ——— per tot Diſcrimina, at Briſtol, he haſtned up to London; and made his Applications to their Majeſties, and the Principal Miniſters of State, for aſſiſtance to renew an Expedition againſt Canada, concluding his Repreſentation to the King with ſuch Words as theſe:

‘If Your Majeſty ſhall graciouſly pleaſe to Commiſſion and Aſſiſt me, I am ready to venture my Life again in your Service. And I doubt not, but by the Bleſſing of God, Canada may be added unto the reſt of your Dominions, which will (all Circumſtances conſidered) be of more Advantage to the Crown of England, than all the Territories in the Weſt-Indies are.

The Reaſons here ſubjoined, are humbly Offered unto Your Majeſties Conſideration.

‘Firſt, The Succeſs of this Deſign will greatly add to the Glory and Intereſt of the Engliſh Crown and Nation; by the Addition of the Bever-Trade, and Securing the Hudſon's Bay Company, ſome of whoſe Factories have lately fallen into the Hands of the French; and increaſe of Engliſh Shipping and Seamen, by gaining the Fiſhery of Newfoundland; and by conſequence diminiſh the number of French Seamen, and cut off a great Revenue from the French Crown.

‘Secondly, The Cauſe of the Engliſh in New-England, their failing in the late Attempt upon Canada, was their waiting for a Supply of Ammunition from England until Auguſt; their long Paſſage up that River; the Cold Seaſon coming on, and the Small-Pox and Fevers being in the Army and Fleet, ſo that they could not ſtay Fourteen Days longer; in which time probably they might have taken Quebeck; yet, if a few Frigots be ſpeedily ſent, they doubt not of an happy Succeſs; the Strength of the French being ſmall, and the Planters deſirous to be under the Engliſh Government.

‘Thirdly, The Jeſuites endeavour to ſeduce the Maqua's, and other Indians (as is by them affirmed) ſuggeſting the Greatneſs of King Lewis, and the Inability of King William, to do any thing againſt the French in thoſe Parts, thereby to engage them in their Intereſts: In which, if they ſhould ſucceed, not only New-England, but all our American Plantations, would be endangered by the great increaſe of Shipping, for the French (built in New-England at eaſie rates) to the Infinite Diſhonour and Prejudice of the Engliſh Nation.

But now, for the Succeſs of theſe Applications, I muſt entreat the Patience of my Reader to wait until we have gone through a little more of our Hiſtory.

§. 14. The Reverend INCREASE MATHER beholding his Country of New-England in a very Deplorable Condition, under a Governour that acted by an Illegal, Arbitrary, Treaſonable Commiſſion, and Invaded Liberty and Property after ſuch a manner, as that no Man could ſay any thing was his own, he did, with the Encouragement of the Principal Gentlemen in the Country, but not without much Trouble and Hazard unto his own Perſon, go over to Whitehall in the Summer of the Year 1688. and wait upon King James, with a full Repreſentation of their Miſeries. That King did give him Liberty of Acceſs unto him, whenever he deſired it, and with many Good Words promiſed him to relieve the Oppreſſed People in many Inſtances that were propoſed: But when the Revolution had brought the Prince and Princeſs of Orange to the Throne, Mr. Mather having the Honour divers times to wait upon the King, he ſtill prayed for no leſs a Favour to New-England, than the full Reſtoration of their Charter-Priviledges: And Sir William Phips happening to be then in England, very generouſly joined with Mr. Mather in ſome of thoſe Addreſſes: Whereto His Majeſty's Anſwers were always very expreſſive of his Gracious Inclinations. Mr. Mather, herein aſſiſted alſo by the Right Worſhipful Sir Henry Aſhurſt, a moſt Hearty Friend of all ſuch good Men as thoſe that once filled New-England, ſolicited the Leading Men of both Houſes in the Convention-Parliament, until a Bill for the Reſtoring of the Charters belonging to New-England, was fully paſſed by the Commons of England; but that Parliament being Prorogu'd, and then Diſſolved, all that Siſyphæan Labour came to nothing. The Diſappointments which afterwards moſt wonderfully blaſted all the hopes of the Petitioned Reſtoration, obliged Mr. Mather, not without the Concurrence of other Agents, now alſo come from New-England, unto that Method of Petitioning the King for a New Charter, that ſhould contain more than all the Priviledges of the Old; and Sir William Phips, now being again returned into England, lent his utmoſt aſſiſtance hereunto.

Reſtorin

The King taking a Voyage for Holland before this Petition was anſwered; Mr. Mather, in the mean while, not only waited upon the greateſt part of the Lords of His Majeſties moſt Honourable Privy Council, offering them a Paper of Reaſons for the Confirmation of the Charter-Priviledges granted unto the Maſſachuſet-Colony; but alſo having the Honour to be introduc'd unto the Queen, he aſſured Her Majeſty, That there were none in the World better affected unto their Majeſties Government than the People of New-England, who had indeed been expoſed unto great Hardſhips for their being ſo; and entreated, that ſince the King had referred the New-Engliſh Affair unto the Two Lord Chief Juſtices, with the Attorney and Solicitor General, there might be granted unto us what they thought was reaſonable. Whereto the Queen replied, That the Requeſt was reaſonable; and that ſhe had ſpoken divers times to the King on the behalf of New-England; and that for her own part, ſhe deſired that the People there might not meerly have Juſtice, but Favour done to them. When the King was returned, Mr. Mather, being by the Duke of Devonſhire brought into the King's Preſence on April 28. 1691. humbly pray'd His Majeſties Favour to New-England; urging, That if their Old Charter-Priviledges might be reſtored unto them, his Name would be great in thoſe Parts of the World as long as the World ſhould ſtand; adding,

Sir,

YOUR Subjects there have been willing to venture their Lives, that they may enlarge your Dominions; the Expedition to Canada was a Great and Noble Undertaking.

May it pleaſe your Majeſty, in your great Wiſdom alſo to conſider the Circumſtances of that People, as in your Wiſdom you have conſidered the Circumſtances of England, and of Scotland. In New-England they differ from other Plantations; they are called Congregational and Presbyterian. So that ſuch a Governour will not ſuit with the People of New-England, as may be very proper for other Engliſh Plantations.

Two Days after this, the King, upon what was propoſed by certain Lords, was very inquiſitive, whether he might, without breach of Law, ſet a Governour over New-England; whereto the Lord Chief Juſtice, and ſome others of the Council, anſwered, That whatever might be the Merit of the Cauſe, inaſmuch as the Charter of New-England ſtood vacated by a Judgment againſt them, it was in the King's Power to put them under what Form of Government he ſhould think beſt for them.

The King then ſaid, 'That he believed it 'would be for the Advantage of the People in 'that Colony, to be under a Governour appointed by himſelf: Nevertheleſs (becauſe of what Mr. Mather had ſpoken to him) 'He would 'have the Agents of New-England nominate a 'Perſon that ſhould be agreeable unto the Inclinations of the People there; and notwithſtanding this, he would have Charter-Priviledges reſtored and confirmed unto them.

The Day following the King began another Voyage to Holland; and when the Attorney General's Draught of a Charter, according to what he took to be His Majeſties Mind, as expreſſed in Council, was preſented at the Council-Board, on the Eighth of June, ſome Objections then made, procured an Order to prepare Minutes for another Draught, which deprived the New-Englanders of ſeveral Eſſential Priviledges in their other Charter. Mr. Mather put in his Objections, and vehemently proteſted, That he would ſooner part with his Life, than conſent unto thoſe Minutes, or any thing elſe that ſhould infringe any Liberty or Priviledge of Right belonging unto his Country; but he was anſwered, That the Agents of New-England were not Plenipotentiaries from another Soveraign State; and that if they would not ſubmit unto the King's Pleaſure in the Settlement of the Country, they muſt take what would follow.

The diſſatisfactory Minutes were, by Mr. Mather's Induſtry, ſent over unto the King in Flanders; and the Miniſters of State then with the King were earneſtly applied unto, that every miſtake about the good Settlement of New-England might be prevented; and the Queen her ſelf, with her own Royal Hand, wrote unto the King, that the Charter of New-England might either paſs as it was drawn by the Attorney General, or be deferred until his own Return.

But after all, His Majeſties Principal Secretary of State received a Signification of the King's Pleaſure, that the Charter of New-England ſhould run in the Main Points of it as it was now granted: Only there were ſeveral Important Articles which Mr. Mather by his unwearied Solicitations obtained afterwards to be inſerted.

There were ſome now of the Opinion, that inſtead of ſubmitting to this New Settlement, they ſhould, in hopes of getting a Reverſion of the Judgment againſt the Old Charter, declare to the Miniſters of State, That they had rather have no Charter at all, than ſuch an one as was now propoſed unto Acceptance. But Mr. Mather adviſing with many unprejudiced Perſons, and Men of the greateſt Abilities in the Kingdom, Noblemen, Gentlemen, Divines and Lawyers, they all agreed, that it was not only a lawful, but all Circumſtances then conſidered, a Needful thing, and a part of Duty and Wiſdom to accept what was now offered, and that a peremptory refuſal would not only bring an Inconveniency, but a Fatal, and perhaps, a Final Ruin upon the Country; whereof Mankind would lay the blame upon the Agents.

It was argued, That ſuch a Submiſſion was no Surrender of any thing; that the Judgment, not in the Court of King's Bench, but in Chancery againſt the Old Charter, ſtanding on Record, the Patten was thereby Annihilated; that all attempts to have the Judgment againſt the Old Charter taken off, would be altogether in vain, as Men and Things were then diſpoſed.

It was further argued, That the Ancient Charter of New-England was in the Opinion of the Lawyers very Defective, as to ſeveral Powers, which yet were abſolutely neceſſary to the ſubſiſtence of the Plantation: It gave the Government there no more Power than the Corporations have in England; Power in Capital Caſes was not therein particularly expreſſed.

It mentioned not an Houſe of Deputies, or an Aſſembly of Repreſentatives; the Governour and Company had thereby (they ſaid) no Power to impoſe Taxes on the Inhabitants that were not Freemen, or to erect Courts of Admiralty. Without ſuch Powers the Colony could not ſubſiſt; and yet the beſt Friends that New-England had of Perſons moſt Learned in the Law, profeſſed, that ſuppoſe the Judgment againſt the Maſſachuſet-Charter might be Reverſed, yet, if they ſhould again Exert ſuch Powers as they did before the Quo Warranto againſt their Charter, a new Writ of Seire Facias would undoubtedly be iſſued out againſt them.

It was yet further argued, That if an Act of Parliament ſhould have Reverſed the Judgment againſt the Maſſachuſet-Charter, without a Grant of ſome other Advantages, the whole Territory had been, on many Accounts, very miſerably Incommoded: The Province of Main, with Hampſhire, would have been taken from them; and Plymouth would have been annexed unto New-York; ſo that this Colony would have been ſqueezed into an Atom, and not only have been render'd Inſignificant in its Trade, but by having its Militia alſo, which was veſted in the King, taken away, its Inſignificancies would have become out of meaſure humbling; whereas now, inſtead of ſeeing any Relief by Act of Parliament, they would have been put under a Governour, with a Commiſſion, whereby ill Men, and the King's and Country's Enemies might probably have crept into Opportunities to have done Ten Thouſand ill things, and have treated the beſt Men in the Land after a very uncomfortable manner.

It was laſtly argued, That by the New Charter very great Priviledges were granted unto New-England; and in ſome reſpects greater than what they formerly enjoyed. The Colony is now made a Province, and their General Court, has, with the King's Approbation, as much Power in New-England, as the King and Parliament have in England. They have all Engliſh Liberties, and can be touched by no Law, by no Tax, but of their own making. All the Liberties of their Holy Religion are for ever ſecured, and their Titles to their Lands, once for want of ſome Forms of Legal Conveyance, conteſted, are now confirmed unto them. If an ill Governour ſhould happen to be impoſed on them, what hurt could he do to them? None, except they themſelves pleaſed; for he cannot make one Counſellor, or one Judge, or one Juſtice, or one Sheriff to ſerve his Turn: Diſadvantages enough, one would think, to Diſcourage any ill Governour from deſiring to be Stationed in thoſe uneaſie Regions. The People have a Negative upon all the Executive Part of the Civil Government, as well as the Legiſlative, which is a vaſt Priviledge, enjoyed by no other Plantation in America, nor by Ireland, no, nor hitherto by England it ſelf. Why ſhould all of this good be refuſed or deſpiſed, becauſe of ſomewhat not ſo good attending it? The Deſpiſers of ſo much good, will certainly deſerve a Cenſure, not unlike that of Cauſabon, upon ſome who did not value what that Learned Man counted highly valuable, Vix illis optari quidquam pejus poteſt, quam ut fatuitate ſua fruantur: Much good may do them with their Madneſs! All of this being well conſidered, Sir William Phips, who had made ſo many Addreſſes for the Reſtoration of the Old Charter, under which he had ſeen his Country many Years flouriſhing, will be excuſed by all the World from any thing of a Fault, in a moſt unexpected paſſage of his Life, which is now to be related.

Sir Henry Aſhurſt, and Mr. Mather, well knowing the agreeable Diſpoſition to do Good, and the King and his Country Service, which was in Sir William Phips, whom they now had with them, all this while Proſecuting his Deſign for Canada, they did unto the Council-Board nominate him for the GOVERNOUR of New-England. And Mr. Mather being by the Earl of Nottingham introduced unto His Majeſty, ſaid,

Sir,

I Do, in the behalf of New-England, moſt humbly thank your Majeſty, in that you have been pleaſed, by a Charter, to reſtore Engliſh

Liberties unto them, to confirm them in their Properties, and to grant them ſome peculiar Priviledges. I doubt not, but that your Subjects there will demean themſelves with that dutiful Affection and Loyalty to your Majeſty, as that you will ſee cauſe to enlarge your Royal Favours towards them. And I do moſt humbly thank your Majeſty, in that you have been pleaſed to give leave unto thoſe that are concerned for New-England to nominate their Governour.

Sir William Phips has been accordingly nominated by us at the Council-Board. He hath done a good Service for the Crown, by enlarging your Dominions, and reducing of Nova Scotia to your Obedience. I know that he will faithfully ſerve your Majeſty to the utmoſt of his Capacity; and if your Majeſty ſhall think fit to confirm him in that place, it will be a further Obligation on your Subjects there.

The Effects of all this was, that Sir William Phips was now inveſted with a Commiſſion under the King's Broad-Seal to be Captain General, and Governour in Chief over the Province of the Maſſachuſet-Bay in New-England: Nor do I know a Perſon in the World that could have been propoſed more acceptable to the Body of the People throughout New-England, and on that ſcore more likely and able to ſerve the King's Intereſts among the People there, under the Changes in ſome things unacceptable, now brought upon them. He had been a Gideon, who had more than once ventured his Life to ſave his Country from their Enemies; and they now, with univerſal Satisfaction ſaid, Thou ſhalt rule over us. Accordingly, having with Mr. Mather kiſſed the King's Hand on January 3d, 1691. he haſtned away to his Government; and arriving at New-England the Fourteenth of May following, attended with the Non-ſuch-Frigat, both of them were welcomed with the loud Acclamations of the long ſhaken and ſhatter'd Country, whereto they were now returned with a Settlement ſo full of happy Priviledges.

§. 15. When Titus Flaminius had freed the poor Grecians from the Bondage which had long oppreſſed them, and the Herald Proclaimed among them the Articles of their Freedom, they cried out, A Saviour! A Saviour! with ſuch loud Acclamations, that the very Birds fell down from Heaven aſtoniſh'd at the Cry. Truly, when Mr. Mather brought with him unto the poor New-Englanders, not only a Charter, which though in divers Points wanting what both he and they had wiſhed for, yet for ever delivers them from Oppreſſions on their Chriſtian and Engliſh Liberties, or on their Ancient Poſſeſſions, wherein ruining Writs of Intruſion had begun to Invade them all, but alſo a GOVERNOUR who might call New-England his own Country, and who was above moſt Men in it, full of Affection to the Intereſts of his Country; the ſenſible part of the People then cauſed the Sence of the Salvations thus brought them to reach as far as Heaven it ſelf. The various little Humours then working among the People, did not hinder the Great and General Court of the Province to appoint a Day of Solemn THANKSGIVING to Almighty God, for Granting (as the Printed Order expreſſed it) a ſafe Arrival to his Excellency our Governour, and the Reverend Mr. Increaſe Mather, who have induſtriouſly endeavoured the Service of this People, and have brought over with them a Settlement of Government, in which their Majeſties have graciouſly given us diſtinguiſhing Marks of their Royal Favour and Goodneſs.

And as the obliged People thus gave Thanks unto the God of Heaven, ſo they ſent an Addreſs of Thanks unto Their Majeſties, with other Letters of Thanks unto ſome Chief Miniſters of State, for the Favourable Aſpect herein caſt upon the Province.

Nor were the People miſtaken, when they promiſed themſelves all the kindneſs imaginable from this Governour, and expected, Under his ſhadow we ſhall live eaſie among the Heathen: Why might they not look for Halcyon-days, when they had ſuch a King's-Fiſher for their Governour?

Governour Phips had, as every raiſed and uſeful Perſon muſt have, his Envious Enemies; but the paleſt Envy of them, who turned their worſt Enmity upon him, could not hinder them from confeſſing, That according to the beſt of his Apprehenſion, he ever ſought the good of his Country: His Country quickly felt this on innumerable Occaſions; and they had it eminently demonſtrated, as well in his promoting and approving the Council's choice of good Judges, Juſtices and Sheriffs, which being once eſtabliſhed, no Succeſſor could remove them, as in his urging the General Aſſembly to make themſelves happy by preparing a Body of good Laws as faſt as they could, which being paſſed by him in his time, could not be nulled by any other after him.

He would often ſpeak to the Members of the general Aſſembly in ſuch Terms as theſe, Gentlemen, You may make your ſelves as eaſie as you will for ever; conſider what may have any tendency to your welfare; and you may be ſure, that whatever Bills you offer to me, conſiſtent with the Honour and Intereſt of the Crown, I'll paſs them readily; I do but ſeek Opportunities to ſerve you; had it not been for the ſake of this thing, I had never accepted the Government of this Province; and whenever you have ſettled ſuch a Body of good Laws, that no Perſon coming after me may make you uneaſie, I ſhall deſire not one Day longer to continue in the Government. Accordingly he ever paſſed every Act for the welfare of the Province propoſed unto him; and inſtead of ever putting them upon Buying his Aſſent unto any good Act, he was much forwarder to give it, than they were to ask it: Nor indeed, had the Hunger of a Salary any ſuch Impreſſion upon him, as to make him decline doing all poſſible Service for the Publick, while he was not ſure of having any Proportionable or Honourable Acknowledgments.

But yet he minded the Preſervation of the King's Rights with as careful and faithful a Zeal as became a good Steward for the Crown: And, indeed, he ſtudied nothing more than to obſerve ſuch a Temper in all things, as to extinguiſh what others have gone to diſtinguiſh; even the Pernicious Notion of a ſeparate Intereſt. There was a time when the Roman Empire was infeſted with a vaſt number of Governours, who were Infamous for Infinite Avarice and Villany; and referring to this time, the Apoſtle John had a Viſion of People killed with the Beaſts of the Earth.

But Sir William Phips was none of thoſe Governours; wonderfully contrary to this wretchedneſs was the Happineſs of New-England, when they had Governour Phips, uſing the tenderneſs of a Father towards the People; and being of the Opinion, Ditare magis eſſe Regium quam Diteſcere, that it was a braver thing to enrich the People, than to grow rich himſelf. A Father, I ſaid; and what if I had ſaid an Angel too? If I ſhould from Clemens Alexandrinus, from Theodoret, and from Jerom, and and others among the Ancients, as well as from Calvin, and Bucan, and Peter Martyr, and Chemnitius, and Bullinger, and a Thouſand more among the Moderns, bring Authorities for the Aſſertion, That each Country and Province is under the ſpecial Care of ſome Angel, by a ſingular Deputation of Heaven aſſigned thereunto, I could back them with a far greater Authority than any of them all. The Scripture it ſelf does plainly aſſert it: And hence the moſt Learned Grotius, writing of Commonwealths, has a Paſſage to this purpoſe, His ſingulis, ſuos Attributos, eſſe Angelos, ex Daniele, magno conſenſu, & Judæi & Chriſtiani veteres colligebant.

But New-England had now, beſides the Guardian-Angel, who more inviſibly intended its welfare, a Governour that became wonderfully agreeable thereunto, by his whole Imitation of ſuch a Guardian-Angel. He employed his whole Strength to guard his People from all Diſaſters, which threatned them either by Sea or Land; and it was remark'd, that nothing remarkably Diſaſtrous did befal that People from the time of his Arrival to the Government, until there arrived an Order for his leaving it: (Except one thing which was begun before he entred upon the Government:) But inſtead thereof, the Indians were notably defeated in the Aſſaults which they now made upon the Engliſh, and ſeveral French Ships did alſo very advantageouſly fall into his Hands; yea, there was by his means a Peace reſtored unto the Province, that had been divers Years languiſhing under the Hectic Feaver of a lingring War.

And there was this one thing more that rendred his Government the more deſirable; that whereas 'tis impoſſible for a meer Man to govern without ſome Error, whenever this Governour was adviſed of any Error in any of his Adminiſtrations, he would immediately retract it, and revoke it with all poſſible Ingenuity; ſo that if any occaſion of juſt Complaint aroſe, it was uſually his endeavour that it ſhould not long be complain'd of.

———O, Fœlices nimium, ſua ſi Bona, norant,
Nov-Angli.———

But having in a Parentheſis newly intimated, that his Excellency, when he entred on his Government, found one thing that was remarkably Diſaſtrous begun upon it: Of that one thing we will now give ſome account.

Reader, prepare to be entertained with as prodigious Matters as can be put into any Hiſtory! And let him that writes the next Thaumatographia Pneumatica, allow to theſe Prodigies the chief place among the Wonders.

§. 16. About the time of our Bleſſed Lord's coming to reſide on Earth, we read of ſo many poſſeſſed with Devils, that it is commonly thought the Number of ſuch miſerable Energumens was then encreaſed above what has been uſual in other Ages; and the Reaſon of that Increaſe has been made a Matter of ſome Enquiry. Now though the Devils might herein deſign by Preternatural Operations to blaſt the Miracles of our Lord Jeſus Chriſt, which point they gained among the Blaſphemous Phariſees; and the Devils might herein alſo deſign a Villanous Imitation of what was coming to paſs in the Incarnation of our Lord Jeſus Chriſt, wherein God came to dwell in Fleſh; yet I am not without ſuſpicion, that there may be ſomething further in the Conjecture of the Learned Bartholinus hereupon, who ſays, It was Quod judæi præter modum, Artibus Magicis dediti Dæmonem Advocaverint, the Jews, by the frequent uſe of Magical Tricks, called in the Devils among them.

It is very certain, there were hardly any People in the World grown more fond of Sorceries, than that unhappy People: The Talmuds tell us of the little Parchments with Words upon them, which were their common Amulets, and of the Charms which they mutter'd over Wounds, and of the various Enchantments which they uſed againſt all ſorts of Diſaſters whatſoever. It is affirmed in the Talmuds, that no leſs than Twenty-four Scholars in one School were killed by Witchcraft; and that no leſs than Fourſcore Perſons were Hanged for Witchcraft by one Judge in one Day. The Gloſs adds upon it, That the Women of Iſrael had generally fallen to the Practice of Witchcrafts; and therefore it was required, that there ſhould be ſtill choſen into the Council one skilful in the Arts of Sorcerers, and able thereby to diſcover who might be guilty of thoſe Black Arts among ſuch as were accuſed before them.

Now the Arrival of Sir William Phips to the Government of New-England, was at a time when a Governour would have had Occaſion for all the Skill in Sorcery, that was ever neceſſary to a Jewiſh Councellor; a time when Scores of poor People had newly fallen under a prodigious Poſſeſſion of Devils, which it was then generally thought had been by Witchcrafts introduced. It is to be confeſſed and bewailed, that many Inhabitants of New-England, and Young People eſpecially, had been led away with little Sorceries, wherein they did ſecretly thoſe things that were not right againſt the Lord their God; they would often cure Hurts with Spells, and practiſe deteſtable Conjurations with Sieves, and Keys, and Peaſe, and Nails, and Horſe-ſhoes, and other Implements, to learn the things for which they had a forbidden and impious Curioſity. Wretched Books had ſtoln into the Land, wherein Fools were inſtructed how to become able Fortune-Tellers: Among which, I wonder that a blacker Brand is not ſet upon that Fortune-Telling Wheel, which that Sham-Scribler, that goes under the Letters of R. B. has promiſed in his Delights for the Ingenious, as an honeſt and pleaſant Recreation: And by theſe Books, the Minds of many had been ſo poiſoned, that they ſtudied this Finer Witchcraft; until, 'tis well, if ſome of them were not betray'd into what is Groſſer, and more Senſible and Capital. Although theſe Diabolical Divinations are more ordinarily committed perhaps all over the whole World, than they are in the Country of New-England, yet, that being a Country Devoted unto the Worſhip and Service of the Lord JESUS CHRIST above the reſt of the World, He ſignalized his Vengeance againſt theſe Wickedneſſes, with ſuch extraordinary Diſpenſations as have not been often ſeen in other places.

The Devils which had been ſo play'd withal, and, it may be, by ſome few Criminals more Explicitely engaged and imployed, now broke in upon the Country, after as aſtoniſhing a manner as was ever heard of. Some Scores of People, firſt about Salem, the Centre and Firſt-Born of all the Towns in the Colony, and afterwards in ſeveral other places, were Arreſted with many Preternatural Vexations upon their Bodies, and a variety of cruel Torments, which were evidently inflicted from the Dæmons, of the Inviſible World. The People that were Infected and Infeſted with ſuch Dæmons, in a few Days time arrived unto ſuch a Refining Alteration upon their Eyes, that they could ſee their Tormentors; they ſaw a Devil of a Little Stature, and of a Tawny Colour, attended ſtill with Spectres that appeared in more Humane Circumſtances.

Theſe Tormentors tendred unto the afflicted a Book, requiring them to Sign it, or to Touch it at leaſt, in token of their conſenting to be Liſted in the Service of the Devil; which they refuſing to do, the Spectres under the Command of that Blackman, as they called him, would apply themſelves to Torture them with prodigious Moleſtations.

The afflicted Wretches were horribly Diſtorted and Convulſed; they were Pinched Black and Blue: Pins would be run every where in their Fleſh; they would be Scalded until they had Bliſters raiſed on them; and a Thouſand other things before Hundreds of Witneſſes were done unto them, evidently Preternatural: For if it were Preternatural to keep a rigid Faſt for Nine, yea, for Fifteen Days together; or if it were Preternatural to have one's Hands ty'd cloſe together with a Rope to be plainly ſeen, and then by unſeen Hands preſently pull'd up a great way from the Earth before a Croud of People; ſuch Preternatural things were endured by them.

But of all the Preternatural things which befel theſe People, there were none more unaccountable than thoſe, wherein the preſtigious Dæmons would ever now and then cover the moſt Corporeal things in the World with a Faſcinating Miſt of Inviſibility. As now; a Perſon was cruelly aſſaulted by a Spectre, that, ſhe ſaid, run at her with a Spindle, though no Body elſe in the room could ſee either the Spectre or the Spindle: At laſt, in her Agonies, giving a ſnatch at the Spectre, ſhe pulled the Spindle away; and it was no ſooner got into her Hand, but the other Folks then preſent beheld that it was indeed a Real, Proper, Iron Spindle; which when they locked up very ſafe, it was nevertheleſs by the Dæmons taken away to do farther Miſchief.

Again, a Perſon was haunted by a moſt abuſive Spectre, which came to her, ſhe ſaid, with a Sheet about her, though ſeen to none but her ſelf. After ſhe had undergone a deal of Teaze from the Annoyance of the Spectre, ſhe gave a violent Snatch at the Sheet that was upon it; where-from ſhe tore a Corner, which in her Hand immediately was beheld by all that were preſent, a palpable Corner of a Sheet: And her Father, which was now holding of her, catch'd, that he might keep what his Daughter had ſo ſtrangely ſeized; but the Spectre had like to have wrung his Hand off, by endeavouring to wreſt it from him: However he ſtill held it; and ſeveral times this odd Accident was renewed in the Family. There wanted not the Oaths of good credible People to theſe particulars.

Alſo, it is well known, that theſe wicked Spectres did proceed ſo far as to ſteal ſeveral Quantities of Money from divers People, part of which Individual Money was dropt ſometimes out of the Air, before ſufficient Spectators, into the Hands of the Afflicted, while the Spectres were urging them to ſubſcribe their Covenant with Death. Moreover, Poiſons to the Standers-by, wholly Inviſibly, were ſometimes forced upon the Afflicted; which when they have with much Reluctancy ſwallowed, they have ſwoln preſently, ſo that the common Medicines for Poiſons have been found neceſſary to relieve them: Yea, ſometimes the Spectres in the ſtruggles have ſo dropt the Poiſons, that the Standers-by have ſmelt them, and view'd them, and beheld the Pillows of the miſerable ſtained with them.

Yet more, the miſerable have complained bitterly of burning Rags run into their forceably diſtended Mouths; and though no Body could ſee any ſuch Clothes, or indeed any Fires in the Chambers, yet preſently the ſcalds were ſeen plainly by every Body on the Mouths of the Complainers. and not only the Smell, but the Smoke of the Burning ſenſibly fill'd the Chambers.

Once more, the miſerable exclaimed extreamly of Branding Irons heating at the Fire on the Hearth to mark them; now though the Sanders-by could ſee no Irons, yet they could ſee diſtinctly the Print of them in the Aſhes, and ſmell them too as they were carried by the not-ſeen Furies, unto the Poor Creatures for whom they were intended; and thoſe Poor Creatures were thereupon ſo Stigmatized with them, that they will bear the Marks of them to their Dying Day. Nor are theſe the Tenth Part of the Prodigies that fell out among the Inhabitants of New-England.

Flaſhy People may Burleſque theſe Things, but when Hundreds of the moſt ſober People in a Country, where they have as much Mother-Wit certainly as the reſt of Mankind, know them to be True, nothing but the abſurd and froward Spirit of Sadduciſm can Queſtion them. I have not yet mentioned ſo much as one Thing that will not be juſtified, if it be required by the Oaths of more conſiderate Perſons than any that can ridicule theſe odd Phænomena.

But the worſt part of this aſtoniſhing Tragedy is yet behind; wherein Sir William Phips, at laſt being dropt, as it were from the Machin of Heaven, was an Inſtrument of eaſing the Diſtreſſes of the Land, now ſo darkned by the Wrath of the Lord of Hoſts. There were very worthy Men upon the Spot where the aſſault from Hell was firſt made, who apprehended themſelves call'd from the God of Heaven, to ſift the buſineſs unto the bottom of it; and indeed, the continual Impreſſions, which the outcries and the havocks of the afflicted People that lived nigh unto them cauſed on their Minds, gave no little Edge to this Apprehenſion.

The Perſons were Men eminent for Wiſdom and Virtue, and they went about their enquiry into the matter, as driven unto it by a Conſcience of Duty to God and the World. They did in the firſt Place take it for granted, that there are Witches, or wicked Children of Men, who upon Covenanting with, and Commiſſioning of Evil Spirits, are attended by their Miniſtry to accompliſh the things deſired of them: To ſatiſfie them in which Perſwaſion, they had not only the Aſſertions of the Holy Scripture; Aſſertions, which the Witch-Advocates cannot evade without Shifts, too fooliſh for any Prudent, or too profane for any Honeſt Man to uſe; and they had not only the well-atteſted Relations of the graveſt Authors from Bodin to Bovet, and from Binsfeld to Bromhal and Baxter; to deny all which, would be as reaſonable as to turn the Chronicles of all Nations into Romances of Don Quixot and the Seven Champions; but they had alſo an Ocular Demonſtration in one, who a little before had been executed for Witchcraft, when Joſeph Dudley, Eſq; was the Chief Judge. There was one whoſe Magical Images were found, and who confeſſing her Deeds, (when a Jury of Doctors returned her Compos Mentis) actually ſhewed the whole Court, by what Ceremonies uſed unto them, ſhe directed her Familiar Spirits how and where to Cruciate the Objects of her Malice; and the Experiments being made over and over again before the whole Court, the Effect followed exactly in the Hurts done to People at a diſtance from her. The Exiſtence of ſuch Witches was now taken for granted by thoſe good Men, wherein ſo far the generality of reaſonable Men have thought they ran well; and they ſoon received the Confeſſions of ſome accuſed Perſons to confirm them in it; but then they took one thing more for granted, wherein 'tis now as generally thought they went out of the Way. The Afflicted People vehemently accuſed ſeveral Perſons in ſeveral Places, that the Spectres which afflicted them, did exactly reſemble them; until the Importunity of the Accuſations did provoke the Magiſtrates to examine them. When many of the accuſed came upon their Examination, it was found, that the Dæmons then a thouſand ways abuſing of the poor afflicted People, had with a marvellous exactneſs repreſented them; yea, it was found, that many of the accuſed, but caſting their Eye on the afflicted, the afflicted, though their Faces were never ſo much another way, would fall down and lye in a ſort of a Swoon, wherein they would continue, whatever Hands were laid upon them, until the Hands of the accuſed came to touch them, and then they would revive immediately: And it was found, that various kinds of natural Actions, done by many of the accuſed in or to their own Bodies, as Leaning, Bending, Turning Awry, or Squeezing their Hands, or the like, were preſently attended with the like things preternaturally done upon the Bodies of the afflicted, though they were ſo far aſunder, that the afflicted could not at all obſerve the accuſed.

It was alſo found, that the Fleſh of the Afflicted was often Bitten at ſuch a rate, that not only the Print of Teeth would be left on their Fleſh, but the very Slaver of Spittle too: And there would appear juſt ſuch a ſet of Teeth as was in the accuſed, even ſuch as might be clearly diſtinguiſhed from other Peoples. And uſually the afflicted went through a terrible deal of ſeeming Difficulties from the tormenting Spectres, and muſt be long waited on, before they could get a Breathing Space from their Torments to give in their Teſtimonies.

Now many good Men took up an Opinion, That the Providence of God would not permit an Innocent Perſon to come under ſuch a Spectral Repreſentation; and that a concurrence of ſo many Circumſtances would prove an accuſed Perſon to be in a Confederacy with the Dæmons thus afflicting of the Neighbours; they judged, that except theſe things might amount unto a Conviction, it would ſcarce be poſſible ever to Convict a Witch; and they had ſome Philoſophical Schemes of Witchcraft, and of the Method and Manner wherein Magical Poiſons operate, which further ſupported them in their Opinion.

Sundry of the accuſed Perſons were brought unto their Trial, while this Opinion was yet prevailing in the Minds of the Judges and the Juries, and perhaps the moſt of the People in the Country, then moſtly Suffering; and though againſt ſome of them that were Tried there came in ſo much other Evidence of their Diabolical Compacts, that ſome of the moſt Judicious, and yet Vehement Oppoſers of the Notions then in Vogue, publickly declared, Had they themſelves been on the Bench, they could not have Acquitted them; nevertheleſs, divers were Condemned, againſt whom the chief Evidence was founded in the Spectral Exhibitions.

And it happening, that ſome of the Accuſed coming to confeſs themſelves Guilty, their Shapes were no more ſeen by any of the afflicted, though the Confeſſion had been kept never ſo Secret, but inſtead thereof the Accuſed themſelves became in all Vexations juſt like the Afflicted; this yet more confirmed many in the Opinion that had been taken up.

And another thing that quickned them yet more to Act upon it, was, that the Afflicted were frequently entertained with Apparitions of Ghoſts at the ſame time that the Spectres of the ſuppoſed Witches troubled them: Which Ghoſts always caſt the Beholders into far more Conſternation than any of the Spectres; and when they exhibited themſelves, they cried out of being Murdered by the Witchcrafts, or other Violences of the Perſons repreſented in the Spectres. Once or Twice theſe Apparitions were ſeen by others at the very ſame time that they ſhew'd themſelves to the afflicted; and ſeldom were they ſeen at all, but when ſomething unuſual and ſuſpicious had attended the Death of the Party thus appearing.

The afflicted People many times had never heard any thing before of the Perſons appearing in Ghoſt, or of the Perſons accuſed by the Apparitions; and yet the accuſed upon Examination have confeſſed the Murders of thoſe very Perſons, though theſe accuſed alſo knew nothing of the Apparitions that had come in againſt them; and the afflicted Perſons likewiſe, without any private Agreement or Colluſion, when ſucceſſively brought into a Room, have all aſſerted the ſame Apparitions to be there before them: Theſe Murders did ſeem to call for an Enquiry.

On the other Part, there were many Perſons of great Judgment, Piety and Experience, who from the beginning were very much diſſatisfied at theſe Proceedings; they feared leſt the Devil would get ſo far into the Faith of the People, that for the ſake of many Truths, which they might find him telling of them, they would come at length to believe all his Lies, whereupon what a Deſolation of Names, yea, and of Lives alſo, would enſue, a Man might without much Witchcraft be able to Prognoſticate; and they feared, leſt in ſuch an extraordinary Deſcent of Wicked Spirits from their High Places upon us, there might ſuch Principles be taken up, as, when put into Practice, would unavoidably cauſe the Righteous to periſh with the Wicked, and procure the Blood-ſhed of Perſons like the Gibeonites, whom ſome learned Men ſuppoſe to be under a falſe Pretence of Witchcraft, by Saul exterminated.

However uncommon it might be for guiltleſs Perſons to come under ſuch unaccountable Circumſtances, as were on ſo many of the Accuſed, they held ſome things there are, which if ſuffered to be Common, would ſubvert Government, and Diſband and Ruin Humane Society, yet God ſometimes may ſuffer ſuch Things to evene, that we may know thereby how much we are beholden to him for that reſtraint which he lays upon the Infernal Spirits, who would elſe reduce a World into a Chaos. They had already known of one at the Town of Groton hideouſly agitated by Devils, who in her Fits cried out much againſt a very Godly Woman in the Town, and when that Woman approached unto her, though the Eyes of the Creature were never ſo ſhut, ſhe yet manifeſted a violent Senſe of her approach: But when the Gracious Woman thus Impeached, had prayed earneſtly with and for this Creature, then inſtead of crying out againſt her any more, ſhe owned, that ſhe had in all been deluded by the Devil. They now ſaw, that the more the Afflicted were Hearkned unto, the more the number of the Accuſed encreaſed; until at laſt many ſcores were cried out upon, and among them, ſome, who by the Unblameableneſs, yea, and Serviceableneſs of their whole Converſation, had obtained the Juſt Reputation of Good People among all that were acquainted with them. The Character of the afflicted likewiſe added unto the common Diſtaſte; for though ſome of them too were Good People, yet others of them, and ſuch of them as were moſt Flippent at Accuſing, had a far other Character.

In fine, the Country was in a dreadful Ferment, and wiſe Men foreſaw a long Train of Diſmal and Bloody Conſequences. Hereupon they firſt adviſed, that the afflicted might be kept aſunder in the cloſeſt Privacy; and one particular Perſon (whom I have cauſe to know) in purſuance of this Advice, offered himſelf ſingly to provide Accommodations for any ſix of them, that ſo the Succeſs of more than ordinary Prayer with Faſting, might, with Patience, be experienced, before any other Courſes were taken.

And Sir William Phips arriving to his Government, after this enſnaring horrible Storm was begun, did conſult the neighbouring Miniſters of the Province, who made unto his Excellency and the Council a return, (drawn up at their deſire by Mr. Mather the Younger, as I have been inform'd) wherein they declared.

We judge, that in the Proſecution of theſe and all ſuch Witchcrafts, there is need of a very Critical and Exquiſite Caution: Leſt by too much Credulity for things received only upon the Devil's Authority, there be a Door opened for a long Train of miſerable Conſequences, and Satan get an Advantage over us; for we ſhould not be Ignorant of his Devices.

As in complaints upon Witchcrafts, there may be Matters of Enquiry, which do not amount unto Matters of Preſumption; and there may be Matters of Preſumption, which yet may not be reckoned Matters of Conviction; ſo 'tis neceſſary that all Proceedings thereabout be managed with an exceeding Tenderneſs towards thoſe that may be complained of; eſpecially if they have been Perſons formerly of an unblemiſhed Reputation.

When the firſt Enquiry is made into the Circumſtances of ſuch as may lye under any juſt Suſpicion of Witchcrafts, we could wiſh that there may be admitted as little as is poſſible of ſuch Noiſe, Company, and Openneſs, as may too haſtily expoſe them that are Examined; and that there may nothing be uſed as a Teſt for the Trial of the Suſpected, the lawfulneſs whereof may be doubted among the People of God: But that the Directions given by ſuch judicious Writers as Perkins and Bernard, be conſulted in ſuch a Caſe.

Preſumptions, whereupon Perſons may be committed, and much more Convictions, whereupon Perſons may be condemned as guilty of Witchcrafts, ought certainly to be more conſiderable, than barely the accuſed Perſons being repreſented by a Spectre to the afflicted: Inaſmuch as it is an undoubted and a notorious Thing, that a Dæmon may, by God's Permiſſion, appear even to ill Purpoſes in the ſhape of an Innocent, yea, and a Virtuous Man: Nor can we eſteem Alterations made in the Sufferers, by a look or touch of the accuſed, to be an infallible Evidence of Guilt; but frequently liable to be abuſed by the Devil's Legerdemains.

We know not whether ſome remarkable Affronts given to the Devils, by our diſ-believing of thoſe Teſtimonies whoſe whole Force and Strength is from them alone, may not put a Period unto the Progreſs of a direful Calamity begun upon us, in the accuſation of ſo many Perſons, whereof, we hope, ſome are yet clear from the great Tranſgreſſion laid unto their Charge.

The Miniſters of the Province alſo being Jealous leſt this Counſel ſhould not be duly followed, requeſted the Preſident of Harvard-Colledge to Compoſe and Publiſh (which he did) ſome Caſes of Conſcience referring to theſe Difficulties: In which Treatiſe he did, with Demonſtrations of incomparable Reaſon and Reading, evince it, that Satan may appear in the Shape of an Innocent and a Virtuous Perſon, to afflict thoſe that ſuffer by the Diabolical Moleſtations: And that the Ordeal of the Sight, and the Touch, is not a Conviction of a Covenant with the Devil, but liable to great Exceptions againſt the Lawfulneſs, as well as the Evidence of it: And that either a Free and Fair Confeſſion of the Criminals, or the Oath of two Credible Perſons proving ſuch Things againſt the Perſon accuſed, as none but ſuch as have a Familiarity with the Devil can know, or do, is neceſſary to the Proof of the Crime. Thus,

> Cum miſit Natura Feras, & Monſtra per Orbem,
> Miſit & Alciden qui Fera Monſtra domet.

The Dutch and French Miniſters in the Province of New York, having likewiſe about the ſame time their Judgment asked by the Chief Judge of that Province, who was then a Gentleman of New-England, they gave it in under their Hands, that if we believe no Veneſick Witchcraft, we muſt Renounce the Scripture of God, and the Conſent of almoſt all the World; but that yet the Apparition of a Perſon afflicting another, is a very Inſufficient Proof of a Witch; nor is it Inconſiſtent with the Holy and Righteous Government of God over Men, to permit the Affliction of the Neighbours, by Devils in the Shape of Good Men; and that a Good Name, obtained by a Good Life, ſhould not be Loſt by Meer Spectral Accuſations.

Now upon a Deliberate Review of theſe things, his Excellency firſt Reprieved, and then Pardoned many of them that had been Condemned; and there fell out ſeveral ſtrange things that cauſed the Spirit of the Country to run as vehemently upon the Acquitting of all the accuſed, as it by miſtake ran at firſt upon the Condemning of them. Some that had been zealouſly of the Mind, that the Devils could not in the Shapes of good Men afflict other Men, were terribly Confuted, by having their own Shapes, and the Shapes of their moſt intimate and valued Friends, thus abuſed. And though more than twice Twenty had made ſuch voluntary, and harmonious, and uncontroulable Confeſſions, that if they were all Sham, there was therein the greateſt Violation made by the Efficacy of the Inviſible World, upon the Rules of Underſtanding Humane Affairs, that was ever ſeen ſince God made Man upon the Earth, yet they did ſo recede from their Confeſſions, that it was very clear, ſome of them had been hitherto, in a ſort of a Præternatural Dream, wherein they had ſaid of themſelves, they knew not what themſelves.

In fine, The laſt Courts that ſate upon this Thorny Buſineſs, finding that it was impoſſible to Penetrate into the whole Meaning of the things that had happened, and that ſo many unſearchable Cheats were interwoven into the Concluſion of a Myſterious Buſineſs, which perhaps had not crept thereinto at the Beginning of it, they cleared the accuſed as faſt as they Tried them; and within a little while the afflicted were moſt of them delivered out of their Troubles alſo: And the Land had Peace reſtored unto it, by the God of Peace, treading Satan under Foot. Eraſmus, among other Hiſtorians, does tell us, that at a Town in Germany, a Dæmon appearing on the Top of a Chimney, threatned that he would ſet the Town on Fire, and at length ſcattering ſome Aſhes abroad, the whole Town was preſently and horribly Burnt unto the Ground.

Sir William Phips now beheld ſuch Dæmons hideouſly ſcattering Fire about the Country, in the Exaſperations which the Minds of Men were on theſe things riſing unto; and therefore when he had well Canvaſed a Cauſe, which perhaps might have puzzled the Wiſdom of the wiſeſt Men on Earth to have managed, without any Error in their Adminiſtrations, he thought, if it would be any Error at all, it would certainly be the ſafeſt for him to put a ſtop unto all future Proſecutions, as far as it lay in him to do it.

He did ſo, and for it he had not only the Printed Acknowledgments of the New-Englanders, who publickly thanked him, As one of the Tribe of Zebulun, raiſed up from among themſelves, and Spirited as well as Commiſſioned to be the Steers-man of a Veſſel befogg'd in the Mare Mortuum of Witchcraft, who now ſo happily ſteered her Courſe, that ſhe eſcaped Shipwrack, and was ſafely again Moored under the Cape of Good Hope; and cut aſunder the Circæan Knot of Enchantment, more difficult to be Diſſolved than the famous Gordian one of Old.

But the QUEEN alſo did him the Honour to write unto him thoſe Gracious Letters, wherein her Majeſty commended his Conduct in theſe Inexplicable Matters. And I did right in calling theſe Matters Inexplicable. For if, after the Kingdom of Sweden (in the Year 1669, and 1670.) had ſome Hundreds of their Children by Night often carried away by Spectres to an Helliſh Rendezvous, where the Monſters that ſo Spirited them, did every way Tempt them to Aſſociate with them; and the Judges of the Kingdom, after extraordinary Supplications to Heaven, upon a ſtrict Enquiry, were ſo ſatisfied with the Confeſſions of more than Twenty of the accuſed, agreeing exactly unto the Depoſitions of the afflicted, that they put ſeveral Scores of Witches to Death, whereupon the Confuſions came unto a Period; yet after all, the chiefeſt Perſons in the Kingdom would Queſtion whether there were any Witchcrafts at all in the whole Affair; it muſt not be wondred at, if the People of New-England are to this Hour full of Doubts, about the Steps which were taken, while a War from the Inviſible World was Terrifying of them; and whether they did not kill ſome of their own ſide in the Smoke and Noiſe of this Dreadful War. And it will be yet leſs wondred at, if we conſider, that we have ſeen the whole Engliſh Nation alarumed with a Plot, and both Houſes of Parliament, upon good Grounds, Voting their Senſe of it, and many Perſons moſt juſtly Hang'd, Drawn and Quarter'd, for their ſhare in it: When yet there are enough, who to this Day will pretend, that they cannot comprehend how much of it is to be accounted Credible. However, having related theſe wonderful Paſſages, whereof, if the Veracity of the Relator in any one Point be conteſted, there are whole Clouds of Witneſſes to vindicate it, I will take my leave of the Matter with an wholeſome Caution of Lactantius, which, it may be, ſome other Parts of the World beſides New-England may have occaſion to think upon; Efficiunt Dæmones, ut quæ non ſunt, ſic tamen, quaſi ſint, conſpicienda Hominibus exhibeant.

But the Devils being thus vanquiſhed, we ſhall next hear, that ſome of his moſt devoted and reſembling Children are ſo too.

§. 17. As one of the firſt Actions done by Sir William, after he came to the Age of Doing, was to ſave the Lives of many poor People from the Rage of the Diabolical Indians in the Eaſtern Parts of the Country, ſo now he was come to the Government, his Mind was very vehemently ſet upon recovering of thoſe Parts from the Miſeries, which a New and a Long War of the Indians had brought upon them. His Birth and Youth in the Eaſt, had rendred him well known unto the Indians there; he had Hunted and Fiſhed many a weary Day in his Childhood with them; and when thoſe rude Savages had got the Story by the End, that he had found a Ship full of Money, and was now become all one-a-King! They were mightily aſtoniſhed at it: But when they farther underſtood that he was become the Governour of New-England, it added a further Degree of Conſternation to their Aſtoniſhment. He likewiſe was better acquainted with the Scituation of thoſe Regions than moſt other Men; and he conſider'd what vaſt Advantages might ariſe to no leſs than the whole Engliſh Nation, from the Lumber, and Fiſhery, and Naval-ſtores, which thoſe Regions might ſoon ſupply the whole Nation withal, if once they were well ſettled with good Inhabitants.

Wherefore Governour Phips took the firſt Opportunity to raiſe an Army, with which he Travelled in Perſon, under the Eaſt Country, to find out and cut off the Barbarous Enemy, which had continued for near four Years together, making horrible Havock on the Plantations that lay all along the Northern Frontiers of New-England: And having purſued thoſe worſe than Scythian Wolves, till they could be no longer followed, he did with a very laudable Skill, and unuſual Speed, and with leſs Coſt unto the Crown, than perhaps ever ſuch a thing was done in the World, erect a ſtrong Fort at Pemmaquid.

This Fort he contrived ſo much in the very Heart of the Country now poſſeſſed by the Enemy, as very much to hinder the ſeveral Nations of the Tawnies from Clanning together for the Common Diſturbance; and his Deſign was, that a ſufficient Garriſon being here poſted, they might from thence, upon Advice, iſſue forth to ſurprize that Ferocient Enemy. At the ſame time he would fain have gone in Perſon up the Bay of Funda, with a convenient Force, to have ſpoiled the Neſt of Rebellious Frenchmen, who being Rendezvouzed at St. John's, had a yearly Supply of Ammunition from France, with which they ſtill ſupplied the Indians, unto the extream Detriment of the Engliſh; but his Friends for a long time would not permit him to expoſe himſelf unto the Inconveniencies of that Expedition.

However, he took ſuch Methods, that the Indian Kings of the Eaſt, within a little while had their Stomachs brought down, to ſue and beg for a Peace: And making their appearance at the New-Fort in Pemmaquid, Aug. 11. 1693. they did there Sign an Inſtrument, wherein, lamenting the Miſeries which their Adherence to the French Counſels had brought them into, they did for themſelves, and with the Conſent of all the Indians from the River of Merrimack, to the moſt Eaſterly Bounds of all the Province, acknowledge their Hearty Subjection and Obedience unto the Crown of England, and Solemnly Covenant, Promiſe and Agree, to and with Sir William Phips, Captain General and Governour in Chief over the Province, and his Succeſſors in that place, That they would for ever ceaſe all Acts of Hoſtility towards the Subjects of the Crown of England, and hold a conſtant Friendſhip with all the Engliſh. That they would utterly abandon the French Intereſts, and not Succour or Conceal any Enemy Indians, from Canada or elſewhere, that ſhould come to any of their Plantations within the Engliſh Territories: That all Engliſh Captives, which they had among them, ſhould be returned with all poſſible ſpeed, and no Ranſom or Payment be given for any of them: That Their Majeſties Subjects the Engliſh, now ſhould quietly enter upon, and for ever improve and enjoy all and ſingular their Rights of Lands, and former Poſſeſſions, within the Eaſtern Parts of the Province, without any Claims from any Indians or being ever diſturbed therein: That all Trade and Commerce, which hereafter might be allowed between the Engliſh and the Indians, ſhould be under a Regulation ſtated by an Act of the General Aſſembly, or as limited by the Governour of the Province, with the Conſent and Advice of his Council. And that if any Controverſie hereafter happen between any of the Engliſh and the Indians, no private Revenge was to be taken by the Indians, but proper Applications to be made unto His Majeſties Government, for the due remedy thereof: Submitting themſelves herewithal to be Governed by His Majeſties Laws.

And for the Manifeſtation of their Sincerity in the Submiſſion thus made, the Hypocritical Wretches delivered Hoſtages for their Fidelity; and then ſet their Marks and Seals, no leſs than Thirteen Sagamores of them, (with Names of more than a Perſian length) unto this Inſtrument.

The firſt Riſe of this Indian War had hitherto been almoſt as dark as that of the River Nilus: 'Tis true, if any Wild Engliſh did raſhly begin to provoke and affront the Indians, yet the Indians had a fairer way to obtain Juſtice than by Bloodſhed: However, upon the New-Engliſh Revolution, the State of the War became wholly New: The Government then employed all poſſible ways to procure a good Underſtanding with the Indians; but all the Engliſh Offers, Kindneſſes, Courteſies were barbarouſly requited by them, with New Acts of the moſt perfidious Hoſtility. Notwithſtanding all this, there were ſtill ſome Nice People that had their Scruples about the Juſtice of the War; but upon this New Submiſſion of the Indians, if ever thoſe Rattle-ſnakes (the only Rattle-ſnakes, which, they ſay, were ever ſeen to the Northward of Merimack-River) ſhould ſtir again, the moſt ſcrupulous Perſons in the World muſt own, That it muſt be the moſt unexceptionable piece of Juſtice in the World for to extinguiſh them.

Thus did the God of Heaven bleſs the unwearied Applications of Sir William Phips, for the reſtoring of Peace unto New-England, when the Country was quite out of Breath, in its Endeavours for its own Preſervation from the continual Outrages of an inacceſſible Enemy, and by the Poverty coming in ſo like an armed Man, from the unſucceſsfulneſs of their former Armies, that it could not imagine how to take one ſtep further in its Wars. The moſt happy Reſpite of Peace beyond Merimack-River being thus procured, the Governour immediately ſet himſelf to uſe all poſſible Methods, that it might be Peace, like a River, nothing ſhort of Everlaſting.

He therefore prevailed with Two or Three Gentlemen to join with him, in ſending a Supply of Neceſſaries for Life unto the Indians; until the General Aſſembly could come together to ſettle the Indian-Trade for the Advantage of the Publick, that the Indians might not by Neceſſity be driven again to become a French Propriety; altho' by this Action, as the Gentlemen themſelves were great Loſers in their Eſtates, thus he himſelf declared unto the Members of the General Aſſembly, that he would upon Oath give an Account unto them of all his own Gains, and count himſelf a Gainer, if in lieu of all they would give him one Beaver-Hat. The ſame Generoſity alſo cauſed him to take many a tedious Voyage, accompanied ſometimes with his Fidus Achates, and very dear Friend, Kinſman and Neighbour, Colonel John Philips, between Boſton and Pemmaquid; and this in the bitter Weeks of the New-Engliſh, which is almoſt a Ruſſian Winter.

He was a ſort of Confeſſor under ſuch Torments of Cold, as once made the Martyrdom of Muria, and others, Commemorated in Orations of the Ancients; and the Snow and Ice which Pliny calls, The Puniſhment of Mountains, he chearfully endured, without any other Profit unto himſelf, but only the Pleaſure of thereby eſtabliſhing and continuing unto the People the Liberty to Sleep quietly in their warm Neſts at home, while he was thus concerned for them abroad. Non mihi ſed Populo, the Motto of the Emperor Hadrian, was Engraved on the Heart of Sir William: NOT FOR MY SELF, BUT FOR MY PEOPLE: Or that of Maximin, Quo major, hoc Laborioſior, the more Honourable, the more Laborious.

Indeed the Reſtleſneſs of his Travels to the Southern as well as the Eaſtern Parts of the Country, when the Publick Safety call'd for his Preſence, would have made one to think on the Tranſlation which the King of Portugal, on a very Extraordinary Occaſion, gave the Fourth Verſe in the Hundred and Twenty-firſt Pſalm. He will not Slumber, nor will he ſuffer to Sleep the Keeper of Iſrael. Nor did he only try to Cicurate the Indians of the Eaſt, by other Prudent and Proper Treatments; but he alſo furniſhed himſelf with an Indian Preacher of the Goſpel, whom he carried unto the Eaſtward, with an Intention to Teach them the Principles of the Proteſtant Religion, and Unteach them the mixt Paganry and Popery which hitherto Diaboliz'd them. To Unteach them, I ſay; for they had been Taught by the French Prieſts this among other things, that the Mother of our Bleſſed Saviour was a French Lady, and that they were Engliſhmen by whom our Saviour was Murdered; and that it was therefore a Meritorious thing to deſtroy the Engliſh Nation. The Name of the Preacher whom the Governour carried with him, was Nahauton, one of the Natives; and becauſe the paſſing of ſuch Expreſſions from the Mouth of a poor Indian, may upon ſome Accounts be worthy of Remembrance; let it be Remembred, that when the Governour propounded unto him ſuch a Miſſion to the Eaſtern Indians, he replied, I know that I ſhall probably Endanger my Life, by going to Preach the Goſpel among the Frenchified Indians; but I know that it will be a Service unto the Lord Jeſus Chriſt, and therefore I will venture to go.

God grant that his Behaviour may be in all things, at all times, according to theſe his Expreſſions! While theſe things were doing, having Intelligence of a French Man of War expected at St. John's, he diſpatched away the Non-ſuch-Frigat thither to intercept him; nevertheleſs by the groſs Negligence, and perhaps Cowardice of the Captain, who had lately come from England with Orders to take the Command of her, inſtead of one who had been by Sir William a while before put in, and one who had ſignalized himſelf by doing of notable Service for the King and Country in it, the Frenchman arrived unladed, and went away untouch'd. The Governour was extreamly offended at this notorious Deficiency; it caſt him into a great Impatience to ſee the Nation ſo wretchedly ſerved; and he would himſelf have gone to Saint John's with a Reſolution to Spoil that Harbour of Spoilers, if he had not been taken off, by being ſent for home to Whitehall, in the very midſt of his Undertakings.

But the Treacherous Indians being poiſoned with the French Enchantments, and furniſhed with brave New Coats, and New Arms, and all new Incentives to War, by the Man of War newly come in; they preſently and perfidiouſly fell upon two Engliſh Towns, and Butchered and Captived many of the Inhabitants, and made a New War, which the New-Englanders know not whether it will end until either Canada become an Engliſh Province, or that State arrive, wherein they ſhall beat Swords into Plough-ſhares, and Spears into Pruning-hooks. And no doubt, the taking off Sir William Phips was no ſmall Encouragement unto the Indians in this Relapſe, into the Villanies and Maſſacres of a New Invaſion upon the Country.

§. 18. Reader, 'tis time for us to view a little more to the Life, the Picture of the Perſon, the Actions of whoſe Life we have hitherto been looking upon. Know then, that for his Exterior, he was one Tall, beyond the common Set of Men, and Thick as well as Tall, and Strong as well as Thick: He was, in all reſpects, exceedingly Robuſt, and able to Conquer ſuch Difficulties of Diet and of Travel, as would have kill'd moſt Men alive: Nor did the Fat, whereinto he grew very much in his later Years, take away the Vigour of his Motions.

He was Well-ſet, and he was therewithal of a very Comely, though a very Manly Countenance: A Countenance where any true skill in Phyſiognomy would have read the Characters of a Generous Mind. Wherefore paſſing to his Interior, the very firſt thing which there offered it ſelf unto Obſervation, was a moſt Incomparable Generoſity.

And of this, beſides the innumerable Inſtances which he gave in his uſual Hatred of Dirty or Little Tricks, there was one Inſtance for which I muſt freely ſay, I never ſaw Three Men in this World that Equall'd him; this was his wonderfully Forgiving Spirit. In the vaſt Variety of Buſineſs, through which he Raced in his time, he met with many and mighty Injuries; but although I have heard all that the moſt venemous Malice could ever Hiſs at his Memory, I never did hear unto this Hour, that he did ever once deliberately Revenge an Injury.

Upon certain Affronts he has made ſudden Returns that have ſhewed Choler enough, and he has by Blow, as well as by Word, chaſtiſed Incivilities: He was, indeed, ſufficiently impatient of being put upon; and when Baſe Men, ſurprizing him at ſome Diſadvantages (for elſe few Men durſt have done it) have ſometimes times drawn upon him, he has, without the Wicked Madneſs of a Formal Duel, made them feel that he knew how to Correct Fools. Nevertheleſs, he ever declined a Deliberate Revenge of a Wrong done unto him; though few Men upon Earth have, in their Viciſſitudes, been furniſhed with ſuch frequent Opportunities of Revenge, as Heaven brought into the Hands of this Gentleman.

Under great Provocations, he would commonly ſay, 'Tis no Matter, let them alone; ſome time or other they'll ſee their Weakneſs and Raſhneſs, and have occaſion for me to do them a Kindneſs: And they ſhall then ſee I have quite forgotten all their Baſeneſs. Accordingly 'twas remarkable to ſee it, that few Men ever did him a Miſchief, but thoſe Men afterwards had occaſion for him to do them a Kindneſs; and he did the Kindneſs with as forgetful a Bravery, as if the Miſchief had never been done at all. The Emperor Theodoſius himſelf could not be readier to Forgive; ſo worthily did he verifie that Obſervation.

Quo quiſque eſt Major, magis eſt Placabilis Ira, Et Faciles Motus, Mens Generoſa capit.

In thoſe Places of Power whereto the Providence of God by ſeveral Degrees raiſed him, it ſtill fell out ſo, that before his Riſe thereunto he underwent ſuch things as he counted very hard Abuſes, from thoſe very Perſons over whom the Divine Providence afterwards gave him the Aſcendant.

By ſuch Trials, the Wiſdom of Heaven ſtill prepared him, as David before him, for ſucceſſive Advancements; and as he behaved himſelf with a marvellous Long-ſuffering, when he was Tried, by ſuch Mortifications, thus when he came to be advanced, he convinced all Mankind, that he had perfectly Buried all the old Offences in an Eternal Amneſty. I was my Self an Ear-witneſs, that one, who was an Eye-witneſs of his Behaviour under ſuch Probations of his Patience, did, long before his Arrival to that Honour, ſay unto him, Sir, Forgive thoſe that give you theſe Vexations, and know that the God of Heaven intends, before he has done with you, to make you the Governour of New-England! And when he did indeed become the Governour of New-England, he ſhew'd that he ſtill continued a Governour of himſelf, in his Treating all that had formerly been in ill Terms with him, with as much Favour and Freedom, as if there had never happened the leaſt Exaſperations: Though any Governour that Kens Hobbianiſm, can eaſily contrive Ways enough to wreak a Spite, where he owes it.

It was with ſome Chriſtian Remark, that he read the Pagan-ſtory of the Renowned Fabius Maximus, who being preferred unto the higheſt Office in the Commonwealth, did, through a Zeal for his Country, overcome the greateſt Contempts that any Perſon of Quality could have received. Minutius the Maſter of the Horſe, and the next Perſon in Dignity to himſelf, did firſt privately Traduce him, as one that was no Soldier, and leſs Politician; and he afterwards did both by Speeches and Letters prejudice not only the Army, but alſo the Senate againſt him, ſo that Minutius was now by an unpreſidented Commiſſion brought into an Equality with Fabius.

All this while the great Fabius did not throw up his Cares for the Commonwealth, but with a wondrous Equality of Mind endured equally the Malice of the Judges, and the Fury of the Commons; and when Minutius a while after was with all his Forces upon the Point of periſhing by the victorious Arms of Hannibal, this very Fabius, not liſtening to the Dictates of Revenge, came in and helped him, and ſaved him; and ſo by a rare Virtue, he made his worſt Adverſaries the Captives of his Generoſity.

One of the Antients upon ſuch an Hiſtory, cried out, If Heathens can do thus much for the Glory of their Name, what ſhall not Chriſtians do for the Glory of Heaven! And Sir William Phips did ſo much more than thus much, that beſides his meriting the Glory of ſuch a Name, as PHIPPIUS MAXIMUS, he therein had upon him the Symptoms of a Title to the Glory of Heaven, in the Seal of his own Pardon from God. Nor was this Generoſity in His EXCELLENCY the Governour of New-England, unaccompanied with many other Excellencies; whereof the Piety of his Carriage towards God is worthy to be firſt Mentioned.

It is true, He was very Zealous for all Men to enjoy ſuch a Liberty of Conſcience, as he judged a Native Right of Mankind: And he was extreamly Troubled at the over-boiling Zeal of ſome good Men, who formerly took that wrong Way of reclaiming Hereticks by Perſecution. For this Generoſity, it may be, ſome would have compared him unto Gallio, the Governour of Achaia, whom our Preachers, perhaps with Miſtake enough, think to be condemned in the Scripture, for his not appearing to be a Judge, in Matters which indeed fell not under his Cognizance.

And I ſhall be content that he be compared unto that Gentleman; for that Gallio was the Brother of Seneca, who gives this Character of him, That there was no Man who did not love him too little, if he could Love him any more; and, That there was no Mortal ſo Dear to any, as he was to all; and, That he hated all Vices, but none more than Flattery.

But while the Generoſity of Sir William cauſed him to deſire a Liberty of Conſcience, his Piety would not allow a Liberty of Prophaneneſs, either to himſelf or others. He did not affect any mighty ſhow of Devotion; and when he ſaw any that were evidently careful to make a ſhow, and eſpecially, if at the ſame Time they were notoriouſly Defective in the Duties of Common Juſtice or Goodneſs, or the Duties of the Relations wherein God had ſtationed them, he had an extream Averſion for them.

Nevertheleſs he did ſhow a Conſciencious Deſire to obſerve the Laws of the Lord Jeſus Chriſt in his Converſation; and he Conſcienciouſly attended upon the Exerciſes of Devotion in the Seaſons thereof, on Lectures, as well as on Lord's Days, and in the Daily Sacrifice, the Morning and Evening Service of his own Family; yea, and at the Private Meetings of the Devout People kept every Fortnight in the Neighbourhood.

Beſides all this, when he had great Works before him, he would invite good Men to come and Faſt and Pray with him at his Houſe for the Succeſs thereof; and when he had ſucceeded in what he had undertaken, he would prevail with them to come and keep a Day of Solemn Thanſgiving with him. His Love to Almighty God, was indeed maniſeſted by nothing more than his Love to thoſe that had the Image of God upon them; he heartily, and with real Honour for them, Loved all Godly Men; and in ſo doing, he did not confine Godlineſs to this or that Party, but where-ever he ſaw the Fear of God, in one of a Congregational, or Presbyterian, or Antipædobaptiſt, or Epiſcopalian Perſwaſion, he did, without any Difference, expreſs towards them a Reverent Affection.

But he made no Men more welcome than thoſe good Men, whoſe Office 'tis to promote and preſerve Goodneſs in all other Men; even the Miniſters of the Goſpel: Eſpecially when they were ſuch as faithfully diſcharged their Office: And from theſe at any time, the leaſt Admonition or Intimation of any good thing to be done by him, he entertained with a moſt obliging Alacrity. His Religion in truth, was one Principle that added Virtue unto that vaſt Courage, which was always in him to a Degree Heroical. Thoſe terrible Nations which made their Deſcents from the Northern on the Southern Parts of Europe, in thoſe Elder Ages, when ſo to ſwarm out was more frequent with them, were inſpired with a Valiant Contempt of Life, by the Opinion wherein their Famous Odin inſtructed them. That their Death was but an Entrance into another Life, wherein they who died in Warlike Actions, were bravely Feaſted with the God of War for ever: 'Tis inexpreſſible how much the Courage of thoſe fierce Mortals was fortified by that Opinion.

But when Sir William Phips was asked by ſome that obſerved his Valiant Contempt of Death, what it was that made him ſo little afraid of Dying, he gave a better grounded Account of it than thoſe Pagans could; his Anſwer was, I do humbly believe, that the Lord Jeſus Chriſt ſhed his Precious Blood for me, by his Death procuring my Peace with God: And what ſhould I now be afraid of dying for?

But this leads me to mention the Humble and Modeſt Carriage in him towards other Men, which accompanied this his Piety. There were certain Pomps belonging unto the ſeveral Places of Honour, through which he paſſed; Pomps that are very taking to Men of little Souls: But although he roſe from ſo little, yet he diſcovered a Marvellous Contempt of thoſe Airy things, and as far as he handſomely could, he declined, being Ceremoniouſly, or any otherwiſe than with a Dutch Modeſty waited upon. And it might more truly be ſaid of him, than it was of Ariſtides, He was never ſeen the Prouder for any Honour that was done him from his Countrymen.

Hence, albeit I have read that Complaint, made by a Worthy Man, I have often obſerved, and this not without ſome bluſhing, that even good People have had a kind of Shame upon them, to acknowledge their low beginning, and uſed all Arts to hide it. I could never obſerve the leaſt of that Fault in this Worthy Man; but he would ſpeak of his own low beginning with as much Freedom and Frequency, as if he had been afraid of having it forgotten.

It was counted an Humility in King Agathocles, the Son of a Potter, to be ſerved therefore in Earthen Veſſels, as Plutarch hath informed us: It was counted an Humility in Archbiſhop Willigis, the Son of a Wheelwright, therefore to have Wheels hung about his Bed-Chamber, with this Inſcription, Recole unde Veneris, i. e. Remember thy Original. But ſuch was the Humility and Lowlineſs of this Riſing Man! Not only did he after his return to his Country in his Greatneſs, one Day, make a ſplendid Feaſt for the Ship-Carpenters of Boſton, among whom he was willing at his Table to Commemorate the Mercy of God unto him, who had once been a Ship-Carpenter himſelf, but he would on all Occaſions Permit, yea, Study to have his Meanneſſes remembred.

Hence upon frequent Occaſions of Uneaſineſs in his Government, he would chuſe thus to expreſs himſelf, Gentlemen, were it not that I am to do Service for the Publick, I ſhould be much eaſier in returning unto my broad Ax again! And hence, according to the Affable Courteſie which he ordinarily uſed unto all ſorts of Perſons, (quite contrary to the Aſperity which the old Proverb expects in the Raiſed) he would particularly, when Sailing in ſight of Kennebeck, with Armies under his Command, call the Young Soldiers and Sailors upon Deck, and ſpeak to them after this Faſhion; Young Men, It was upon that Hill that I kept Sheep a few Years ago; and ſince you ſee that Almighty God has brought me to ſomething, do you learn to Fear God, and be Honeſt, and mind your Buſineſs, and follow no bad Courſes, and you don't know what you may come to! A Temper not altogether unlike what the advanced Shepherd had, when he wrote the Twenty-third Pſalm; or when he Imprinted on the Coin of his Kingdom the Remembrance of his Old Condition: For Chriſtianus Gerſon, a Chriſtianized Jew, has informed us, That on the one ſide of David's Coin were to be ſeen his old Pouch and Crook, the Inſtruments of Shepherdy; on the other ſide were enſtamped the Towers of Zion.

In fine, our Sir William was a Perſon of ſo ſweet a Temper, that they who were moſt intimately acquainted with him, would commonly pronounce him, The beſt Conditioned Gentleman in the World! And by the continual Diſcoveries and Expreſſions of ſuch a Temper, he ſo gained the Hearts of them who waited upon him in any of his Expeditions, that they would commonly profeſs themſelves willing ſtill, to have gone with him to the end of the World.

But if all other People found him ſo kind a Neighbour, we may eaſily infer what an Huſband he was unto his Lady. Leaving unmentioned that Virtue of his Chaſtity, which the Prodigious Depravation brought by the Late Reigns upon the Manners of the Nation, has made worthy to be mentioned as a Virtue ſomewhat Extraordinary; I ſhall rather paſs on to ſay, That the Love, even to Fondneſs, with which he always treated her, was a Matter not only of Obſervation, but even of ſuch Admiration, that every one ſaid, The Age afforded not a kinder Husband!

But we muſt now return to our Story.

§. 19. When Perſons do by Studies full of Curioſity, ſeek to inform themſelves of things about which the God of Heaven hath forbidden our Curious Enquiries, there is a marvellous Impreſſion, which the Dæmons do often make on the Minds of thoſe their Votaries, about the Future or Secret Matters unlawfully enquired after, and at laſt there is alſo an horrible Poſſeſſion, which thoſe Fatidic Dæmons do take of them. The Snares of Hell, hereby laid for miſerable Mortals, have been ſuch, that when I read the Laws, which Angellius affirms to have been made, even in Pagan Rome, againſt the Vaticinatores; I wonder that no Engliſh Nobleman or Gentleman ſignalizes his regard unto Chriſtianity, by doing what even a Roman Tully would have done, in promoting An Act of Parliament againſt that Paganiſh Practice of Judicial Aſtrology, whereof, if ſuch Men as Auſtin were now living, they would aſſert, The Devil firſt found it, and they that profeſs it are Enemies of Truth and of God.

In the mean time, I cannot but relate a wonderful Experience of Sir William Phips, by the Relation whereof ſomething of an Antidote may be given againſt a Poiſon, which the Diabolical Figure-Flingers and Fortune-Tellers that ſwarm all the World over may inſinuate into the Minds of Men. Long before Mr. Phips came to be Sir William, while he ſojourned in in London, there came into his Lodging an Old Aſtrologer, living in the Neighbourhood, who making ſome Obſervation of him, though he had ſmall or no Converſation with him, did (howbeit by him wholly undeſired) one Day ſend him a Paper, wherein he had, with Pretences of a Rule in Aſtrology for each Article, diſtinctly noted the moſt material Paſſages that were to befal this our Phips in the remaining part of his Life; it was particularly Aſſerted and Inſerted, That he ſhould be engaged in a Deſign, wherein by Reaſon of Enemies at Court, he ſhould meet with much delay; that nevertheleſs in the Thirty-Seventh Year of his Life, he ſhould find a mighty Treaſure; that in the Forty-Firſt Year of his Life, his King ſhould employ him in as great a Truſt beyond Sea, as a Subject could eaſily have: That ſoon after this he ſhould undergo an hard Storm from the Endeavours of his Adverſaries to reproach him and ruin him; that his Adverſaries, though they ſhould go very near gaining the Point, ſhould yet miſs of doing ſo; that he ſhould hit upon a vaſtly Richer Matter than any that he had hitherto met withal; that he ſhould continue Thirteen Years in his Publick Station, full of Action, and full of Hurry; and the reſt of his Days he ſhould ſpend in the Satisfaction of a Peaceable Retirement.

Mr. Phips received this undeſired Paper with Trouble and with Contempt, and threw it by among certain looſe Papers in the bottom of a Trunk, where his Lady ſome Years after accidentally lit upon it. His Lady with Admiration ſaw, ſtep after ſtep, very much of it accompliſhed; but when ſhe heard from England, that Sir William was coming over with a Commiſſion to be Governour of New-England, in that very Year of his Life, which the Paper ſpecified; ſhe was afraid of letting it lye any longer in the Houſe, but caſt it into the Fire.

Now the thing which I muſt invite my Reader to remark, is this, That albeit Almighty God may permit the Devils to Predict, and perhaps to Perform very many particular things to Men, that ſhall by ſuch a Preſumptuous and Unwarrantable Juggle as Aſtrology (ſo Dr. Hall well calls it!) or any other Divination, conſult them, yet the Devil which foretel many True things, do commonly foretel ſome that are Falſe, and it may be, propoſe by the things that are True to betray Men into ſome fatal Misbelief and Miſcarriage about thoſe that are Falſe.

Very ſingular therefore was the Wiſdom of Sir William Phips, that as he ever Treated theſe Propheſies about him with a moſt Pious Neglect, ſo when he had ſeen all but the Two laſt of them very punctually fulfilled, yea, and ſeen the beginning of a Fulfilment unto the laſt but one alſo, yet when I pleaſantly mentioned them unto him, on purpoſe to Try whether there were any occaſion for me humbly to give him the ſerious Advice, neceſſary in ſuch a Caſe to Anticipate the Devices of Satan, he prevented my Advice, by ſaying to me, Sir, I do believe there might be a curſed Snare of Satan in thoſe Propheſies: I believe Satan might have leave to foretel many things, all of which might come to paſs in the beginning, to lay me aſleep about ſuch things as are to follow, eſpecially about the main Chance of all; I do not know but I am to die this Year: For my part, by the help of the Grace of God, I ſhall endeavour to live as if I were this Year to die. And let the Reader now attend the Event!

§. 20. 'Tis a Similitude which I have Learned from no leſs a Perſon than the great Baſil: That as the Eye ſees not thoſe Objects which are applied cloſe unto it, and even lye upon it; but when the Objects are to ſome diſtance removed, it clearly diſcerns them: So, we have little ſenſe of the Good which we have in our Enjoyments, until God, by the removal thereof, teach us better to prize what we once enjoyed. It is true, the Generality of ſober and thinking People among the New-Englanders, did as highly value the Government of Sir William Phips, whilſt he lived, as they do his Memory, ſince his Death; nevertheleſs it muſt be confeſſed, that the Bleſſing which the Country had in his indefatigable Zeal, to ſerve the Publick in all it's Intereſts, was not ſo valued as it ſhould have been.

It was mention'd long ſince as a notorious Fault in Old Egypt, that it was Loquax & Ingenioſa in Contumeliam Præfectorum Provincia; ſi quis forte vitaverit Culpam, Contumeliam non effugit: And New-England has been at the beſt always too faulty, in that very Character, A Province very Talkative, and Ingenious for the vilifying of its Publick Servants.

But Sir William Phips, who might in a Calm of the Commonwealth have adminiſtred all things with as General an Acceptance as any that have gone before him, had the Diſadvantage of being ſet at Helm in a time as full of Storm as ever that Province had ſeen; and the People having their Spirits put into a Tumult by the diſcompoſing and diſtempering Variety of Diſaſters, which had long been rendring the time Calamitous, it was natural for them, as 'tis for all Men then, to be complaining; and you may be ſure, the Rulers muſt in ſuch Caſes be always complained of, and the chief Complaints muſt be heaped upon thoſe that are Commanders in Chief. Nor has a certain Proverb in Aſia been improper in America, He deſerves no Man's good Word, of whom every Man ſhall ſpeak well.

Sir William was very hardly Handled (or Tongued at leaſt) in the Liberty which People took to make moſt unbecoming and injurious Reflections upon his Conduct, and Clamour againſt him, even for thoſe very Actions which were not only Neceſſary to be done, but highly Beneficial unto themſelves; and though he would ordinarily ſmile at their Frowardneſs, calling it his Country Pay, yet he ſometimes reſented it with ſome uneaſineſs; he ſeem'd unto himſelf ſometimes almoſt as bad as Rolled about in Regulus's Barrel; and had occaſion to think on the Italian Proverb, To wait for one who does not come; to lye a Bed not able to ſleep; and to find it impoſſible to pleaſe thoſe whom we ſerve; are three Griefs enough to kill a Man.

But as Froward as the People were, under the Epedemical Vexations of the Age, yet there were very few that would acknowledge unto the very Laſt, It will be hardly poſſible for us to ſee another Governour that ſhall more intirely Love and Serve the Country: Yea, had the Country had the Choice of their own Governour, 'tis judged their Votes, more than Forty to One, would have ſtill fallen upon him to have been the Man: And the General Aſſembly therefore on all occaſions renewed their Petitions unto the King for his Continuance.

Nevertheleſs, there was a little Party of Men, who thought they muſt not ſleep till they had cauſed him to fall: And they ſo vigorouſly proſecuted certain Articles before the Council-board at Whitehall againſt him, that they imagined they had gained an Order of His Majeſty in Council, to ſuſpend him immediately from his Government, and appoint a Committee of Perſons nominated by his Enemies, to hear all Depoſitions againſt him; and ſo a Report of the whole to be made unto the King and Council.

But His Majeſty was too well informed of Sir William's Integrity to permit ſuch a ſort of Procedure; and therefore he ſignified unto His moſt Honourable Council, that nothing ſhould be done againſt Sir William, until he had Opportunity to clear himſelf; and thereupon he ſent His Royal Commands unto Sir William to come over. To give any retorting Accounts of the Principal Perſons who thus adverſaried him, would be a Thing ſo contrary to the Spirit of Sir William Phips himſelf, who at his leaving of New-England bravely declared that he freely forgave them all; and if he had returned thither again, would never have taken the leaſt revenge upon them, that This alone would oblige me, if I had no other Obligations of Chriſtianity upon me, to forbear it; and it may be, for ſome of them, it would be to throw Water upon a drowned Mouſe.

Nor need I to produce any more about the Articles which theſe Men exhibited againſt him, than This; that it was by moſt Men believed, that if he would have connived at ſome Arbitrary Oppreſſions too much uſed by ſome kind of Officers on the King's Subjects, Few perhaps, of None of thoſe Articles had ever been formed; and that he apprehended himſelf to be provided with a full Defence againſt them all.

Nor did His Excellency ſeem loth to have had his Caſe Tried under the Brazen Tree of Gariac, if there had been ſuch an one, as that mentioned by the Fabulous Murtadi, in his Prodigies of Egypt, a Tree which had Iron Branches with ſharp Hooks at the end of them, that when any falſe Accuſer approached, as the Fabel ſays, immediately flew at him, and ſtuck in him, until he had ceaſed Injuring his Adverſary.

Wherefore in Obedience unto the King's Commands, he took his leave of Boſton on the ſeventeenth of November, 1694. attended with all proper Teſtimonies of Reſpect and Honour from the Body of the People, which he had been the Head unto; and with Addreſſes unto their Majeſties, and the Chief Miniſters of State from the General Aſſembly, humbly imploring, ploring, that they might not be deprived of the Happineſs which they had in ſuch an Head.

Arriving at Whitehall, he found in a few Days, that notwithſtanding all the Impotent Rage of his Adverſaries particularly vented and printed in a Villanous Libel, as well as almoſt in as many other ways as there are Mouths, at which Fyal ſometimes has vomited out its Infernal Fires, he had all Humane Aſſurance of his returning in a very few Weeks again the Governour of New-England.

Wherefore there were eſpecially two Deſigns, full of Service to the whole Engliſh Nation, as well as his own particular Country of New-England, which he applied his Thoughts unto. Firſt, He had a new Scene of Action opened unto him, in an opportunity to ſupply the Crown with all Naval Stores at moſt eaſie Rates, from thoſe Eaſtern Parts of the Maſſachuſet Province, which through the Conqueſt that he had made thereof, came to be Inſerted in the Maſſachuſet-Charter. As no Man was more capable than he to improve this Opportunity unto a vaſt Advantage, ſo his Inclination to it was according to his Capacity.

And he longed with ſome Impatience to ſee the King furniſhed from his own Dominions, with ſuch floating and ſtately Caſtles, thoſe Wooden-Walls of Great Britain, for much of which he has hitherto Traded with Foreign Kingdoms. Next, if I may ſay next unto this, he had an Eye upon Canada; all attempts for the reducing whereof had hitherto proved Abortive.

It was but a few Months ago that a conſiderable Fleet, under Sir Francis Wheeler, which had been ſent into the Weſt-Indies to ſubdue Martenico, was ordered then to call at New-England, that being recruited there, they might make a further Deſcent upon Canada; but Heaven frowned upon that Expedition, eſpecially by a terrible Sickneſs, the moſt like the Plague of any thing that has been ever ſeen in America, whereof there Died, e'er they could reach to Boſton, as I was told by Sir Francis himſelf, no leſs than Thirteen Hundred Sailers out of Twenty One, and no leſs than Eighteen Hundred Soldiers out of Twenty-four.

It was now therefore his deſire to have ſatisfied the King, that his whole Intereſt in America lay at Stake, while Canada was in French Hands: And therewithal to have laid before ſeveral Noblemen and Gentlemen, how beneficial an Undertaking it would have been for them to have purſued the Canadian-Buſineſs, for which the New-Englanders were now grown too Feeble; their Country being too far now, as Bede ſays England once was, Omni Milite & floridæ Juventutis Alacritate ſpoliata.

Beſides theſe two Deſigns in the Thoughts of Sir William, there was a Third, which he had Hopes that the King would have given him leave to have purſued, after he had continued ſo long in his Government, as to have obtained the more General Welfare which he deſigned in the former Inſtances. I do not mean the making of New-England the Seat of a Spaniſh Trade, though ſo vaſtly profitable a thing was likely to have been brought about, by his being one of an Honourable Company engaged in ſuch a Project.

But the Spaniſh Wreck, where Sir William had made his firſt good Voyage, was not the Only, nor the Richeſt Wreck, that he knew to be lying under the Water. He knew particularly, that when the Ship which had Governour Boadilla Aboard, was caſt away, there was, as Peter Martyr ſays, an entire Table of Gold of Three Thouſand Three Hundred and Ten Pound Weight.

The Duke of Albemarle's Patent for all ſuch Wrecks now expiring, Sir William thought on the Motto which is upon the Gold Medal, beſtowed by the late King, with his Knighthood upon him, Semper Tibi pendeat Hamus: And ſuppoſing himſelf to have gained ſufficient Information of the right Way to ſuch a Wreck, it was his purpoſe upon his Diſmiſſion from his Government, once more to have gone unto his old Fiſhing-Trade, upon a mighty Shelf of Rocks and Bank of Sands that lye where he had informed himſelf.

But as the Prophet Haggai and Zechariah, in their Pſalm upon the Grants made unto their People by the Emperors of Perſia have that Reflection, Man's Breath goeth forth, he returns to his Earth; in that very Day his thoughts periſh. My Reader muſt now ſee what came of all theſe conſiderable Thoughts. About the middle of February, 1694. Sir William found himſelf indiſpoſed with a Cold, which obliged him to keep his Chamber; but under this Indiſpoſition he received the Honour of a Viſit from a very Eminent Perſon at Whitehall, who upon ſufficient Aſſurance, bad him Get well as faſt as he could, for in one Months time he ſhould be again diſpatched away to his Government of New-England.

Nevertheleſs his Diſtemper proved a ſort of Malignant Feaver, whereof many about this time died in the City; and it ſuddenly put an End at once unto his Days and Thoughts, on the Eighteenth of February; to the extream ſurprize of his Friends, who Honourably Interr'd him in the Church of St. Mary Woolnoth, and with him, how much of New-England's Happineſs!

§. 21. Although he has now no more a Portion for ever in any Thing that is done under the Sun, yet Juſtice requires that his Memory be not forgotten. I have not all this while ſaid He was Faultleſs, nor am I unwilling to uſe for him the Words which Mr. Calamy had in his Funeral Sermon for the Excellent Earl of Warwick, It muſt be confeſſed, leſt I ſhould prove a Flatterer, he had his Infirmities, which I truſt Jeſus Chriſt hath covered with the Robe of his Righteouſneſs: My Prayer to God is, that all his Infirmities may be Buried in the Grave of Oblivion, and that all his Virtues and Graces may Supervive; although perhaps they were no Infirmities firmities in that Noble Perſon, which Mr. Calamy counted ſo.

Nevertheleſs I muſt alſo ſay, That if the Anguiſh of his Publick Fatigues threw Sir William into any Faults of Paſſion; they were but Faults of Paſſion ſoon Recall'd: And Spots being ſooneſt ſeen in Ermin, there was uſually the moſt made of them that could be, by thoſe that were leaſt Free themſelves.

After all, I do not know that I have been, by any perſonal Obligations or Circumſtances. charmed into any Partiality for the Memory of this Worthy Man; but I do here, from a real Satisfaction of Conſcience concerning him, declare to all the World, that I reckon him to have been really a very Worthy Man; that few Men in the World riſing from ſo mean an Original as he, would have acquitted themſelves with a Thouſand Part of his Capacity or Integrity; that he left unto the World a notable Example of a Diſpoſition to do Good, and encountred and overcame almoſt invincible Temptations in doing it.

And I do moſt ſolemnly Profeſs, that I have moſt conſcienciouſly endeavoured the utmoſt Sincerity and Veracity of a Chriſtian, as well as an Hiſtorian, in the Hiſtory which I have now given of him. I have not written of Sir William Phips, as they ſay Xenophon did of Cyrus, Non ad Hiſtoriæ Fidem, ſed ad Effigiem veri imperii; what ſhould have been, rather than what really was. If the Envy of his few Enemies be not now Quiet, I muſt freely ſay it, That for many Weeks before he died, there was not one Man among his perſonal Enemies whom he would not readily and chearfully have done all the kind Offices of a Friend unto: Wherefore though the Gentleman in England that once publiſhed a Vindication of Sir William Phips againſt ſome of his Enemies, choſe to put the Name of Publicans upon them, they muſt in this be counted worſe than the Publicans of whom our Saviour ſays, They Love thoſe that Love him.

And I will ſay this further, That when certain Perſons had found the Skull of a Dead Man as a Greek Writer of Epigrams has told us, they all fell a Weeping, but only one of the Company, who Laughed and Flouted, and through an unheard-of Cruelty, threw Stones at it, which Stones wonderfully rebounded back upon the Face of him that threw them, and miſerably wounded him: Thus if any ſhall be ſo Unchriſtian, yea, ſo Inhumane, as libellouſly to throw Stones at ſo deſerved a Reputation as this Gentleman has died withal, they ſhall ſee a Juſt Rebound of all their Calumnies.

But the Name of Sir WILLIAM PHIPS will be heard Honourably mentioned in the Trumpets of Immortal Fame, when the Names of many that Antipathied him will either be Buried in Eternal Oblivion, without any Sacer Vates to preſerve them; or be remembred, but like that of Judas in the Goſpel, or Pilate in the Creed, with Eternal Infamy.

The old Perſians indeed, according to the Report of Agathias, expoſed their Dead Friends to be Torn in Pieces by Wild Beaſts, believing that if they lay long unworried, they had been unworthy Perſons; but all attempts of ſurviving Malice to demonſtrate in that way the worth of this Dead Gentleman, give me leave to Rate off with Indignation.

And I muſt with a like Freedom ſay, That great was the Fault of New-England no more to value a Perſon, whoſe Opportunities to ſerve all their Intereſts, though very Eminent, yet were not ſo Eminent as his Inclinations. If this whole Continent carry in its very Name of AMERICA, an unaccountable Ingratitude unto that Brave Man who firſt led any numbers of Europeans thither, it muſt not be wondred at, if now and then a particular Country in that Continent afford ſome Inſtances of Ingratitude: But I muſt believe, that the Ingratitude of many, both to God and Man, for ſuch Benefits as that Country of New-England enjoy'd from a Governour of their own, by whom they enjoyed great quietneſs, with very worthy Deeds done unto that Nation by his Providence, was that which haſtned the Removal of ſuch a Benefactor from them.

However, as the Cyprians buried their Friends in Honey, to whom they gave Gall when they were Born; thus whatever Gall might be given to this Gentleman while he lived, I hope none will be ſo baſe, as to put any thing but Honey into their Language of him now after his Deceaſe. And indeed, ſince 'tis a frequent thing among Men to wiſh for the Preſence of our Friends, when they are dead and gone, whom, while they were preſent with us, we undervalued; there is no way for us to fetch back our Sir William Phips, and make him yet Living with us, but by ſetting up a Statue for him, as 'tis done in theſe Pages, that may out-laſt an ordinary Monument.

Such was the Original Deſign of erecting Statues, and if in Venice there were at once no leſs than an Hundred and Sixty-two Marble, and Twenty-three Brazen Statues, erected by the Order, and at the Expence of the Publick, in Honour of ſo many Valiant Soldiers, who had merited well of that Commonwealth, I am ſure New-England has had thoſe, whoſe Merits call for as good an acknowledgment; and, whatever they did before, it will be well, if after Sir William Phips, they find many as meritorious as he to be ſo acknowledged.

Now I cannot my ſelf provide a better Statue for this Memorable Perſon, than the Words uttered on the occaſion of his Death in a very great Aſſembly, by a Perſon of ſo Diffuſ'd and Embalm'd a Reputation in the Church of God, that ſuch a Character from him were enough to Immortalize the Reputation of the Perſon upon whom he ſhould beſtow it.

The Grecians employ'd ſtill the moſt Honourable and Conſiderable Perſons they had among them, to make a Funeral Oration in Commendation of Soldiers that had loſt their Lives in the Service of the Publick: And when Sir William Phips, the Captain General of New-England, who had often ventured his Life to ſerve the Publick, did expire, that Reverend Perſon, who was the Preſident of the only Univerſity then in the Engliſh America, Preached a Sermon on that Paſſage of the Sacred Writ, Iſa. 57. 1. Merciful Men are taken away, none conſidering that the Righteous are taken away from the Evil to come; and in it gave Sir William Phips the following Teſtimony.

‘This Province is Beheaded, and lyes a
‘Bleeding. A GOVERNOUR is taken away,
‘who was a Merciful Man; ſome think too
‘Merciful: And if ſo, ’tis beſt Erring on that ‘Hand; and a Righteous Man; who, when he ‘had great Opportunities of gaining by Injuſtice,
‘did refuſe to do ſo.

‘He was a known Friend unto the beſt Inte-
‘reſts, and unto the Churches of God: Not a- ‘ſhamed of owning them: No, how often have
‘I heard him expreſſing his Deſires to be an In-‘ſtrument of Good unto them! He was a Zea‘lous Lover of his Country, if any Man in the ‘World were ſo: He expoſed himſelf to ſerve it;
‘he ventured his Life to ſave it: In that, a true
‘Nehemiah, a Governour that ſought the wel- ‘fare of his People.

‘He was one who did not ſeek to have the ‘Government caſt upon him: No, but inſtead
‘thereof to my Knowledge he did ſeveral
‘times Petition the King, that this People might ‘always enjoy the great Priviledge of chuſing
‘their own Governour; and I have heard him
‘expreſs his Deſires, that it might be ſo, to ſe-‘veral of the Chief Miniſters of State in the ‘Court of England.

‘He is now Dead, and not capable of being ‘Flattered: But this I muſt teſtifie concerning ‘him, That though by the Providence of God
‘I have been with him at Home and Abroad,
‘near at Home, and afar off, by Land and by ‘Sea, I never ſaw him do any evil Action, or ‘heard him ſpeak any thing unbecoming a Chri-
‘ſtian.

‘The Circumſtances of his Death ſeem to ‘intimate the Anger of God, in that he was in
‘the Midſt of his Days removed; and I know
‘(though Few did) that he had great Purpoſes
‘in his Heart, which probably would have ta‘ken Effect, if he had lived a few Months lon‘ger, to the great Advantage of this Province;
‘but now he is gone, there is not a Man Living
‘in the World capacitated for thoſe Under‘takings; New-England knows not yet what
‘they have loſt!

The Recitation of a Teſtimony ſo great, whether for the Author, or the Matter of it, has now made a Statue for the Governour of New-England, which Nec poterit Ferrum, nec edax abolere vetuſtas.

And there now remains nothing more for me to do about it, but only to recite herewithal a well-known Story related by Suidas, That an Envious Man, once going to pull down a Statue which had been raiſed unto the Memory of one whom he maligned, he only got this by it, that the Statue falling down, knock'd out his Brains.

But Poetry as well as Hiſtory muſt pay it's Dues unto him. If Cicero's Poem, intituled, Quadrigæ, wherein he did with a Poetical Chariot extol the Exploits of Cæſar in Britain to the very Skies, were now Extant in the World, I would have Borrowed ſome Flights of That at leaſt, for the Subject now to be Adorned.

But inſtead thereof, let the Reader accept the enſuing Elegy.

Sir William Phips, Knt.

Late Captain General and Governour in Chief of the Province of the Maſſachuſet-Bay in New-England, who Expired in London, Feb. 18. 169$^{4}_{5}$.

And to Mortality a Sacrifice
Falls He, whoſe Deeds muſt Him Immortalize!

R*Ejoice* Meſſieurs; Netops rejoice; 'tis true,
Te Philiſtines, none will rejoice but You:

Our Almanacks foretold a great Eclipſe,
This they foreſaw not, of our greater PHIPS.

Since this bright Phœbus viſited our Shoar,
We ſaw no Fogs but what were rais'd before:
Thoſe vaniſh'd too; harraſs'd by Bloody Wars
Our Land ſaw Peace, by his moſt generous Cares.
The Wolviſh Pagans at his dreaded Name,

That Earth could do, Heaven fetch'd Him to a Crown.

'Tis He: With Him Interr'd how great deſigns!
Stand Fearleſs now, ye Eaſtern Firrs and Pines.
With Naval Stores not to enrich the Nation,
Stand, for the Univerſal Conflagration.
Mines, opening unto none but Him, now ſtay
Cloſe under Lock and Key, till the Laſt Day:
In this, like to the Grand Aurifick Stone,
By any but Great Souls not to be known.
And Thou Rich Table, with Bodilla loſt,
In the Fair Galeon, on our Spaniſh Coaſt.
In weight Three Thouſand and Three Hundred Pound,
But of pure Maſſy Gold, lye Thou, not found,
Safe, ſince He's laid under the Earth aſleep,
Who learnt where Thou doſt under Water keep.

But Thou Chief Loſer, Poor NEW-ENGLAND, ſpeak
Thy Dues to ſuch as did thy Welfare ſeek,
The Governour that vow'd to Riſe and Fall
With Thee, Thy Fate ſhows in His Funeral.
Write now His Epitaph, 'twill be Thine own,
Let it be this, A PUBLICK SPIRIT's GONE.

INTRODUCTION.

WHat was it that obliged Jerom to write his Book, De Viris Illuſtribus? It was the common Reproach of old caſt upon the Chriſtians, That they were all poor, weak, unlearned Men. The ſort of Men ſometime called Puritans, in the Engliſh Nation have been reproached with the ſame Character; and as a malignant Stapleton, counted the Terms of an Aſs, and a Fool, good enough to treat our incomparable Whitaker. No leſs baſely are the beſt of Proteſtants often term'd and thought, by the Men, who know no Chriſtianity but Ceremony. There hath been too much of that Envy, that Sapientior ſis Socrate, Doctior Auguſtino, Calvenianus, Si modò dicare, clam, vel propalam, mox Tartaris, Moſcis, Afris, Turciſque, ſævientibus, jacebis execratior. A Wretchedneſs often ſeen in Engliſh; I ſhall not Engliſh it. This is one thing that has laid me under Obligation, here to write a Book, De Viris Illuſtribus: In the whole whereof, I will with a moſt Conſcientious and Religious Regard of Truth, ſave our Hiſtory from any ſhare, in that old Complaint of Melchior Canus, Dolenter hoc dico, multò à Laertio ſeverius Vitas Philoſophorum ſcriptas eſſe, quàm à Chriſtianis, Vitas Chriſtianorum: The Lives of Philoſophers more truly written, than the Lives of Chriſtians.

Reader, Behold theſe Examples; admire and follow what thou doſt behold Exemplary in them. They are offered unto the Publick, with the Intention ſometimes mentioned by Gregory: Ut qui Præceptis non accendimur, ſaltem Exemplis incitemur; atque ac Appetitu Rectitudinis nil ſibi meus noſtra difficile æſtimet, quod perfectè peragi ab aliis videt: That Patterns may have upon us the force which Precepts have not.

If a Man were ſo abſurd, as to form his Ideas of the Primitive Chriſtians, from the monſtrous Accuſations of their Adverſaries, he would ſoon perſwade himſelf, that their God was the Deus Chriſtianorum Ononychites, whoſe Image was erected at Rome. And if a Man ſhould have no other Ideas of the Puritan Chriſtians in our Days, than what the Tory-Pens of the Sons of Bolſecus have given them, we would think that it was a juſt thing to baniſh them into the cold Swamps of the North America. But when Truth ſhall have liberty to ſpeak, it will be known, that Chriſtianity never was more expreſſed unto the Life, than in the Lives of the Perſons that have been thus reproached, among the Legions of the Accuſer of the Brethren. It ſpeaks in the enſuing Pages! Here, behold them, of whom the World was not worthy, wandring in Deſarts!

Arnobius was put upon an Apology, againſt our particular Calumny, among the reſt, That at the Meetings of the Chriſtians, a Dog ty'd unto the Candleſtick, drew away the Light, whereupon they proceeded unto the moſt Adulterous Confuſions in the World. And a great Man in his Writings does affirm, I have heard this very thing, told more than once, with no ſmall Confidence concerning the Puritans.

Reader, thou ſhalt now ſee, what ſort of Men they were: Zion is not a City of Fools. As Ignatius in his famous Epiſtles to the Trallians, mentioning their Paſtor, Polybius, reports him, A Man of ſo good and juſt a Reputation, that the very Atheiſts did ſtand in fear of him. I hope our POLYBIUS, will afford many deſerving ſuch a Character.

It was mentioned as the Buſineſs and Bleſſedneſs of John Baptiſt, To turn the Hearts of the Fathers to the Children. After a deal of more ado about the Sence of the paſſage thus tranſlated, I contented my ſelf with another Tranſlation, To turn the Hearts of the Fathers WITH the Children; becauſe I find the Prepoſition, עם, as well as the Præfix ב, in Mal. 4. 6. whence the paſſage is taken to be rendred With, rather than To. The Sence therefore I took to be, That John ſhould convert both Old and Young. But further Thought hath offered unto me a further Gloſs upon it: To turn the Hearts of the Fathers to the Children, is to turn the Children by putting the Hearts of the Fathers into them; to give them ſuch Hearts as were in Abraham, and others of their famous and faithful Fathers.

Reader, The Book now in thy Hands, is to manage the Deſign of a John Baptiſt, and convey the Hearts of the Fathers unto the Children.

Archilocus being deſirous to give prevailing and effectual Advice unto Lycambes, by an elegant Proſopopœia, brought in his dead Father, as giving the Advice he was now writing, and as it were put his Pen into his Father's Hand. Cicero being to read a Lecture of Temperance and Modeſty unto Clodia, raiſed up her Father Appius Caius from the Grave, and in his Name delivered his Directions. And now, by introducing the Fathers of New-England, without the leaſt Fiction, or Figure of Rhetorick, I hope the plain Hiſtory of their Lives, will be a powerful way of propounding their Fatherly Counſels to their Poſterity. A Stroke with the Hand of a dead Man, has before now been a Remedy for a Malady not eaſily remedied.

HAving entertained my Readers with a more imperfect Catalogue, 'Of 'many Perſons whoſe Memories 'deſerve to be embalmed in a 'Civil Hiſtory; I muſt ſo far conſider, that it is an Eccleſiaſtical Hiſtory, which I have undertaken, as to haſten unto a fuller and larger Account of thoſe Perſons who have been the Miniſters of the Goſpel, that fed the Flocks in the Wilderneſs: And indeed, New-England having been in ſome ſort an Eccleſiaſtical Country above any in this World, thoſe Men that have here appeared moſt conſiderable in an Eccleſiaſtical Capacity, may moſt reaſonably challenge the moſt Conſideration in our Hiſtory.

Behold, one Seven more than Seven Decads of Perſons, who being devoted unto the Sacred Miniſtry of our Lord, were the firſt that enlightned the dark Regions of America with their Miniſtry! Know Reader, that it was by a particular Diverſion given by the Hand of Heaven, unto the Intentions of that Great Man, Dr. William Ames, that we don't now find his Name among the firſt in the Catalogue of our New-Engliſh Worthies. One of the moſt Eminent and Judicious Perſons that ever lived in this World, was Intentionally a New-England-Man, tho' not Eventually, when that Profound, that Sublime, that Subtil, that Irrefragable, yea that Angelical Doctor, was deſigning to tranſport himſelf into New England; but he was hindred by that Providence, which afterwards permitted his Widow, his Children, and his Library, to be tranſlated hither. And now, our Fathers, where are they? Theſe Prophets have they lived for ever? 'Twas the Charge of the Almighty to other Kings, Touch not mine Anointed, and do my Prophets no harm: But the King of Terrors pleading an Exemption from that Charge, has now touched every one of theſe Holy Men, however, all the harm it has done unto them, has been to carry them from this preſent evil World, unto the Spirits of juſt Men made perfect. I may now write upon all theſe Old Miniſters of New-England, the Epitaph which the Apoſtle hath left upon the Prieſts of the Old Teſtament, Theſe were not ſuffered to continue, by reaſon of Death; adding the Clauſe which he hath left upon the Patriarchs of that Teſtament, Theſe all died in Faith.

Wherefore we paſs on to

The Second CLASSIS.

IT ſhall be of Young Scholars, whoſe Education for their deſigned Miniſtry, not being finiſhed, yet came over from England with their Friends, and had their Education perfected in this Country, before the College was come unto Maturity enough to beſtow its Laurels.

Of theſe two Sevens, almoſt All are gone, where to be is, By far the Beſt of All. But theſe were not come to an Age for Service to the Church of God, before the Wiſdom, and Prudence of the New-Englanders, did remarkably ſignifie it ſelf, in the Founding of a COLLEGE, from whence the moſt of their Congregations were afterwards ſupplied; a River, the Streams whereof made glad the City of God. From that Hour Old-England had more Miniſters from New, than our New-England had ſince then, from Old; nevertheleſs after a Ceſſation of Miniſters coming hither from Europe, for Twenty Years together, we had another ſet of them, Coming over to help us: Wherefore take yet the Names of Two Sevens more.

We will now proceed unto,

The Third CLASSIS.

IT ſhall be of ſuch Miniſters, as came over to New-England after the Re-eſtabliſhment of the Epiſcopal Church-Government in England, and the Perſecution, which then hurricano'd, ſuch as were Non-Conformiſts unto that Eſtabliſhment.

1. Mr. James Allen of Boſton.
2. Mr. John Baily of Watertown.
3. Mr. Thomas Baily of Watertown.
4. Mr. Barnet of New-London.

6. Mr. Thomas Gilbert of Topsfield.
7. Mr. James Keith of Bridgwater.
8. Mr. Samuel Lee of Briſtol.
9. Mr. Charles Morton of Charleſtown.
10. Mr. Charles Nicholet of Salem.
11. Mr. John Oxenbridge of Boſton.
12. Mr. Thomas Thornton of Yarmouth.
13. Mr. Thomas Walley of Barnſtable.
14. Mr. William Woodrop of Lancaſter.

It is well known, that quickly after the Revival of the Engliſh Hierarchy, thoſe, whoſe Conſciences did not allow them to worſhip God, in ſome Ways and Modes then by Law eſtabliſhed, were purſued with a Violence, which, doubtleſs many thouſands of thoſe whom the Church of England, in its National Conſtitution acknowledges for her Sons, were ſo far from Approving or Aſſiſting, that they Abhorred it. What Spirit acted the Party that Raiſed this Perſecution, one may gueſs from a Paſſage, which I find in a Book of Mr. Giles Firmius. A Lady aſſured him, that ſhe ſignifying unto a Parliament-Man, her Diſlike of the Act of Uniformity, when they were about it, and ſaying, I ſee you are laying a Snare in the Gate, he replied, Ay, if we can find any way to catch the Rogues, we will have them! It is well known that near Five and Twenty Hundred faithful Miniſters of the Goſpel, were now ſilenced in One Black Day, becauſe they could not comply with ſome things, by themſelves counted ſinful, but by the Impoſers confeſſed Indifferent. And it is affirmed, that by a modeſt Calculation, this Perſecution procured the Untimely Death of Three Thouſand Non-Conformiſts, and the Ruine of Threeſcore Thouſand Families, within Five and Twenty Years. Many retired into New-England, that they might have a little Reſt at Noon, with the Flocks of our Lord in this Wilderneſs: But ſetting aſide ſome Eminent Perſons of a New Engliſh Original, which were driven back out of Europe into their own Country again, by that Storm. Theſe few were the moſt of the Miniſters, that fled hither from it. I will not preſume to give the Reaſons, why, No more; but obſerving a Glorious Providence of the Lord Jeſus Chriſt, in moving the Stars to ſhine, where they were moſt wanted, I will conclude, lamenting the Diſaſter of New-England, in the Interruption, which a particular Providence of Heaven gave unto the Deſigns of that Incomparable Perſon Dr. John Owen, who had gone ſo far as to ſhip himſelf, with Intents to have taken this Country in his way to his Eternal Reſt: It muſt have been our ſingular Advantage and Ornament, if we had thus enjoyed among us, One of the Greateſt Men, that this laſt Age produced.

REMARKS.

Eſpecially upon the Firſt Claſs, in our Catalogue of Miniſters.

I. ALL, or Moſt, of the Miniſters that make up our Two firſt Claſſes, came over from England within the Two firſt Luſtres of Years, after the firſt Settlement of the Country. After the Year 1640. that part of the Church of England, which took up Arms in the Old Cauſe of the Long Parliament, and which among all its Parliament-Men, Commanders, Lord-Lieutenants, Major-Generals, and Sea-Captains, had ſcarce any but Conformiſts; I ſay, That part of the Church of England, knowing the Puritans to be generally inclinable unto thoſe Principles of ſuch Writers as Bilſon and Hooker, whereupon the Parliament then acted; and ſeeing them to be generally of the trueſt Engliſh Spirit, for the Preſervation of the Engliſh Liberties and Properties, for which the Parliament then declared, (altho' there were ſome Non-Conformiſts in the King's Army alſo:) it was found neceſſary to have the Aſſiſtance of that conſiderable People. Whereupon enſued ſuch a Change of Times, that inſtead of Old England's driving its beſt People into New, it was it ſelf turned into New. The Body of the Parliament and its Friends, which were Conformiſts in the beginning of that miſerable War, before the War was ended, became ſuch as thoſe Old Non-Conformiſts, whoſe Union with them in Political Intereſts produced an Union in Religious. The Romanizing Laudians miſcarried in their Enterprize; the Anglicane Church could not be carried over to the Gallicane. This was not the firſt Inſtance of a Shipwrack befalling a Veſſel bound for Rome; nor will it be the laſt: A Veſſel bound ſuch a Voyage, muſt be Shipwrack'd, tho' St. Paul himſelf were aboard.

II. The Occaſion upon which theſe Excellent Miniſters retired into an Horrid Wilderneſs of America, and encountred the diſmal Hardſhips of ſuch a Wilderneſs, was the Violent Perſecution, wherewith a prevailing Party in the Church of England haraſſed them. In their own Land they were hereby deprived, not only of their Livings, but alſo of their Liberty to exerciſe their Miniſtry, which was dearer to them than their Livings, yea, than their very Lives: And they were expoſed unto extreme Sufferings, becauſe they conſcientiouſly diſſented from the Uſe of ſome things in the Worſhip of God, which they accounted Sins. But I leave it unto the Conſideration of Mankind, whether this forbidding of ſuch Men to do their Duty, were no Ingredient of that Iniquity, which immediately upon the Departure of theſe Good Men brought upon Great Britain, and eſpecially upon the Greateſt Authors of this Perſecution, A Wrath unto the uttermoſt, in the enſuing Deſolations. All that I ſhall add upon it, is, That, I remember, the Prophet ſpeaking of what had been done of old, by the Aſſyrians, to the Land of the Chaldæans, uſes an Expreſſion, which we tranſlate, in Iſa. 23. 12. He brought it unto Ruine: But there is a Punic Word, Mapatra, which old Feſtus (and Servius) affirm to ſignify, Cottages; according to Philargyrius, it ſignifies, Caſas in Eremo habitantium: Now that is the very Word here uſed, מפלה and the Condition of Cottagers in a Wilderneſs, is meant, by The Ruine, there ſpoken of. Truly, ſuch was the Ruine, which the Ceremonious Perſecutors then brought upon the moſt Conſcientious Non Conformiſts, unto their Unſcriptural Ceremonies. But as the Kingdom of Darkneſs uſes to be always at length overthrown by its own Policy, ſo will be at laſt found no advantage unto that Party in the Church of England, that the Orders and Actions of the Churches by them thus produced, become an Hiſtory.

III. Theſe Miniſters of the Goſpel, which were (without any Odious Compariſon) as Faithful, Painful, Uſeful Miniſters, as moſt in the Nation, being thus exiled from a Sinful Nation, there were not known to be left ſo many Non-Conformiſt Miniſters, as there were Counties in England: And yet they were quickly ſo multiplied, that a Matter of Twenty Years after, there could be found far more than Twenty Hundred, that were ſo grounded in their Non-Conformity, as to undergo the Loſs of all things, rather than make Shipwrack of it. When Antiochus commanded all the Books of Sacred Scripture to be burnt, they were not only preſerved, but preſently after they appeared out of their hidden Places, being Tranſlated into the Greek Tongue, and carried abroad unto many other Patrons. It was now thought, there was effectual Care taken, to deſtroy all thoſe Men, that made theſe Books the only Rule of their Devotions; but behold, they preſently appeared in greater Numbers, and many other Nations began to be Illuminated by them.

IV. Moſt, if not All, of the Miniſters, who then viſited theſe Regions, were either attended or followed, with a Number of pious People, who had lived within the reach of their Miniſtry in England. Theſe, who were now alſo become generally Non-Conformiſts, having found the powerful Impreſſions of thoſe Good Mens Miniſtry upon their Souls, continued their ſincere Affections unto that Miniſtry, and were willing to accompany it unto thoſe utmoſt Ends of the Earth. Indeed, the Miniſters of New-England have this always to recommend them unto a Good Regard with the Crown of England, that the moſt flouriſhing Plantation in all the American Dominions of that Crown, is more owing to them, than to any ſort of Men whatſoever.

V. Some of the Miniſters, and many of the Gentlemen, that came over with the Miniſters, were Perſons of conſiderable Eſtates; who therewith charitably brought over many poor Families of Godly People, that were not of themſelves able to bear the Charges of their Tranſportation; and they were generally careful alſo to bring over none but Godly Servants in their own Families, who, afterwards by God's Bleſſing on their Induſtry have arrived, many of them, unto ſuch plentiful Eſtates, that they have had Occaſion to think of the Advice, which a famous Perſon, gave in a Publick Sermon, at their firſt coming over; You (ſaid he) that are Servants, mark what I ſay; I deſire and exhort you to be kind a while hence, unto your Maſter's Children. It won't be long before, you that came with nothing into the Country, will be rich Men, when your Maſters, having buried their Rich Eſtates in the Country, will go near to leave their Families in a mean Condition; wherefore, when it ſhall be well with you, I charge you to remember them.

VI. The Miniſters and Chriſtians, by whom New-England was firſt planted, were a choſen Company of Men; picked out of, perhaps, all the Counties in England, and this by no Human Contrivance, but by a ſtrange Work of God upon the Spirits of Men that were, no ways, acquainted with one another, inſpiring them, as one Man, to ſecede into a Wilderneſs, they knew not where, and ſuffer in that Wilderneſs they know not what. It was a reaſonable Expreſſion once uſed by that eminent Perſon, the preſent Lieutenant-Governour of New-England in a very great Aſſembly, God ſifted three Nations, that he might bring choiſe Grain into this Wilderneſs.

VII. The Deſign of theſe Refugees, thus carried into the Wilderneſs, was, that they might there, ſacrifice unto the Lord their God: It was, that they might maintain the Power of Godlineſs and practiſe the Evangelical Worſhip of our Lord Jeſus Chriſt, in all the Parts of it, without any Human Innovations and Impoſitions: Defended by Charters, which at once gave them ſo far the Protection of their King, and the Election of ſo many of their own Subordinate Rulers under him, as might ſecure them the Undiſturbed Enjoyment of the Church-Order eſtabliſhed amongſt them. I ſhall but repeat the Words once uſed in a Sermon preached unto the General Court of the Maſſachuſet-Colony, at one of their Anniverſary Elections. ‘The ‘Queſtion was often put unto our Predeceſſors, ‘What went ye out into the Wilderneſs to ſee? ‘And the Anſwer to it, is not only too Excel‘lent, but alſo too Notorious, to be diſſembled. ‘Let all Mankind know, that we came into the ‘Wilderneſs, becauſe we would worſhip God ‘without that Epiſcopacy, that Common Prayer, ‘and thoſe unwarrantable Ceremonies, with ‘which the Land of our Fore-Fathers Sepulchres ‘has been defiled; we came hither becauſe we ‘would have our Poſterity ſettled under the ‘pure and full Diſpenſations of the Goſpel; de‘fended by Rulers, that ſhould be of our ſelves.

VIII. None of the leaſt Concerns, that lay upon the Spirits of theſe Reformers, was the Condition of their Poſterity: For which cauſe in the Firſt Conſtitution of their Churches, they did more generally with more or leſs Expreſſiveneſs take in their Children, as under the Church-watch with themſelves. They alſo did betimes endeavour the Erection of a College, for the training up of a ſucceſſive Miniſtry in the Country; but becauſe it was likely to be ſome while before a Conſiderable Supply could be expected from the College, therefore they took notice of the younger, hopeful Scholars, who came over with their Friends from England, and aſſiſted their liberal Education; whereby being fitted for the Service of the Churches, they were in an orderly manner called forth to that Service. Of theſe we have given you a Number; whereof, I think, all but One or Two are now gone unto their Fathers.

IX. Of theſe Miniſters, there were ſome few, ſuppoſe Ten or a Dozen, that after divers Years, returned into England, where they were eminently ſerviceable unto their Generation; but, by far, the biggeſt part of them, continued in this Country, ſerving their Generation by the Will of God. Moreover, I find near half of them ſignally Bleſſed with Sons, who did work for our Lord Jeſus Chriſt, in the Miniſtry of the Goſpel, yea ſome of them as Mr. Chancy, Mr. Elliot, Mr. Hobart, Mr. Mather, had (tho' not like R. Joſe, a wiſe Man among the Jews, of whom they report, that he had Eight Sons, who were alſo celebrated for wiſe Men among them; yet) not leſs than Four or Five Sons a piece thus employed: And though Mr. Parker, living always a ſingle Man, had no Children, yet he was inſtrumental to bring up no leſs than Twelve uſeful Miniſters. Among the Jews they that have been inſtructed by another, are called, The Sons of their Inſtructor. We read, Theſe are the Generations of Aaron and Moſes; when we find none but the Sons of Aaron in the enumerated Generations. But in the Talmud, it is thus expounded, Hos Aaron genuit, Moſes verò docuit, ideoq; ejus Nomine cenſentur. (Thus the Sons of Merob, are called the Sons of Michal, as the the Talmud judges, becauſe by her educated) And on this account no leſs than Twelve, were the Sons of Mr. Parker. I may add, that ſome of our Miniſters, having their Sons comfortably ſettled, at, or near, the Place of their own Miniſtry, the People have thereby ſeen a comfortable Succeſſion in the Affairs of Chriſtianity; thus, the Writer of this Hiſtory, hath, he knows not how often, ſeen it; that his Grandfather, baptized the Grand-Parent, his Father baptized the Parent, and He himſelf has baptized the Children in the ſame Family.

X. In the Beginning of the Country, the Miniſters had their frequent Meetings, which were moſt uſually after their Publick and Weekly or Monthly Lectures, wherein they conſulted for the Welfare of their Churches; nor had they ordinarily any Difficulty in their Churches, which were not in theſe Meetings offered unto Conſideration; for their mutual Direction and Aſſiſtance: And theſe Meetings are maintained unto this Day. The private Chriſtians alſo had their private Meetings, wherein they would ſeek the Face, and ſing the Praiſe of God; and Confer upon ſome Queſtions of Practical Religion, for their mutual Edification. And the Country ſtill is full of thoſe Little Meetings; yet they have now moſtly left off one Circumſtance, which in thoſe our primitive Times, was much maintained; namely, their concluding of their more Sacred Exerciſes with Suppers; whereof, I ſincerely think, I cannot give a better Account, than Tertullian gives of the Suppers among the Faithful, in his more primitive Times; Therein their Spiritual Gains countervailed their Worldly Coſts; they remembred the Poor, they ever began with Prayer; [and other Devotions] In Eating and Drinking they relieved Hunger, but ſhow'd no Exceſs. In feeding at Supper they remembred they were to pray in the Night. In their Diſcourſe they conſidered that God heard them: And when they departed, their Behaviour was ſo Religious and modeſt, that one would have thought, we had rather been at a Sermon, than at a Supper. Our Private Meetings of good People to pray and praiſe God, and hear Sermons, either preached perhaps by the younger Candidates for the Miniſtry, (who here uſe to form themſelves, at their Entrance into their Work,) or elſe repeated by exact Writers of Short-Hand after their Paſtors; and ſometimes to ſpend whole Days in Faſting and Prayer, eſpecially when any of the Neighbourhood are in Affliction, or when the Communion of the Lord's Table is approaching; thoſe do ſtill abound among us; but the Meals that made Meatings of them, are generally laid aſide. I ſuppoſe, 'twas with ſome Eye to what he had ſeen in this Country, that Mr. Firmin has given this Report in a Book Printed 1681. ‘Plain Mechanicks have I known, well Cate‘chiſed, and Humble Chriſtians, excellent in ‘Practical Piety: They kept their Station, did ‘ not aſpire to be Preachers, but for Gifts of Prayer, few Clergy-Men muſt come near them. I have known ſome of them, when they did keep their Faſts, (as they did often) they divided the Work of Prayer: The firſt begun with Confeſſion; the ſecond went on with Petition for themſelves; the third with Petition for Church and Kingdom; the fourth with Thankſgiving: Every one kept his own part, and did not meddle with another part. Such excellent Matter, ſo compacted without Tautologies; each of them for a good time, about an Hour, if not more, apiece; to the wondering of thoſe which joined with them. Here was no reading of Liturgies: Theſe were old Jacob's Sons, they could wreſtle and prevail with God.

XI. Beſides the Miniſters enumerated in the three Claſſes of our Catalogue, there might a fourth Claſs be offered, under the Name of the Anomalies of New-England. There have at ſeveral times arrived in this Country, more than a Score of Miniſters from other parts of the World; who proved either ſo erroneous in their Principles, or ſo ſcandalous in their Practices, or ſo diſagreeable to the Church Order, for which the Country was planted, that I cannot well croud them into the Company of our Worthies:

Non benè conveniunt, nec in una ſede morantur.

And, indeed, I had rather my Church Hiſtory ſhould ſpeak nothing, than ſpeak not well of them that might elſe be mentioned in it: Being entirely of Plutarch's Mind, That it is better it ſhould never be ſaid, there was ſuch a Man as Plutarch at all, than to have it ſaid, that he was not an honeſt, and a worthy Man. I confeſs, there were ſome of thoſe Perſons, whoſe Names deſerve to live in our Book for their Piety, altho' their particular Opinions were ſuch, as to be diſſerviceable unto the declared and ſuppoſed Intereſts of our Churches. Of theſe there were ſome Godly Anabaptiſts; as namely, Mr. Hanſerd Knollys, (whom one of his Adverſaries called, Abſurd Knowleſs) of Dover, who afterwards removing back to London, lately died there, a good Man, in a good old Age. And Mr. Miles of Swanſey, who afterwards came to Boſton, and is now gone to his Reſt. Both of theſe have a reſpectful Character in the Churches of this Wilderneſs. There were alſo ſome Godly Epiſcopalians; among whom has been commonly reckoned Mr. Blackſtone; who, by happening to ſleep firſt in an Hovel, upon a Point of Land there, laid claim to all the Ground, whereupon there now ſtands the Metropolis of the whole Engliſh America, until the Inhabitants gave him Satisfaction. This Man was, indeed, of a particular Humour, and he would never join himſelf to any of our Churches, giving this Reaſon for it: I came from England, becauſe I did not like the Lord-Biſhops; but I can't join with you, becauſe I would not be under the Lord-Brethren. There were ſome likewiſe that fell into groſs Miſcarriages, and the Hunter of Souls having ſtuck the Darts of ſome extreme Diſorder into thoſe poor Hearts, the whole Flock puſhed them out of their Society. Of theſe, tho' there were ſome ſo recovered, that they became true Penitents; yet inaſmuch as the Wounds which they received by their Falls, were not in all regards throughly cured, I will chooſe rather to forbear their Names, than write them with any Blots upon them. For the ſame Cauſe, tho' I have his Name in our Catalogue, yet I will not ſay which of them it was, that for a while became a Seeker, and almoſt a Quaker, and ſeduced a great part of his poor People, into his bewildring Errors: At laſt the Grace of God recovered this Gentleman out of his Errors, and he became a very good and ſound Man, after his Recovery: But alas, it was a perpetual Sting unto his penitent Soul, that he could not now reduce his wandring Flock, which he had himſelf ſeduced into the moſt unhappy Aberrations. They wandred on obſtinately ſtill in their Errors; and being irrecoverable, he was forced thereby unto a Removal from them, taking the Charge of a more Orthodox Flock, upon Long-Iſland.

Nor know I where better than among theſe Anomalies, to mention one Mr. Lenthal, whom I find a Miniſter at Weymouth, about the Year 1637.

He had been one of good Report and Repute in England; whereas, here, he not only had imbibed ſome Antinomian Weakneſſes, from whence he was by Conference with Mr. Cotton ſoon recovered; but alſo he ſet himſelf to oppoſe the way of gathering Churches. Many of the common People eagerly fell in with him, to ſet up a Church-State, wherein all the Baptiſed might be Communicants, without any further Trial of them; for which end many Hands were procur'd unto an Inſtrument, wherein they would have declared againſt the New-England Deſign of Church-Reformation, and would have invited Mr. Lenthal to be their Paſtor, in oppoſition thereunto.

Mr. Lenthal, upon the Diſcourſes of the Magiſtrates and Miniſters before the General Court, who quickly check'd theſe Diſturbances, by ſending for him, as quickly was convinced of his Error and Evil, in thus diſturbing the good Order of the Country. His Conviction was followed with his Confeſſion; and in open Court, he gave under his Hand a laudable Retractation: Which Retractation he was ordered alſo to utter in the Aſſembly at Weymouth, and ſo no further Cenſure was paſſed upon him.

In Four Parts we will now purſue the Deſign before us.

Forte nimis Videor Laudes Cantare MEORUM;
Forte nimis cineres Videor celebrare repoſtos;
Non ita me Facilem Sine Vero Credite! ——

To the READER.

THat little part of the Earth which this Age has known by the Name of New-England, has been an Object of very ſignal, both Frowns and Favours of Heaven. Beſides thoſe Stars of the firſt Magnitude, which did ſometimes ſhine, and at laſt ſet in this Horizon, there have been ſeveral Men of Renown, who were preparing and fully reſolved to tranſport themſelves hither, had not the Lord ſeen us unworthy of more ſuch Mercies. It is ſtill freſh in the Memory of many yet living, that that Great Man, Dr. John Owen, had given order for his paſſage in a Veſſel bound for Boſton; being invited to ſucceed the other famous Johns, who had been burning and ſhining Lights in that which was the firſt Candleſtick, ſet up in this populous Town; but a ſpecial Providence diverted him. Long before that, Dr. Ames, (whoſe Family, and whoſe Library New-England has had) was upon the Wing for this American Deſart: But God then took him to the heavenly Canaan. Whether he left his Fellow upon Earth I know not: Such Acuteneſs of Judgment, and affectionate Zeal, as he excelled in, ſeldom does meet together in the ſame Perſon. I have often thought of Mr. Paul Bayne, his Farewel Words to Dr. Ames, when going for Holland; Mr. Bayne perceiving him to be a Man of extraordinary parts, Beware (ſaid he) of a Strong Head, and a Cold Heart. It is rare for a Scholaſtical Wit, to be joined with an Heart warm in Religion: But in him it was ſo. He has ſometimes ſaid, that he could be willing to walk twelve Miles on his Feet, on condition he might have an Opportunity to preach a Sermon: And he ſeldom did preach a Sermon without Tears. When he lay on his Death-bed, he had ſuch Taſts of the Firſt-fruits of Glory, as that a Learned Phyſitian (who was a Papiſt) wondring, ſaid, Num Proteſtantes ſic ſolent mori: Is the Latter End of Proteſtants like this Man's? But altho' ſome excellent Perſons, have, by a Divine Hand been kept from coming into theſe Ends of the Earth, yet there have been others, who whilſt living made this Land (which before their Arrival was an Hell of Darkneſs) to be a place full of Light and Glory; amongſt whom the Champions, whoſe Lives are here deſcribed, are worthy to be reckoned as thoſe that have attained to the Firſt Three.

There are many who have (and ſome to good purpoſe) endeavoured to collect the memorable Paſſages that have occurred in the Lives of eminent Men, by means whereof Poſterity has had the knowledge of them. Hierom of old, wrote De Viris Illuſtribus: The like has been done by Gennadius, Epiphanius, Iſidore, Prochorus, and other ancient Authors. Of later Times, Schopfius, his Academia Chriſti; Meurſius, his Athenæ Batavæ; Verheiden, his Elogia Theologorum, Melchier Adams, Lives of Modern Divines, have preſerved the Memories of ſome that did worthily, and were in their Day famous. There are two learned Men who have very lately engaged in a Service of this nature, viz. Paulus Freherus, who has publiſhed two Volumes in Folio, with the Title of, Theatrum virorum Eruditione clarorum, ad hæc uſque Tempora. He proceeds as far as the Year 1680. The other is Henningus Witten, who has written, Memoriæ Theologorum noſtri ſeculi. It is a trite (yet a true) Aſſertion, that Hiſtorical Studies are both profitable and pleaſant. And of all Hiſtorical Narratives, thoſe which give a faithful Account of the Lives of eminent Saints, muſt needs be the moſt edifying. The greateſt part of the Sacred Writings are Hiſtorical; and a conſiderable part of them is taken up in relating the Actions, Speeches, exemplary Lives, and Deaths, of ſuch as had been choice Inſtruments in the Hand of the Lord, to promote his Glory in the World. No doubt but that the Commemoration of the remarkable Providences of God towards his Servants, will be ſome part of their Work in Heaven for ever, that ſo he may have Eternal Praiſes for the Wonders of his Grace in Chriſt towards them. It muſt needs therefore be in it ſelf, a thing pleaſing to God, and a ſpecial Act of Obedience to the Fifth Commandment, to endeavour the preſervation of the Names, and Honour of them, who have been Fathers in Iſrael. On which account, I cannot but rejoice in what is here done. Altho' New-England has been favoured with many faithful and eminent Miniſters of God, there are only Three of them all, whoſe Lives have been as yet publiſhed, viz. Mr. Cotton, whoſe Life was written by his immediate Succeſſor Mr. Norton; and my Father Mather, whoſe was done by another Hand, and is Republiſhed in Mr. Sam. Clark's laſt Volume; and Mr. Eliot, whoſe was done by the ſame Hand which did theſe, and has been ſeveral times Reprinted in London. Here the Reader has preſented to him Five of them, who were amongſt the chief of the Fathers, in the Churches of New England. The ſame Hand has done the like Office of Love and Duty, for many others who were the Worthies of New England, not only in the Churches, but in the Civil State, whom the Lord Chriſt ſaw meet to uſe as Inſtruments, in planting the Heavens, and laying the Foundation of the Earth, in this New World. If theſe find a candid Acceptance, thoſe may poſſibly ſee the Light in due time.

Whether what is herewith emitted and written by my Son, be as to the Manner of it, well performed, I have nothing to ſay, but ſhall leave it unto others to judge, as they ſhall ſee cauſe; only as to the Matter of the Hiſtory, I am aſcertained that things are truly related. For altho' I had little of Perſonal Acquaintance with Mr. Cotton, being a Child not above Thirteen Years old when he died. I ſhall never forget the laſt Sermon which he preached at Cambridge, and his particular Application to the Scholars there, amongſt whom I was then a Student newly admitted; and my Relation to his Family ſince, has given me an opportunity to know many obſervable things concerning him. Both Boſtons have reaſon to Honour his Memory; and New-England-Boſton moſt of all, which oweth its Name and Being to him, more than to any one Perſon in the World: He might ſay of Boſton, much what as Auguſtus ſaid of Rome, Lateritiam reperi, marmoream reliqui: He found it little better than a Wood or Wilderneſs, but left it a famous Town with two Churches in it. I remember, Dr. Lightfoot, in Honour to his Patron, Sir Roland Cotton, called one of his Sons, Cotton: It doth not repent me, that I gave my Eldeſt Son that Name, in Honour to his Grandfather: And the Lord grant that both of us may be Followers of him, as he followed Chriſt.

As for the other three Worthies who have taught the Word of God in this place, they had their peculiar Excellencies.

Mr. Wilſon (like John the Apoſtle) did excel in Love; and he was alſo ſtrong in Faith. In the time of the Pequod War, he did not only hope, but had aſſurance, that God would make the Engliſh Victorious. He declared, That he was as certain of it, as if he had with his Eyes ſeen the Victories obtained; which came to paſs according to his Faith. I well remember, that I heard him once ſay, that when one of his Daughters was ſick, and given up as dead, paſt recovery, he deſired Mr. Cotton to pray with that Child; And (ſaid he) whileſt Mr. Cotton was praying, I was ſure that Child ſhould not then die, but live. That Daughter did live to be the Mother of many Children; two of which are now uſeful Miniſters of Chriſt: And ſhe is ſtill living, a pious Widow, another Anna, ſerving God day and night. When Mr. Norton was called from the Church of Ipſwich to Boſton, Mr. Nathanael Rogers (that excellent Man, who was Son to the famous Mr. Rogers of Dedham, in Eſſex, and Paſtor of the Church of Ipſwich, in N. E.) oppoſed Mr. Norton's removal from Ipſwich: Some ſaying, that Mr. Wilſon would by his Argument, or Rhetorick, or both, get Mr. Norton from them at laſt; Mr. Rogers replied, That he was afraid of his Faith, more than his Arguments. Sometimes he was tranſported with a Prophetical Afflatus, of which there were marvellous Inſtances. His Converſation was both pleaſant and profitable; in that he could relate many Memorable Providences, which he himſelf had the certain knowledge of. Whilſt I am writing this, there comes to my mind, one very pleaſant, and yet very ſerious Story, which he told me, and I do not remember that ever I met with it any where but from him. It was this: There was one Mr. Snape, a Puritan Miniſter, who was by the Biſhops caſt into Priſon, for his Nonconformity; when his Money was ſpent, the Jailor was unkind to him: But one Day as Mr. Snape was on his Knees at Prayer, the Window of his Chamber being open, he perceived ſomething was thrown into his Chamber; but reſolved he would finiſh his Work with God, before he would divert to ſee what it was. When he aroſe from his Knees, he ſaw a Purſe on the Chamber-floor, which was full of Gold, by which he could make his Keeper better natured than he had been. Many ſuch Paſſages could that good Man relate.

Mr. Norton was one whoſe Memory, I muſt acknowledge, I have peculiar cauſe to love and honour. I was his Pupil ſeveral Years. He had a very Scholaſtical Genius. In the Doctrine of Grace he was exceeding clear; indeed another Auſtin. He loved and admired Dr. Twiſs more than any Man that this Age has produced. He has ſometimes ſaid to me, Dr. Twiſs is Omni Exceptione Major. He was much in Prayer: He would very often ſpend whole Days in Prayer, with Faſting before the Lord alone in his Study. He kept a ſtrict daily Watch over his own Heart. He was an hard Student. He took Notice in a private Diary, how he ſpent his time every day: If he found himſelf not ſo much inclined to Diligence and Study, as at other times, he would reflect on his Heart and Ways, leſt haply ſome unobſerved Sin ſhould provoke the Lord to give him up to a ſlothful liſtleſs Frame of Spirit. In his Diary, he would ſometimes have theſe Words, Leve deſiderium ad ſtudendum: Forſan ex peccato admiſſo. I bleſs the Lord that ever I knew Mr. Norton, and that I knew ſo much of him as I did.

As for Mr. Davenport, I have in a Preface to his Sermon on the Canticles, which are tranſcribed for the Preſs, and now at London, given what Account I could then obtain, concerning the remarkable Paſſages of his Life. I ſeveral times deſired him to imitate Junius, and ſome others, who had written their own Lives. He told me, he did intend it: But I could not find any thing of that nature among his Manuſcripts, when many Years ago I had an occaſion to ſeek after it. He was a Princely Preacher. I have heard ſome ſay, who knew him in his younger Years, that he was then very fervent and vehement, as to the manner of his Delivery: But in his later Times, he did very much imitate Mr. Cotton, whom in in the Gravity of his Countenance, he did ſomewhat reſemble. Sic ille manus, ſic ora ferebat.

The Reader will find many obſervable Things in what is here related concerning Mr. Hooker. Yet great pity it is, that no more can be collected of the Memorables relating to ſo good and ſo great a Man as he was; then whom Connecticut never did, and perhaps never will, ſee a greater Perſon. Mr. Cotton, in his Preface to Mr. Norton's Anſwer to Apollonius, ſays of Mr. Hooker, Dominatur in Concionibus. Dr. Ames uſed to ſay, He never knew his Equal: There was a great Intimacy between them two. I remember my Father told me, That Mr. Hooker was the Author of that large Preface which is before Dr. Ames, his Freſh Suit againſt Ceremonies. He would ſometimes ſay, That next to converting Grace, he bleſſed God for his Acquaintance with the Principles and Writings of that Learned Man, Mr. Alexander Richardſon. It was a Black Day to New-England, when that great Light was removed.

There are ſome who will not be pleaſed, that any Notice is taken of the hard Meaſure which theſe excellent Men had from thoſe perſecuting Prelates, who were willing to have the World rid of them. But it is impoſſible to write the Hiſtory of New-England, and of the Lives of them who were the chief in it, and yet be wholly ſilent in that matter. That eminent Perſon, Dr. Tillotſon (the late Arch Biſhop of Canterbury) did, not above four Years ago, ſometimes expreſs to me, his Reſentments of the Injury which had been done to the firſt Planters of New-England, and his great diſlike of Arch-Biſhop Laud's Spirit towards them. And to my knowledge, there are Biſhops at this Day, of the ſame Chriſtian Temper and Moderation with that Great and Good Man, lately dead. Had the Sees in England, fourſcore Years ago, been filled with ſuch Arch-Biſhops, and Biſhops, as thoſe which King William (whom God grant long to Live and to Reign) has preferred to Epiſcopal Dignity, there had never been a New-England. It was therefore neceſſary that it ſhould be otherwiſe then, than at this Day, that ſo the Goſpel in the Power and Purity of it, might come into theſe dark Corners of the Earth, and that here might be ſeen a Specimen of the New Heavens and a New Earth, wherein dwells Righteouſneſs, which ſhall e'er long be ſeen all the World over, and which, according to his Promiſe we look for.

The INTRODUCTION.

§ 1. WHen the God of Heaven had carried a Nation into a Wilderneſs, upon the Deſigns of a Glorious Reformation, he there gave them a ſingular Conduct of his Preſence and Spirit, in a certain Pillar, which by Day appear'd as a Cloud, and by Night as a Fire before them; and the Report of the Reſpect paid by the Iſraelites unto this Pillar, became ſo noiſed among the Gentiles, that the Pagan Poets derided them on this Account,

Nil præter Nubes & cæli Lumen adorant,

[Which is, I ſuppoſe, the true Reading of that famous Verſe in Juvenal: And I thus tranſlate it,]

Only the Clouds and Fires of Heav'n they do worſhip at all Times.

But I muſt now obſerve unto my Reader, that more than a Score of Years, after the beginning of the Age which is now expiring, our Lord Jeſus Chriſt, with a thouſand Wonders of his Providence, carried into an American Wilderneſs, a People perſecuted for their deſire to ſee, and ſeek a Reformation of the Church, according to the Scripture: Of which matter I cannot give a briefer, and yet fuller Hiſtory, than by reciting the memorable Words of that Great Man, Dr. John Owen, who in his Golden Book of Communion with God, thus expreſſes it: ‘They who hold Communion with the Lord Jeſus Chriſt, will admit nothing, practice nothing, in the Worſhip of God, but what they have his Warrant for; unleſs it comes in his Name, with a, Thus ſaith the Lord Jeſus, they will not hear an Angel from Heaven: They know, the Apoſtles themſelves were to teach the Saints, only what he commanded them: And you know, how many in this very Nation, in the Days not long ſince paſſed, yea how many Thouſands, left their Native Soyl, and went into a vaſt and howling Wilderneſs, in the uttermoſt parts of the World, to keep their Souls undefiled and chaſt unto their dear Lord Jeſus, as to this of his Worſhip and Inſtitutions. Now tho' the Reformed Church thus fled into the Wilderneſs, enjoy'd not the miraculous Pillar, vouchſafed unto the Erratick Church of Iſrael, for about forty Years together; yet for that Number of Years, we enjoy'd many a Perſon, in whom the good Spirit of God, gave a Conduct unto us, and mercifully diſpenſed thoſe directing, defending, refreſhing Influences, which were as neceſſary for us, as any that the celebrated Pillar of Cloud, and Fire, could have afforded. The great and good Shepherd of the Church, favoured his diſtreſſed Flocks in the Wilderneſs, with many Paſtors, that were learned, prudent, and holy, beyond the common Rates and Men after his own Heart! And it would be an Ingratitude many ways pernicious, if the Churches of New-England ſhould not, like thoſe of the Primitive Times, have their Diptychs, wherein the Memory of thoſe Eminent Confeſſors, may be recorded and preſerved.

§ 2. Four or five of thoſe eminent Perſons are now to have their Lives deſcribed unto us, and offered unto the Contemplation and Imitation, eſpecially of the Generation which are now riſing up, after the Death of Cotton, and of the Elders that out-lived him, and had ſeen all the Great Works of the Lords, which he did for New-England. I ſaw a fearful Degeneracy, creeping, I cannot ſay, but ruſhing in upon theſe Churches; I ſaw to multiply continually our Dangers, of our loſing no ſmall Points in our firſt Faith, as well as our firſt Love, and of our giving up the Eſſentials of that Church Order, which was the very End of theſe Colonies; I ſaw a viſible ſhrink in all Orders of Men among us, from that Greatneſs, and that Goodneſs, which was in the firſt Grain, that our God brought from Three ſifted Kingdoms, into this Land, when it was a Land not ſown; that while the Papiſts in Europe have grown better of late Years, by the Growth of Janſeniſm among them, the Proteſtants have prodigiouſly waxed worſe, for a Revolt unto Pelagianiſm, and Socinianiſm, or what is half way to it, has not been more ſurpriſing to me, than to ſee that in America, while thoſe parts which were at firſt Peopled by the Refuſe of the Engliſh Nation, do ſenſibly amend in the Regards of Sobriety and Education, thoſe Parts which were planted with a more noble Vine, do ſo faſt give a Proſpect of affording only the degenerate Plants of a ſtrange Vine. What ſhould be done for the ſtop, the turn of this Degeneracy? It is reported of the Scythians, who were, doubtleſs, the Anceſtors of the Indians firſt inhabiting theſe Regions, that in Battels, when they came to ſtand upon the Graves of their dead Fathers, they would there ſtand immovable, 'till they dy'd upon the ſpot: And, thought I, why may not ſuch a Method now effectually engage the Engliſh in theſe Regions, to ſtand faſt in their Faith and their Order, and in the Power of Godlineſs? I'll ſhew them, the Graves of their dead Fathers; and if any of them do retreat unto a Contempt or Neglect of Learning, or unto the Errors of another Goſpel, or unto the Superſtitions of Will-Worſhip, or unto a worldly, a ſelfiſh, a little Converſation, they ſhall undergo the irreſiſtible Rebukes of their Progenitors, here fetch'd from the dead, for their Admonition; and I'll therewithal advertiſe my New-Englanders, that if a Grand-child of a Moſes become an Idolater, he ſhall, [as the Jews remark upon Judg. 18.30.] be deſtroy'd, as if not a Moſes, but a Manaſſeh, had been his Father. Beſides, Plus Vivitur Exemplis quam Præceptis!

§ 3. Good Men in the Church of England, I hope, will not be offended at it, if the Unreaſonable Impoſitions, and Intolerable Perſecutions, of certain Little-Soul'd Ceremony-Mongers, which drove theſe worthy Men out of their Native Country, into the horrid Thickets of America, be in their Lives complained and reſented. For, diſtinguiſhing between a Romanizing Faction in the Church of England, and the True Proteſtant Reforming Church of England, (Things as different as a Jewel, from an Heylin, or a Grindal, from a Laud!) the Firſt Planters of New England, at their firſt coming over, did in a Publick and a Printed Addreſs, call the Church of England, their Dear Mother, deſiring their Friends therein, To recommend them unto the Mercies of God, in their conſtant Prayers, as a Church now ſpringing out of their own Bowels: Nor did they think, that it was their Mother who turned them out of Doors, but ſome of their angry Brethren, abuſing the Name of their Mother, who ſo harſhly treated them. As for the Romanizing Faction in the Church of England, or, that Party, who reſolving (altogether contrary to the Deſire of the moſt Eminent Perſons, by whom the Common-Prayer was made Engliſh) that the Reformation ſhould never proceed one Jot further than the Firſt Eſſay of it, in the former Century, did make certain Unſcriptural Canons, whereby all that could not approve, ſubſcribe, and practiſe, a multitude of, (by themſelves confeſſed purely Humane) Inventions in the Worſhip of God, were accurſed, and Ipſo Facto Excommunicate; and by the Ill-obtained Aid of Bitter Laws to back theſe Canons, did by Fines and Goals and innumerable Violences, contrary to the very Magna Charta of the Nation, ruine many Thouſands of the ſobereſt People in the Kingdom; and who continually made as many Shibboleths as they could, for the Diſcovering and the Extinguiſhing of all real Godlineſs, and never gave over proſecuting their Tripartite Plot, of Arminianiſm, and a Conciliation with the Patriarch of the Weſt, and Arbitrary Government in the State, until at laſt they threw all into the lamentable Confuſions of a Civil War; the Churches of New-England ſay, Come not into their Secret, O my Soul. We dare not be guilty of the Schiſm, which we charge upon that Party in the Church of England: And if any Faction of Men will require the Aſſent and Conſent of other Men, to a vaſt Number of Diſputable and Uninſtituted things, and, it may be, a Mathematical Falſhood, among the firſt of them, and utterly renounce all Chriſtian Communion with all that ſhall not give that Aſſent and Conſent, we look upon thoſe to be Separatiſts; we dare not be ſo Narrow-Spirited: The Churches of New-England profeſs to make only the Subſtantials of the Chriſtian Religion to be the Terms of our Sacred Fellowſhip: We dare make no Difference between a Presbyterian, a Congregational, an Epiſcopalian, and an Antipædo baptiſt, where their Viſible Piety, makes it probable, that the Lord Jeſus Chriſt has received them. And ſuch Reverend Names, as Hall, and Kidder, moſt Worthy Biſhops now adorning the Engliſh Church, as well as the Names of ſuch Reverend and Excellent Perſons among the Diſſenters, as Bates, Anneſly, How, Mead, and Alſop, (with many Others) are, on that Score, together Precious unto this part of the Chriſtian America. On the other ſide, the True Proteſtant Reforming Church of England, contains the whole Body of the Faithful, ſcatterred through the Engliſh Dominions, though of different Perſwaſions about ſome Rites and Modes, and leſſer Points of Religion: And all the Friends of the laſt Reformation, who, whether they think there needs a further Progreſs in that Work or no, yet are willing to make the Word of God the Rule of their ſerving him, do come under this Denomination. Thoſe Divines, who, with Arch-Biſhop Uſher in the Head of them, did more than Fifty Years ago, give in a Paper touching the Innovations of Doctrine and of Diſcipline in the Church of England, and make near Forty Exceptions againſt things in the Liturgy, were ſtill as good Members of that Church, as they that Hated to be Reformed; and the Aſſembly of Divines at Weſtminſter, which made the Catechiſms now uſed among us, were as genuine Sons of the Church after they became Non-Conformiſts, as while they lived in Conformity, which every one of them, except Eight or Nine, did when they firſt came together. One who is at this Day a Right Reverend Biſhop, has in his Irenicum, well expreſſed the Senſe which I believe, the biggeſt Party of Chriſtians in the Realm, Three to One have of thoſe matters, which have been, The Apples of Strife among us: 'That Chriſt, who came to take away the Inſupportable Yoke of the Jewiſh Ceremonies, certainly did never intend to gall the Necks of the Diſciples with another inſtead of it; and it would be ſtrange, the Church would require more than Chriſt himſelf did, and make more Terms of Communion, than our Saviour did of Diſciple-ſhip. The Grand Commiſſion the Apoſtles were ſent out with, was only to Teach, What Chriſt had commanded them; not the leaſt Intimation of any Power, given them to impoſe or require any thing, beyond what he himſelf had ſpoken to them, or they were directed to, by the immediate Guidance of the Spirit of God. —— And, [Speaking of the Reaſon, why our firſt Compilers of the Common-Prayer, took in ſo much of the Popiſh Service] 'Certainly, thoſe Holy Men, who did ſeek by any means, to draw in others, at ſuch a diſtance from their Principles, as the Papiſts were, did never intend, by what they did for that end, to exclude any truly tender Conſciences, from their Communion; That which they laid as a Bait for them, was never intended by them as an Hook for thoſe of our own Profeſſion. And if this be the True Church of England, give me leave to ſay, The Churches of New England, are no inconſiderable part of it; and that accordingly we may have a Room in it, I may ſafely in the Name of them all, offer, (as did the Renowned Author of our Martyr-Books, when they demanded Subſcription from him,) To ſubſcribe the New Teſtament.

Upon the whole then, if any be diſpleaſed at my Report of the Unjuſt Impoſitions and Perſecutions, which drove into America, as Good Chriſtians, and Proteſtants, as any that were left behind them, it will not be the True Church of England; for why ſhould That be called, The Church of England, which has cauſed Thouſands of as real and thorough Chriſtians, as any upon Earth, to ſay, It is no better to dwell in the Wilderneſs, than with ſuch an Contentious and Angry One! That Church of England, which alone is worthy to be called ſo, will bewail, as I know divers Excellent Perſons now in the Epiſcopal Sees have done, the Injuries offered unto our Puritan Fathers.

§ 4. Let my Reader, thus prepared, now entertain himſelf, as far as he pleaſes, with our Four Johns, to whoſe Lives, I have upon the Counſel and Command of an Ever-Honoured Parent, Appendiced the Life of a Famous Thomas in this Publication; Johns, with whom among the Five or Six Hundred Noted Perſons of that Name, celebrated by One Hiſtorian, I find not many that were worthy to be compared; Johns, fuller of Light and Grace and the Good Spirit, than all thoſe Four or Five and Twenty of that Name, who have ſat in the Chair that pretends to Infallibility. And, if he pleaſes, let him ſee that Old Little Obſervation confirmed, that as the Name Henry has been happy in Kings, Elizabeth in Queens, Edward in Lawyers, William in Phyſicians, Francis in Scolars, Robert in Souldiers and State-men, ſo John has been happy in Divines. Even a Divine Jehojadah, when he comes to be reckon'd among the Prieſts of the Lord, muſt have put upon him, the Name of John [1 Chron. 6. 9.] But let him conſider theſe Lives, as tendered unto the Publick, upon an Account no leſs than that of keeping Alive, as far as this poor Eſſay may contribute thereunto, the Intereſts of Dying Religion in our Churches. I remember a Learned Man's Conjecture, That [in 1 Tim. 3. 15.] it is Timothy, and not The Church, which is called, The Pillar and Ground of Faith: Such Able, Holy, and Faithful Miniſters as Timothy, are the Great Proclaimers and Preſervers of Truth, for the Church of God: Such were theſe Famous Johns while they Lived, and now they are Dead, I have done my Endeavour that they may ſtill be Such unto the Churches, unto whom I owe my All. I'll ſay but this, the laſt Words of the moſt Renowned Prebend of Canterbury, Dr. Peter du Moulin, who died a very Old Man, about Eleven Years ago, were, Since Calviniſm is cried down [Actum eſt de Religione Chriſti apud Anglos] Chriſtianity is in Danger to be loſt in the Engliſh Nation. Alluding to what he ſaid, about his John Calvin, I will take leave to ſay with reſpect unto our John Cotton, and the reſt that here accompany him, Chriſtianity will be loſt among us, if their Faith and Zeal, muſt all be buried with them: Which, God forbid! As there would be an hazard, that the Early and Better Times of New-England would have the True Story thereof, within a while, as irrecoverably loſt, as the Story of the World, relating to thoſe Times, which Varro diſtinguiſhed unto Incognit, and Fabulous, preceding the Hiſtorical, and we ſhould ſhortly have as wretched Narratives of the firſt Perſons and Actions in this Land, as Juſtin gives of the Jews, when he makes Moſes the Son of their Joſeph, and the Sixth of their Kings, or when he makes Them Expell'd from Egypt, becauſe the Gods would not otherwiſe allay a Plague that raged there, or ſuch as are given by Pliny, when he makes Moſes a Magician, or Strabo, that makes him an Egyptian Prieſt; if no ſpeedy Care be taken to preſerve the Memorables of our Firſt Settlement; ſo I wiſh, the Laudable Principles and Practices of that Firſt Settlement, may be kept from utterly being loſt in our Apoſtaſies, by the Care which is now taken thus to preſerve what was Memorable, of the Men that have delivered them down unto us.

§ 5. Finally; When the Apoſtles had ſet before Chriſtians the Saints, which were a Cloud of Witneſſes, by imitating of whoſe Exemplary Behaviour we might Enter into Reſt, he concludes with a Looking unto Jeſus; or, according to the Emphaſis of the Original, A Looking off (from them) unto Jeſus, as the incomparably moſt perfect of all. So, Let my Reader do, when all that was Imitable in the Lives of theſe Worthy Men, has had his Contemplation and Admiration; They all yet had their Defects, and therefore, Look off unto Jeſus; Following Them no farther than they Followed Him. It is a notable Paſſage, [in Luk. 7. 28.] which we miſ-tranſlate; The Leaſt in the Kingdom of God, is Greater than John. In the Greek, what we tranſlate, The Leaſt, is, He that is Leſſer; that is, He that is Younger. [Minor ſtill has been the ſame with Junior.] Our Lord means Himſelf, who was Leſſer, that is, Younger than John his Fore-runner; but, Greater than He! Truly, whatever was Excellent in theſe our Johns, I would pray, that the Minds of all that ſee it, may be raiſed ſtill to think, Our Precious Lord Jeſus Chriſt, is greater than theſe Johns: All their Excellencies are in him Tranſcendently, Infinitely; as they were from Him derived. High Thoughts of the Lord Jeſus Chriſt, provoked by Reading the Deſcriptions of theſe his Excellent Servants, that had in them a little of Him, and were no farther Excellent than as they had ſo, will make me an abundant Recompence, for all the Difficulties, and all the Temptations, with which my Writing is attended. And as it quickens the Joys of my haſtening Death, when I have through Grace, a Proſpect of being then in that State whereto the Spirits of theſe Juſt Men made Perfect, are all of them Gathered, ſo I would have This now to out-do all thoſe Joys, To be with Jeſus Chriſt, That ſurely, is by far the beſt of all.

COTTONUS Redivivus: Or, The LIFE of Mr. JOHN COTTON.

In quo Lumen Religionis & Devotionis, Fumus generatus ex Lumine Scientiæ non extinguit, ille perfectus eſt: Sed Quis eſt Hic, ut adoremus eum? Algazel, in Libro Stateræ. Reſp. Hic eſt! —

§ 1. WERE I Maſter of the Pen, wherewith Palladius embalmed his Chryſoſtom, the Greek Patriark, or Poſidonius Eternized his Auſtin, the Latin Oracle, among the Ancients; Or, were I owner of the Quill wherewith among the Moderns, Beza celebrated his Immortal Calvin, or Fabius Immortalized his Venerable Beza; the Merits of John Cotton would oblige me to employ it, in the preſerving his Famous Memory. If Boſton be the chief Seat of New-England, it was Cotton that was the Father and Glory of Boſton: Upon which account it becomes a piece of pure Juſtice, that the Life of him, who above all Men gave Life to his Country, ſhould bear no little Figure in its intended Hiſtory; and indeed if any Perſon in this Town or Land, had the Bleſſedneſs which the Roman Hiſtorian long ſince pronounced ſuch, even, To do things worthy to be Writ, and to Write Things worthy to be Read, it was He; who now claims a Room in our Pages. If it were a Compariſon ſometimes made of the Reformers, Pomeranus was a Grammarian, Juſtus Jonas was an Orator, Melancthon was a Logician, but Luther was All: Even that Proportion, it may without Envy be acknowledged, that Cotton bore to the reſt of our New Engliſh Divines; He that, whilſt he was Living had this Vertue extraordinarily Conſpicuous in him, That it was his delight always, to acknowledge the Gifts of God, in other Men, muſt now he is Dead, have other Men to acknowledge of him what Eraſmus does of Jerom, In hoc uno conjunctum fuit & Eximium, quicquid in aliis partim admiramur.

§ 2. There was a good Heraldry in that Speech of the Noble Romanus, It is not the Blood of my Progenitors, but my Chriſtian Profeſſion that makes me Noble. But our John Cotton, beſides the Advantage of his Chriſtian Profeſſion, had a Deſcent from Honourable Progenitors, to render him doubly Honourable. His immediate Progenitors being by ſome Injuſtice, deprived of great Revenues, his Father Mr. Roland Cotton had the Education of a Lawyer beſtowed by his Friends upon him, in hopes of his being the better capacitated thereby to recover the Eſtate, whereof his Family had been wronged; and ſo the Profeſſion of a Lawyer, was that unto which this Gentleman applied himſelf all his Days. But our John Cotton, in this Happier than Auſtin, whoſe Father was carefuller to make an Orator than a Chriſtian of him, while his Gracious Mother was making him on greater Accounts, A Son of her many Tears, had a very pious Father in this worthy Lawyer, as well as a pious Mother, to Intereſt him in the Covenant of God. That worthy Man was indeed very ſingular in two moſt Imitable Practices. One was, that when any of his Neighbours deſirous to ſue one another, adreſſed him for Counſel, it was his manner, in the moſt perſwaſive and obliging Terms that could be, to endeavour a Reconciliation between both Parties; preferring the Conſolations of a Peace maker, before all the Fees, that he might have got by blowing up of Differences. Another was, that every Night it was his Cuſtom to Examine himſelf, with Reflections on the Tranſactions of the Day paſt; wherein, if he found that he had not either Done good unto others, or Got good unto his own Soul, he would be as much grieved as ever the Famous Titus was, when he could complain in the Evening, Amici Diem Perdidi! Of ſuch Parents was Mr. John Cotton born, at the Town of Derby, on the Fourth of December; in the Year 1585.

§ 3. The Religious Parents of Mr. Cotton, were ſolicitous to have him indued with a Learned as well as a Pious Education; and being neither ſo Rich, that the Mater Artis could have no room to do her part, nor ſo Poor that the Res Anguſta Domi, ſhould clog his Progreſs, they were well fitted thereby, to beſtow ſuch an Education upon him. His firſt Inſtruction was under a good School-Maſter, one Mr. Johnſon, in the Town of Derby: Whereon the Intellectual Endowments of all ſorts, with which the God of our Spirits adorned him, ſo diſcovered themſelves, that at the Age of Thirteen, his Proficiency procured him Admiſſion into Trinity-College in Cambridge. Indeed the Proverb, Soon Ripe ſoon Rotten, has often been too haſtily applied unto Rathe ripe Wits, in young People; not only Oecolampadius and Melancthon, who commenced Batchelours of Arts, at Fourteen Years of Age, and Luther, who commenced Maſter of Arts at Twenty; but alſo our Dr. Juel ſent unto Oxford, our Dr. Uſher ſent unto Dublin, and our Mr. Cotton ſent unto Cambridge, all at the Age of Thirteen, do put in a Bar to the Univerſal Application of that Proverb. While Mr. Cotton was at the Univerſity, his Diligent Head, with Gods Bleſſings, made him a Rich Scholar; and his generous Mind found no little Nouriſhment by that Labour, which like the Sage Philoſopher, he found ſweeter than Idleneſs: Inſomuch that his being Elected Fellow of Trinity Colledge, as the Reward of his quick Proficiency, was diverted by nothing but this, that the extraordinary Charges for their Great Hall then in Building, did put by their Election. And there was this Remarkable in the Education of this Choſen Veſſel, at the Univerſity: That while he continued there, his Father's Practice was, by the ſpecial Providence of God, augmented ſo much beyond what it been before, as was enough to maintain him there: Upon which Obſervation Mr. Cotton afterwards would ſay, 'Twas God that kept me at the Univerſity! Indeed ſome have ſaid, That the great Notice quickly taken of the Eminency in the Son, was one Reaſon, why his Father not only came to be complemented on all ſides, and Omnes Omnia Bona dicere, & laudare Fortunas ejus, qui Filium haberet Tali Ingenio præditum, but alſo had his Clients more than a little multiplied.

§ 4. Upon the Deſires of Emanuel-Colledge, Mr. Cotton was not only removed unto that Colledge, but alſo preferred unto a Fellowſhip in it; in order whereunto, he did according to the Critical and Laudable Statutes of the Houſe, go through a very ſevere Examen of his Fitneſs for ſuch a Station; wherein 'twas particularly remarked, that the Poſer trying his Hebrew Skill by the Third Chapter of Iſaiah, a Chapter which, containing more hard Words than any one Paragraph of the Bible, might therefore have puzled a very good Hebrician, yet he made nothing of it. He was afterwards the Head Lecturer, the Dean, the Catechiſt, in that Famous Colledge; and became a Tutor to many Scholars, who afterwards proved Famous Perſons, and had cauſe to bleſs God for the Faithful, and Ingenious and Laborious Communicativeneſs of this their Tutor. Here, all his Academical Exerciſes, whether in Diſputations or in common Places, or whatever elſe did ſo ſmell of the Lamp, that the Wit, the Strength, the Gravity, and the Fulneſs, both of Reaſon and of Reading in them, cauſed him to be much admired by the Sparkling Wits of the Univerſity. But One thing among the reſt, which cauſed a great Notice to be taken of him, throughout the whole Univerſity, was his Funeral Oration upon Dr. Some, the Maſter of Peter Houſe, wherein he approved himſelf ſuch a Maſter of Periclæan, or Ciceronian Oratory, that the Auditors were even ready to have acclaimed, Non Vox Hominem Sonat! And that which added unto the Reputation, thus raiſed for him, was an Univerſity Sermon, wherein aiming more to preach Self than Chriſt, he uſed ſuch Florid Strains, as extremely recommended him unto the moſt, who reliſhed the Wiſdom of Words above the Words of Wiſdom: Though the pompous Eloquence of that Sermon, afterwards gave ſuch a Diſtaſt unto his own Renewed Soul, that with a Sacred Indignation he threw his Notes into the Fire.

§ 5. Hitherto we have ſeen the Life of Mr. Cotton, while he was not yet Alive! Though the Reſtraining and Preventing Grace of God, had kept him from ſuch Out-breakings of Sin, as Defile the Lives of moſt in the World, yet like the Old Man, who for ſuch a cauſe ordered this Epitaph to be written on his Grave, Here lies an Old Man, who lived but Seven Years, he reckoned himſelf to have been but a Dead Man, as being Alienated from the Life of God, until he had experienced that Regeneration, in his own Soul, which was thus accompliſhed. The Holy Spirit of God had been at work upon his Young Heart, by the Miniſtry of that Reverend and Renowned Preacher of Righteouſneſs, Mr. Perkins; but he reſiſted and ſmothered thoſe Convictions, through a vain Perſwaſion, that if he became a Godly Man, 'twould ſpoil him for being a Learned One. Yea, ſuch was the Secret Enmity and Prejudice of an Unregenerate Soul, againſt Real Holineſs, and ſuch the Torment, which our Lords Witneſſes give to the Conſciences of the Earthly-minded, that when he heard the Bell toll for the Funeral of Mr. Perkins, his Mind ſecretly rejoiced in his Deliverance, from that Powerful Miniſtry, by which his Conſcience had been ſo oft Beleagured: The Remembrance of which thing afterwards, did break his Heart exceedingly! But he was, at length, more effectually awakened, by a Sermon of Dr. Sibs, wherein was diſcourſed the Miſery of thoſe, who had only a Negative Righteouſneſs, or a Civil, Sober, Honeſt Blameleſneſs before Men. Mr. Cotton became now very ſenſible of his own miſerable Condition before God; and the Arrows of theſe Convictions, did ſtick ſo faſt upon him, that after no leſs Three Years Diſconſolate Apprehenſions under them, the Grace of God made him a throughly Renewed Chriſtian, and filled him with a Sacred Joy, which accompanied him unto the Fulneſs of Joy for ever. For this Cauſe, as Perſons truly converted unto God have a mighty and laſting Affection for the Inſtruments of their Converſion; thus Mr. Cotton's Veneration for Dr. Sibs, was after this very particular and perpetual; and it cauſed him to have the Picture of that Great Man, in that part of his Houſe, where he might ofteneſt look upon it. But ſo the Yoke of ſore Temptations and Afflictions and long ſpiritual Trials, fitted him to be an eminently uſeful Servant of God in his Generation!

§ 6. Some time after this Change upon the Soul of Mr. Cotton, it came unto his turn again to preach at St. Maries; and becauſe he was to preach, an High Expectation was raiſed, through the whole Univerſity, that they ſhould have a Sermon, flouriſhing indeed, with all the Learning of the whole Univerſity. Many Difficulties had Mr. Cotton in his own Mind now, what Courſe to ſteer. On the one ſide he conſidered, That if he ſhould preach with a Scriptural and Chriſtian Plainneſs, he ſhould not only wound his own Fame exceedingly, but alſo tempt Carnal Men to revive an Old Cavil, That Religion made Scholars turn Dunces, whereby the Name of God might ſuffer not a little. On the other ſide, he conſidered, That it was his Duty to preach with ſuch a Plainneſs, as became the Oracles of God, which are intended for the Conduct of Men in the Paths of Life, and not for Theotrical Oſtentations and Entertainments, and the Lord needed not any Sin of ours to maintain his own Glory. Hereupon Mr. Cotton reſolved, that he would preach a plain Sermon, even ſuch a Sermon, as in his own Conſcience he thought would be moſt pleaſing unto the Lord Jeſus Chriſt; and he diſcourſed practically and powerfully, but very ſolidly upon the plain Doctrine of Repentance. The vain Wits of the Univerſity, diſappointed thus, with a more excellent Sermon, that ſhot ſome troubleſome Admonitions into their Conſciences, diſcovered their Vexation at this Diſappointment, by their not Humming, as according to their ſinful and abſurd Cuſtom, they had formerly done; and the Vice-Chancellor, for the very ſame Reaſon alſo, graced him not, as he did others that pleaſed him. Nevertheleſs, the Satisfaction which he enjoyed in his own faithful Soul, abundantly compenſated unto him, the loſs of any Human Favour or Honour; nor did he go without many Encouragements from ſome Doctors, then having a better Sence of Religion upon them, who prayed him to perſevere in the good way of Preaching, which he had now taken. But perhaps the greateſt Conſolation of all, was a notable Effect of the Sermon then preached! The famous Dr. Preſton, then a Fellow of Queen's Colledge in Cambridge, and of Great Note in the Univerſity, came to hear Mr. Cotton with the ſame itching Ears, as others were then led withal. For ſome good while after the beginning of the Sermon, his fruſtrated Expectation cauſed him to manifeſt his Uneaſineſs all the ways that were then poſſible; but before the Sermon was ended, like one of Peter's Hearers, he found himſelf pierced at the Heart: His Heart within him was now ſtruck with ſuch Reſentments of his own interior ſtate before the God of Heaven, that he could have no Peace in his own Soul, till with a wounded Soul, he had repaired unto Mr. Cotton; from whom he received thoſe further Aſſiſtances, wherein he became a Spiritual Father, unto one of the greateſt Men in his Age.

§ 7. The well-diſpoſed People of Boſton in Lincolnſhire, after this, invited Mr. Cotton to become their Miniſter; with which Invitation, out of a ſincere and ſerious deſire to ſerve our Lord in his Goſpel, after the ſolemneſt Addreſſes to Heaven for Guidance in ſuch a ſolemn Affair, he complied. At this time the Mayor of the Town, with a more corrupt Party, having procured another Scholar from Cambridge, more agreeable to them, would needs have him to preach before Mr. Cotton: But the Church-Warden pretending to more of Influence upon their Eccleſiaſtical Matters, over ruled it. However when the matter came to a Vote, amongſt thoſe to whom the Right of Election did by Charter belong, there was an Equi-Vote for Mr. Cotton, and that other Perſon; only the Mayor, who had the Caſting Vote, by a ſtrange Miſtake pricked for Mr. Cotton. When the Mayor ſaw his Miſtake, a new Vote was urged and granted; wherein it again proved an Equi Vote; but the Mayor moſt unaccountably miſtook again, as he did before. Extreamly diſpleas'd hereat, he preſſed for a Third Vote; but the reſt would not conſent unto it; and ſo the Election fell upon Mr. Cotton, by the involuntary Caſt of that very Hand, which had moſt oppoſed it. This Obſtruction to the Settlement of Mr. Cotton in Boſton, being thus conquered, another follow'd: For the Biſhop of the Dioceſs, having underſtood that Mr. Cotton was infected with Puritaniſm, ſet himſelf immediately to diſcourage his being there; only he could object nothing, but, That Mr. Cotton being a Young Man, he was not ſo fit upon that Score, to be over ſuch a numerous and ſuch a factious People. And Mr. Cotton having learned no otherwiſe to value himſelf, than to concur with the Apprehenſions of the Biſhop; intended therefore to return unto Cambridge: But ſome of his Friends, againſt his Inclination, knowing the true way of doing it, ſoon charmed the Biſhop into a declared Opinion, that Mr. Cotton was an Honeſt, and a Learned Man. Thus the Admiſſion of Mr. Cotton unto the Exerciſe of his Miniſtry in Boſton, was accompliſhed.

§ 8. Mr. Cotton found the more peaceable Reception among the People, through his own want of internal Peace; and becauſe his continual Exerciſes, from his Internal Temptations and Afflictions, made all People ſee, that inſtead of ſerving this or that Party, his chief care was about the Salvation of his own Soul. But the Stirs, which had been made in the Town, by the Arminian Controverſies, then raging, put him upon further Exerciſes; whereof he has himſelf given us a Narrative in the enſuing Words: 'When I was firſt called to Boſton in Lincolnſhire, ſo it was, that Mr. Baron, Son of Dr. Baron, (the Divinity-Reader of Cambridge) firſt broached, that which was then called Lutheraniſm, ſince Arminianiſm; as being indeed himſelf, Learned, Acute, Plauſible in Diſcourſe, and fit to inſinuate into the Hearts of his Neighbours. And tho' he were a Phyſitian by Profeſſion (and of good Skill in that Art) yet he ſpent the greateſt Strength of his Studies, in clearing and promoting the Arminian Tenents. Whence it came to paſs, that in all the great Feaſts of the Town, the chiefeſt Diſcourſe at the Table, did ordinarily fall upon Arminian Points, to the great Offence of Godly Miniſters, both in Boſton, and Neighbour-Towns. I coming among them, a young Man, thought it a part both of Modeſty and Prudence, not to ſpeak much to the Points, at firſt, among Strangers and Ancients: Until afterwards, after hearing of many Diſcourſes, in Publick Meetings, and much private Diſcourſe with the Doctor, I had learned at length, where all the great Strength of the Doctor lay. And then obſerving (by the Strength of Chriſt) how to avoid ſuch Expreſſions as gave him any advantage in the Expreſſions of others, I began publickly to preach, and in private Meetings to defend the Doctrine of God's Eternal Election, before all

‘ Foreſight of Good or Evil, in the Creature;
‘ and the Redemption (ex gratia) only of the ‘ Elect; the effectual Vocation of a Sinner, Per ‘ irreſiſtibilem Gratiæ vim, without all reſpect
‘ of the Preparations of Free Will; and finally,
‘ the Impoſſibility of the Fall of a ſincere Belie‘ ver, either totally or finally from a State of ‘ Grace. Hereupon, when the Doctor had ob‘ jected many things, and heard my Anſwers to ‘ thoſe Scruples, which he was wont moſt plau-
‘ ſibly to urge; preſently after our Publick
‘ Feaſts, and Neighbourly Meetings, were ſilent
‘ from all further Debates about Predeſtination,
‘ or any of the Points which depend thereupon,
‘ and all Matters of Religion were carried on ‘ calmly and peaceably.

About half a Year after, Mr. Cotton had been at Boſton, thus uſefully employ'd, he viſited Cambridge, that he might then and there proceed Batchellor of Divinity; which he did: And his Concio ad Clerum, on Mat. 5. 13. Vos eſtis Sal Terræ, was highly eſteemed by the Judicious. Nor was he leſs admired for his very ſingular Acuteneſs in Diſputation, when he anſwered the Divinity Act in the Schools; wherein he had for his Opponent a moſt acute Antagoniſt, namely Dr. Chappel, who was afterwards Provoſt of Trinity-Colledge in Dublin; and one unhappily ſucceſsful in promoting the New Pelagianiſm.

§ 9. Settled now at Boſton, his dear Friend, holy Mr. Bayns, recommended unto him a pious Gentlewoman, one Mrs. Elizabeth Horrocks, the Siſter of Mr. James Horrocks, a famous Miniſter in Lancaſhire, to become his Conſort in a Married Eſtate. And it was remarkable, that on the very Day of his Wedding to that eminently Vertuous Gentlewoman, he firſt received that Aſſurance of God's Love unto his own Soul, by the Spirit of God, effectually applying his Promiſe of Eternal Grace and Life unto him, which happily kept with him all the reſt of his Days: For which cauſe he would afterwards often ſay, God made that Day, a Day of double Marriage to me! The Wife, which by the Favour of God he had now found, was a very great help unto him, in the Service of God; but eſpecially upon this, among many other Accounts, that the People of her own Sex, obſerving her more than ordinary Diſcretion, Gravity, and Holineſs, would ſtill improve the Freedom of their Addreſs unto her, to acquaint her with the Exerciſes of their own Spirits; who acquainting her Husband with convenient Intimations thereof, occaſioned him in his Publick Miniſtry more particularly and profitably, to diſcourſe thoſe things that were of everlaſting Benefit.

§ 10. After he had been three Years in Boſton, his careful Studies and Prayers brought him to apprehend more of Evil remaining Unreformed in the Church of England, than he had heretofore conſidered; and from this time he became a Conſcientious Non-Conformiſt, unto the Unſcriptural Ceremonies and Conſtitutions, yet maintained by that Church; but ſuch was his Intereſt in the Hearts of the People, that his Non Conformity inſtead of being diſturbed, was indeed embraced by the greateſt part of the Town. However, at laſt, Complaints being made againſt him unto the Biſhops Courts, he was for a while, then put under the Circumſtances of a ſilenced Miniſter; in all which while, he would ſtill give his Preſence at the Publick Sermons, tho' never at the Common Prayers of the Conformable. He was now offered, not only the Liberty of his Miniſtry, but very great Preferment in it alſo, if he would but Conform to the Scrupled Rites, tho' but in one Act, and but for one Time: Nevertheleſs, his tender Soul, afraid of being thereby polluted, could not in the leaſt comply with ſuch Temptations. A Storm of many Troubles upon him, was now gathering; but it was very ſtrangely diverted! For that very Man who had occaſioned this Affliction to him, now became heartily afflicted for his own Sin in doing of it; and a ſtedfaſt, conſtant, prudent Friend, preſenting a Pair of Gloves to a Proctor of an higher Court, then appeal'd unto that Proctor without Mr. Cotton's knowledge, ſwore, In Animam Domini, that Mr. Cotton was a Conformable Man: Which things iſſued in Mr. Cotton's being reſtored unto the Exerciſe of his Miniſtry.

§ 11. The Storm of Perſecution being thus blown over, Mr. Cotton enjoyed Reſt for many Years. In which time he faithfully employed his great Abilities, not in gaining Men to this or that Party of Chriſtians, but in acquainting them with the more eſſential and ſubſtantial Points of Chriſtianity. In the ſpace of Twenty Years that he lived at Boſton, on the Lord's Days in the Afternoons, he thrice went over the Body of Divinity in a Catechiſtical way; and gave the Heads of his Diſcourſe to young Scholars, and others in the Town, that they might anſwer to his Queſtions in the Congregation; and the Anſwers he opened and applied unto the general Advantage of the Hearers. Whilſt he was in this way handling the Sixth Commandment, the Words of God which he uttered were ſo quick and powerful, that a Woman among his Hearers, who had been married ſixteen Years to a Second Husband, now in Horror of Conſcience, openly confeſſed her murdering her former Husband, by Poiſon, tho' thereby ſhe expoſed her ſelf to the Extremity of being burned. In the Forenoons of the Lord's Days, he preached over the firſt ſix Chapters in the Goſpel of John, the whole Book of Eccleſiaſtes; the Prophecy of Zephaniah, the Prophecy of Zechariah, and many other Scriptures. When the Lord's Supper was adminiſtred, which was once a Month, he handled the Eleventh Chapter in the Firſt Epiſtle to the Corinthians, and the Thirteenth Chapter in the Second Book of the Chronicles; and ſome other pertinent Paragraphs of the Bible. In his Lectures, he went through the whole Firſt and Second Epiſtles of John; the whole Book of Solomon's Song; the Parables of our Saviour to the Seventeenth Chapter of Matthew. His Houſe alſo was full of young Students; whereof ſome were ſent unto him out of Germany, ſome out of Holland, but moſt out of Cambridge: For Dr. Preſton would ſtill adviſe his near fledg'd Pupils, to go live with Mr. Cotton, that they might be fitted for Publick Service; inſomuch, that it was grown almoſt a Proverb, That Mr. Cotton was Dr. Preſton's Seaſoning Veſſel: And of thoſe that iſſued from this learned Family, famous and uſeful in their Generation, the well-known Dr. Hill was not the leaſt. Moreover, he kept a Daily Lecture in his Houſe, which, as very Reverend Ear-Witneſſes have expreſſed it, He performed with much Grace, to the Edification of the Hearers: And unto this Lecture many pious People in the Town, would conſtantly reſort, until upon a ſuſpicion of ſome Inconveniency, which might ariſe from the growing Numerouſneſs of his Auditory, he left it off. However, beſides his Ordinary Lecture every Thurſday, he preached thrice more; every Week, on the Week-Days; namely on Wedneſdays and Thurſdays, early in the Morning, and on Saturdays at Three in the Afternoon. And beſides theſe immenſe Labours, he was frequently employ'd on extraordinary Days, kept Pro Temporis & Cauſis, whereon he would ſpend ſometimes no leſs than Six Hours in the Word and Prayer. Furthermore, 'twas his Cuſtom, once a Year, to viſit his Native-Town of Derby, where he was a notable Exception to the General Rule of, A Prophet without Honour in his own Country; and by his vigilant Cares, this Town was for many Years kept ſupplied with able and faithful Miniſters of the Goſpel. Thus was this good Man a moſt indefatigable Doer of Good.

§ 12. The good Spirit of God, ſo plentifully and powerfully accompanied the Miniſtry of this excellent Man, that a great Reformation was thereby wrought in the Town of Boſton. Profaneneſs was extinguiſhed, Superſtition was abandoned, Religion was embraced and practiſed among the Body of the People; yea, the Mayor, with moſt of the Magiſtrates, were now called Puritans, and the Satanical Party was become inſignificant. As to the matter of Non-Conformity, Mr. Cotton was côme to forbear the Ceremonies enjoyned in the Church of England; for which he gave this Account. ‘The Grounds were two: Firſt, The Significacy and Efficacy put upon 'em, in the Preface to the Book of Common-Prayer: That they were neither dumb nor dark, but apt to ſtir up the dull Mind of Man, to the remembrance of his Duty to God, by ſome notable and ſpecial ſignification, whereby he may be edified; or Words to the like purpoſe. The Second was the Limitation of Church-Power, even of the higheſt Apoſtolical Commiſſion, to the Obſervation of the Commandments of Chriſt, Mat. 28. 20. Which made it appear to me utterly unlawful for any Church Power to enjoyn the Obſervation of indifferent Ceremonies, which Chriſt had not commanded: And all the Ceremonies were alike deſtitute of the Commandment of Chriſt, tho' they had been indifferent otherwiſe; which, indeed others have juſtly pleaded they were not. But this was not all: For Mr. Cotton was alſo come to believe, That Scripture Biſhops were appointed to rule no larger a Dioceſs than a particular Congregation; and that the Miniſters of the Lord, with the Keys of Eccleſiaſtical Government, are given by him to a Congregational Church. It hence came to paſs, that our Lord Jeſus Chriſt was now worſhipped in Boſton, without the uſe of the Liturgy, or of thoſe Veſtments, which are by Zanchy called Execrabiles Veſtes; yea, the Sign of the Croſs was laid aſide, not only in Baptiſm, but alſo in the Mayor's Mace, as worthy to be made a Nebuſhtan, becauſe it had been ſo much abuſed unto Idolatry. And beſides all this, there were ſome Scores of pious People in the Town, who more exactly formed themſelves into an Evangelical Church-State, by entring into Covenant with God, and with one another, To follow after the Lord, in the Purity of his Worſhip. However, the main Bent and Aim of Mr. Cotton's Miniſtry was, To preach a crucified Chriſt; and the Inhabitants of Boſton obſerved, that God bleſſed them in their Secular Concernments, remarkably the more, through his dwelling among them: For many Strangers, and ſome too, that were Gentlemen of good Quality, reſorted unto Boſton, and ſome removed their Habitations thither, on his Account; whereby the Proſperity of the place was very much promoted.

§ 13. As his Deſert of it was very high, ſo the Reſpect which he met withal was far from low. The beſt of his Hearers loved him greatly, and the worſt of them feared him, as knowing that he was a righteous and an holy Man. Yea, ſuch was the Greatneſs of his Learning, his Wiſdom, his Holineſs, that Great Men took no little notice of him. A very Honourable Perſon rode thirty Miles to ſee him; and afterwards profeſſed, That he had as lieve hear Mr. Cotton's ordinary Expoſition in his Family, as any Miniſters publick Preaching that he knew in England. Whilſt he continued in Boſton, Dr. Preſton would conſtantly come once a Year to viſit him, from his exceeding Value for Mr. Cotton's Friendſhip. Arch-Biſhop Williams did likewiſe greatly eſteem him for his incomparable Parts; and when he was Keeper of the Great Seal, he recommended Mr. Cotton to the Royal Favour. Moreover, the Earl of Dorcheſter and of Lindſey, had much regard unto him; which happened partly on this occaſion: The Earl's coming into Lincolnſhire, about the Dreining of ſome Fenny Grounds. Mr. Cotton was then in his Courſe of Preaching on Gal. 2. 20. Intending to preach on the Duties of living by Faith in Adverſity; but conſidering that theſe Noblemen were not much acquainted with Afflictions, he altered his Intentions, and ſo ordered it, that when they came to Boſton, he diſcourſed on the Duties of living by Faith in Proſperity: When the Noble-men were ſo much taken with what they heard, that they aſſured him, If at any time he ſhould want a Friend at Court, they would improve all their Intereſt for him. And when Mr. Cotton did plainly, but wiſely admoniſh them, of certain Paſtimes on the Lord's Day, whereby they gave ſome Scandal, they took it moſt kindly from him, and promiſed a Reformation. But none of the Roſes caſt on this applauded Actor, ſmothered that humble, that loving, that gracious Diſpoſition, which was his perpetual Ornament.

§ 14. At length, doubtleſs to chaſtiſe the ſeldom unchaſtiſed Evils of Diviſions, crept in among the Chriſtians of Boſton, it pleaſed the God of Heaven to deprive them of Mr. Cotton's Miniſtry, by laying a Tertian Ague upon him for a Year together. But being invited unto the Earl of Lincoln's, in purſuance to the Advice of his Phyſicians, that he ſhould change the Air, he removed thither; and thereupon he happily recovered. Nevertheleſs, by the ſame Sickneſs he then loſt his excellent Wife; who having lived with him Childleſs for Eighteen Years, went from him now, to be for ever with the Lord; whereupon he travelled further a field, unto London, and ſome other places, whereby the recovery of his loſt Health was further perfected. About a Year after this, he practically appeared in oppoſition to Tertullianiſm, by proceeding unto a Second Marriage; wherein one Mrs. Sarah Story, a vertuous Widow, very dear to his former Wife, became his Conſort; and by her he had both Sons and Daughters.

§ 15. Altho' our Lord had hitherto made the Diſcretion and Vigilancy of Mr. Thomas Leveret (afterwards a doubly honoured Elder of the Church, in another Land) the happy occaſion of diverting many Deſigns to moleſt Mr. Cotton for his Non-Conformity, yet when the Sins of the place had ripened it, for ſo dark a Vengeance of Heaven, as the removing of this eminent Light, a Storm of Perſecution could no longer be avoided. A debauch'd Fellow in the Town, who had been puniſhed by the Magiſtrates for his Debaucheries, contrived and reſolved a Revenge upon them, for their Juſtice: And having no more effectual way to vent the curſed Malice of his Heart, than by bringing them into Trouble at the High Commiſſion Court, up he goes to London, with Informations to that Court, that the Magiſtrates did not kneel at the Sacrament, nor obſerve ſome other Ceremonies by Law impoſed. When ſome that belonged unto the Court ſignified unto this Informer, that he muſt put in the Miniſter's Name: Nay, (ſaid he) the Miniſter is an honeſt Man, and never did me any wrong: But it being further preſſed upon him, that all his Complaints would be inſignificant, if the Miniſter's Name were not in them, he then did put it in: And Letters Miſſive were diſpatched incontinently, to Convent Mr. Cotton, before the infamous High Commiſſion Court. But before we relate what became of Mr. Cotton, we will enquire what became of his Accuſer. The Renowned Mr. John Rogers of Dedham, having been on his Lecture-Day, juſt before his going to preach, adviſed, that Mr. Cotton was brought into this trouble, he took occaſion to ſpeak of it in the Sermon, with juſt Lamentations for it; and among others, he uſed Words to this purpoſe: As for that Man, who hath cauſed a faithful Paſtor, to be driven from his Flock, he is a Wiſp, uſed by the Hand of God, for the ſcowring of his People: But mark the Words now ſpoken by a Miniſter of the Lord! I am verily perſwaded, the Judgments of God, will overtake the Man that has done this thing: Either he will die under an Hedge, or ſomething elſe, more than the ordinary Death of Men ſhall befal him. Now behold, how this Prediction was accompliſhed: This miſerable Man quickly after this, dy'd of the Plague, under an Hedge, in Yorkſhire; and it was a long time, e'er any could be found, that would bury him. This 'tis to turn Perſecutor.

§ 16. Mr. Cotton knowing that Letters Miſſive were out againſt him, from the High Commiſſion Court, and knowing, that if he appeared there, he could expect no other, than to be choaked with ſuch a perpetual Impriſonment, as had already murdered ſuch Men as Bates and Udal, he concealed himſelf as well as he could, from the raging Purſevants. Application was made, in the mean time, to the Earl of Dorſet, for the Fulfilment of his old Engagement unto Mr. Cotton; and the Earl did indeed intercede for him, until the Arch Biſhop of Canterbury, who would often wiſh, Oh! that I could meet with Cotton! rendred all his Interceſſions both ineffectual and unſeaſonable. Hereupon that Noble Perſon ſent word unto him, That if he had been guilty of Drunkenneſs, or Uncleanneſs, or any ſuch leſſer Fault, he could have obtained his Pardon; but inaſmuch as he had been guilty of Non-Conformity, and Puritaniſm, the Crime was unpardonable; and therefore, ſaid he, You muſt fly for your Safety. Doubtleſs, it was from ſuch unhappy Experiments, that Mr. Cotton afterwards publiſhed this Complaint: The Eccleſiaſtical Courts, are like the Courts of the High-Prieſts and Phariſees, which Solomon by a Spirit of Prophecy ſtileth, Dens of Lions, and Mountains of Leopards. And thoſe who have to do with them, have found them Markets of the Sins of the People, the Cages of Uncleanneſs, the Forges of Extortion, the Tabernacles of Bribery, and they have been contrary to the End of Civil Government, which is, The Puniſhment of Evil-Doers, and the Praiſe of them which do well.

§ 17. Mr. Cotton, therefore, now, with Supplications unto the God of Heaven for his Direction, joined Conſultations of good Men on Earth; and among others, he did with ſome of his Boſton Friends, viſit old Mr. Dod, unto whom he laid open the difficult Caſe now before him, without any Intimation of his own Inclination, whereby the Advice of that holy Man, might have been at all foreſtalled. Mr. Dod upon the whole, ſaid thus unto him: I am old Peter, and therefore muſt ſtand ſtill, and bear the Brunt; but you being young Peter, may go whether you will, and ought, being perſecuted in one City, to flee unto another. And when the Boſton Friends urged, That they would ſupport and protect Mr. Cotton, tho' privately; and that if he ſhould leave them, very many of them would be expoſed unto extreme Temptation: He readily anſwered, That the removing of a Miniſter, was like the draining of a Fiſh-pond; the good Fiſh will follow the Water, but Eels, and other Baggage Fiſh, will ſtick in the Mud. Which things when Mr. Cotton heard, he was not a little confirmed in his Inclination to leave the Land. Nor did he forget the Conceſſion of Cyprian, That a ſeaſonable Flight, is in effect, a Confeſſion of our Faith: For it is a Profeſſion that our Faith is dearer unto us, than all the Enjoyments from which we fly. But that which is further memorable in this matter, is, That as the Great God often makes his Truth to ſpread by the Sufferings of them that profeſs the Truth; Four hundred were converted by the Death of one perſecuted Cecilia: And the Scotch Biſhop would leave off burning of the Faithful, becauſe the Smoke of Hamilton infected as many as it blew upon. Thus the Silencing and Removing of Mr. Cotton, which was to him, a thing little ſhort of Martyrdom, was an occaſion of more thorough Repentance in ſundry of his bereived People, who now began to conſider, that God by taking away their Miniſter, was puniſhing their former Unfruitfulneſs under the moſt fruitful Miniſtry, which they had thus long enjoyed. And there was yet another ſuch effect of the matter, which is now to be related.

§ 18. To avoid them that thirſted for his Ruine, Mr. Cotton travelled under a chang'd Name and Garb, with a full purpoſe of going over for Holland; but when he came near the place, where he would have ſhipped himſelf, he met with a Kinſman, who vehemently and effectually perſwaded him to divert into London. Here the Lord had a Work for him to do, which he little thought of. Some Reverend and Renowned Miniſters of our Lord in that Great City, who yet had not ſeen ſufficient Reaſon to expoſe themſelves unto Perſecutions for the ſake of Non-Conformity, but look'd upon the impoſed Ceremonies as indifferent and ſufferable Trifles, and weigh'd not the Aſpect of the Second Commandment, upon all the Parts and Means of Inſtituted Worſhip, took this Opportunity for a Conference with Mr. Cotton; being perſwaded, That ſince he was no Paſſionate, but a very Judicious Man, they ſhould prevail with him rather to conform, than to leave his Work and his Land. Unto the Motion of a Conference Mr. Cotton moſt readily yielded: And firſt, all their Arguments for Conformity, together with Mr. Byfield's, Mr. Whately's, and Mr. Sprint's, were produced; all of which Mr. Cotton anſwered, unto their wonderful Satisfaction. Then he gave his Arguments for his Non-Conformity, and the Reaſons why he muſt rather forgo his Miniſtry, or at leaſt his Country, than wound his Conſcience with unlawful Compliances: The Iſſue whereof was, that inſtead of bringing Mr. Cotton back to what he had now forſaken, he brought them off altogether from what they had hitherto practiſed: Every one of thoſe eminent Perſons, Dr. Goodwin, Mr. Nye, and Mr. Davenport, now became all that he was, and at laſt left the Kingdom for their being ſo. But Mr. Cotton being now at London, there were three places which offered themſelves to him for his Retreat; Holland, Barbadoes, and New-England. As for Holland, the Character and Condition, which famous Mr. Hooker had reported thereof, took off his Intentions of removing thither. And Barbadoes had not near ſuch encouraging Circumſtances, upon the beſt Accounts, as New-England; where our Lord Jeſus Chriſt had a more than ordinary thing to be done for his Glory, in an American Wilderneſs, and ſo would ſend over a more than ordinary Man, to be employed in the doing of it. Thither, even to that Religious and Reformed Plantation, after the ſolemneſt Applications to Heaven for Direction, this great Perſon bent his Reſolutions: And Letters procured from the Church of Boſton, by Mr. Winthrop, the Governour of the Colony, had their Influence on the matter.

§ 19. The God that had carried him through the Fire of Perſecution, was now graciouſly with him in his Paſſage through the Water of the Atlantic Ocean, and he enjoyed a comfortable Voyage over the great and wide Sea. There were then three eminent Miniſters of God in the Ship; namely, Mr. Cotton, Mr. Hooker, and Mr. Stone; which glorious Triumvirate coming together, made the poor People in the Wilderneſs, at their coming, to ſay, That the God of Heaven had ſupplied them, with what would in ſome ſort anſwer their three great Neceſſities, Cotton for their Cloathing, Hooker for their Fiſhing, and Stone for their Building: But by one or other of theſe three Divines in the Ship, there was a Sermon preached every Day, all the while they were aboard, yea they had three Sermons, or Expoſitions, for the moſt part every Day: Of Mr. Cotton in the Morning, Mr. Hooker in the Afternoon, Mr. Stone after Supper in the Evening. And after they had been a Month upon the Seas, Mr. Cotton received a Mercy, which God had now for Twenty Years denied unto him, in the Birth of his Eldeſt Son, whom he called Sea-born, in the Remembrance of the never-to-be-forgotten Bleſſings, which he thus enjoyed upon the Seas. But at the end of Seven Weeks they arrived at New-England, September 3. in the Year 1633. Where he put a-ſhore at New-Boſton, which in a few Years, by the Smile of God; eſpecially upon the Holy Wiſdom, Conduct, and Credit of our Mr. Cotton, upon ſome Accounts of Growth, came to exceed Old Boſton in every thing that renders a Town conſiderable. And it is remarkable, that his Arrival at New-England, was juſt after the People there, had been by ſolemn Faſting and Prayer ſeeking unto God, that inaſmuch as they had been engaging to walk with him in his Ordinances, according to his Word, he would mercifully ſend over to them, ſuch as might be Eyes unto them in the Wilderneſs, and ſtrengthen them in diſcerning and following of that Word.

§ 20. There were divers Churches gathered in the Country, before the Arrival of Mr. Cotton; but upon his Arrival, the Points of Church-

Order, were with more of Exactneſs revived, and received in them, and further obſerved in ſuch as were gathered after them. He found the whole Country in a perplexed and a divided Eſtate, as to their Civil Conſtitution, but at the Publick Deſires, preaching a Sermon on thoſe words, Hag. 2.4. Be ſtrong, O Zerubbabel, ſaith the Lord; and be ſtrong, O Joſhua, Son of Joſedech the High-Prieſt; and be ſtrong all ye People of the Land, ſaith the Lord, and work: For I am with you, ſaith the Lord of Hoſts. The good Spirit of God, by that Sermon, had a mighty Influence upon all Ranks of Men, in the Infant-Plantation; who from this time carried on their Affairs, with a new Life, Satisfaction, and Unanimity. It was then requeſted of Mr. Cotton, That he would, from the Laws wherewith God governed his ancient People, form an Abſtract of ſuch as were of a Moral and a Laſting Equity: Which he performed as acceptably as judiciouſly. But inaſmuch as very much of an Athenian Democracy, was in the Mould of the Government, by the Royal Charter, which was then acted upon, Mr. Cotton effectually recommended it unto them, that none ſhould be Electors, nor Elected therein, except ſuch as were viſible Subjects of our Lord Jeſus Chriſt, perſonally confederated in our Churches. In theſe, and many other ways, he propounded unto them, an Endeavour after a Theocracy, as near as might be, to that which was the Glory of Iſrael, the peculiar People.

But the Eccleſiaſtical Conſtitution of the Country, was that on which he employ'd his peculiar Cares; and he was one of thoſe Olive-Trees, which afforded a ſingular Meaſure of Oyl, for the Illumination of our Sanctuary.

§ 21. The Churches now had Reſt, and were edified: And there were daily added unto the Churches, thoſe that were to be ſaved. Now, tho' the poor People were fed with the Bread of Adverſity, and the Waters of Affliction, yet they counted themſelves abundantly compenſated by this, that their Eyes might ſee ſuch Teachers, as were now to be ſeen among them. The Faith and the Order in the Churches, was generally glorious, whatever little popular Confuſions, might in ſome few places eclipſe the Glory. But the warm Sun ſhine will produce a Swarm of Inſects; whilſt Matters were going on thus proſperouſly, the Cunning and Malice of Satan, to break the Proſperity of the Churches, brought in a Generation of Hypocrites, who crept in unawares, turning the Grace of our God into Laſciviouſneſs. A Company of Antinomian and Familiſtical Sectaries, were ſtrangely crouded in among our more Orthodox Planters; by the Artifices of which buſie Opinioniſts, there was a dangerous Blow given, firſt unto the Faith, and ſo unto the Peace of the Churches. In the Storm thus raiſed, it is incredible what Obloquy came to be caſt upon Mr. Cotton, as if he had been the Patron of theſe Deſtroyers; merely becauſe they willing to have a great Perſon in admiration, becauſe of advantage, falſly uſed the Name of this great Perſon, by the Credit thereof to diſſeminate and diſſemble their Errors; and becauſe the chief of them in their private Conferences with him, would make ſuch fallacious Profeſſion of Goſpel-Truths, that his Chriſtian and abuſed Charity, would not permit him to be ſo haſty as many others were, in Cenſuring of them. However, the Report given of Mr. Cotton on this occaſion, by one Baily, a Scotchman, in a moſt ſcandalous Pamphlet, called, A Diſſwaſive, written to caſt an Odium on the Churches of New-England, by vilifying him, that was one of their moſt eminent Servants, are moſt horrid Injuries: For there being upon the Encouragement of the Succeſs which the old Nicene, Conſtantinopolitan, Epheſine, and Chalcedonian Councils had, in the extinguiſhing of ſeveral ſucceſſive Hereſies, a Council now called at Cambridge, Mr. Cotton, after ſome Debates with the Reverend Aſſembly, upon ſome controverted Points of Juſtification, moſt vigorouſly joined with the other Miniſters of the Country, in teſtifying againſt the hateful Doctrines, whereby the Churches had been troubled. Indeed there did happen Paroxiſms in this Hour of Temptation, between Mr. Cotton, and ſome other zealous and worthy Perſons, which tho' they did not amount unto the heat and heighth of thoſe that happened between Chryſoſtom and Epiphanius, or between Hierom and Ruffinus, yet they inclined him to meditate a Removal into another Colony. But a certain ſcandalous Writer, having publickly reproached Mr. Cotton, with his former Inclination to Remove, there was thereby provoked his publick and patient Anſwer; which being a ſummery Narrative of this whole Buſineſs, I ſhall here tranſcribe it.

'There was a Generation of Familiſts in our own, and other Towns, who under pretence of holding forth what I had taught, touching Union with Chriſt, and evidencing that Union, did ſecretly vent ſundry and dangerous Errors and Hereſies, denying all inherent Righteouſneſs, and all evidencing of a good Eſtate thereby in any ſort, and ſome of them alſo denying the Immortality of the Soul, and the Reſurrection of the Body. When they were queſtioned by ſome Brethren about thoſe things, they carried it, as if they had held forth nothing, but what they had received from me: Whereof, when I was adviſed to clear my ſelf, I publickly preached againſt thoſe Errors. Then ſaid the Brethren to the Erring Party, See your Teacher declares himſelf clearly to differ from you. No matter (ſay the other) what he ſaith in publick, we underſtand him otherwiſe, and we know what he ſaith to us in private. Yea, and I my ſelf could not eaſily believe, that thoſe Erring Brethren and Siſters, were ſo corrupt in their Judgments as they were reported; they ſeeming to me forward Chriſtians, and utterly denying any ſuch Tenents, or any thing elſe, but what they received from my ſelf. All which bred in ſundry of the Country, a Jealouſie that I was in ſecret a Fomentor of the Spirit of Familiſm, if not leavened my ſelf that way. Which I diſcerning, it wrought in me Thoughts (as it did in many other ſincerely and Godly Brethren of our Church) not of a Separation from the Churches, but of a Removal to Newhaven, as being better known to the Paſtor, and ſome others there, than to ſuch as were at that time jealous of me here. The true Ground whereof was an Inward Loathneſs to be Troubleſome unto Godly Minds, and a Fear of the Unprofitableneſs of my Miniſtry there, where my way was ſuſpected to be Doubtful and Dangerous. I choſe therefore rather to meditate a Silent Departure in Peace, than by tarrying here, to make way for the breaking forth of Temptations. But when, at the Synod, I had diſcovered the Corruption of the Judgment of the Erring Brethren, and ſaw their Fraudulent Pretence of holding forth no other, but what they received from me (when as indeed they plead for Groſs Errors contrary unto my Judgment) I thereupon did bear Witneſs againſt them; and when in a private Conference with ſome Chief Magiſtrates and Elders, I perceived, that my Removal upon ſuch Differences was unwelcome to them, and that ſuch Points need not to occaſion any Diſtance (neither in Place nor in Heart) amongſt Brethren, I then reſted ſatisfied in my abode amongſt them, and ſo have continued, by the Grace of Chriſt unto this Day.

'Tis true, ſuch was Mr. Cotton's Holy Igenuity, that when he perceived the Advantage, which Erroneous and Heretical Perſons in his Church, had from his abuſed Charity, taken to ſpread their Dangerous Opinions, before he was aware of them, he did publickly ſometimes with Tears bewail it, That the Enemy had ſown ſo many Tares whilſt he had been aſleep. Nevertheleſs 'tis as true, that nothing ever could be Baſer than the Diſingenuity of thoſe Pamphletteers, who took Advantage hence, to catch theſe Tears in their Venemous Ink-horns, and employ them for ſo many Blots upon the Memory of a Righteous Man, worthy to be had in Everlaſting Remembrance.

§ 22. When the Virulent and Violent Edwards had been after a moſt Unchriſtian manner, beſpattering the Excellent Burroughs, That Reviled Saint, in his Anſwer, had that Paſſage; The Extreme Eagerneſs of ſome to aſperſe our Names, makes us to think, that God hath made more uſe of our Names, than we were aware of, ——We ſee by their Anger even almoſt to Madneſs, bent that way, that they had little Hope, to prevail with all their Argument againſt the Cauſe we profeſs, till they could get down our Eſteem (ſuch as it was) in the Hearts of the People —— But our Names are not in the Power of their Tongues and Pens; they are in the Hands of God, who will preſerve them ſo far, as he hath uſe of them; and further, we ſhall have no uſe of them our ſelves. That Bitter Spirit in Baily, muſt for ſuch Cauſes expoſe Name of the Incomparable Cotton, unto Irreparable Injuries: For, from the meer Hearſays of that Uncharitable Writer, haſtily Publiſhed unto the World, the Learned and Worthy, Dr. Hoornbeck, not much leſs againſt the Rules of Charity, Printed a Short Account of Mr. Cotton, whereof an Ingenious Author truly ſays, There was in it, Quot fere Verba, tot Errores famoſiſſimi; neque tantum quot Capita, tot Carpenda, ſed quot fere Sententiarum punctula, tot Diſpungenda. That Scandalous Account, it is pity it ſhould be Read in Engliſh, and greater pity that ever that Reverend Perſon ſhould make it be Read in Latin; but this it was; Cottonus, horrore Ordinis Epiſcopalis, in Aliud Extremum prolapſus, Omnia plebi abſque Vinculo Eccleſiarum concedebat.—— Cottonus iſte, primum in Anglia, alterius Longe Sententiæ fuerat, unde, & plurimorum Errorum Hereſiumque Reus, Maximus Ordinis iſtius, vel potius ATAXIAS, promotor extitit; habuitque ſecum, quemadmodum Montanus olim Maximillam, Suam Hutchinſonam, de quavari & prodigioſa multa referunt. From theſe miſerable Hiſtorians, who would Imagine what a Slur has been abroad caſt upon the Name of as Holy, as Learned as Orthodox, and Eminent a Servant of our Lord, in his Reformed Churches, as was known in his Age! Among the reſt, it is particularly obſervable how a Laborious and Ingenious Foreigner, in his Bibliotheca Anglorum Theologica, having in his Index mentioned a Book of this our Mr. Cotton's, under the Style of Johannis Cottoni, Via Vitæ, Liber Utiliſſimus, preſently adds, Alius Johannes Cottonus malæ Notæ Homo: Whereas 'twas only by the Miſrepreſentations of contentious and unadviſed Men, that John Cotton, the Experimental Author of ſuch an uſeful Book, muſt be branded with a Note of Infamy. But if the Reader will deal juſtly, he muſt join theſe Groſs Calumnies upon Cotton, with the Fables of Luthers Devil, Zuinglius's Dreams, Calvin's Brands, and Junius's Cloven Foot. If Hoornbeck ever ſaw Cotton's mild, but full Reply to Baily, which as the Good Spirited Beverly ſays, would have been eſteemed a ſufficient Refutation of all theſe wretched Slanders, Niſi Fratrum quorundam aures erunt ad veritatem, tanquam Aſpidum, obturatæ, 'tis impoſſible to excuſe his wrongful Dealings with a Venerable Miniſter of our Lord! Pray, Sir, charge not our Cotton with an Horror Ordinis Epiſcopalis; until you have chaſtiſed your Friend Honorius Reggius, that is Georgius Hornius, for telling us, as Voetius quotes it; Multorum Animos Subiit Recordatio illius, quod Venerabilis Beza, non ſine Prophetiæ Spiritu, olim reſcripſit Knoxo, Eccleſiæ Scoticæ Reformatori: Sicut Epiſcopi Papatum pepererunt, ita Oculis pæne ipſis jam cernitur, Pſuedo Epiſcopos, papatus Reliquias, Epicureiſmum Terris Invecturos. Atque hæc præmittere Viſum, ut eo manifeſtius eſſet Britanniam diutius Epiſcopos non potuiſſe ferre, niſi in Papiſmum & Atheiſmum Labi vellet. Charge not our Cotton with an Omnia Plebi abſque Vinculo Aliarum Eccleſiarum concedebat; until, beſides the whole Scope and Scheme of his Eccleſiaſtical Writings, which allow no more ſtill unto the Fraternity, than Parker, Ames, Cartwright; and advance no other than that Ariſtocraſie, that Beza, Zanchy, Whitaker, Bucer, and Blondel pleaded for; you have better conſtrued his Words in his Golden Preface to Norton's Anſwer unto the Sylloge Quæſtionum, Neque nos Regimen proprie dictum alibi quam penes Presbyteres ſtabiliendum Cupimus: Convenimus ambo in Subjecto Regiminis Eccleſiaſtici: Convenimus etiam in Regula Regiminis, ut Adminiſtrentur Omnia Juxta Canonem Sacrarum Scriptarum: Convenimus etiam in Fine Regiminis, ut Omnia Tranſigantur ad Edificationem Eccleſiæ, non ad Pompam aut Luxum Secularem: Synodos nos, una Vobiſcum, cum opus fuerit, & Suſcipimus & veneramur. Quantillum eſt, quod Reſtat, quod Diſtat! Actus Regiminis, quos vos a Synodis peragi Velletis, eos a Synodis porrigi Eccleſiis, & ab Eccleſiis, ex Synodali DIORTHOSEI peragi peteremus. Charge not our Cotton with an ATAXIAS Promotor Extitit, until you, your ſelf, Doctor, have revoked your own two Conceſſions, which are all the Ataxies that ever could, with ſo much as the leaſt Pretence, be imputed unto this Renowned Perſon; Eccleſia particularis quælibet Subjectum eſt Adæquatum & proprium plenæ poteſtatis Eccleſiaſticæ; nec Congrue dicitur ejus Synodo Dependentia, And, Neque enim Synodi in alias Eccleſias poteſtatem habent Imperantem, quæ Superiorum eſt, in Inferiores ſibi Subditos; Non-Communionis Sententia Poteſtatem Summam denotat. As for the Cottonus Plurimorum Errorum Hæreſiumque Reus, were Old Auſtin alive, he would have charged no leſs a Crime than that of Sacriledge upon the Man, that thus without all Colour, ſhould Rob the Church of a Name which would juſtly be Dear unto it; for as the Great Caryl hath expreſſed it, The Name of Cotton is as an Ointment poured forth. But for the Top of all theſe Calumnies, Cottoni Hutchinſona, inſtead of a Reſemblance to Montani Maximilla, the truer Compariſon would have been, Mulier iſta, quæ per Calumniam notiſſimam Objiciebatur Athanaſio; All the Favour which that Propheteſs of Thyatira had from this Angelical Man, was the ſame, that the provoked Paul ſhow'd unto the Pythoniſs. In fine, The Hiſtories which the World has had of the New-Engliſh Churches, under the Influence of Mr. Cotton, I have ſometimes thought much of a piece, with what we have in the Old Hiſtories of Lyſimachus; That when a Leprous, a Scabby ſort of a People were driven out of Egypt into the Wilderneſs, there was a certain Man call'd Moſes, who counſelled them to march on in a Body, till they came to ſome Good Soyl. This Moſes commanded them to be kind unto no Man; To give Bad Advice rather than Good, upon all Occaſions; and to deſtroy as many Temples as they could find; So, after much Travel and Trouble, they came to a Fruitful Soyl, where they did all the Miſchief that Moſes had recommended and built a City, which was at firſt called Hieroſyla, from the ſpoiling of the Temples: But afterwards, to ſhun the Diſgrace of the Occaſion, they changed it into Hieroſolyme, and bore the Name of Hieroſolymitans. But thus muſt a Bad Report, as well as a Good Report, follow ſuch a Man as Mr. Cotton, whoſe only Fault after all, was that, with which that memorable Ancient Nazienzen was taxed ſometimes; namely, the Fault of Manſuetude.

§ 23. Theſe Clouds being thus happily blown over, the reſt of his Days were ſpent in a more ſettled Peace; and Mr. Cotton's growing and ſpreading Fame, like Joſeph's Bough, Ran over the Wall of the Anlantic Ocean, unto ſuch a Degree, that in the Year 1641. Some Great Perſons in England, were intending to have ſent over a Ship on purpoſe to fetch him over, for the ſake of the Service, that ſuch a Man as He, might then do to the Church of God, then Travelling in the Nation. But although their Doubt of his Willingneſs to Remove, cauſed them to forbear that Method of obtaining him, yet the Principal Members in both Houſes of Parliament wrote unto him, with an Importunity for his Return into England; which had prevailed with him, if the Diſmal Showres of Blood, quickly after breaking upon the Nation, had not made ſuch Affiictive Impreſſions upon him, as to prevent his purpoſe. He continued therefore in Boſton unto his Dying Day; counting it a great Favour of Heaven unto him, that he was delivered from the Unſettledneſs of Habitation, which was not among the leaſt of the Calamities that Exerciſed the Apoſtles of our Lord. Nineteen Years and odd Months he ſpent in this Place, doing of Good publickly and privately, unto all ſorts of Men, as it became a Good Man full of Faith, and of the Holy Ghoſt. Here in an Expoſitory way, he went over the Old Teſtament once, and a Second Time as far as the Thirtieth Chapter of Iſaiah; and the whole New Teſtament once, and a Second time, as far as the Eleventh Chapter to the Hebrews. Upon Lord's-Days and Lecture-Days, he Preached thorow the Acts of the Apoſtles; the Propheſies of Haggai and Zechariah; the Books of Ezra, the Revelation, Eccleſiaſtes, Canticles, Second and Third Epiſtles of John, the Epiſtle to Titus, both Epiſtles to Timothy; the Epiſtle to the Romans; with innumerable other Scriptures on Incidental Occaſions. Though he had alſo the moſt Remarkable Faculty, perhaps of any Man living, to Meet every Remarkable Occaſion, with pertinent Reflections, whatever Text he were upon, without ever wandring out of ſight from his Text: And it is poſſible there might ſometimes be a particular Operation of Providence, to make the Works and Words of God meet in the Miniſtry of his Holy Servant. But thus did he Abound in the Works of the Lord!

§ 24. At length, upon Deſire, going to preach a Sermon at Cambridge, (which he did, on Iſa. 54. 13. Thy Children ſhall be all taught of the Lord; and from thence gave many Excellent Councils unto the Students of the College there) he took Wet in his Paſſage over the Ferry; but he preſently felt the Effect of it, by the failing of his Voice in Sermon-time; which ever until now, had been a clear, neat, audible Voice, and eaſily heard in the moſt Capacious Auditory. Being found ſo doing, as it had often been his declared Wiſh, That he might not out live his Work! (ſaying upon higher Principles than once Curius Dentatus did, Malle eſſe ſe Mortuum, quàm Vivere; that he had rather Be Dead, than Live Dead: And with Seneca, Ultimum malorum eſt ex vivorum Numero exire, ante quam moriaris:) His Illneſs went on to an Inflammation in his Lungs; from whence he grew ſomewhat Aſthmatical; but there was a Complication of other Scorbutic Affects, which put him under many Symptoms of his approaching End. On the Eighteenth of November, he took in Courſe for his Text, the Four laſt Verſes of the Second Epiſtle to Timothy, giving this Reaſon for his inſiſting on ſo many Verſes at once, Becauſe elſe (he ſaid) I ſhall not Live to make an End of this Epiſtle; but he chiefly inſiſted on thoſe Words, Grace be with you all. Upon the Lord's Day following, he preached his laſt Sermon on Joh. 1. 14. About that Glory of the Lord Jeſus Chriſt, from the Faith to the Sight whereof, he was now haſtening. After this in that Study, which had been Perfumed with many ſuch Days before, he now ſpent a Day in Secret Humiliations and Supplications, before the Lord; ſeeking the Special Aſſiſtances of the Holy Spirit, for the Great Work of Dying, that was now before him. What Glorious Tranſactions might one have heard paſſing between the Lord Jeſus Chriſt, and an Excellent Servant of his, now coming unto him, if he could have had an Hearing Place behind the Hangings of the Chamber, in ſuch a Day! But having finiſhed the Duties of the Day, he took his Leave of his Beloved Study, ſaying to his Conſort, I ſhall go into that Room no more! And he had all along Preſages in his Heart, that God would by his Preſent Sickneſs, give him an Entrance into the Everlaſting Kingdom of the Lord Jeſus Chriſt. Wherefore, Setting his Houſe in Order, he was now ſo far from unwilling to Receive the Mercy-Stroke of Death, as that he was deſirous to be with him, With whom to be, is by far the beſt of all. And athough the chief Ground of his Readineſs to be gone, was from the unutterably Sweet and Rich Entertainments, which he did by Foretaſt, as well as by Promiſe, know that the Lord had reſerved in the Heavenly Regions for him, yet he ſaid, it contributed unto this Readineſs in him, when he conſider'd the Saints, whoſe Company and Communion he was going unto; particularly Perkins, Ames, Preſton, Hilderſham, Dod, and others, which had been peculiarly Dear unto himſelf; beſides the Reſt, in that General Aſſembly.

§ 25. While he thus lay ſick, the Magiſtrates, the Miniſters of the Country, and Chriſtians of all ſorts, reſorted unto him, as unto a Publick Father, full of ſad Apprehenſioons, at the withdraw of ſuch a Publick Bleſſing; and the Gracious Words that proceeded out of his Mouth, while he had Strength to utter the profitable Conceptions of his Mind, cauſed them to reckon theſe their Viſits the Gainfuleſt that ever they had made. Among others, the then Preſident of the Colledge, with many Tears, deſired of Mr. Cotton before his Departure, to beſtow his Bleſſing on him; ſaying, I know in my Heart, they whom you Bleſs ſhall be bleſſed. And not long before his Death, he ſent for the Elders of the Church, whereof he himſelf was alſo an Elder; who having, according to the Apoſtolical Direction, pray'd over him, he exhorted them to Feed the Flock over which they were Overſeers, and encreaſe their Watch againſt thoſe Declenſions which he ſaw the Profeſſors of Religion falling into: Adding, I have now through Grace, been more than Forty Years a Servant unto the Lord Jeſus Chriſt, and have ever ſouud him a good Maſter. When his Collegue Mr. Wilſon, took his Leave of him with a Wiſh, that God would lift up the Light of his Countenance upon him, he inſtantly replied, God hath done it already, Brother! He then called for his Children, with whom he left the Gracious Covenant of God, as their never Failing Portion: And now deſired, that he might be left Private the reſt of his Minutes, for the more Freedom of his Applications unto the Lord. So lying Speechleſs a few Hours, he breathed his Bleſſed Soul into the Hands of his Heavenly Lord; on the Twenty third of December 1652. entring on the Sixty Eighth Year of his own Age: And on the Day, yea at the Hour, of his conſtant Weekly Labours in the Lecture, wherein he had been ſo long ſerviceable, even to all the Churches of New-England. Upon Tueſday the Twenty Eighth of December, he was moſt Honourably Interred, with a moſt numerous Concourſe of People, and the moſt Grievous and Solemn Funeral that was ever known perhaps upon the American Strand; and the Lectures in his Church, the whole Winter following, performed by the Neighbouring Miniſters, were but ſo many Funeral Sermons upon the Death and Worth of this Extraordinary Perſon: Among which, the Firſt, I think, was preached by Mr. Richard Mather, who gave unto the bereaved Church of Boſton this great Character of their Incomparable Cotton, Let us pray, that God would raiſe up ſome Eleazar to ſucceed this Aaron: But you can hardly expect, that ſo large a Portion of the Spirit of God ſhould dwell in any one, as dwelt in this Bleſſed Man! And generally in the other Churches through the Country, the Expiration of this General Bleſſing to them all, did produce Funeral Sermons full of Honour and Sorrow; even as many Miles above an Hundred, as Newhaven was diſtant from the Maſſachuſet-Bay, when the Tidings of Mr. Cotton's Deceaſe arrived there, Mr. Davenport with many Tears bewailed it, in a Publick Diſcourſe on that in 2 Sam. 1. 26. I am diſtreſſed for thee, my Brother Jonathan, very pleaſant haſt thou been unto me. Yea, they ſpeak of Mr. Cotton in their Lamentations to this Day!

It is a memorable Saying of Algazel, In quo Lumen Religionis & Devotionis, Fumus generatus ex Lumine Scientiæ non extinguit, ille perfectus eſt: Sed quis eſt hic, ut adoremus eum? Reader, I will ſhow thee ſuch a Man; One in whom the Light of Learning accompanied the Fire of Goodneſs, met in an High Degree: But thou ſhalt Adore none but the Lord Jeſus Chriſt, who made him ſuch a Man.

§ 26. How vaſt a Treaſure of Learning was laid in the Grave, which was opened on this Occaſion, can ſcarce Credibly and Sufficiently be related. Mr. Cotton was, indeed, a moſt Univerſal Scholar, and a Living Syſtem of the Liberal Arts, and a Walking Library. It would be endleſs to recite all his particular Accompliſhments, but only Three Articles of Obſervation ſhall be offered. Firſt, For his Grammar, he had a very ſingular Skill in thoſe Three Languages, the Knowledge whereof was the Inſcription on the Croſs of our Saviour, propoſed unto the Perpetual Uſe of his Church. The Hebrew he underſtood ſo exactly, and ſo readily, that he was able to Diſcourſe in it. In the Greek he was a Critick, ſo Accurate and ſo well Verſed, that he need not, like Auſtin, to have ſtudied it in his Reduced Age. Thus, if many of the Ancients committed groſs Miſtakes in their Interpretations of the Scriptures, through their want of Skill in the Originals, Mr. Cotton was better qualified for an Interpreter. He both wrote and ſpoke Latin alſo with great Facility; and with a moſt Ciceronian Elegancy, Exemplified in one Publiſhed Compoſure. Next, for his Logic, he was compleatly furniſhed therewith to encounter the ſubtileſt Adverſary of the Truth. But although he had been Educated in the Peripatetick way, yet like the other Puritans of thoſe times, he rather affected the Ramæan Diſcipline; and choſe to follow the Methods of that Excellent Ramus, who like Juſtin of old, was not only a Philoſopher, but a Chriſtian, and a Martyr alſo; rather than the more Empty, Trifling, Altercative Notions, to which the Works of the Pagan Ariſtotle derived unto us, through the Mangling Hands of the Apoſtate Porphyrie, have diſpoſed his Diſciples. Laſtly, for his Theologie, There 'twas that he had his Greateſt Extraordinarineſs, and moſt of all, his Textual Divinity. His Abilities to Epound the Scriptures, cauſed him to be Admired by the Ableſt of his Hearers. Although his Incomparable Modeſty would not permit him to ſpeak any more than the Leaſt of Himſelf, yet unto a private Friend he hath ſaid, That he knew not of any Difficult Place in all the whole Bible, which he had not weighed, ſomewhat unto Satisfaction. And hence, though he ordinarily beſtowed much pains upon his Publick Sermons, yet he hath ſometimes Preached moſt Admirably, without any Warning at all; and a New Note upon a Text before him, occurring to his mind, but juſt as he was going into the Aſſembly, has taken up his Diſcourſe for that Hour, ſo Pertinently and Judiciouſly, that the moſt Critical of his Auditors, imagined nothing Extemporaneous. Indeed his Library was vaſt, and vaſt was his Acquaintance with it; but although amongſt his Readings, he had given a Special Room unto the Fathers, and unto the School-men, yet at laſt, he preferr'd one Calvin above them all. If Eraſmus, when offered a Biſhoprick to write againſt Luther, could anſwer, There was more Divinity in a Page of Luther, than in all Thomas Aquinas; 'Tis no wonder that Salmaſius could ſo Venerate Calvin, as to ſay, That he had rather be the Author of that One Book, The Inſtitutions written by Calvin, than have written all that was ever done by Grotius. Even ſuch a Calviniſt was our Cotton! Said he, I have read the Fathers and the School-men, and Calvin too; but I find, That he that has Calvin has 'em all. And being asked, why in his Latter Days he indulged Nocturnal Studies more than formerly, he pleaſantly replied, Becauſe I love to ſweeten my mouth with a piece of Calvin before I go to ſleep.

§ 27. Indeed in his Common Preaching, he did as Baſil reports of Ephrem Syrus, Plurimum diſtare a Mundana Sapientia; and though he were a Great Scholar, yet he did Conſcientiouſly forbear making to the Common People any Oſtentation of it. He had the Art of concealing his Art; and thought with Sohnius, Non minus eſt Virtus Populariter quam Argute Loqui, and Mr. Dod, That Latin for the moſt part was Fleſh in a Sermon. Accordingly, when he was Handling the Deepeſt Subjects, a Speech of that Import was frequent with him, I deſire to ſpeak ſo, as to be underſtood by the meaneſt Capacity! And he would ſometimes give the ſame Reaſon for it, which the Great Auſtin gave, If I Preach more Scholaſtically, then only the Learned, and not the Unlearned, can ſo underſtand as to profit by me; but if I Preach plainly, then both Learned and Unlearned will underſtand me, and ſo I ſhall profit all. When a Golden Key of Oratory would not ſo well open a Myſtery of Chriſtianity, he made no ſtick to take an Iron One, that ſhould be leſs Rhetorical. You ſhould hear few Terms of Art, few Latinities, no Exotic or Obſelete Phraſes, obſcuring of the Truths, which he was to bring unto the People of God. Neverthleſs his more Judicious and Obſerving Hearers, could by his moſt Untrim'd Sermons perceive that he was a man of more than Ordinary Abilities. Hence when a Dutchman of Great Learning, heard Mr. Cotton Preach at Boſton, in England, he profeſſed, That he never in his Life ſaw ſuch a Conjunction of Learning and Plainneſs, as there was in the Preaching of this worthy Man. The Glory of God, and not his own Glory, was that at which he aimed in his Labours; for which cauſe, at the end of his Notes, he ſtill inſerted that Clauſe, Tibi Domine: Or, For thy Glory, O God! For his Delivery, though it were not like Farels, Noiſy and Thundring, yet it had in it a very awful Majeſty, ſet off with a Natural and Becoming Motion of his Right Hand; and the Lord was in the Still Voice at ſuch a Rate, that Mr. Wilſon would ſay, Mr. Cotton Preaches with ſuch Authority, Demonſtration, and Life, that methinks, when he preaches out of any Prophet, or Apoſtle, I hear not him; I hear that very Prophet and Apoſtle; yea, I hear the Lord Jeſus Chriſt himſelf ſpeaking in my Heart. And the Succeſs which God gave to theſe plain Labours of his faithful, humble, diligent Servant, was beyond what moſt Miniſters in the Country ever did experience: There have been few that have ſeen ſo many and mighty Effects, given to the Travels of their Souls.

§ 28. He was even from his Youth to his Age, an indefatigable Student, under the Conſcience of the Apoſtolical Precept, Be not ſlothful in Buſineſs, but fervent in Spirit ſerving the Lord. He was careful to redeem his Hours, as well as his Days; and might lay claim to that Character of the bleſſed Martyr, Sparing of Sleep, more ſparing of Words, but moſt ſparing of Time. If any came to Viſit him, he would be very Civil to 'em, having learn'd it as his Duty, To uſe all Gentleneſs towards all Men: And yet he would often ſay with ſome regret, after the departure of a Viſitant, I had rather have given this Man an handful of Money, than have been kept thus long out of my Study: Reckoning with Pliny, the Time not ſpent in Study, for the moſt part, ſweel'd away. For which cauſe he went not much abroad; but he judged ordinarily that more Benefit was obtain'd, according to the Advice of the Wiſe King, by converſing with the Dead [in Books], than with the Living [in Talks:] And that needleſs Viſits do commonly unframe our Spirits, and perhaps diſturb our Comforts. He was an early Riſer, taking the Morning for the Muſes; and in his latter Days forbearing a Supper, he turn'd his former Supping time, into a Reading, a Thinking, a Praying time. Twelve Hours in a Day he commonly ſtudied, and would call that a Scholar's Day; reſolving rather to wear out with Uſing, than with Ruſting. In truth, had he not been of an healthy and hearty Conſtitution, and had he not made a careful, tho' not curious Diet ſerve him, inſtead of an Hippocrates, his continued Labour muſt have made his Life, as well as his Labour, to have been but of a ſhort continuance. And, indeed, the Work which lay upon him, could not have been performed, without a Labour more than ordinary. For beſides his conſtant Preaching, more than once every Week, many Caſes were brought unto him far and near, in reſolving whereof, as he took much time, ſo he did much good, being a moſt excellent Caſuiſt. He was likewiſe very deeply concerned in peaceable and effectual Diſquiſitions of the Controverſies about Church-Government, then agitated in the Church of God. And tho' he chiefly gave himſelf to Reading, and Doctrine, and Exhortation, depending much on the Ruling Elders to inform him, concerning the State of his particular Flock, that he might the better order himſelf in the Word and Prayer, yet he found his Church-Work, in this regard alſo, to call for no little Painfulneſs, Watchfulneſs, and Faithfulneſs.

§ 29. He was one ſo clothed with Humility, that according to the Emphaſis of the Apoſtolical Direction, by this Livery his Relation as a Diſciple to the lowly Jeſus, was notably diſcovered; and hence he was patient and peaceable, even to a Proverb. He had a more than common Excellency in that cool Spirit, which the Oracles of Wiſdom deſcribe, as the excellent Spirit in the Man of Underſtanding; and therefore Mr. Norton would parallel him, with Moſes among the Patriarchs, with Melancthon among the Reformers. He was rather exceſſive than defective in Self-denial, and had the Nimia Humilitas, which Luther ſometimes blamed in Staupicius: Yea, he was at laſt himſelf ſenſible, that ſome fell very deep into the Sin of Corah, through his extreme Forbearance, in matters relating to his own juſt Rights in the Church of God. He has, to a Judicious Friend, thus expreſſed himſelf, Angry Men have an advantage above me; the People dare not ſet themſelves againſt ſuch Men, becauſe they know it wont be born; but ſome care not what they ſay or do about me, becauſe they know I wont be angry with them again. One would have thought the Ingenuity of ſuch a Spirit ſhould have broke the Hearts of Men, that had indeed the Hearts of Men in them; yea, that the hardeſt Flints would have been broken, as is uſual, upon ſuch a ſoft Bag of Cotton! But alas! he found it otherwiſe, even among ſome who pretended unto high Attainments in Chriſtianity. Once particularly, an humorous and imperious Brother, following Mr. Cotton home to his Houſe, after his Publick Labours, inſtead of the grateful Reſpects with which thoſe Holy Labours were to have been encouraged, rudely told him, That his Miniſtry was become generally, either dark, or flat: Whereto this meek Man, very mildly and gravely, made only this Anſwer: Both, Brother, it may be, both: Let me have your Prayers that it may be otherwiſe. But it is remarkable, that the Man ſick thus of wanton Singularities, afterwards died of thoſe damnable Hereſies, for which he was deſervedly Excommunicated. Another time, when Mr. Cotton had modeſtly replied unto one that would much Talk and Crack of his Inſight into the Revelations: Brother, I muſt confeſs my ſelf to want Light in thoſe Myſteries. The Man went home, and ſent him a Pound of Candles: Upon which Action this good Man beſtowed only a ſilent Smile. He would not ſet the Beacon of his Great Soul on fire, at the landing of ſuch a little Cock-boat. He learned the Leſſon of Gregory, It is better, many times, to fly from an Injury by Silence, than to overcome it by Replying: And he uſed that Practice of Grynæus, To Revenge Wrongs by Chriſtian Taciturnity.

I think, I may not omit, on this occaſion, to tranſcribe a remarkable paſſage, which that good Man, Mr. Flavel, reports, in a Sermon on Goſpel-Unity. His Words are theſe:

‘ A Company of vain wicked Men, having ‘ inflamed their Blood in a Tavern at Boſton,
‘ and ſeeing that Reverend, Meek, and Holy ‘ Mini-

‘Miniſter of Chriſt, Mr. Cotton, coming along the Street, one of them tells his Companion, I'll go, (ſaith he) and put a Trick upon Old Cotton. Down he goes, and croſſing his way, whiſpers theſe Words into his Ear, Cotton (ſaid he) thou art an old Fool. Mr. Cotton replied, I confeſs I am ſo: The Lord make both me and thee wiſer than we are, even wiſe unto Salvation. He relates this paſſage to his wicked Companions, which caſt a great Damp upon their Sports, in the midſt of a Frolick.

And it may paſs for a Branch of the ſame Temper in him, that he extremely hated all Allotrio-Epiſcopacy: And tho' he knew as practically as moſt Men in the World, That we have a Call to do good, as often as we have Power and Occaſion; yet he was ſlow of apprehending any Occaſion at all, tho' he might have had never ſo much Power to meddle for Good, any where, but within the Sphere of his own proper Calling. As he underſtood that Leontius blamed Conſtantine, for interpoſing too far in Eccleſiaſtical Affairs, thus Mr. Cotton, on the other ſide, had a great Averſion from engaging in any Civil ones. He would Religiouſly decline taking into his Cogniſance all Civil Controverſies, or Umpirages, and whatever looked heterogeneous to the Calling of one, whoſe whole Buſineſs 'twas to feed the Flock of God. Nevertheleſs, in the Things of God, of Chriſt, of Conſcience, his condeſcending Temper did not hinder him from the moſt immovable Reſolution. He would not ſo follow Peace with all Men, as to abandon or prejudice, one Jot, the Intereſts of Holineſs.

§ 30. His Command over his own Spirit, was particularly obſervable in his Government of his Family, where he would never correct any thing in a Paſſion; but firſt, with much deliberation ſhew what Rule in the Holy Word of God, had been violated, by the Fault lately committed. He was indeed one that ruled well his own Houſe. He therein Morning and Evening read a Chapter, with a little Applicatory Expoſition, before and after which he made a Prayer; but he was very ſhort in all, accounting as Mr. Dod, Mr. Bains, and other great Saints did before him, That it was a thing inconvenient many ways to be tedious in Family-Duties. He alſo read conſtantly a Portion of the Scripture alone, and he prayed over what he read: Pray'd I ſay; for he was very much in Prayer, a very Man of Prayer; he would rarely ſit down to ſtudy, without a Prayer over it, referring to the Preſence of God accompanying what he did. It was the Advice of the Ancient, Si vis eſſe Semper cum Deo, Semper Ora, Semper Lege: And agreeably hereunto, Mr. Cotton might ſay with David, Lord, I am ſtill with thee. But he that was with God all the Week, was more intimately with him on his own Day, the chief Day of the Week, which he obſerved moſt Conſcientiouſly. The Sabbath he began the Evening before: For which keeping of the Sabbath from Evening to Evening, he wrote Arguments before his coming to New-England: And I ſuppoſe, 'twas from his Reaſon and Practice, that the Chriſtians of New-England have generally done ſo too. When that Evening arriv'd, he was uſually larger in his Expoſition in his Family, than at other times: He then Catechiſed his Children and Servants, and prayed with them, and ſang a Pſalm; from thence he retired unto Study and ſecret Prayer, till the time of his going unto his Repoſe. The next Morning, after his uſual Family-Worſhip, he betook himſelf to the Devotions of his Retirements, and ſo unto the Publick. From thence towards Noon, he repaired again to the like Devotions, not permitting the Interruption of any other Dinner, than that of a ſmall Repaſt carried up unto him. Then to the Publick, once more: From whence returning, his firſt Work was Cloſet-Prayer, then Prayer with Repetitions of the Sermons in the Family. After Supper he ſtill ſang a Pſalm; which he would conclude with uplifted Eyes and Hands, uttering this Doxology, —Bleſſed be God in Chriſt our Saviour! Laſt of all, juſt before his going to Sleep, he would once again go into his Prayerful Study, and there briefly recommended all to that God, whom he ſerved with a pure Conſcience.

But there was one point of Sabbath-keeping, about which it may not be unuſeful for me to tranſcribe a paſſage, which I find him writing to Mr. N. Rogers, in the Year 1630.

‘Studying for a Sermon upon the Sabbath-day, ſo far as it might be any weariſome Labour to Invention or Memory, I covet (when I can) willingly to prevent it; and would rather attend unto the quickning of my Heart and Affections, in the Meditation of what I am to deliver. My Reaſon is, much Reading and Invention, and Repetition of things, to commit them to Memory, is a wearineſs to the Fleſh and Spirit too; whereas the Sabbath day doth rather invite unto an holy Reſt. But yet if God's Providence have ſtraitned my time in the Week-days before, by concurrence of other Buſineſs, not to be avoided, I doubt not, but the Lord, who allowed the Prieſts to employ their Labour, in killing the Sacrifices on the Sabbath-day, will allow us alſo to labour in our Callings on the Sabbath, to prepare our Sacrifice for the People.

Theſe were his ordinary Sabbaths: But he alſo kept extraordinary ones, upon the juſt occaſions for them. He was in Faſting often, and would often keep whole Days by himſelf, wherein he would with ſolemn Humiliations and Supplications, implore the wanted Mercies of Heaven; yea, he would likewiſe by himſelf, keep whole Days of Thanksgiving unto the Lord: Beſides the many Days of this kind, which he celebrated in Publick Aſſemblies with the People of God. Thus did this Man of God continually.

§ 31. Without Liberality and Hoſpitality, he had been really as undeſerving of the Character of a Miniſter of the Goſpel, as the Sacrilegious Niggardlineſs of the People, does often endeavour to make Miniſters uncapable of anſwering that Character. But Mr. Cotton was moſt exemplary for this Vertue; wherein there are of his Children, that have alſo learned of him. The Stranger and the Needy were ſtill entertained at his Table, Epiſcopaliter & Benigne, as was the Phraſe inſtructively uſed, for a charitable Entertainment of old. It might be ſaid of him, as once it was of the Generous Corinthian, Semper aliquis in Cottoni Domo: He was ever ſhewing of Kindneſs to Some-body or other. What Poſidonius relates of Auſtin, and what Peter Martyr affirms of Bucer, was very true of our Cotton: His Houſe was like an Inn, for the conſtant Entertainment which he gave upon the Account of the Goſpel. And he would ſay, If a Man want an Heart for this Charity, it is not fit ſuch a Man ſhould be ordained a Miniſter: Conſenting therein to the great Canoniſt, Hoſpitalitas uſque adeo Epiſcopis eſt neceſſaria, ut ſi ab ea inveniantur alieni, Jure probibentur Ordinari. While he lived quietly in England, he was noted for his bountiful Diſpoſition, eſpecially to Miniſters driven into England by the Storms of Perſecution, then raging in Germany: For which cauſe Libingus, Saumer, Tolner, and others of the German Sufferers, in their Accounts of him, would ſtile him, Fautor Doctiſſimus, Clariſſimus, Fideliſſimus, plurimumque Honorandus. It was remarkable, that he never omitted inviting unto his Houſe, any Miniſter travelling to, or through the Town, but only that one Man, who perfidiouſly betray'd Mr. Hilderſham, with his Non-Conformiſt Aſſociates, into the Hands of their Enemies. And after he came to New-England, he changed not his Mind with his Air; but with a Quantum ex Quantillo! continued his Beneficence upon all occaſions, tho' his Abilities for it were much diminiſhed; which brings to mind a moſt memorable Story. A little Church, whereof the worthy Mr. White was Paſtor, being by the ſtrange and ſtrong Malice of their prevailing Adverſaries, forced of Barmudas in much Miſery, into a Deſart of America, the Report of their Diſtreſſes came to their Fellow-Sufferers, tho' not alike Sufferers, at New-England. Mr. Cotton immediately applied himſelf to obtain a Collection, for the Relief of thoſe diſtreſſed Saints; and a Collection of about 700 l. was immediately obtained, whereof Two hundred was gathered in that one Church of Boſton, where there was no Man who did exceed, and but one Man who did equal, this Deviſer of Liberal Things, in that Contribution. But behold the wonderful Providence of God! This Contribution arrived unto the poor People on the very Day, after they had been brought unto a Perſonal Diviſion of the little Meal then left in the Barrel; upon the ſpending whereof, they could foreſee nothing but a lingring Death; and on that very Day, when their Paſtor had preach'd unto them, upon that moſt ſuitable Text, Pſal. 23. 1. The Lord is my Shepherd, I ſhall not want.

§ 32. The Reader that is inquiſitive after the Proſopography of this Great Man, may be informed, that he was of a Clear, Fair, Sanguine Complexion, and like David of a ruddy Countenance. He was rather low than tall, and rather fat than lean, but of a becoming Mediocrity. In his younger Years his Hair was brown, but in his latter Years as white as the Driven Snow. In his Countenance there was an inexpreſſible ſort of Majeſty, which commanded Reverence from all that approached him: This Cotton was indeed the Cato of his Age, for his Gravity; but had a Glory with it which Cato had not. I cannot indeed, ſay, what they Report of Hilary, that Serpents were not able to look upon him; nevertheleſs, it was commonly obſerved, that the worſer ſort of Serpents, would from the Awe of his Preſence keep in their Poiſons. As the Keeper of the Inn, where he did uſe to lodge, when he came to Derby, would profanely ſay to his Companions, That he wiſhed Mr. Cotton were gone out of his Houſe; for he was not able to Swear, while that Man was under his Roof. So other wicked Perſons could not ſhew their Wickedneſs, whilſt this holy and righteous Man was in the Company. But the exacter Picture of him, is to be taken from his Printed Works, whereof there are many, that praiſe him in the Gates, tho' few of them were Printed with his own Knowledge or Conſent.

We will mention a Catalogue of his Works, becauſe (as it was ſaid of Calvin's),

> Chara quibus fuerat Cottoni Vita, laborum
> Gratior ejuſdem Vita perennis erit.

The Children of New-England are to this day moſt uſually fed with his excellent Catechiſm, which is entituled, Milk for Babes.

His well-known Sermons on the Firſt Epiſtle of John, in Folio, have had their Acceptance with the Church of God; tho' being preached in his Youth, and not publiſhed by himſelf, there are ſome things therein, which he would not have inſerted.

There are alſo of his abroad, Sermons on the Thirteenth of the Revelations, and on the Vials, and on Rev. 20. 5, 6. and 2 Sam. 7. laſt in Quarto.

As alſo, a Savory Treatiſe, entituled, The Way of Life. The Reverend Prefacer whereto ſaith, Ever ſince I had any knowledge of this judicious Author, I have look'd upon him as one intruſted with as great a part of the Churches Treaſure, as any other whatſoever.

Several Volumes of his Expoſitions upon Eccleſiaſtes and Canticles, are alſo publiſhed in Octavo.

As likewiſe, A Treatiſe of the New Covenant: Which being only a Poſthumous Piece, and only Notes written after him, is accordingly to be judged of.

And there have ſeen the Light, An Anſwer to Mr. Ball, about Forms of Prayer. A Diſcourſe about the Grounds and Ends of Infant-Baptiſm. A Diſourſe about Singing of Pſalms, proving it a Goſpel-Ordinance. An Abſtract of Laws in Chriſt's Kingdom, for Civil Government. A Treatiſe about the Holineſs of Church-Members; proving, that viſible Saints are the matter of a Church. Another Diſcourſe upon Things indifferent, proving that no Church Governours have Power to impoſe indifferent Things, upon the Conſciences of Men. Add hereto, The Way of the Churches in New-England: And that Golden Diſcourſe of The Keys of the Kingdom of Heaven: In a written Copy whereof, yet in our Hands, there were ſome things which were never Printed, maintaining, that in the Government of the Church, Authority is peculiar to the Elders only; and anſwering all the Browniſtical Arguments to the contrary. But whereas there may occur a paſſage in his Book of The Way of the Churches, which may have in it a little more of the Morellian Tang, Reader, 'twas none of Mr. Cotton's; Mr. Cotton was troubled when he ſaw ſuch a paſſage, in an imperfect Copy of his Writings, expoſed unto the World, under his Name, againſt his Will: And he took an opportunity, in the moſt publick manner, to declare as much unto the World.

He was alſo ſometimes put upon writing yet more Polemically. Indeed there was one occaſion of ſo writing, which he declined meddling withal; and that was this: Mr. Cotton having in his younger Years, written to a private Friend ſome things, tending (at his deſire) to clear the Doctrine of Reprobates, from the Exceptions of the Arminians; and this Manuſcript falling into Dr. Twiſs's hand, that learned Man publiſh'd it, with his own Confutation of certain paſſages in it, which did not agree ſo well with the Doctor's own Supralapſarian Scheme. Now when Mr. Cotton ſaw himſelf reviled for this Cauſe by Baily, as being Pelagian, he only made this meek Reply: I hope God will give me Opportunity e'er long to conſider of this, the Doctor's Labour of Love. I bleſs the Lord, who has taught me to be willing to be taught, of a far meaner Diſciple, than ſuch a Doctor, whoſe Scholaſtical Acuteneſs, Pregnancy of Wit, Solidity of Judgment, and Dexterity of Argument, all Orthodox Divines do highly honour, and whom all Arminians and Jeſuites do fall down before, with Silence. God forbid I ſhould ſhut my Eyes againſt any Light brought to me by him. Only I deſire I may not be condemned as a Pelagian, or Arminian, before I be heard.

Moreover, Mr. Cawdry fell hard upon him; to whom he prepared an Anſwer, which was afterwards Publiſhed and Seconded by Dr. Owen. But beſides theſe, he was twice compelled unto ſome other Eriſtical Writings: Once in Anſwer to Baily; another time in Anſwer to Williams: In both of which, like Job, he turned the Books which his Adverſaries had written againſt him, into a Crown. I believe, never any meer Man, under ſuch open and horrid Injuries, as theſe two Reporters heaped upon Mr. Cotton, did Anſwer with more Chriſtian Patience: His Anſwers are indeed a Pattern for all Anſwerers to the World's end. But it was particularly remarkable, that in this matter, certain Perſons, who had fallen under the Cenſures of the Civil Authority in the Country, ſingled out Mr. Cotton for the Object of their Diſpleaſure, altho' he had, moſt of all Men, declined Intereſting himſelf in the Actions of the Magiſtrate, and had alſo done more than all Men, to obtain Healing and Favour for thoſe ungrateful Delinquents. However, the venemous Tongues all this while, only lick'd a File, which made themſelves to bleed; his Fame, like the File, remained invulnerable; and if Mr. Cotton would from his own profitable Experience, have added another Book unto this Catalogue, it might have been on the Subject handled by Plutarch, De Capienda ex Hoſtibus Utilitate. This is the Elenchus of Mr. Cotton's publiſhed Writings; whereupon we might make this Concluſion.

Digna Legi Scribis, Facis & Digniſſima Scribi;
Scripta probant Doctum, Te, Tua, Facta, probum.

§ 33. The things which have been related, cauſe us to account Mr. Cotton an extraordinary Perſon.

Dives eras Donis, etiamque Fidelis in Uſu,
Lucratus Domino multa Talenta tuo.
Multus eras Studiis, multuſq; Laboribus, uno
Te, Fora, Templa, Domus, Te, cupiere frui.
Multa Laborabas Scribendo, Multa Docendo,
Invigilans Operi, Nocte Dieque, Dei.
Multa Laborabas Scribendo, Multa Ferendo,
Quæ niſi Cottono, vix Subeunda forent.
Tu non unus eras, ſed Multi; Multus in Uno,
Multorum Donis præditus Unus eras.
Uno Te amiſſo, Multos Amiſimus in Te,
Sed neque per Multos Reſtituendus eris.

Theſe were ſome of the Lines, which the Renowned Bulkly juſtly wept upon his Grave. Yea, we may, on as many Accounts as theſe Days will allow, reckon him to have been a Prophet of the Lord: And when we have entertain'd our ſelves with a Memorable Demonſtration of it, in one ſurpriſing and ſtupendious Article of our Church Hiſtory, we will put a Period unto this part of it.

At the time when ſome unhappy Perſons were juſt going from hence to England, with certain Petitions, which had a tendency to diſturb the good Order of Things in both Church and State, then ſettling among us, Mr. Cotton in the ordinary Courſe of his Lectures on the Canticles, preached on Cant. 2. 15. Take us the Foxes, the little Foxes, which deſtroy the Vines. Having thence obſerved, That when God has delivered his Church from the Dangers of the perſecuting Bear and Lyon, then there were Foxes that would ſeek by Policy to undermine it: And, That all thoſe who go by a Fox-like Policy to undermine the Churches of the Lord Jeſus Chriſt, ſhall be taken and overtaken by his Judgments. He came at length to his Application, where with a more than ordinary Majeſty and Fervency, he after this manner expreſſed himſelf.

'First, Let ſuch as live in this Country take 'heed, how they go about in any indirect Way ‘ or Courſe to prejudice the Churches of the Lord Jeſus Chriſt in the Land, or the Government of the Land. If you Do, The Keeper of Iſrael, who neither ſlumbereth nor ſleepeth, will not take it well at your Hands. He that brought this People hither, and preſerved them from the Rage of Perſecution, and made this Wilderneſs an Hiding-Place for them, whilſt he was Chaſtiſing our Nation, with the other Nations round about it, and has manifeſted his Gracious Preſence in the midſt of theſe His Golden Candleſticks, and ſecured us from the Plots of the late Archbiſhop, and his Confederates abroad, and from the Plots of the Heathen here at home; there is no Queſtion But He will defend us from the Underminings of Falſe Brethren, and ſuch as are joined with them. Wherefore let ſuch know, That this is, in many reſpects, Immanuel's Land, and they ſhall not proſper that riſe up againſt it, but ſhall be Taken every One of them in the Snares they lay for it. This I ſpeak as a Poor Prophet of the Lord, according to the Word of His Grace now before us!

‘ But in the Second Place, whereas many of our Brethren are going to England, Let me direct a Word unto Them alſo. I deſire the Gracious Preſence of our God may go with you, and his Angels guard you, not only frpm the Dangers of the Seas, while you are thereupon, but alſo from the Errors of the Times, when you arrive. Nevertheleſs, if there be any among you, my Brethren, as 'tis Reported there are, that have a Petition to prefer unto the High Court of Parliament, that may conduce to the Diſtraction and Annoyance of the Peace of our Churches, and the weakning the Government of the Land where we Live, Let Such know, the Lord will never ſuffer them to proſper in their Subtil, Malicious, Deſperate Undertakings againſt his People, who are as tender unto him as the Apple of his Eye. But if there be any ſuch among You, who are to Go, I do exhort you, and I would adviſe you in the Fear of God, that when the Terrors of the Almighty ſhall beſet the Veſſel wherein you are, when the Heavens ſhall frown upon you, and the Billows of the Sea ſhall ſwell above you, and the Dangers of Death ſhall threaten you, as I am verily perſwaded they will, I would have you then to Conſider your Ways. I will not give the Counſel that was taken concerning Jonas, to caſt ſuch a Perſon into the Sea; God forbid! But I counſel ſuch to come then unto a Reſolution in themſelves to Deſiſt from their Enterpriſes, and Caſt their Petitions into the Sea. It may be, that Hardneſs of Heart and Stoutneſs of Spirit may cauſe you to perſiſt, and yet in Mercy to ſome Gracious Perſons among you, the Lord may deliver the Ship from Utter Deſtruction for their ſakes. But the Lord hath further Judgments in Store: He is the God of the Land, as well as of the Sea. I ſpeak this alſo, as an unworthy Prophet of the Lord!

Theſe Things were then uttered by a Perſon, that was as little of an Enthuſiaſt, as moſt Men in the World. Now attend the Event!

That Ship, after many Streſſes of Weather in the Harbour, puts out to Sea; but at Sea it had the Terribleſt Paſſage, perhaps, that ever was heard of; The Mariners not being able to take any Obſervation of either Sun or Star, for Seven Hundred Leagues together. Certain well diſpoſed Perſons aboard, now calling to Mind the Words of Mr. Cotton, thought it neceſſary to admoniſh the Perſons, who were carrying over the Malignant Papers againſt the Country; and ſome of thoſe Papers were by them thereupon given to the Seamen, who immediately cut them in pieces and threw them over-board. The Storm forthwith abated; however there afterwards came up New Storms, which at laſt hurried the Ship among the Rocks of Scilly; where they yet received a Deliverance, which moſt of them that conſider'd it, pronounced Miraculous. When the Rude Corniſh Men ſaw how Miraculouſly the Veſſel had eſcaped, they ſaid, God was a Good Man to ſave them ſo! But the moſt Inſtructed Obliged Paſſengers kept a Day of Solemn Thankſgiving to God; in which even the Profaneſt Perſons on Board, under the Impreſſion of what had happened, then bore a part. However, the Corn-fields in New-England, ſtill ſtood Undiſturbed, notwithſtanding the Various Names affixed unto the Tailes of Petitions againſt their Liberties. For, as Mr. Cotton elegantly expreſſed it, God then Rocqued Three Nations, with ſhaking Diſpenſations, that he might procure ſome Reſt unto his People in this Wilderneſs!

§ 34. This was Mr. Cotton! What more he was, let theſe Lines, taking no Licenſe but from the Real Truth, Delineate.

§. 35. Three Sons, and Three Daughters, was this Renowned Walker with God Bleſſed withal.

His Eldeſt Son did ſpend and end his Days in the Miniſtry of the Goſpel, at Hampton: Being eſteemed a thorough Scholar, and an able Preacher; and though his Name were Sea-born, yet none of the lately Revived Hereſies were more Abominable to him, than that of his Name-ſake, Pelagius [or, Morgan] of whom the Witneſs of the Ancient Poet is true, Peſtifero Vomuit coluber Sermone Britannus.

His Second Son was a Miniſter of the Goſpel, at Plymouth; and one by whom, not only the Engliſh, but alſo the Indians of America, had the Glad Tidings of Salvation, in their own Language carried unto them.

Of his Two Younger Daughters, the firſt was Married unto a Merchant of Good Faſhion, whoſe Name was Mr. Egginton; but ſhe did not long ſurvive the Birth of her firſt Child, as that Child alſo did not ſurvive many Years after the Death of her Mother. The next is at this time Living, the Conſort of one well known in both Englands, namely, Increaſe Mather, the Preſident of Harvard Colledge, and the Teacher of a Church in Boſton.

The Youngeſt of his Sons, called Roland, and the Eldeſt of his Daughters, called Sarah, both of them died near together, of the Small-Pox, which was raging among the Inhabitants of Boſton, in the Winter of the Year 1649. The Death of thoſe two Lovely Children, required the Faith of an Abraham, in the Heart of their Gracious Father; who indeed moſt exemplarily Expreſſed what was required. On this Occaſion, I find, that on a ſpare Leaf of his Almanack, he wrote in Greek Letters theſe Engliſh Verſes;

In Saram.

Farewel, dear Daughter Sara, Now Thou'rt gone,
(Whither thou much deſiredſt) to thine Home:
Pray, my Dear Father, Let me now go Home!
Were the laſt Words thou ſpak'ſt to me alone.
  Go then, ſweet Sara, take thy Sabbeth Reſt,
  With thy Great Lord, and all in Heaven Bleſt.

In Rolandum.

Our Eldeſt Daughter, and our Youngeſt Son,
Within Nine Days, both have their full Race run.
On th' Twentieth of th' Eleventh, Died She,
And on the Twenty Ninth Day Died He.
Both in theit Lives were Lovely and United,
And in their Deaths they were not much Divided.
Chriſt gave them Both, and He takes both again
To live with Him; Bleſt be His Holy Name.

In Utrumque.

Suffer, Saith Chriſt, Your Little Ones,
  To Come forth, Me unto,
For of ſuch Ones my Kingdom is,
  Of Grace and Glory too.
We do not only Suffer them,
  But Offer them to Thee,
Now, Bleſſed Lord, Let us Believe,
  Accepted, that they be:
That Thou haſt Took them, in Thine Arms,
  And on them Put thine Hand,
And Bleſſed them with Sight of Thee,
  Wherein our Bleſſings Stand.

But he has at this Day Five Grandſons, all of them Employed in the Publick Service of the Goſpel; whereof, Let the Reader count him the Meaneſt, that is the Writer of this Hiſtory; and accept further one Little Piece of Hiſtory, relating hereunto.

The Gathering of the Second Church in Boſton, was evidently very much to the Diſadvantage of Mr. Cotton, in many of his Intereſts.

But he was a John, who reckoned his Joy fulfilled in This, That in his own Decreaſe the Intereſts of the Lord Jeſus Chriſt would Increaſe; and therefore, with an Exemplary Self-Denial, diveſting himſelf of all carnal Reſpects, he ſet himſelf to encourage the Foundation of that Church, out of Reſpect unto the Service and Worſhip of our Common Lord. Now, it has pleaſed the Lord ſo to order it, That many Years after his Deceaſe, that Self-Denial of his Holy Servant, has turned unto ſome Account, in the Opportunities which That very Church has given unto His Children, to Glorify the Lord Jeſus Chriſt, in the Conduct of it: His Son-in-Law has been been for more than Thrice Ten Years, and his Grandſon for more than Twice Seven Years, the Miniſters of the Goſpel, in That very Church, accommodated with happy Opportunities, To ſerve their Generation.

CHAP. II.

NORTONUS Honoratus, the LIFE of Mr. JOHN NORTON.

§ 1. THERE was a Famous John whoſe Atchievements are by our Lord Emblazoned in thoſe Terms; He was a Burning and a Shining Light. In the Tabernacle of Old, erected by the Order and for the Worſhip of God, there were thoſe Two Things, a Candleſtick and an Altar; in the One a Light that might never go out, in the other a Fire that might never be extinguiſhed; and yet ſuch an Affinity between theſe, that there was a Fire in the Light of the one, and a Light in the Fire of the other. Such a Mixture of both Faith and Love ſhould be in thoſe that are employed about the Service of the Tabernacle: And though the Tabernacle erected for our Lord in this Wilderneſs, had many ſuch Burning and Shining Lights; yet among the Chief of them is to be reckoned, that John which we had in our Bleſſed Norton.

§ 2. He was Born the Sixth of May, 1606. at Starford in Hartfordſhire; deſcended of Honourable Anceſtors. In his early Childhood he diſcovered a Ripeneſs of Wit, which gave juſt Hopes of his proving Extraordinary: And under Mr. Strange in the School of Bunningford, he made ſuch a Proficiency, that he could betimes write Good Latin, with a more than common Elegancy and Invention. At Fourteen Years of Age, being ſent unto Peter-Houſe, he ſtaid there, till after his taking of his Firſt Degree; where a Romiſh Emiſſary, taking a curious and exact Obſervation of his Notable Accompliſhments, uſed all the Methods he could think of, to have ſeduced him over unto the Romiſh Irreligion: But God intending him to be a Pillar in his own Temple, mercifully prevented his hearkening unto any Temptations to become a Support unto the Tower of Babel.

§ 3. In his Youth he was accuſtomed unto ſome Youthful Vanities; eſpecially unto Card-Playing; an Evil which he did firſt Ponder and Reform upon a Serious Admonition, which a Servant of his Father's gave unto him. When he came to conſider that a Lot is a Solemn Appeal unto the God of Heaven, and even by the rudeſt Gentiles counted a Sacred Thing, he thought that Playing with it, was a Breach of the Third Commandment in the Laws of our God; it ſhould be uſed, he thought, rather Prayerfully than Sportfully. He conſidered, that the Papiſts themſelves do not allow theſe Games in Eccleſiaſtical Perſons, and the Fathers do reprove them with a vehement Zeal in all ſorts of Perſons. He conſidered, that when the Roman Empire became Chriſtian, ſevere Edicts were made againſt theſe Games, and that our Proteſtant Reformers have branded them with an Infamous Character; wherefore inclining now to follow Whatſoever things are of a Good Report, he would no longer meddle with Games that had ſo much of a Scandal in them.

§ 4. An Extreme Diſaſter befalling his Father's Eſtate, he left the Univerſity; and became at once Uſher to the School, and Curate in the Church at Starford: Where a Lecture being maintained by a Combination of ſeveral Godly and Able Miniſters, he on that Occaſion fell into Acquaintance with ſeveral of them; eſpecially Mr. Jeremiah Dyke, of Epping, by whoſe Miniſtry the Holy Spirit of God, gave him a Diſcovery of his own manifold Sinfulneſs and Wretchedneſs in an Unregenerate State, and awakened him unto ſuch a Self-Examination, as drove him to a Sorrow little ſhort of Deſpair; but after ſome time, the ſame Holy Spirit, enabled him to receive the Chriſt and Grace, tendered in the Promiſes of the Goſpel, with an Unſpeakable Conſolation. Whereupon he thought himſelf concerned in that Advice of Heaven, When thou art Converted, Strengthen thy Brethren!

§ 5. Having before this been well ſtudied in the Tongues and Arts, he was the better fitted for the higher Studies of Divinity; whereto he now wholly addicted himſelf: And being in his own happy Experience acquainted with Faith, and Repentance, and Holineſs, he did from that Experience now make Lively Sermons on thoſe points unto his Hearers. He ſoon grew Eminent in his Miniſtry; ſetting off the Truths he deliver'd, not only with ſuch Ornaments of Laconic and well-contriv'd Expreſſion, as made him worthy to be called, The Maſter of Sentences, but alſo with ſuch Experimental Paſſages of Devotion, as made him admired for A Preacher ſeeking out Acceptable Words.

§ 6. His Accompliſhments render'd him as capable of Preferments, as moſt in his Age; but Preferments were then ſo clogg'd with Troubleſome and Scrupleſome Impoſitions, that Mr. Norton, as well as other Conſcientious Young Miniſters, his Contemporaries, declined medling with them. His Averſion, and indeed Antipathy to Arminianiſm (after he was, as Bradwardin ſpeaks, Gratiæ Radio Viſitatus,) and his Diſlike of the Ceremonies, particularly hindered him from a Conſiderable Benefice, where to his Unkle might have helped him. Dr. Sibs alſo, the Maſter of Katharine Hall in Cambridge, taken with his Abilities, did earneſtly ſollicite him, to have accepted of a Fellowſhip in that College; but his Conſcience being now ſatisfied in the Unlawfulneſs of ſome things then required in Order thereunto, would not permit him to do it. One asked once a great Prelate at Court, how it came to paſs, that ſuch a Preacher (an Ancient Chaplain there) a Wiſe, Grave, Holy Man, did not Riſe? Meaning by way of Preferment: The Prelate anſwered him, Truly, let me tell you, That I verily think, he never will Riſe until the Reſurrection. Truly, Let me now tell the World, That ſuch were the Principles of Mr. Norton, there was no likelihood of his Riſing in this World, as things then went in the World. Wherefore he contented himſelf with a more Private Life, as Chaplain in two Knights Houſe at High Laver in Eſſex, namely, Sir William Maſham's; there waiting, till God might furniſh him with Unexceptable Opportunities, for his more Publick Preaching of the Goſpel. But generally, all thoſe who had any Taſt of his Miniſtry, had a very high Opinion of it; nor was there any Man in that part of the Country more eſteemed than he was, for all ſorts of Excellencies; inſomuch, that when he came away, an Ancient Miniſter ſaid, He believed there was not more Grace and Holineſs left in all Eſſex, than what Mr. Norton had carried with him.

§ 7. His Natural Temper had a Tincture of Choler in it; but as the ſowreſt and harſheſt Fruits become the moſt Pleaſant, when tempered with a due Proportion of Sweetneſs added thereunto, ſo the Grace of God ſweetned the Diſpoſition of this good Man, into a moſt Affable, Courteous, and Complaiſant Behaviour, which render'd him exceeding Amiable. Indeed when the Apoſtle ſpeaks of the Spirit, and Soul and Body, being Sanctified, ſome do by Spirit underſtand the Natural Temper, or Humour; and accordingly the Spirit of this Quick Man being Sanctified, he became a Man of an Excellent Spirit.

§ 8. Vaſt was the Treaſure of Learning in this Reverend Man. He was not only a moſt Accurate Grammarian, which is abundantly manifeſted by his Printed Works in Divers Languages; but an Univerſal Scholar: Nevertheleſs, 'twas as a School-man that he ſhow'd himſelf the moſt of a Scholar. He accounted that the Excellency of a Scholar, lay more in Diſtinctneſs of Judgment, than in Elegancy of Language; and therefore, though he had a neater Style than moſt other Men, yet he was Deſirous to furniſh himſelf ad pugnam, rather than ad Pompam. Hence having intimately acquainted himſelf with the Subtilties of Scholaſtic Divinity, he made all to illuſtrate the Doctrine of Chriſt and of Grace, unto which he made all the Spoils of the Schools gloriouſly ſubſervient. He was a moſt Elegant Preacher, and the True Follower of Dr. Sibs!

§ 9. But let his Excellencies have been what they will, there was in thoſe Days a Set of Men, reſolved that the Church of God ſhould loſe the Benefit of all thoſe Excellencies, except the Perſon which had them, could comply with certain Uninſtituted Rites in the Worſhip of God; which our Mr. Norton could not; and it was that which made him ours. This drove him to the remote Regions of America, where he hoped, as well he might, that there would never be done ſo unreaſonable a Thing, as to obſtruct that Evangelical Worſhip of our Lord Jeſus Chriſt, for the ſake whereof thoſe Regions have been added unto the Engliſh Dominions. Wherefore in the Year 1634. having married a Gentlewoman both of Good Eſtate, and of Good Eſteem, he took ſhipping for New-England, accompanied in the ſame Ship with the Famous Mr. Thomas Shepard.

§ 10. In the Road betwixt Harwich and Yarmouth, he very narrowly eſcaped a Terrible Shipwrack: For by the Vehemency of a Storm all their Anchors gave way, ſo that they were driven within a Cable's Length of the Sands; but yet the Anchor of their Hope in God, held faſt unto the laſt. Mr. Shepard having taken the Mariners above Decks, Mr. Norton took the Paſſengers between Decks, and each of them with their Company, applied themſelves unto Fervent Prayer, whereto the Almighty God gave a preſent Anſwer in their wonderful Deliverance. After this Tempeſt, which diſappointed their Voyage to New-England for that Seaſon, Mr. Norton returned unto his Friends in Eſſex; where Mr. Dyke welcomed him, as one come from the dead; profeſſing to him, That he would have given many Pounds for ſuch a Tryal of his Faith, as this his Friend had newly met withal.

§ 11. The next Year Mr. Norton renewed his Voyage to New-England; but intervening Accidents made it very late in the Year, before he could begin the Voyage: And ſo, coming upon the American Coaſt in the Month of October, they encountred with another very terrible Storm, which laſted Eight and forty Hours with great extremity, and had broken the Veſſel to pieces, if it had not had a ſtrength more than ordinary. One Wave remarkably waſhed ſome of the Sea-men overboard on one ſide, and then threw them in again on t'other; and ſo vehement was the Storm, that they were forced at length to undergird the Ship with the Cable, that they might keep her ſides together. But within ten Days after this, they were brought ſafe into Plymouth Harbour.

§ 12. There had been ſome Overtures between him and Mr. Winſlow, the Agent of Plymouth, now on board with him, about his accepting of a Settlement in that Plantation; and the People of Plymouth now courteouſly and earneſtly invited him, accordingly to continue with them. Nevertheleſs, the State of Things in the Maſſachuſet-Colony, was more agreeable unto him; and the Church of Ipſwich made their ſpeedy Applications unto him, to take the Paſtoral Charge of them. This occaſioned his Deliberation with his Friends in the Bay, what Courſe to ſteer.

§ 13. While he ſojourned in his unſettled State at Boſton, he came into Acquaintance with the Miniſters thereabouts, who entertained him with a very high Opinion of him; eſpecially Mr. Mather of Dorcheſter, who tho' of longer ſtanding than he, yet conſulted him as an Oracle, in Matters of greateſt Conſequence unto him; and found him ſo accompliſhed and experienced a Perſon, that he maintained a moſt valuable Friendſhip with him to the laſt. Yea, tho' he were yet a young Man, and ſhort of Thirty, when he firſt came into the Country, yet the Magiſtrates of the Colony ſoon became ſo ſenſible of his Abilities, as to make uſe of him in ſome of their moſt arduous Affairs. And there happened ſeveral Occaſions to try the Scholaſtick Emmencies, whereto he was arrived; one of which was, when there was in theſe Parts a French Friar, who found in Mr. Norton, a Proteſtant, equal to his own School-men, and well-acquainted with them all. Indeed there was in him the Union of two Excellencies, which do not always meet. It was the Character of Hortenſius, that he was weak in Writing, and yet able to Speak: It was the Character of Abericus, that he was weak in Speech, and yet able in Writing: But our Norton was in both of theſe a very able Perſon.

§ 14. It was the Church of Ipſwich, that our Lord gave ſo rich a thing, as his eminent Servant Norton: But beſides the conſtant Labours of this holy and fruitful Man, in that particular Church, he there did ſeveral great Services of a more extenſive Influence to the whole Church of God; whereof one was this: Guilielmus Apollonii, at the Direction of the Divines in Zealand, in the Year 1644. ſent over to New-England a Number of Queſtions, relating to our Way of Church-Government; whereto the Miniſters of New-England unanimouſly impoſed upon Mr. Norton the Task of drawing up an Anſwer, which he finiſhed in the Year 1645. And it was, I ſuppoſe, the firſt Latin Book that ever was written in this Country. What Satiſfaction it gave, may be gathered, not only from the Atteſtations of Dr. Goodwin, Mr. Nye, Mr. Sympſon, thereunto; but alſo from the Expreſſions of Dr. Hornbeck, who frequently magnifies the Reaſon, and the Candour of our New-Engliſh Divine, even in thoſe Points, wherein he does himſelf diſſent from him. Nor is it amiſs to add the words in Dr. Fuller's Church-Hiſtory, hereupon; which are: Of all the Authors I have peruſed concerning theſe Opinions, none to me was more Informative than Mr. John Norton, one of no leſs Learning than Modeſty, in his Anſwer to Apollonius, Paſtor in the Church of Middleburgh.

§ 15. It will do no hurt for me to repeat one Paſſage on this Occaſion, which to me ſeemed worthy of ſome Remark. While Mr. Norton was deeply engaged in writing his Latin Account of our Church-Diſcipline, ſome of his more Accurate and Judicious Hearers, imagined that his Publick Sermons wanted a little of that Exactneſs, which did uſe to attend them; whereof one ſaid ſomething to that Mr. Whiting, whom I may well call the Angel in the Church of Lyn. Mr. Whiting hereupon in a very reſpectful and obliging manner, ſpoke to Mr. Norton, ſaying, Sir, There are ſome of your People, who think that the Services wherein you are engaged for all the Churches, do ſomething take off the Edge of the Miniſtry, wherewith you ſhould ſerve your own particular Church: I would intreat you, Sir, to conſider this matter; for our greateſt Work is to preach the Goſpel unto that Flock, whereof we are Overſeers. Our great and good Man took the excellent Oyl of this Intimation, with the Kindneſs which became ſuch a Man, and made it ſerviceable unto his holy Studies.

§ 16. Another conſiderable Service, which then called for the Studies of this excellent Man, was the adviſing, modelling, and recommending the Platform of Church-Diſcipline, agreed by a Synod at Cambridge, in the Year 1647. Into that Platform he would fain have had inſerted, certain Propoſitions concerning the Watch, which our Churches are to have over the Children born in them; which Propoſitions were certainly the firſt Principles of New-England: Only the fierce Oppoſitions of one eminent Perſon, cauſed him that was of a peaceable Temper, to forbear urging them any further; by which means, when thoſe very Propoſitions came to be advanced and embraced in another Synod, more than twice ſeven Years after, many People did ignorantly count them Novelties. Moreover, when the Synod firſt aſſembled, it was a thing of ſome unhappy Conſequence, that the Church of Boſton would not ſend any Meſſengers unto it: But Mr. Norton preaching the next Lecture there, wherein he handled the Nature of Councils, and the Power of Civil Magiſtrates to call ſuch Aſſemblies, and the Duty of the Churches in regarding their Advice, the Church of Boſton were therewithal ſo ſatiſfied, as to teſtifie their Communion with the reſt of the Churches, by ſending ing three Meſſengers to accompany their Elders now in the Synod. And when the Reſult of the Synod came to try its Acceptance in the Churches, he did his part, eſpecially in his own, with a prudent and pious Diligence to obtain it; which was happily accompliſhed.

§ 17. There was yet one Comprehenſive Service more, which this Learned Man here did for the Church of God; and that was this: A Gentleman of New-England had written a Book, entituled, The Meritorious Price of Man's Redemption: Wherein he pretends to prove, That Chriſt ſuffered not for us thoſe unutterable Torments of God's Wrath, which are commonly called Hell-Torments, to redeem our Souls from them; and that Chriſt bore not our Sins by God's Imputation, and therefore alſo did not bear the Curſe of the Law for them. The General Court of the Colony, concerned that the Glorious Truths of the Goſpel might be reſcued from the Confuſions, whereinto the Eſſay of this Gentleman had thrown them, and afraid leſt the Church of God abroad ſhould ſuſpect that New-England allow'd of ſuch exorbitant Aberrations, appointed Mr. Norton to draw up an Anſwer to that Erroneous Treatiſe. This Work he performed with a moſt Elaborate and Judicious Pen, in a Book afterwards publiſhed under the Title of, A Diſcuſſion of that Great Point in Divinity, The Sufferings of Chriſt: And the Queſtions about his Active and Paſſive Righteouſneſs, and the Imputation thereof. In that Book the true Principles of the Goſpel are ſtated with ſo much Demonſtration, as is indeed unanſwerable. The Great Aſſertion therein explained and maintained, is, (according to the expreſs Words of the Reverend Author), 'That the Lord Jeſus Chriſt as God-Man, and Mediator, according to the Will of the Father, and his own voluntary Conſent, fully obeyed the Law, doing the Command in a way of Works, and ſuffering the Eſſential Puniſhment of the Curſe, in a way of obedient Satisfaction unto Divine Juſtice, thereby exactly fulfilling the firſt Covenant: Which Active and Paſſive Obedience of his, together with his Original Righteouſneſs, as a Surety, God, of his rich Grace, actually imputeth unto Believers; whom, upon the Receipt thereof, by the Grace of Faith, he declareth and accepteth, as perfectly Righteous, and acknowledgeth them to have a Right unto Eternal Life.

And in every Clauſe of this Poſition, the Author expreſſed not his own Sence alone, but the Sence of all the Churches in the Country: In Teſtimony whereof, there was publiſhed at the End of the Book, an Inſtrument ſigned by five conſiderable Names, Cotton, Wilſon, Mather, Symmes, and Tompſon, who in the Name of others, declare, 'As they believe, they do alſo profeſs, That the Obedience of Chriſt to the whole Law, which is the Law of Righteouſneſs, is the Matter of our Juſtification; and the Imputation of our Sins to Chriſt (and thereupon his ſuffering the Senſe of the Wrath of God upon him for our Sin) and the Imputation of his Obedience and Sufferings to us, are the formal Cauſe of our Juſtification; and that they who deny this, do now take away both of theſe, both Matter and Form of our Juſtification, which is the Life of our Souls, and of our Religion, and therefore called the Juſtification of Life.

This being the Primitive Doctrine of Juſtification, among the Churches of New England; the things that were judged oppoſite hereunto, in the Renowned Richard Baxter's Aphoriſms of Juſtification, did then give a great and juſt Offence unto the Faithful in this Country: Yea, they look'd upon many things in his Writings, to be, as Photius has it, upon ſome things in Clemens Alexandrinus; that is to ſay, Things expreſſed, οὐκ' ὑγιῶς, not ſafely and ſoundly; albeit, the other more Practical and Savory Books of that Holy Man, were highly valued in theſe American Regions; and not a few have here bleſſed God for him, and for his Labours. And as in thoſe Elder Days of New-England, the Eſteem which our Churches had for that eminent Man, did not hinder them from rejecting that New Covenant of Works, with which they thought he confounded that moſt important Article, upon the Notions whereof the Church either ſtands or falls: Thus it is a Grief of Mind unto our Churches at this Day, to find that great and good Man, in ſome of his laſt Works, under the blinding Heat of his Indignation againſt ſome which we alſo account unjuſtifiable, yea, dangerous Opinions and Expreſſions of Dr. Criſp, reproaching ſome of the moſt undoubted Points in our common Faith. We read him unaccountably enumerating among Errors, which he ſays, have corrupted Chriſtianity, and ſubverted the Goſpel, ſuch things as theſe:

'They feign, That God made a Covenant with Adam, that if he ſtood, God would continue him, and his Poſterity; and if he fell, God would take it, as if all his Poſterity, then perſonally ſinned in him.——Feigning God to make Adam, not only the Natural Father and Root of Mankind, but alſo arbitrarily, a conſtituted Repreſenter of all the Perſons that ſhould ſpring from him. Whence they infer, that Chriſt was by God's Impoſition, and his own Sponſion, made the Legal Repreſentative Perſon of every one of the Elect, taken ſingularly: So that what he did for them, God reputeth them to have done by him. Hereby they falſly make the Perſon of the Mediator, to be the Legal Perſon of the Sinner.

'They forge a Law, that God never made, that ſaith, Thou or thy Surety, ſhall obey perfectly, or die.

'They feign God to have made an Eternal Covenant with his Son.

'They feign Chriſt to have made ſuch an exchange with the Elect, as that having taken all their Sins, he hath given them all his Righteouſneſs; not only the Fruit of it, but the Thing in it ſelf.

‘ They ſay, That by the Imputation of Chriſt's Righteouſneſs, Habitual and Actual. We are judged perfectly juſt.

‘ They talk of Juſtification in meer ignorant Confuſion : ——They ſay, That to juſtifie is not to make righteous, but to judge righteous.

‘ They err groſly, ſaying, That by [Faith imputed for Righteouſneſs] and [our being juſtified by Faith] is not meant, the Act, or Habit of Faith, but the Object, Chriſt's Righteouſneſs : Not ſticking thereby to turn ſuch Texts into worſe than Nonſence. [All theſe are Mr. Baxter's Words, in his Defence of Chriſt, chap. 2]

Theſe Things, which our Churches with Amazement, behold Mr. Baxter thus calling Fictions, Falſhoods, Forgeries, Ignorant Confuſions, and groſs Errors, were defended by Mr. Norton, as the Faith once delivered unto the Saints : Nor do our Churches at this Day conſider them, as any other, than glorious Truths of the Goſpel; which, as they were maintain'd by Mr. Norton. So two Divines, which were the Scholars of Mr. Norton, well known in both Englands, Nathanael, and Increaſe Mather, (Fratrum dulce Par;) and a third, a worthy Miniſter of the Goſpel, Mr. Samuel Willard, now living in the ſame Houſe from whence Mr. Norton went, unto that not made with Hands, have in their Printed Labours moſt accurately expreſſed them, and confirmed them. Hence, altho' as on the one ſide, I have this paſſage of Mr. Baxter's, in a Letter from him, written but a few Months before he died, I am as zealous a Lover of the New-England Churches as any man, according to M^{r} Norton*'s, and the Synods Model* : So on the other ſide, the Memory of Mr. Baxter is on many accounts zealouſly loved among the Churches of New-England, yet eſpouſing the Principles for their Eſtabliſhment, wherein Mr. Norton had appeared : Nevertheleſs, inaſmuch as Mr. Baxter, juſt before his Entrance into his Everlaſting Reſt, requeſted of my Parent then in London : Sir, If you know of any Errors in any of my Writings, I pray you to confute them after I am dead. I thought it not amiſs, to regard ſo far the Goſpel Truths of Juſtification at this day labouring, as to take occaſion from the mention of Mr. Norton's Book, to ſay, That in that one Book of his, there is a Confutation of Mr. Baxter, who ſeems to oppoſe thoſe things, which the Churches of New-England judge cannot be denied without corrupting of Chriſtianity, and ſubverting of the Goſpel. But waving any further mention of the Book, I cannot leave unmentioned a couple of Paſſages in the Preface of it, which is Dedicatory to the General Court of the Maſſachuſet Colony. One is this : I appeal to any competently judicious and ſober-minded Man, if the Denial of Rule in the Presbytery, of a Deciſive Voice in the Synod, and of the Power of the Magiſtrate in Matters of Religion, do not in this Point tranſlate the Papal Power unto the Brotherhood of every Congregation. Another is this : You have been among the firſt of Magiſtrates, which have approved and practiſed the Congregational Way ; no ſmall Favour from God, nor Honour to your ſelves, with the Generation to come, when that ſhall appear to be the Way of Chriſt.

§ 18. But we ſay nothing of Norton, if we don't ſpeak of an Orthodox Evangeliſt. Being himſelf ſuch an one, he digeſted the Subtleties of the School-men into ſolid and wholeſome Chriſtianity, which he publiſhed in a Treatiſe entituled, The Orthodox Evangeliſt : Wherein he handles the abſtruſe Points of the Exiſtence and Subſiſtence, and Efficience of God, and the Perſon of Chriſt, and the Methods of the Spirit in uniting us to him ; and the Doctrine of Juſtification, with the future and happy State of the Saints ; all in ſuch a manner, that Mr. Cotton ſaw cauſe to ſay in his Preface to this Treatiſe, Cluſters of ripe Grapes paſſing under the Preſs, are fit to be tranſported unto all Nations ; thus, ſuch Gifts and Labours paſſing under the Preſs, may be fitly communicated to all Churches. The Phyſicians do ſpeak, there are Pillulæ ſine Quibus eſſe nolo ; ſo there are Libelli ſine quibus, ſome Books, Sine quibus eſſe nolo ; and this is one of 'em. This Book he dedicated unto his own Church, in Ipſwich ; and in the Cloſe of his Dedication, I cannot forget this emphatical paſſage, You are our Glory and Joy : Forget not the Emphaſis in the Word, Our : Miniſters, compared with other Chriſtians, have little to joy in in this World : It is not with the Miniſters of the preſent, as with the Miniſters of late Times ; nor with the Exiles, as with the reſt ; nor with your Exiles, as with ſome others. Let this Our, or if you pleaſe Your Condition, for therein you have been both Partakers with us, and Supporters of us, be your Provocation. Thus and more than thus uſeful, was this Bradwardin of New England, while Ipſwich had him.

§ 19. When Cotton, that Man of God, lay ſick of the Sickneſs whereof he died, his Church deſired that he would nominate and recommend a fit Perſon to ſucceed him ; and he adviſed them to apply themſelves unto Mr. Norton, hoping that the Church of Ipſwich being accommodated with ſuch another eminent Perſon as Mr. Rogers, would out of reſpect unto the general Good of all the People of God throughout the Land, ſo far deny themſelves, as to diſmiſs him from themſelves. That which gave Encouragement unto this Buſineſs, was not a Dream of Mr. Cotton's, tho' it was indeed a ſtrange thing, that Mr. Cotton in his Illneſs, being ſollicitous what Counſel to give unto his Church, he dream'd, that he ſaw Mr. Norton riding unto Boſton, to ſucceed him, upon a White Horſe, in Circumſtances that were exactly afterwards accompliſhed : And when Mr. Wilſon, with his Flock, ſaw the thing accompliſhed, it cauſed them to look upon Mr. Norton, almoſt with the ſame Eye, that old Narciſſus, with the Church at Jeruſalem, did upon Alexander, when upon the warning of a Voice from Heaven, to take him, whom they ſhould ſo find, they found him out of the City, provided for them. But it was a Deſign which Mr. Norton had of returning for England: A Deſign which he had ſo laid before his People, as to obtain their Grant, that if upon ſtaying a Twelve Month longer among them, there did occur no occaſion for him to alter his purpoſes, they would not oppoſe his going. Now when the Agents of the Church at Boſton, made this Motion to the Church of Ipſwich, there was much debate about it; wherein at length an honeſt Brother made this Propoſal: Brethren, a Caſe in ſome things like to this, was once that way determined: We will call the Damſel, and enquire at her Mouth: Wherefore I propoſe, that our Teacher himſelf be enquired of, whether he be inclined to go? They then put that Queſtion to Mr. Norton himſelf, who being troubled at the Offer of the Queſtion unto him, anſwered, That if they judged ſuch Reaſons as cauſed his Removal from Europe into America, now call'd for his Removal from Ipſwich to Boſton, he ſhould reſign himſelf; but he could not be Active. However, at length, they conſented, that he ſhould for the preſent, go ſojourn at Boſton, to try, and ſee how far the Will of God about this matter, might be afterwards diſcovered; but after Mr. Norton was gone, many of the People fell into a very unreaſonable Indiſpoſition towards Mr. Rogers, as if he had not been Active enough, altho' he had, indeed, been as Active, as he well could be, to retain his Collegue among them. The Melancholly Temper of Mr. Rogers felt ſo deep an Impreſſion from thoſe Paroxiſms, and Murmurings of the People, that it is thought, his End was thereby haſtned; but the Church, upon the Death of Mr. Rogers, renewing their Demands of Mr. Norton's Return, a Council was upon that occaſion called; which Council adviſed Ipſwich to grant Mr. Norton a fair Diſmiſſion unto the Service of Boſton, and in Boſton, of all New England. However divers leſſer Councils, that were ſucceſſively called on this Occaſion, could not comfortably procure this Diſmiſſion, till at laſt the Governour and Magiſtrates of the Colony called a Council for this end; in their Order for which, they intimate their Concern, leſt while the two Churches were contending, which of them ſhould enjoy Mr. Norton, they ſhould both of them, and the whole Country with them, loſe that Reverend Perſon, by his proſecuting his Inclination to remove into England. Hereupon ſuch a Diſmiſſion could not be denied; but now Boſton joyfully receiving Mr. Norton, Ipſwich applied themſelves unto Mr. Cobbet, who afterwards continued a rich Bleſſing among them. And Mr. Norton did indeed, the part of a ſurviving Brother for Mr. Cotton, in raiſing up, or at leaſt keeping up the Name of that Great Man, by publiſhing a moſt elegant Account of his Life, part whereof was afterwards tranſcribed by Sam. Clark, into his Collections.

§ 20. Mr. Norton being now tranſplanted into that Garden which our Lord had in Boſton, did there bring forth much of that Fruit whereby the heavenly Father was glorified. There he preached, he wrote, he pray'd, and maintained without any Prelatical Epiſcopacy, a Care of all the Churches. And New-England being a Country whoſe Intereſts were moſt remarkably and generally enwrapped in its Eccleſiaſtical Circumſtances, there were many good Offices, which Mr. Norton did for the Peace of the whole Country, by his wiſe Counſels upon many Occaſions, given to its Counſellors. In truth, if he had never done any thing, but that one thing of preventing by his wiſe Interpoſition, the Acts of Hoſtility, which were like to paſs between Our People, and the Dutch at Manhatoes, that alone were well worth his coming into the Station which he now had at Boſton. But the Service which now moſt ſignalized him, was, his Agency at White-Hall; for it being found neceſſary to Addreſs the Reſtored King; the Worſhipful Simon Bradſtreet, Eſq; and this Reverend Mr. John Norton, were ſent over as Agents from the Colony, with an Addreſs unto His Majeſty; wherein there were, among others, the following Paſſages.

> ‘We ſupplicate Your Majeſty for your Gracious Protection of us, in the Continuance both of our Civil, and of our Religious Liberties; according to the Grantees known End of Suing for the Patent, conferr'd upon this Plantation by Your Royal Father. Our Liberty to Walk in the Faith of the Goſpel, with all good Conſcience, according to the Order of the Goſpel, was the Cauſe of our tranſporting our ſelves, with our Wives, our Little Ones, and our Subſtance, from that pleaſant Land, over the Atlantick Ocean, into the Vaſt Wilderneſs; chooſing rather the pure Scripture-Worſhip, with a good Conſcience, in this remote Wilderneſs, than the Pleaſures of England, with Submiſſion to the Impoſitions of the then ſo diſpoſed, and ſo far prevailing Hierarchy, which we could not do without an evil Conſcience—— We are not Seditious as to the Intereſts of Cæſar, nor Schiſmatical as to the Matters of Religion. We diſtinguiſh between Churches, and their Impurities.——We could not live without the Publick Worſhip of God, nor be permitted the Publick Worſhip, without ſuch a Yoke of Subſcription and Conformity, as we could not conſent unto without Sin. That we might, therefore, enjoy Divine Worſhip, free from Human Mixtures, without Offence to God, Man, and our own Conſciences, we, with Leave, but not without Tears, departed from our Country, Kindred, and Fathers Houſes, into this Patmos.——

It was in February 166½, that they began their Voyage, and it was in September following, that they returned: Mr. Norton's place being the mean time ſupplied by the Neighbouring Miniſters, taking of their Turns. And by their Hands the Country received the King's Letters, wherein he ſignified, That the Expreſſions of their Loyalty and Affection to Him, were very acceptable, and that confirming to them their Priviledges, He would cheriſh them with all manner of Encouragement and Protection.

§ 21. Such has been the Jealous Diſpoſition of our New-Englanders about their Dearly-bought Privileges, and ſuch alſo has been the Various Underſtanding of the People about the Extent of thoſe Privileges, that of all the Agents, which they have ſent over unto the Court of England, for now Forty Years together, I know not any One, who did not at his Return, meet with ſome very froward Entertainment among his Country-men: And there may be the Wiſdom of the Holy and Righteous God, as well as the Malice of the Evil One, acknowledged, in the Ordering of ſuch Temptations. Of theſe Temptations, a conſiderable ſhare fell to Mr. Norton; concerning whom there were many, who would not ſtick to ſay, that he had laid the Foundation of Ruine to all our Liberties; and his melancholly Mind imagined, that his beſt Friends began therefore to look awry upon him.

§ 22. In the Spring before his going for England, he Preached an Excellent Sermon unto the Repreſentatives of the whole Colony, Aſſembled at the Court of Election, wherein I take particular Notice of this Paſſage, Moſes was the Meekeſt Man on Earth, yet it went Ill with Moſes, 'tis ſaid, for their Sakes. How long did Moſes live at Meribah? Sure I am; it kill'd him in a ſhort Time; a Man of as Good a Temper as could be expected from a meer Man: I tell you, it will not only kill the People, but it will quickly kill Moſes too! And in the Spring after his Return from England, he found his own Obſervation in himſelf too much Exemplified. It was commonly judged, That the Smothered Griefs of his Mind, upon the Unkind Reſentments, which he thought many People had of his Faithful and Sincere Endeavours to ſerve them, did, more than a little, haſten his End; an End, whereat JOHN NORTON went, according to the Anagram of his Name INTO HONNOR. But he had the Privilege to enter into Immortality, without ſuch a Formal and Feeling Death, as the moſt of Mortals encounter with; for though in the Forenoon of April 5. 1663. it was his Deſign to have Preached in the Afternoon, he was that Afternoon taken with a ſudden Lypothymie, which preſently and eaſily carried him away to thoſe Glories, wherein the Weary are at Reſt; but it was a Dark Night, which the Inhabitants of Boſton had upon the Noiſe of his Death: Every Corner of the Town was filled with Lamentations, which left a Character upon that Night, unto this Day, not forgotten! His deareſt Neighbour, Mr. Richard Mather, wept over him at his Funeral, which was on the next Lecture Day, a Sermon moſt agreeable to the occaſion; And the Son of his Fellow-Traveller, Mr. Thomas Shepard, was one of the many, who beſtowed their Elegies upon him; uſing this, among his other Strokes.

The Schoolmens Doctors, whomſoe're they call,
Subtil, Seraphick, or Angelical:
Dull Souls! Their Tapers burnt exceeding Dim;
They might to School again, to learn of him.
Lombard muſt out of Date; we now profeſs
Norton, the Maſter of the Sentences;
Scotus, a Dunce to him; ſhould we compare
Aquinas, here, none to be named are.

Of a more Heavenly Strain, his Notions were,
More pure, Sublime, Scholaſtical, and clear.
More like th' Apoſtles Paul and John, I wiſt,
Was this our Orthodox Evangeliſt.

Which Lines accompanied with Mr. Wilſon's Anagrammatiſing of JOHANNES NORTONUS into Nonne is Honoratus? Will give him his deſerved Character.

§ 23. He that ſhall Read the Tragical Romances, written by that Brazen fac'd Lyar Bolſecus, concerning the Deaths of ſuch Men as Calvin and Beza, or ſuch monſtrous Writings as thoſe of Tympius, Cochleus, Genebard, and ſome others, who would bear the World in hand, that Luther and Oecolampadius Learn'd the Proteſtant Religion of the Devil, and were at laſt kill'd by him; and that Bucer had his Guts pull'd out and caſt about by the Devil; will not wonder if I tell him, that after the Death of Mr. Norton, the Quakers publiſhed a Libel, by them called, A Repreſentation to King and Parliament; wherein, pretending to Report ſome Remarkable Judgments upon their Perſecutors, they inſert this Paſſage, 'John Norton Chief Prieſt in Boſton, by the immediate Power of the Lord, was ſmitten, and as he was ſinking down by the Fire-ſide, being under juſt Judgment, he confeſſed the Hand of the Lord was upon him, and ſo he died. ——Which they mention, as a Judgment upon a Perſecutor. Whereas, the Death of this Good Man, was attended with no Circumſtances, but what unto a Good Man might be Eligible and Comfortable, and circumſtanced far otherwiſe than it was by thoſe Revilers Repreſented. But it was neceſſary for that Enchanted People, thus to revenge themſelves upon one, who amongſt his other Services to the Church of God, already mentioned, had, at the deſire of the General Court, written a Book, Entituled, The Heart of New-England rent at the Blaſphemies of the Preſent Generation; Or, a Brief Tractate concerning the Doctrine of the Quakers: Which Doctrine was in this Tractate ſolidly confuted. And perhaps, it had been better if this had been all the Confutation; which I add, becauſe I will not, I cannot make my ſelf a Vindicator of all the Severities, with which the Zeal of ſome Eminent Men hath ſometimes Enraged and Increaſed, rather than Reclaimed thoſe miſerable Hereticks: But wiſh that the Quakers may be treated as Queen Elizabeth directed the Lord Preſident of the North to treat the Papiſts; when ſhe adviſed him to convince them with Argument, rather than ſuppreſs them with Violence; to that purpoſe uſing of the Words of the Prophets, Nolo Mortem Peccatoris.

§ 24. Not long after his Death, his Friends publiſhed Three Sermons of his, which for the Circumſtances of them could have been Entituled, Theſe were the laſt Words of that Servant of the Lord. The Firſt of the Sermons, was the laſt Sermon, which he preach'd at the Court of Election at Boſton. It is on Jer. 10. 17. entituled, Sion the Out-caſt healed of her Wounds: And there are two or three Paſſages in it, which I cannot but recommend unto the peculiar Conſideration of the preſent Generation “To differ from our Orthodox, Pious, and Learned Brethren, is ſuch an Affliction to a Chriſtian and an Ingenuous Spirit, as nothing but Love to the Truth could arm a Man of Peace againſt. Our Profeſſion being in a way differing from theſe and thoſe, it concerns us, that our walking be very Cautelous, and that it be without giving any Juſt Offence.

Again, In matters of State and Church, Let it be ſhown that we are his Diſciples, who ſaid, Give unto Cæſar the things that are Cæſars, and Give unto God the things that are God's: And in Matters of Religion, Let it be known, That we are for Reformation and not for Separation. --- Once more, —— I may ſay thus much (and pardon my Speech) A more yielding Miniſtry unto the People than ours, I believe is not in the World. I beſeech you, Let not Cæſar be killed in the Senate, after he hath conquer'd in the Field. Let us acknowledge the Order of the Elderſhip, in our Churches, in their Way; and the Order of Councils in their Way, duely backed and encouraged: Without which Experience will witneſs that theſe Churches cannot long conſiſt.

The Second of the Sermons, was the laſt Sermon which he preached on the Lord's Day. It is on Joh. 14. 3. entituled, The Believers Conſolation in the Remembrance of his Heavenly Manſion, prepared for him by Chriſt.

The Third of the Sermons was the laſt Sermon, which he Preach'd on his Lecture. It is on Heb. 8. 5. entituled, The Evangelical Worſhipper, ſubjecting to the Preſcription and Sovereignty of Scripture Pattern.

§ 25. The Three Sermons thus Publiſhed as the laſt, or the Dropt Mantle of this Elias, are accompanied with the Tranſlation of a Letter, which was compoſed in Latin by Mr. Norton, and ſubſcribed by more than Forty of the Miniſters, on this Occaſion. The Famous John Dury having from the Year 1635. been moſt indefatigably labouring for a Pacification, between the Reformed Churches in Europe, communicated his Deſign to the Miniſters of New-England, requeſting their Concurrence and Countenance unto his Generous Undertaking. In anſwer to Him, this Letter was written; and there are one or two Paſſages, which I chuſe to tranſcribe from it, becauſe as well the Spirit of our Norton, as the Story of our Country, is therein Indigitated.

Redeunt in Memoriam, & redeunt quidem non ſine Sanctiori Sympathia, Beatæ illæ Animæ, Melancthonis & Parei ΝΥΝ ΕΝ ΑΓΙΟΙΣ, hic inter Reformatos, ille inter Evangelicos, Vir Conſummatiſſimus. Quorum Alter Haganoam iter faciens, ita Ingemuit.

‘We may here call to Mind, and not without ſome Sacred Sympathy, thoſe Bleſſed Souls, Melancthon and Pareus, now among the Bleſſed, the one no leſs Famous among the Reformed, than the other among the Evangelicks. Of theſe, the one going towards Haganoa, with Sighs uttered theſe Words,

In Synods hitherto we lived have,
And now in them, return unto the Grave.

‘The other ſeriouſly meditating on the Controverſy of the Euchariſt, brake forth into theſe Words; I am weary with Diſputing. Thus, if theſe might be Judges, we ought rather to Pray than Diſpute, and ſtudy how to Live, rather than Contend. And perhaps the Divines of either Part, after they have been wearied and broke in their Spirits with daily and continual Contentions, will more readily accept of the Counſels of Peace, which hitherto have been leſs acceptable, while the Senſe of Anger has been ſpurring of them: After they have been taught by long uſe, they may prefer the Waters of the Pacific Sea, before thoſe of Meribah.

§ 26. This was our Norton! And we might have given yet a fuller Account of him, if we could have ſeen the Diary, which he kept of his Daily Walk. However he was well known to be a Great Example of Holineſs, Watchfulneſs, and Extraordinary Wiſdom; and though he left no Children, yet he has a Better Name than that of Sons and of Daughters. Moreover, there was one Conſiderable part of Miniſterial Work, wherein he not only went beyond moſt of his Age, but alſo proved a Leader unto many Followers. Though the Miniſters of New-England counted it Unlawful for them, Ordinarily to perform their Miniſterial Aƈts of Solemn and Publick Prayer by Reading or Uſing any Forms of Prayer compoſed by other Perſons for them; They Reckoned an Ability to expreſs the Caſe of a Congregation in Prayer, to be a Miniſterial Gift, which our Lord forbids His Miniſters to Negleƈt; They ſuppoſed that a Miniſter, who ſhould only Read Forms of Sermons compoſed for him, would as Truly Diſcharge the Duty of Preaching, as One that ſhould only Read ſuch Forms of Prayers, would the Duty of Praying, in it: They could not find, that any Humane Forms of Prayers, were much uſed in any part of the Church, until about Four Hundred Years after Chriſt, nor any made for more than ſome Single Province, until Six Hundred Years; nor any Impoſed until Eight Hundred, when all manner of Ill-formed Things began to be found in the Temple of God: Nevertheleſs very many of our Greateſt Miniſters, in our more Early times, did not uſe to Expatiate with ſuch a Significant and Admirable Variety in their Prayers before their Sermons, as many of our Later Times have attained unto: Nor indeed Then did They, nor Still do We, count all Forms of Prayer Simply Unlawful. But the more General Improvements and Expreſſions of The Gift of Prayer, in our Miniſters, have Since been the matter of Obſervation; and particularly Mr. Norton, therein was truly Admirable! It even Tranſported the Souls of his Hearers to accompany him in his Devotions, wherein his Graces would make Wonderful Salleys into the vaſt Field of Entertainments, and Acknowledgments, with which we are furniſhed in the New-Covenant, for our Prayers. I have heard of a Godly Man in Ipſwich, who after Mr. Norton's going to Boſton, would Ordinarily Travel on foot from Ipſwich to Boſton, which is about Thirty Miles, for nothing but the Weekly Leƈture there; and he would profeſs, That it was worth a Great Journey, to be a Partaker in one of Mr. Norton's Prayers. This Pattern of Prayer in Mr. Norton, had ſome Influence upon it, that ſince his Time, our Pulpits have been fuller than ever of Experimental Demonſtrations, that the Miniſters of the Goſpel may on all Occaſions preſent their Supplications before God, in the Diſcharge of their Miniſtry, with more Pertinent, more Affeƈting, more Expanded Enlargements, than any Form could Afford unto them. New England can ſhow, even Young Miniſters, who never did in all all Things Repeat One Prayer twice over, in that part of their Miniſtry wherein we are Firſt of All, to make Supplications, Prayers, Interceſſions, and Thankſgivings; and yet ſometimes, for much more than an Hour together, they pour out their Souls unto the Almighty God in ſuch a Fervent, Copious, and yet Proper Manner, that their moſt Critical Auditors, can complain of Nothing Diſagreeable, but profeſs themſelves extreamly Edifyed.

But our Praying Norton, who while he was among us, Pray'd with the Tongue of Angels, is now gone to Praiſe with the Angels for ever.

CHAP. III.

Memoria WILSONIA, the LIFE of Mr. JOHN WILSON.

§ 1. SUCH is the Natural Tendency in Humane Minds to Poetry, That as 'tis obſerved, the Roman Hiſtorian, in the very firſt Line of his Hiſtory, fell upon a Verſe,

Urbem Romam, In Principio Reges habuere;

So the Roman Orator, though a very Mean Poet, yet making an Oration for a Good One, could not let his Firſt Sentence paſs him, without a perfect Hexameter,

In Qua me non Inficior mediocriter Eſſe.

If therefore, I were not of all Men the moſt Unpoetical, my Reader might now expect an Entertainment altogether in Verſe; for I am going to write the Life of that New-Engliſh Divine, who had ſo nimble a Faculty of putting his Devout Thoughts into Verſe, that he Signalized himſelf by the Greateſt Frequency, perhaps, that ever Man uſed, of ſending Poems to all Perſons, in all Places, on all Occaſions; and upon this, as well as upon Greater Accounts, was a David unto the Flocks of our Lord in the Wilderneſs:

Quicquid tentabat Dicere, Verſus erat;

Wherein, if the Curious Reliſhed the Piety ſometimes rather than the Poetry, the Capacity of the Moſt, therein to be accomodated, muſt be conſidered. But I intend no further Account of this matter, than what is given by his Worthy Son, (Reprinting at Boſton in the Year 1680. the Verſes of his Father, upon the Famous Deliverances of the Engliſh Nation Printed at London, as long ago as the Year 1626.) Whoſe Words are, What Volumes hath he Penned, for the help of Others, in their ſeveral Changes of Condition? How was his Heart full of Good Matter? And his Verſes paſt, like to the Handkerchiefs carried from Paul to uphold the Diſconſolate, and heal their Wounded Souls? For indeed this is the Leaſt Thing that we have to Relate of that Great Saint; and accordingly, it is under a more conſiderable Character, that I muſt now exhibit him, even as a Father to the Infant Colonies of New-England.

§ 2. Mr. John Wilſon, deſcending from Eminent Anceſtors, was born at Windſor in the Wonderful Year 1588. The third Son of Dr. William Wilſon, a Prebend of St. Pauls, of Rocheſter and of Winſor, and Rector of Cliff: Having for his Mother, a Neece of Dr. Edmund Grindal, the moſt Worthily Renowned Arch-Biſhop of Canterbury. His exact Education under his Parents, which betimes Tinged him with an Averſation to Vice, and above all, to the very ſhadow of a Lye, fitted him to undergo the further Education, which he received in Eaton Colledge, under Udal (and Langley) whom now we may venture, after Poor Tom Tuſſer, to call, The ſevereſt of Men. Here he was moſt Remarkably twice delivered from drowning; but at his Book, he made ſuch Proficiency, that while he was the Leaſt Boy in the School, he was made a Propoſitor; and when the Duke of Biron, Embaſſador from the French King Henry IV. to Queen Elizabeth, viſited the School, he made a Latin Oration, for which the Duke beſtowed Three Angels upon him. After four Years Continuance at Eaton, he was removed unto Cambridge, between the Fourteenth and Fifteenth Year of his Age; and admitted into Kings Colledge in the Year 1602. When he came to ſtand for a Fellowſhip in that Colledge, his Antipathy to ſome Horrid Wickedneſſes, whereto a Deteſtable Wretch that had been acquainted with him, would have betray'd him, cauſed that Malicious Wretch by Deviſed and Accurſed Slanders to ruin ſo far the Reputation of this Chaſt Youth with the other Fellows, that had not the Provoſt, who was a Serious and a Reverend Perſon, interpoſed for him, he had utterly loſt his Priviledge; which now by the Major Vote he obtained. But this Affliction put him upon many Thoughts and Prayers before the Lord.

§ 3. He had hitherto been according to his good Education, very civilly and ſoberly diſpoſed: But being by the good Hand of God, led unto the Miniſtry of ſuch holy Men as Mr. Bains, Dr. Taylor, Dr. Chaderton, he was by their Sermons enlightned and awakened, unto more ſolicitous Enquiries after, The one thing yet lacking in him. The ſerious Diſpoſitions of his Mind, were now ſuch, that beſides his purſuance after the Works of Repentance in himſelf, he took no little pains to purſue it in others; eſpecially the Malefactors in the Priſons, which he viſited with a devout, ſedulous, and ſucceſsful Induſtry. Nevertheleſs, being foreſtalled with Prejudices againſt the Puritans of thoſe Times, as if they had held, he knew not well what odd Things, he declined their Acquaintance; altho' his good Converſation had made him to be accounted one of them himſelf. Until going to a Bookſeller's Shop, to augment his well-furniſh'd Library, he light upon that famous Book of Mr. Richard Rogers, called, The Seven Treatiſes: Which when he had read, he ſo affected, not only the Matter, but alſo the Author of the Book, that he took a Journey unto Wetherſfield, on purpoſe to hear a Sermon from that Boanerges. When he had heard the Heavenly Paſſages that fell from the Lips of that worthy Man, privately, as well as publickly, and compared therewithal the Writings of Greenham, of Dod, and of Dent, eſpecially, The Pathway to Heaven, written by the Author laſt mentioned, he ſaw that they who were Nick-named Puritans, were like to be the deſirableſt Companions, for one that intended his own everlaſting Happineſs; and purſuant unto the Advice which he had from Dr. Ames, he aſſociated himſelf with a Pious Company in the Univerſity; who kept their Meetings in Mr. Wilſon's Chamber, for Prayer, Faſting, Holy Conference, and the Exerciſes of true Devotion.

§ 4. But now perceiving many good Men to ſcruple many of the Rites practiſed and impoſed in the Church of England, he furniſhed himſelf with all the Books that he could find written on the Caſe of Conformity, both Pro and Con, and pondered with a moſt Conſcientious Deliberation, the Arguments on both ſides produced. He was hereby ſo convinced of the Evil in Conformity, that at length, for his obſervable Omiſſion, of certain Uninſtituted Ceremonies in the Worſhip of God, the Biſhop of Lincoln then viſiting the Univerſity, pronounced upon him the Sentence of Quindenum; that is, that beſides other Mortifications, he muſt within Fifteen Days have been expelled, if he continued in his Offence. His Father being hereof adviſed, with all Paternal Affection, wrote unto him to Conform; and at the ſame time interceded with the Biſhop, that he might have a Quarter of a Year allowed him; in which time, if he could not be reduced, he ſhould then leave his Fellowſhip in the Colledge. Hereupon he ſent him unto ſeveral Doctors of Great Fame, to get his Objections reſolved; but when much Diſcourſe, and much Writing, had paſſed between them, he was rather the more confirmed in his Principles about Church-Reformation. Wherefore his Father, then diverting him from the Deſigns of the Miniſtry, diſpoſed him to the Inns of Court; where he fell into Acquaintance with ſome young Gentlemen, who aſſociated with him in conſtant Exerciſes of Devotion; to which Meetings the repeated Sermons of Dr. Gouge were a continual Entertainment: And here it was, that he came into the Advantageous Knowledge of the Learned Scultetus, Chaplain to the Prince Palatine of the Rhine, then making ſome ſtay in England.

§ 5. When he had continued Three Years at the Inns of Court, his Father diſcerning his Diſpoſition to be a Miniſter of the Goſpel, permitted his proceeding Maſter of Arts, in the Univerſity of Cambridge; but adviſed him to addreſs another Colledge, than that where he had formerly met with Difficulties. Dr. Cary, who was then Vice Chancellor, underſtanding his former Circumſtances, would not Admit him without Subſcription; but he refuſed to Subſcribe. In this Diſtreſs he repaired unto his Father, at whoſe Houſe there happened then to be preſent, the Counteſs of Bedford's chief Gentleman, who had Buſineſs with the Earl of Northampton, the Chancellor of the Univerſity. And this Noble Perſon, upon the Information which that Gentleman gave him of the matter, preſently wrote a Letter to the Vice-Chancellor, on the behalf of our young Wilſon; whereupon he received his Degree, and continued a while after this, in Emanuel-Colledge: From whence he made frequent and uſeful Viſits unto his Friends in the Counties adjoining, and became further fitted for his intended Service. But while he was paſſing under theſe Changes, he took up a Reſolution which he thus expreſſed before the Lord: That if the Lord would grant him a Liberty of Conſcience, with Purity of Worſhip, he would be content, yea thankful, tho' it were at the furthermoſt End of the World. A moſt Prophetical Reſolution!

§ 6. At length preaching his firſt Sermon at Newport, he ſet his Hand unto that Plough, from whence he never afterwards looked back: Not very long after which, his Father lying on his Death bed, he kneeled, in his Turn, before him, for his Bleſſing, and brought with him for a ſhare in that Bleſſing, the Vertuous young Gentlewoman, the Daughter of the Lady Manſfield, (Widow of Sir John Manſfield, Maſter of the Minories) and the Queen's Surveyor) whom he deſigned afterwards to marry: Whereupon the old Gentleman ſaid, Ah, John, I have taken much Care about thee, ſuch time as thou waſt in the Univerſity, becauſe thou wouldeſt not Conform; I would fain have brought thee to ſome higher Preferment than thou haſt yet attained unto: I ſee thy Conſcience is very ſcrupulous, concerning ſome things that have been obſerved and impoſed in the Church: Nevertheleſs, I have rejoiced to ſee the Grace and Fear of God in thy Heart; and ſeeing thou haſt kept a good Conſcience hitherto, and walked according to thy Light, ſo do ſtill; and go by the Rules of God's Holy Word: The Lord bleſs thee, and her, whom thou haſt choſen to be the Companion of thy Life! Among other places where he now preached, Moreclake was one; where his Non-Conformity expoſed him to the Rage of Perſecution; but by the Friendſhip of the Juſtice, namely Sir William Bird, a Kinſman of his Wife, and by a Miſtake of the Informers, the Rage of that Storm was moderated.

§ 7. After this he lived as a Chaplain ſucceſſively, in Honourable and Religious Families; and at laſt was invited unto the Houſe of the moſt Pious Lady Scudamore. Here Mr. Wilſon obſerving the Diſcourſe of the Gentry at the Table, on the Lord's Day, to be too diſagreeable unto the devout Frame to be maintained on ſuch a day, at length he zealouſly ſtood up at the Table, with Words to this purpoſe, I will make bold to ſpeak a Word or two: This is the Lord's Holy Day, and we have been hearing his Word, and after the Word preached, every one ſhould think, and ſpeak about ſuch things as have been delivered in the Name of God, and not laviſh out the time in Diſcourſes about Hawks and Hounds. Whereupon a Gentleman then preſent made this handſome and civil Anſwer: Sir, We deſerve all of us to be thus reproved by you; this is indeed the Sabbath-day, and we ſhould ſurely have better Diſcourſe; I hope it will be a Warning to us. Notwithſtanding this, the next Lord's Day, the Gentry at the Table were at their Old Notes; which cauſed Mr. Wilſon again to tell them, That the Hawks which they talk'd of, were the Birds that picked up the Seed of the Word, after the ſowing of it; and pray'd them, That their Talk might be of ſuch things, as might ſanctifie the Day, and edifie their own Souls: Which cauſed the former Gentleman to renew his former Thankfulneſs for the Admonition. But Mr. Leigh, the Lady's Husband, was very angry; whereof when the Lady adviſed Mr. Wilſon, wiſhing him to ſay ſomething that might ſatisfie him, he replied, Good Madam, I know not wherein I have given any juſt Offence; and therefore I know of no Satisfaction that I owe: Your Ladiſhip has invited me to preach the good Word of God among you; and ſo I have endeavoured according to my Ability: Now ſuch Diſcourſe as this, on the Lord's Day, is profane and diſorderly: If your Husband like me not, I will be gone. When the Lady informed her Husband how peremptory Mr. Wilſon was in this matter, he mended his Countenance and Carriage; and the Effect of this Reproof was, that unſuitable Diſcourſe, on the Lord's Day, was cured among them.

§ 8. Removing from this Family, after he had been a while at Henly, he continued for three Years together, preaching at four places, by turns, which lay near one another, on the Edges of Suffolk, namely Bumſted, Stoke, Clare, and Candiſh. Here ſome of Sudbury happening to hear him, they invited him to ſucceed the eminent old Mr. Jenkins, with which Invitation he cheerfully complied, and the more cheerfully becauſe of his Opportunity to be near old Mr. Richard Rogers, from whom afterwards when dying, he received a Bleſſing among his Children; yea, to encourage his Acceptance of this place, the very Reader of the Pariſh did ſubſcribe, with many Scores of others, their Deſires of it; and yet he accepted not the Paſtoral Charge of the Place, without a Solemn Day of Prayer with Faſting, (wherein the Neighbouring Miniſters aſſiſted) at his Election: Great Notice was now taken of the Succeſs, which God gave unto his Labours, in this famous Town; among other Inſtances whereof, one was this: A Tradeſman much given to Stealing, as well as other profane and vicious Practices, one Day ſeeing People flock to Mr. Wilſon's Lecture, thought with himſelf, Why ſhould I tarry at home to work, when ſo many go to hear a Sermon? Wherefore, for the ſake of Company, he went unto the Lecture too; but when he came, he found a Sermon, as it were, particularly directed unto himſelf, on Eph. 4. 28. Let him that hath ſtole, ſteal no more; and ſuch was the Impreſſion thereof upon his Heart, that from this time he became a changed and pious Man.

§ 9. But if they that will live godlily muſt ſuffer Perſecution, a peculiar ſhare of it muſt fall upon them, who are zealous and uſeful Inſtruments to make others live ſo. Mr. Wilſon had a ſhare of this Perſecution; and one A—n, was a principal Author of it. This A—n had formerly been an Apprentice in London, where the Biſhops detained him ſome Years, under an hard Impriſonment, becauſe he refuſed the Oath Ex Officio, which was preſſed upon him to tell, Whether he had never heard his Maſter pray againſt the Biſhop?

The Charity of well-diſpoſed People now ſupported him, till he got abroad, recommended by his hard Sufferings, unto the good Affections of the Puritans, at whoſe Meetings he became ſo converſant, and thereupon ſuch a forward and zealous Profeſſor, that at length he took upon him, under the Confidence of ſome Latinity, whereof he was Owner, to be a ſort of Preacher among them. This Man would Reverence Mr. Wilſon as his Father, and yet upon the Provocation of ſeeing Mr. Wilſon more highly Valued and Honoured than himſelf, he not only became a Conformiſt himſelf, but alſo, as Apoſtates uſe to be, a malignant and violent Perſecutor of thoſe from whom he had Apoſtatized. By his means Mr. Wilſon was put into trouble in the Biſhops Courts; from whence his Deliverance was at length obtained by certain powerful Mediators. And once by his Tricks, the moſt noted Purſivant of thoſe Times, was employed for the ſeizing of Mr. Wilſon; but tho' he ſeized upon many Scores of the People coming from the Lecture, he diſmiſſed the reſt, becauſe he could not meet with Mr. Wilſon himſelf, who by a ſpecial Providence, went out of his direct Way, to viſit a worthy Neighbour, and ſo eſcaped this mighty Hunter.

Afterwards an eminent Lady, happening innocently to make ſome Compariſon between the preaching of Mr. Wilſon, and one Dr. B. of B. the angry Doctor preſently applied himſelf unto the Biſhop of London, who for a while ſuſpended him. And when that Storm was over, he with ſeveral other worthy Miniſters, came to be wholly ſilenced in another, that was raiſed upon Complaints made by one Mr. Bird, unto the Biſhop of Norwich againſt them. Concerning this Ill Bird, there happened one paſſage hereupon, which had in it ſomething extraordinary. Falling very ſick, he had the help of a famous and skilful Phyſician, one Dr. Duke of Colcheſter; who having left his Patient, in his Opinion, ſafely recovered, gave Mr. Wilſon a Viſit, with an Account of it. Recovered! ſays Mr. Wilſon, You are miſtaken, Mr. Doctor; he's a dead Man! The Doctor anſwered, If ever I recovered a ſick Man in my Life, that Man is recovered. But Mr. Wilſon replied, No, Mr. Doctor, he's a dead Man, he ſhall not live: Mark my Words! The Doctor ſmiled; but for all that, before they parted, the News was brought them, that the Man was dead indeed, and the Lord known by the Judgment which he executed. But at laſt Mr. Wilſon obtained from the truly Noble Earl of Warwick, to ſign a Letter, which the Earl bid himſelf to draw up, unto the Biſhop, on his behalf; by the Operation of which Letter, his Liberty, for the Exerciſe of his Miniſtry, was again procured. This Biſhop was the well known Dr. Harſnet, who a little while after this, travelling Northward, upon Deſigns of Miſchief againſt the Reforming Paſtors and Chriſtians there, certain Miniſters of the South ſet apart a Day for ſolemn Faſting and Prayer, to implore the Help of Heaven againſt thoſe Deſigns, and on that very Day, he was taken with a Sore and an odd Fit, which cauſed him to ſtop at a blind Houſe of Entertainment on the Road, where he ſuddenly died.

§ 10. At laſt, being perſecuted in one Country, he muſt flee into another. The Plantation of a New Engliſh Colony was begun: And Mr. Wilſon, with ſome of his Neighbours, embarked themſelves in the Fleet, which came over thither in the Year 1630. Where he applied himſelf with with all the Vigor imaginable, to encourage the poor People, under the Difficulties of their New Plantation. This good People buried near Two hundred of their Number, within a Quarter of a Year after their firſt Landing; which cauſed Mr. Wilſon particularly to endeavour their Conſolation, by preaching on Jacob's not being diſheartned by the Death of his neareſt Friends in the way, when God had called him to remove. And how remarkably, perhaps I might ſay, exceſſively liberal he was, in employing his Eſtate for the Relief of the Needy, every ſuch one ſo beheld him, as to reckon him the Father of them all: Yea, the poor Indians themſelves alſo taſted of his Bounty. If it were celebrated, as the Glory of Bellarmine, that he would ſell his Goods, to convert them into Alms for the Poor; yea, that Quadam die proprium Atramentarium Argenteolum, ut ditaret Inopes, inter pignora obligavit: Our Mr. Wilſon, tho' a greater Diſclaimer of Merit than Bellarmine was, not only in his Writings, but on his Death bed it ſelf, yet came not behind Bellarmine for the extenſion of his Charity. To give Inſtances of his, even over-doing Liberality, would be to do it Injuries; for indeed they were innumerable: He acted as if the Primitive Agreement of having all Things in common, had been of all Things, the moſt agreeable unto him. I ſhall Sum up all, in the Lines of an elegant Elegy, which Mr. Samuel Bache, an Ingenious Merchant, made upon him, at his Death:

When as the Poor want Succour, where is he
Can ſay, all can be ſaid, Extempore?
Vie with the Lightning, and melt down to th' quick
Their Souls, and make themſelves their Pockets pick?
Where's ſuch a Leader, thus has got the ſlight
T' teach holy Hands to War, Fingers to fight;
Their Arrow hit? Bowels to Bowels meant it,
God, Chriſt, and Saints, accept, but Wilſon ſent it.
Which way ſo e'er the Propoſitions move,
The Ergo of his Syllogiſms Love.
So bountiful to all: But if the Poor
Was Chriſtian too, all's Money went, and more,
His Coat, Rug, Blanket, Gloves; he thought their due
Was all his Money, Garments, one of two.

But he was moſt ſet upon the Main Buſineſs of this new Plantation; which was, To ſettle and enjoy the Ordinances of the Goſpel, and Worſhip the Lord Jeſus Chriſt according to his own Inſtitutions: And accordingly, he, with the Governour, and others that came with him on the ſame Account, combined into a Church-State, with all convenient Expedition.

§ 11. Mr. Wilſon's Removal to New England, was rendred the more difficult, by the Indiſpoſition of his deareſt Conſort thereunto; but he hoping, that according to a Dream which he had before his coming hither, That he ſaw here a little Temple riſing out of the Ground, which by Degrees increaſed into a very high and large Dimenſions, the Lord had a Temple to build in theſe Regions; reſolved never to be diſcouraged from his Undertaking. Wherefore having firſt ſent over an encouraging Account of the good Order, both Civil and Sacred, which now began to be eſtabliſhed in the Plantation, he did himſelf return into England, that he might further purſue the Effect thereof; and accordingly he made it his Buſineſs, where ever he came, to draw as many good Men as he could, into this Country with him. His Wife remained unperſwadable, till upon Prayer with Faſting before the Almighty Turner of Hearts, he received an Anſwer, in her becoming willing to accompany him over an Ocean into a Wilderneſs. A very ſorrowful Parting they now had from their old Friends in Sudbury, but a ſafe and quick paſſage over the Atlantic; and whereas the Church of Boſton, obſerving that he arrived not at the time expected, had ſet apart a Day of Humiliation on his behalf, his joyful Arrival before the Day, cauſed them to turn it into a Day of Thankſgiving. But Mrs. Wilſon being thus perſwaded over, into the Difficulties of an American Deſart, I have heard, that her Kinſman, old Mr. Dod, for her Conſolation under thoſe Difficulties, did ſend her a Preſent, with an Advice, which he had in it, ſomething of Curioſity. He ſent her, at the ſame time, a Braſs Counter, a Silver Crown, and a Gold Jacobus; all of them ſeverally wrapped up: With this Inſtruction unto the Gentleman who carried it: That he ſhould firſt of all deliver only the Counter, and if ſhe receiv'd it with any ſhew of Diſcontent, he ſhould then take no further Notice of her; but if ſhe gratefully reſented that ſmall Thing, for the ſake of the Hand it came from, he ſhould then go on to deliver the Silver, and ſo the Gold: But withal aſſure her, That ſuch would be the Diſpenſations of God unto her, and the other good People of New-England: If they would be content and thankful with ſuch little Things, as God at firſt beſtow'd upon them, they ſhould, in time, have Silver and Gold enough. Mrs. Wilſon accordingly, by her cheerful Entertainment of the leaſt Remembrance from good old Mr. Dod, gave the Gentleman occaſion to go through with his whole Preſent, and the annexed Advice; which hath in a good Meaſure been accompliſhed.

§ 12. It was not long before Mr. Wilſon's Return to England once more, was obliged by the Death of his Brother, whoſe Will, becauſe it bequeathed a Legacy of a Thouſand Pounds unto New-England, gave Satisfaction unto our Mr. Wilſon, tho' it was otherwiſe injurious unto himſelf. A Tedious and Winter-Voyage he now had; being twice forced into Ireland, where firſt at Galloway, then at Kingſale, afterwards at Bandon-Bridge, he occaſionally, but vigorouſly and ſucceſsfully ſerved the Kingdom of God. At laſt he got ſafe among his old Friends at Sudbury; according to the Prediction which he had let fall in his former Farewel unto them: It may be John Wilſon may come and ſee Sudbury once again. From whence, viſiting Mr. Nathanael Rogers, at Aſſington, where he arrived before their Morning Prayers; Mr. Rogers asked him to ſay ſomething upon the Chapter that was read, which happened then to be the firſt Chapter in the firſt Book of Chronicles; and from a Paragraph of meer proper Names, that ſeemed altogether barren of any edifying Matter, he raiſed ſo many fruitful and uſeſul Notes, that a pious Perſon then preſent, amazed thereat, could have no reſt, without going over into America after him. Having diſpatched his Affairs in England, he again embarked for New England, in Company with four Miniſters, and near two hundred Paſſengers, whereof ſome were Perſons of conſiderable Quality: But they had all been loſt by a large Leak ſprang in the Ship, if God had not, on a Day of Solemn Faſting, and Prayer, kept on board for that purpoſe, mercifully diſcovered this dangerous Leak unto them.

§ 13. That Phœnix of his Age, Dr. Ames, would ſay, That if he might have his Option of the beſt Condition that he could propound unto himſelf on this ſide Heaven, it would be, that he might be the Teacher of a Congregational Church, whereof Mr. Wilſon ſhould be the Paſtor. This Happineſs, this Priviledge, now had Mr. Cotton in the Church of Boſton. But Satan envious at the Proſperity of that flouriſhing Church, raiſed a Storm of Antinomian, and Familiſtical Errors, which had like to have thrown all into an irrecoverable Confuſion, if the good God had not remarkably bleſſed the Endeavours of a Synod; and Mr. Wilſon, for a while, met with hard meaſure for his early oppoſition to thoſe Errors, until by the help of that Synod, the Storm was weathered out. At the beginning of that Aſſembly, after much Diſcourſe againſt the Unſcriptural Enthuſiaſms, and Revelations, then by ſome contended for, Mr. Wilſon propoſed, You that are againſt theſe things, and that are for the Spirit and the Word together, hold up your Hands! And the multitude of Hands then held up, was a comfortable and encouraging Introduction unto the other Proceedings. At the Concluſion of that Aſſembly, a Catalogue of the Errors to be condemned, was produced; whereof when one asked, What ſhall be done with them? The wonted Zeal of Mr. Wilſon made this blunt Anſwer, Let them go to the Devil of Hell, from whence they came.

In the midſt of theſe Temptations alſo, he was by a Lot, choſen to accompany the Forces, then ſent forth upon an Expedition againſt the Pequod Indians; which he did with ſo much Faith and Joy, that he profeſſed himſelf as fully ſatisfied, that God would give the Engliſh a Victory over thoſe Enemies, as if he had ſeen the Victory already obtained. And the whole Country quickly ſhared with him in the Conſolations of that remarkable Victory.

§ 14. In the Wilderneſs he met with his Difficulties; for beſides the loſs of Houſes, divers times by Fire, which yet he bore with ſuch a cheerful Submiſſion, that once one that met him on the Road, informing of him, Sir, I have ſad News for you; while you have been abroad, your Houſe is burnt. His firſt Anſwer was, Bleſſed be God: He has burnt this Houſe, becauſe he intends to give me a better. (Which accordingly came to paſs.)

He was alſo put upon complying with the Inclinations of his Eldeſt Son to Travel; who accordingly travelled, firſt into Holland, then into Italy, where he proceeded a Doctor of Phyſick, and ſo returned into England, excellently well adorned with all the Accompliſhments of a moſt pious and uſeful Gentleman. But this worthy Perſon died about the Year 1658. And this haſtened the Death of his Mother, e'er the Year came about; which more than Doubled the Grief of his Father. And theſe Afflictions were yet further embittered by the Death of his Eldeſt Daughter Mrs. Rogers, in Child-bed with her firſt Child; at whoſe Interment, though he could not but expreſs a deal of Sorrow, yet he did it with ſo much Patience, that In Token, he ſaid, of his Grounded and Joyful Hopes, to meet her again in the Morning of the Reſurrection, and of his Willingneſs to reſign her into the Hands of him who would make all Things work together for good, he himſelf took the Spade, and threw in the firſt Shovelful of Earth upon her. And not long after, he buried Three or Four of his Grand children by another Daughter Mrs. Danforth (yet living with her Worthy Son in Law Edward Bromfield, Eſq; in Boſton) whereof one lying by the Walls, on a Day of Publick Thankſgiving, this Holy Man then preached a moſt Savoury Sermon on Job 1. 21. The Lord hath given, and the Lord hath taken away, bleſſed be the Name of the Lord. The next Child, although ſo weakly that all deſpaired of its Life, his Prophetical Grandfather ſaid, Call him John, I believe in God, he ſhall live, and be a Prophet too, and do God Service in his Generation! Which is, at this Day, fulfilled in Mr. John Danforth, the preſent Paſtor to the Church of Dorcheſter. Encountring with ſuch, and many other Exerciſes his Years rolled away, till he had ſerved New-England, Three Years before Mr. Cotton's coming over, Twenty Years with him; Ten Years with Mr. Norton, and Four Years after him.

§ 15. In his Younger Time, he had been uſed unto a more Methodical way of Preaching, and was therefore admired above many, by no leſs Auditors than Dr. Goodwin, Mr. Burroughs, and Mr. Bridge, when they travelled from Cambridge into Eſſex, on purpoſe to obſerve the Miniſters in that County; but after he became a Paſtor, joined with ſuch Illuminating Teachers, he gave himſelf a Liberty to Preach more after the Primitive Manner; without any diſtinct Propoſitions, but chiefly in Exhortations and Admonitions, and good wholeſome Councils, tending to excite good Motions in the Minds of his Hearers; (but upon the ſame Texts that were Doctrinally handled by his Colleague inſtantly before:) and yet ſometimes his Paſtoral Diſcourſes had ſuch a Spirit in them, that Mr. Shepard would ſay, Methinks I hear an Apoſtle, when I hear this Man! Yea, even one of his Ex Tempore Sermons, has been ſince his Death, counted worthy to be publiſhed unto the World. The Great Lecture of Boſton, being diſappointed of him, that ſhould have Preached it, Mr. Wilſon Preached that Lecture on a Text occuring in the Chapter that had been read that Morning in his Family, Jer. 29. 8.--- Neither hearken to your Dreams, which you cauſe to be Dreamed; from whence he gave a Seaſonable Warning unto the People againſt the Dreams, wherewith ſundry ſorts of Opinioniſts, have been endeavouring to ſeduce them. It was the laſt Boſton Lecture that ever he Preached (Nov. 16. 1665.) and one who writ after him, in Short hand, about a Dozen Years after Publiſhed it. But his laſt Sermon he Preached at Roxbury Lecture, for his moſt Worthy Son-in-Law Mr. Danforth; and after he had read his Text, which was in the Beginnings and Concluſions of ſundry of the laſt Pſalms, with a Seraphical Voice, he added, If I were ſure this were the laſt Sermon that ever I ſhould Preach, and theſe the laſt Words that ever I ſhould ſpeak, yet I would ſtill ſay, Hallelujah, Hallelujah, Praiſe ye the Lord! Thus he ended his Miniſtry on Earth, thus he began his Poſſeſſion of Heaven with Hallelujahs.

§ 16. Indeed, if the Picture of this Good, and therein Great Man, were to be exactly given, Great Zeal, with Great Love, would be the two Principal Strokes, that joined with Orthodoxy, ſhould make up his Pourtraiture. He had the Zeal of a Phineas, I had almoſt ſaid of a Seraphim, in teſtifying againſt every thing that he thought offenſive unto God. The Opinioniſts, which attempted at any time to debaſe the Scripture, or confound the Order, embraced in our Churches, underwent the moſt pungent Animadverſions of this his Devout Zeal; whence, when a certain Aſſembly of People, which he approved not, had ſet up in Boſton, he charged all his Family, that they ſhould never dare, ſo much as once to enter into that Aſſembly; I charge you, ſaid he, That you do not once go to hear them; for whatſoever they may pretend, they will rob you of Ordinances, rob you of your Souls, rob you of your God. But though he were thus, like John, a Son of Thunder againſt Saducees, yet he was like that Bleſſed and Beloved Apoſtle alſo, all made up of Love. He was full of Affection, and ready to help and relieve and comfort the Diſtreſſed; his Houſe was Renowned for Hoſpitality, and his Purſe was continually emptying it ſelf into the hands of the Needy: From which Diſpoſition of Love in him, there once happened this Paſſage; when he was beholding a great Muſter of Souldiers, a Gentleman then preſent ſaid unto him, Sir, I'll tell you a great Thing; here's a mighty Body of People, and there is not Seven of them all, but what loves Mr. Wilſon; but that Gracious Man preſently and pleaſantly replied, Sir, I'll tell you as good a Thing as that, here's a mighty Body of People, and there is not ſo much as one of them all, but Mr. Wilſon loves him. Thus he did, by his own Example, notably Preach that Leſſon, which a Gentleman found in the Anagram of his Name, Wiſh no one ill: And thus did he continue, to Do every one good, until his Death gave the ſame Gentleman Occaſion thus to Elegize upon him:

Now may Celeſtial Spirits ſing yet Higher,
Since one more's added to their Sacred Quire;
Wilſon the Holy, whoſe Good Name doth ſtill,
In Language Sweet, bid us [Wiſh no Ill.]

§ 17. He was one, that conſulting not only his own Edification, but the Encouragement of the Miniſtry, and of Religion, with an Indefatigable Diligence viſited the Congregations of the Neighbouring Towns, at their Weekly Lectures, until the Weakneſſes of Old Age rendered him uncapable. And it was a delightful thing then to ſee upon every Recurring Opportunity, a large Company of Chriſtians, and even Magiſtrates and Miniſters among them, and Mr. Wilſon in the Head of them, viſiting the Lectures in all the Vicinage, with ſuch Heavenly Diſcourſes on the Road, as cauſed the Hearts of the Diſciples to burn within them: And indeed it was remark'd, That though the Chriſtians then ſpent leſs Time in the Shop, or Field, than they do now, yet they did in both proſper more. But for Mr. Wilſon, I am ſaying, That a Lecture was a Treaſure unto him; he Priz'd it, he ſought it, until Old Age at length brought with it a Sickneſs, which a long while confin'd him. In this Illneſs he took a Solemn Farewel of the Miniſters, who had their Weekly Meetings at his Hoſpitable Houſe, and were now come together from all parts, at the Anniverſary Election for the Government of the Colony. They asked him to declare ſolemnly, what he thought might be the Sins, which provoked the Diſpleaſure of God againſt the Country. Whereto his Anſwer was, I have long feared ſeveral Sins; Whereof, one, he ſaid, was Corahiſm; “That is, when People riſe up as Corah againſt their Miniſters, as if they took too much upon them, when indeed they do but rule for Chriſt, and according to Chriſt; yet it is nothing for a Brother to ſtand up and oppoſe, without Scripture or Reaſon, the Word of an Elder, ſaying [I am not ſatisfied!] And hence, if he do not like the Adminiſtration (be it Baptiſm or the like) he will turn his back upon God and his Ordinances, and go away. And for our Neglect of Baptiſing the Children of the Church, thoſe that ſome call Grand-children, I think God is provoked by it. Another Sin (ſaid he) I take to be the making light of, and not ſubjecting to the Authority of Synods, without which the Churches cannot long ſubſiſt.

§ 18. Afterwards, having ſolemnly with Prayer, and Particularly and very Prophetically Bleſſed his Relations and Attendants, he now thus comforted himſelf, I ſhall e'er long be with my old Friends, Dr. Preſton, Dr. Sibs, Dr. Taylor, Dr. Gouge, Dr. Ames, Mr. Cotton, Mr. Norton, my Inns of Court Friends, and my Conſort, Children, Grand-children in the Kingdom of God. And when ſome then preſent magnified God for making him a Man of ſuch Uſe, and lamented themſelves in their own Loſs of him, he replied, Alas, Alas; Uſe no ſuch Words concerning me; for I have been an Unprofitable Servant, not worthy to be called a Servant of the Lord: But I muſt ſay, The Lord be merciful to me a Sinner, and I muſt ſay, Let thy tender Mercies come unto me, O Lord, even thy Salvation according to thy Word. The Evening before he died, his Daughter asking him, Sir, How do you do? He held up his hand, and ſaid, Vaniſhing Things! Vaniſhing Things! But he then made a moſt affectionate Prayer, with and for his Friends; and ſo quietly Fell Aſleep on Auguſt 7. 1667. in the Seventy Ninth Year of his Age. Thus expired that Reverend Old Man: Of whom, when he left England, an Eminent Perſonage, ſaid, New-England ſhall flouriſh, free from all General Deſolations, as long as that good Man liveth in it! Which was comfortably accompliſhed. He was Interr'd with more than ordinary Solemnity; and his Neighbour Mr. Richard Mather of Dorcheſter, thereat lamented the Publick Loſs in his Departure, with a Sermon upon Zech. 1. 5. Your Fathers where are they, and the Prophets, do they live for ever?

§ 19. Being a Man of Prayer, he was very much a Man of God; and a certain Prophetical Afflatus, which often directs the Speeches of ſuch Men, did ſometimes remarkably appear in the Speeches of this Holy Man. Inſtances hereof have been already given. A few more ſhall now be added.

Beholding a Young Man extraordinarily Dutiful in all poſſible ways of being ſerviceable, unto his aged Mother, then Weak in Body, and Poor in Eſtate, he declared unto ſome of his Family what he had beheld; adding therewithal, I charge you to take notice of what I ſay; God will certainly bleſs that Young Man; John Hull (for that was his Name) ſhall grow Rich, and live to do God good Service in his Generation! It came to paſs accordingly, That this Exemplary Perſon became a very Rich, as well as Emphatically a Good Man, and afterwards died a Magiſtrate of the Colony.

When one Mr. Adams, who waited on him from Hartford unto Weathersfield, was followed with the News of his Daughter's being fallen ſuddenly and doubtfully ſick, Mr. Wilſon looking up to Heaven, began mightily to wreſtle with God for the Life of the Young Woman: Lord (ſaid he) wilt thou now take away thy Servants Child, when thou ſeeſt he is attending on thy Poor unworthy Servant in moſt Chriſtian Kindneſs; Oh! do it not! And then turning himſelf about unto Mr. Adams, Brother (ſaid he) I truſt your Daughter ſhall live, I believe in God ſhe ſhall recover of this Sickneſs! And ſo it marvellouſly came to paſs, and ſhe is now the fruitful Mother of ſeveral deſireable Children.

A Pequot-Indian, in a Canoo, was eſpied by the Engliſh, within Gun-ſhot, carrying away an Engliſh Maid, with a Deſign to Deſtroy her or Abuſe her. The Souldiers fearing to kill the Maid if they ſhot at the Indian, asked Mr. Wilſon's Counſel, who forbad them to fear, and aſſured them, God will direct the Bullet! They ſhot accordingly; and killed the Indian, though then moving ſwiftly upon the Water, and ſaved the Maid free from all harm whatever.

Upon the Death of the firſt and only Child (being an Infant) of his Daughter Mrs. Danforth; forth, he made a Poem, wherein were theſe Lines among the reſt,

What if they part with their beloved one,
Their firſt Begotten, and their Only Son?
What's this to that which Father Abram Suffer'd,
When his own hands his Only Darling offer'd,
In whom was bound up all his Joy in this Life preſent, and his hope of future Bliſs?
And what if God their Other Children Call,
Second, Third, Fourth, ſuppoſe it ſhould be All?
What's this to Holy Job, his Trials ſad,
Who neither theſe nor t'other Comforts had?
His Life was only given him for a Prey,
Yet all his Troubles were to Heaven the way;
Yea to far Greater Bleſſings on the Earth,
The Lord rewarding all his Tears with Mirth.

And behold, as if that he had been a Vates, in both Senſes of it, a Poet and a Prophet, it pleas'd God afterwards to give his Daughter a Second, a Third, and a Fourth Child, and then to take them all away at once, even in one Fortnights time; but afterwards, happily to make up the Loſs.

Once paſſing over the Ferry unto a Lecture, on the other ſide of the Water, he took notice of a Young Man in the Boat, that worded it very unhandſomely unto his Aged Father: Whereat this Faithful Seer, being much troubled, ſaid unto him, Young Man, I adviſe you to repent of your Undutiful Rebellious Carriage towards your Father; I expect elſe to hear, that God has cut you off, before a Twelve-month come to an End! And before this time expired, it came to paſs, that this unhappy Youth going to the Southward, was their hack'd in pieces, by the Pequod Indians.

A Company of People in this Country, were mighty hot upon a Project of removing to Providence, an Iſland in the Weſt-Indies; and a Venerable Aſſembly of the Chief Magiſtrates, and Miniſters in the Colony, was addreſſed for their Council about this undertaking; which Aſſembly laid before the Company very weighty Reaſons to diſſwade them from it. A Prime Ringleader in that Buſineſs, was one Venner a Cooper of Salem, the Mad Blade, that afterwards periſhed in a Nonſenſical Uproar, which he, with a Crew of Bedlamites, poſſeſſed like himſelf, made in London. This Venner, with ſome others, now ſtood up and ſaid, That notwithſtanding what had been offered, they were clear in their Call to remove: Whereupon, Mr. Wilſon ſtood up and anſwered, Ay, do you come to ask Counſel in ſo weighty a matter as this, and to have Help from an Ordinance of God in it? And are you aforehand reſolved, that you will go on? Well, you may go, if you will; but you ſhall not proſper. What? Do you make a Mock of God's Ordinance? And it came to paſs accordingly; the Enterprize was not long after daſhed in pieces; and Venner's precipitating Impulſes, afterwards carried him to a miſerable End.

A Council ſitting at a Town, where ſome Eccleſiaſtical Differences called for the Aſſiſtances of the Neighbours to compoſe them, there was one Man obſerved by Mr. Wilſon, to be extreamly perverſe, and moſt unreaſonably troubleſome and miſchievous to the Peace of the Church there; Whereupon Mr. Wilſon told the Council, he was confident, That the Jealouſy of God would ſet a Mark upon that Man, and that the ordinary Death of Men ſhould not befal him. It happened ſhortly after, that the Man was barbarouſly Butchered by the Salvages!

While Mr. Wilſon was Miniſter of Sudbury in England, there was a noted Perſon who had been abſent for ſome while among the Papiſts. This Man returning Home, offered himſelf to the Communion; whereat Mr. Wilſon in the open Aſſembly, ſpoke unto him after this manner; “Brother, you here preſent your ſelf, as if you “would partake in the Holy Supper of the “Lord. You cannot be ignorant of what you “have done in withdrawing your ſelf from our “Communion, and how you have been much “converſant for a conſiderable while, with the “Papiſts, whoſe Religion is Antichriſtian. “Therefore, though we cannot ſo abſolutely “charge you, God knows, who is the Searcher “of all Hearts; and if you have defiled your “ſelf with their Worſhip and Way, and not “repented of it, by offering to partake at this “time in the Holy Supper with us, you will “eat and drink your own Damnation; but if “you are clear, and have nothing wherewith “to charge your ſelf; you your ſelf know, upon this account you may receive. The Man did then partake at the Lord's Table, profeſſing his Innocency. But as if the Devil had entered into him, he ſoon went and hanged himſelf.

In the Circumſtances of his own Children, he ſaw many Effects of an Extraordinary Faith.

His Eldeſt Son, Edmund, while Travelling into the Countries, which the Bloody Popiſh Inquiſition has made a Clime too Torrid for a Proteſtant, was extreamly expoſed: But the Prayers of the young Gentleman's continually diſtreſſed Father, for him, were anſwered with Signal Preſervations. When he was under Examination by the Inquiſitors, a Friend of the Chief among them, ſuddenly arrived; and the Inquiſitor not having ſeen this Friend for many Years before, was hereby ſo diverted and mollified, that he carried the Young Mr. Wilſon to Dinner with him; and, though he had paſſed hitherto unknown by his true Name, yet this Inquiſitor could now call him, to his great Surprize, by the Name of Mr. Wilſon, and report unto him the Character of his Father, and his Father's Induſtry in ſerving the Hereticks of New-England. But that which I here moſt of all deſign, is an Account of a thing yet more Memorable and Unaccountable. For, at another Time, his Father dream't himſelf tranſported into Italy, where he ſaw a Beautiful Perſon in the Son's Chamber, endeavouring with a Thouſand Enchantments, to debauch him; whereupon the Old Gentleman made, and was by his Bed-fellow overheard making, firſt, Prayers to God full of Agony, and then Warnings unto his Tempted Son, to beware of Defiling himſelf with the Daughter of a Strange God. Now, ſome conſiderable while after this, the Young Gentleman writes to his Father, that on ſuch a Night, (which was upon Enquiry found the very ſame Night,) a Gentlewoman had careſſed him, thus and ſo (juſt according to the Viſion,) and that his Chaſtity had been Conquered, if he had not been ſtrongly poſſeſſed with a Senſe of his Father's Prayers over him, and Warnings unto him, for his Eſcape from the Pits, whereinto do fall the Abhorred of the Lord.

His other Son, John, when a Child, fell upon his Head from a Loft four Stories high, into the Street; from whence he was taken up for Dead, and ſo battered and bruiſed and bloody with his Fall, that it ſtruck Horror into the Beholders: But Mr. Wilſon had a wonderful Return of his Prayers in the Recovery of the Child, both unto Life and unto Senſe; inſomuch, that he continued unto Old Age, a Faithful, Painful, Uſeful Miniſter of the Goſpel; and but lately went from the Service of the Church in Medfield, unto the Glory of the Church Triumphant.

After Mr. Wilſon's Arrival at New-England, his Wife, who had left off bearing of Children for many Years, brought him another Daughter; which Lamb was indeed unto him as a Daughter; and he would preſent her unto other Miniſters, for their Bleſſing, with great Affection, ſaying, This is my New-England Token! But this Child fell ſick of a Malignant Fever, wherein ſhe was gone ſo far, that every one deſpaired of her Life; except her Father, who called in ſeveral Miniſters, with other Chriſtians, unto a Faſt on that Occaſion; and hearing the Prayers of Mr. Cotton for her, found his Heart ſo raiſed, that he confidently declared, While I heard Mr. Cotton at Prayer, I was confident the Child ſhould Live! And the Child accordingly did Live; yea, ſhe is to this Day alive, a very Holy Woman, adorned like them of Old Time, with a Spirit of Great Price!

The Bleſſings pronounced by Mr. Wilſon, upon many Perſons and Affairs, were obſerved ſo Prophetical, and eſpecially his Death-bed Bleſſings upon his Children and Grand-children were ſo, that the moſt conſiderable Perſons in the Country thought it not much to come from far, and bring their Children with them, for the Enjoyment of his Patriarchal Benedictions. For which cauſe, Mr. Thomas Shepard, in an Elegy upon him, at his Death Pathetically thus expreſſed it;

Whoſo of Abraham, Moſes, Samuel, reads,
Or of Elijah's or Eliſha's Deeds,
Would ſurely ſay, Their Spirit and Power was his,
And think there were a Metempſychoſis.
As Aged John, th' Apoſtle us'd to Bleſs
The People, which they Judg'd their Happineſs,
So did we count it worth our Pilgrimage
Unto him for his Bleſſing, in his Age.

Theſe were Extrordinary Paſſages; Many of them, are things which Ordinary Chriſtians may more ſafely Ponder and Wonder, than Expect in Our Days! Though ſometimes Great Reformers, and Great Sufferers, muſt be ſignalized with them. I know very well what Livy ſays, Datur hæc Venia Antiquitatis, ut miſcendo Humana Divinis, Primordia Urbium Auguſtiora faciat: But I have been far from impoſing the leaſt Fable upon the World in reporting ſuch Extraordinary Paſſages of Mr. Wilſon, or any other Great Confeſſor, by whom the Beginnings of this Country were made Illuſtrious; there are Witneſſes enough, yet living of them.

§ 20. There is a certain little Sport of Wit, in Anagrammatizing the Names of Men; which was uſed as long ago at leaſt as the Days of Old Lycophron: And which ſometimes has afforded Reflections very Monitory, as Alſtedius by his juſt Admirers changed into Sedulitas; or very Characteriſing, as Renatus Carteſius, by his Diſciples turn'd into, Tu ſcis res Naturæ; or very Satyrical, as when Satan ruleth me, was found in the Tranſpoſed Name of a certain Active Perſecutor: And when, Lo, a Damned Crew, was found in the Name of one that made a Figure among the Popiſh Plotters againſt the Nation. Yea, 'tis poſſible, that they who affect ſuch Grammatical Curioſities, will be willing to plead a Preſcription of much higher and Elder Antiquity for them; even the Temurah, or Mutation, with which the Jews do Criticiſe upon the Oracles of the Old Teſtament. There, they ſay, you'll find the Anagram of our Firſt Fathers Name Ha adam, to expreſs Adamah, the Name of the of the Earth, whence he had his Original. An Anagram of a Good Signification, they'll ſhow you [Gen. 6. 8.] and of a Bad one [Gen. 38. 7.] in thoſe Glorious Oracles; and they will endeavour to perſwade you, that Maleachi in Exodus in Anagrammatically expounded Michael, in Daniel. But of all the Anagrammatizers that have been trying their Fancies, for the Two Thouſand Years which have run out, ſince the Days of Lycophron, yea, or for the more than Five Thouſand, ſince the Days of our Firſt Father, I believe there never was Man, that made ſo many or ſo nimbly, as our Mr. Wilſon; who, together with his Quick Turns, upon the Names of his Friends, would ordinarily Fetch, and rather than Loſe, would even Force Devout Inſtructions out of his Anagrams. As once, upon hearing my Father preach a Sermon about The Glories of our Lord Jeſus Chriſt, Mr. Wilſon immediately gave him that Anagram upon his Name, Creſcentius Matherus, Anagr. En! Chriſtus Merces tua: So there could ſcarcely occurr the Name of any Remarkable Perſon, at leaſt, on any Remarkable Occaſion unto him, without an Anagram raiſed thereupon; and he made this Poetical, and Peculiar Diſpoſition of his Ingenuity, a Subject whereon he grafted Thoughts far more Solid and Solemn and Uſeful, than the Stock it ſelf. Wherefore methoughts, it looked like a Piece of Injuſtice, that his own Funeral produced (among the many Poems afterwards Printed) no more Anagrams upon his Name, who had ſo often thus handled the Names of others; and ſome thought the Muſes look'd very much diſſatisfied, when they ſaw theſe Lines upon his Hearſe.

Oh! change it not; no ſweeter Name or Thing,
Throughout the World, within our Ears ſhall ring.

There was a little more of Humour, in the Fancy of Mr. Ward, the well-known ſimple Cobler of Agawam, as that witty Writer ſtiled himſelf, who obſerving the great Hoſpitality of Mr. Wilſon, in conjunction with his Meta-grammatiſing Temper, ſaid, That the Anagram of JOHN WILSON was, I PRAY, COME IN, YOU ARE HEARTILY WELCOME.

To make up this want, I might conclude the Life of this good Man, with an Anagram, which he left on, and for himſelf.

Johannes Wilſonus.

§ 21. But it is to the laſt Place in our Hiſtory of this worthy Man, that I reſerve that part of his Character, which lay in his Diſpoſition to allot unto himſelf the laſt place among all worthy Men; for his low Opinion of himſelf, was the top of all his other Excellencies. His Humility not only cauſed him to prefer the meaneſt of his Brethren above himſelf, but alſo to comply with the meaneſt Opportunities of being ſerviceable. He might juſtly be reckoned the Names-ſake of that John, the Biſhop of Alexandria, who was called not only Johannes Eleemoſynarius, but alſo Humilis Johannes. Hence 'twas, that when his Voice in his Age did ſo fail him, that his great Congregation could be no longer edified by his Publick Labours, he cheerfully and painfully ſet himſelf to do all the good that he could by his Private Viſits; and ſuch alſo as he could not reach with Sermons, he often found with Verſes: Hence 'twas that when that Plea was uſed with the Church of Ipſwich, to reſign Mr. Norton unto the Church of Boſton, after the Death of Mr. Cotton; becauſe it was ſaid, Let him that hath two Coats, give to him that hath none: And a Perſon of Quality replied, Boſton hath one, [meaning Mr. Wilſon:] this good Man anſwered, Who? Me! I am nothing! Yea, hence 'twas, that when Malefactors had been openly ſcourged upon the juſt Sentence of Authority, he would preſently ſend for them to his Houſe, and having firſt expreſſed his Bounty to them, he would then beſtow upon them ſuch gracious Admonitions and Exhortations, as made them to become, inſtead of deſperate, remarkably penitent. Indeed, I know not whether his Humility might not have ſome Exceſs, in ſome Inſtances charged upon it; at leaſt once, when he had promiſed unto a Neighbouring Miniſter, to preach a Sermon for him, and after his Promiſe came in Seaſon to that Miniſter, ſaying, Sir, I told you, that I would preach for you, but it was raſhly done of me; I have on my Knees begg'd the Pardon of it, from the Lord; that I ſhould offer thus to deprive his People of your Labours, which are ſo much better than any of mine can be: Wherefore, Sir, I now come ſeaſonable to tell you, That I ſhall fail you! And accordingly, there was no perſwading of him to the contrary.

But from the like Humility it was, that a good Kinſman of his, who deſerves to live in the ſame Story, as he now lives in the ſame Heaven with him, namely Mr. Edward Rawſon, the Honoured Secretary of the Maſſachuſet Colony, could not by all his Intreaties perſwade him to let his Picture be drawn; but ſtill refuſing it, he would reply, What! ſuch a poor vile Creature as I am! Shall my Picture be drawn? I ſay, No; it never ſhall! And when that Gentleman introduced the Limner, with all things ready, vehemently importuning him to gratifie ſo far the Deſires of his Friends, as to ſit a while, for the taking of his Effigies, no Importunity could ever obtain it from him. However, being bound in Juſtice to employ my Hand, for the Memory of that Perſon, by whoſe Hand I was my ſelf baptiſed, I have made an Eſſay to draw his Picture, by this Account of his Life; wherein if I have miſſed of doing to the Life, it might be made up with ſeveral expreſſive Paſſages, which I find in Elegies written and printed upon his Death: Whereof there were many Compoſed, by thoſe whoſe Opinion was well ſignified by one of them:

Sure Verſeleſs he does mean, to's Grave to go,
And well deſerves, that now no Verſe can ſhow.

But waving the reſt, let the following Poem, never before Printed, offer ſome Odours for the Reader's further Entertainment.

Some Offers to Embalm the Memory of the truly Reverend and Renowned JOHN WILSON; the firſt Paſtor of Boſton, in New-England: Interr'd (and a great part of his Country's Glory with him) Auguſt 11. 1667. Aged 79.

MIght Aaron's Rod (ſuch Funerals mayn't be dry)
But broach the Rock, 'twould guſh pure Elegy,
To round the Wilderneſs with purling Lays,
And tell the World, the great Saint Wilſon's Praiſe.

Here's one(Pearls are not in great Cluſters found)
Here's one, the Skill of Tongues and Arts had Crown'd ;
Here's one (by frequent Martyrdom was try'd)
That could forego Skill, Pelf, and Life beſide,
For Chriſt : Both Englands Darling, whom in Swarms
They preſs'd to ſee, and Hear, and felt his Charms.

'Tis one (when will it riſe to Number two ?
The World at once can but one Phœnix ſhow :)
For Truth a Paul, Cephas for Zeal, for Love
A John, inſpir'd by the Cœleſtial Dove.
Abram's true Son for Faith ; and in his Tent
Angels oft had their Table and Content.

So humble, that alike on's Charity,
Wrought Extract Gent ; with Extract Rudii.
Pardon this Fault ; his great Exceſs lay there,
He'd Trade for Heaven, with all he came a near ;
His Meat, Clothes, Caſh, he'd ſtill for Ventures ſend Conſign'd, Per Brother Lazarus, his Friend.

Mighty in Prayer, his Hands uplifted reach'd
Mercies high Throne,and thence ſtrange Bounties fetch'd,
Once and again, and oft : So felt by all,
Who weep his Death, as a departing Paul.
All, yea, baptiz'd with Tears, lo Children come,
(Their Baptiſm he maintain'd!) unto his Tomb.

'Twixt an Apoſtle, and Evangeliſt,
Let ſtand his Order in the heavenly Liſt.
Had we the Coſtly Alabaſter Box,
What's left, we'd ſpend on this New-Engliſh Knox ;
True Knox, fill'd with that Great Reformer's Grace,
In Truth's juſt Cauſe, fearing no Mortal's Face.

Chriſt's Word, it was his Life, Chriſt's Church, his Care ;
And ſo great with him his leaſt Brethren were,
Not Heat,nor Cold,not Rain, or Froſt, or Snow,
Could hinder, but he'd to their Sermons go :
Aaron's Bells chim'd from far,he'd run, and then
His raviſh'd Sould echo'd, Amen, Amen!
He travers'd oft the fierce Atlantic Sea,
But Patmos of Confeſſors 'twas for Thee.
This Voyage lands him on the wiſhed Shore,
From whence this Father will return no more,
To ſit the Moderator of thy Sages.
But tell his Zeal for thee to After-Ages,
His Care to guide his Flock,and feed his Lambs,
By Words, Works, Prayers, Pſalms, Alms, and Anagrams :
Thoſe Anagrams, in which he made no Start
Out of meer Nothings, by Creating Art,
Whole Words of Counſel ; did to Motes unfold
Names, till they Leſſons gave richer than Gold,
And every Angle ſo exactly fay,
It ſhould out-ſhine the brighteſt Solar Ray.

Sacred his Verſe, writ with a Cherub's Quill ;
But thoſe wing'd Choriſters of Zion-Hill,
Pleas'd with the Notes,call'd him a part to bear
With them, where he his Anagram did hear,
I pray come in, heartily Welcome, Sir.

Epitaphium.

Thinking what Epitaph I ſhould offer unto the Grave of this Worthy Man, I call'd unto Mind the fitteſt in the World, which was directed for him, immediately upon his Death, by an Honourable Perſon, who ſtill continues the ſame Lover, as well as Inſtance, of Learning and Vertue, that he was, when he then adviſed them to give Mr. Wilſon this

EPITAPH.

And now abides Faith, Hope, and Charity,
But Charity*'s the Greateſt of the Three.*

To which this might be added, from another Hand :

CHAP. IV.

Puritaniſmus Nov-Anglicanus. The LIFE of Mr. JOHN DAVENPORT.

§ 1. A Noted Author of more than twice ſeven Treatiſes, and Chaplain to two ſucceſſive Queens of England, was that Chriſtopher Davenport, whoſe aſſumed Name was, Franciſcus à Sancta Clara. And in Mr. Ruſhworth's Collection of Speeches, made in the Celebrated Parliament, 1640. I find Sir Benjamin Rudyard uſing theſe Words : ‘ Sancta Clara, hath publiſhed, That if a Synod were held, Non intermixtis Puritanis, ſetting Puritans aſide, our Articles and their Religion would ſoon be agreed. They have ſo brought it to paſs, that under the Name of Puritans, all our Religion is branded. Whoſoever ſquares his Actions by any Rule, either Divine or Humane, he is a Puritan : Whoſoever would be governed by the King's Laws, he is a Puritan.———Whether this Account of Matters be allow'd or no ; there was, tho' not a Brother (as a certain Woodden Hiſtorian, in his Athenæ Oxonienſes, has reported) yet a Kinſman of that Sancta Clara, who was among the moſt eminent Puritans of thoſe Days; and this was our holy and famous Mr. John Davenport: One of whom I may, on many Accounts, uſe the Elogy, with which the Learned ſtill mention Salmaſius, Vir nunquam ſatis Laudatus, nec Temere ſine Laude nominandus.

§ 2. Mr. John Davenport was born at Coventry, in the Year 1597. of worthy Parents; a Father who was Mayor of the City, and a pious Mother, who having lived juſt long enough, to devote him, as Hannah did her Samuel, unto the Service of the Sanctuary, left him under the more immediate Care of Heaven to fit him for that Service. The Grace of God ſanctified him with good Principles, while he had not yet ſeen two Sevens of Years in an evil World; and by that Age he had alſo made ſuch Attainments in Learning, as to be admitted into Braſen-Noſe Colledge, in Oxford. From thence, when he was but Nineteen Years old, he was called unto publick and conſtant Preaching in the City of London, as an Aſſiſtant unto another Divine; where his notable Accompliſhments for a Miniſter, and his Couragious Reſidence with, and Viſiting of his Flock, in a dreadful Plague-time, cauſed much Notice to be quickly taken of him. His Degree of Maſter of Arts, he took not, until, in Courſe, he was to proceed Batchellor of Divinity: And then with Univerſal Approbation, he received both of theſe Laurels together.

§ 3. This pious Man was both an hard Student, and a great Preacher. His Cuſtom was to ſit up very late at his Lucubrations; whereby, tho' he found no ſenſible Damage himſelf, and never felt his Heach ach, yet his Counſel was, that other Students would not follow his Example. But the Effects of his Induſtry were ſeen by all Men, in his approving himſelf upon all Occaſions, an univerſal Scholar. As for the Sermons wherewith he fed the Church of God, he wrote them for the moſt part, more largely than the moſt of Miniſters; and he ſpoke them with a Gravity, an Energy, an Acceptableneſs, whereto few Miniſters ever have arrived: Indeed his greateſt Enemies, when they heard him, would acknowledge him to be among the beſt of Preachers. The ableſt Men about London were his neareſt Friends; among whom he held a very particular Correſpondence with Dr. Preſton: He, when he dy'd, left his Notes with Mr. Davenport, by him to be publiſhed; and accordingly with Dr. Sibbs, you'll find Mr. Davenport ſigning ſome of their Dedications.

§ 4. About the Year 1626. there were ſeveral eminent Perſons, among whom were two Doctors of Divinity, with two other Divines, and four Lawyers, whereof one the King's Serjant at Law, and four Citizens, whereof one the Lord Mayor of London, engaged in a Deſign to procure a Purchaſe of Impropriations, and with the Profits thereof to maintain a conſtant, able, and painful Miniſtry, in thoſe parts of the Kingdom, where there was moſt want of ſuch a Miniſtry. The Divines concerned in this Deſign, were Dr. Gouge, Dr. Sibs, Mr. Offſpring, and our Mr. Davenport; and ſuch an incredible Progreſs was made in it, that it is judged, all the Impropriations in England would have been honeſtly and eaſily recovered unto the immediate Service of the Reformed Religion. But Biſhop Laud looking with a jealous Eye on this Undertaking, leaſt it might in time give a Secret Growth to Non-Conformity, he obtained a Bill to be exhibited in the Exchequer Chamber, by the King's Attorney-General, againſt the Feoffees, that had the Management of it. Upon this occaſion, I find this Great Man writing in his Great Bible, the enſuing Paſſages:

> ‘ Feb. 11. 1632. The Buſineſs of the Feoffees being to be heard the third time at the Exchequer, I prayed earneſtly, That God would aſſiſt our Counſellors, in opening the Caſe, and be pleaſed to grant, that they might get no advantage againſt us, to puniſh us as Evil Doers; promiſing to obſerve what Anſwer he gave. Which ſeeing he hath graciouſly done, and delivered me from the thing I feared, I record to theſe Ends:
> ‘ 1. To be more Induſtrious in my Family.
> ‘ 2. To check my Unthankfulneſs.
> ‘ 3. To quicken my ſelf to Thankfulneſs.
> ‘ 4. To awaken my ſelf to more Watchfulneſs for the time to come, in remembrance of his Mercy.
> ‘ Which I beſeech the Lord to grant; upon whoſe Faithfulneſs in his Covenant, I caſt my ſelf, to be made Faithful in my Covenant.
> John Davenport.

The Iſſue of the Buſineſs was this: The Court condemn'd their Proceedings as dangerous to the Church and State; pronouncing the Gifts, Feoffments, and Contrivances, made to the Uſes aforeſaid, to be illegal, and ſo diſſolved the ſame, confiſcating their Money unto the King's Uſe. Yet the Criminal Part referred unto, was never proſecuted in the Star-Chamber; becauſe the Deſign was generally approved, and multitudes of diſcreet and devout Men, extreamly reſented the Ruine of it.

§ 5. It happened that ſoon after this, the famous Mr. John Cotton was fallen under ſuch a Storm of Perſecution for his Non-Conformity, as made it neceſſary for him to propoſe and purpoſe a Removal out of the Land: Whereupon Mr. Davenport, with ſeveral other great and good Men, conſidering the eminent Learning, Prudence, and Holineſs of that excellent Perſon, could be at no reſt, until they had by a ſolemn Conference inform'd themſelves of what might move him to ſuch a Reſolution. The Iſſue of the Conference was, that inſtead of their diſſwading him from expoſing himſelf to ſuch Sufferings, as were now before him, he convinced them of the Truth in the Cauſe for which he ſuffered; and they became ſatisfied both of the Evil in ſundry Matters of Worſhip and Order, impoſed upon them, and of the Duty which lay upon them, in their places to endeavour the Reformation of things in the Church, according to the Word of God. Mr. Davenport's Inclination to Non-Conformity from this time, fell under the Notice and Anger of his Dioceſan; who preſently determined the Marks of his Vengeance for him: Of which being ſeaſonably and ſufficiently advertiſed, he convened the principal Perſons under his Paſtoral Charge in Coleman-ſtreet, at a General Veſtry, deſiring them on this occaſion to declare, what they would adviſe, for acknowledging the Right which they had in him, as their Paſtor, he would not, by any danger, be driven from any Service, which they ſhould expect or demand at his Hands; but he would imitate the Example of Luther, who upon Letters from the Church of Wittenberg, from whence he had withdrawn for his Security, upon the Direction of the Duke of Saxony, returned unto the Courageous Exerciſe of his Miniſtry. Upon a ſerious Deliberation, they diſcharged his Conſcientious Obligation, by agreeing with him, that it would be beſt for him to reſign; but altho' he now hoped for ſomething of a quiet Life, his Hope was diſappointed; for he was continually dogg'd by raging buſie Purſivants, from whom he had no ſafety but by retiring into Holland.

§ 6. Over to Holland he went, in the latter end of the Year 1633. Where the Meſſengers of the Church, under the Charge of Mr. Paget, met him in his way to Amſterdam, inviting him to become the Collegue of their Aged Paſtor. But Mr. Davenport had not been long there, before his Indiſpoſition to the promiſcuous Baptiſing of Children, concerning whom there was no charitable or tolerable Teſtimony of their belonging to Chriſtian Parents, was by Mr. Paget ſo improved againſt him, as to procure him the Diſpleaſure of the Dutch Claſſes in the Neighbourhood. The Contention on this Occaſion proceeded ſo far, that tho' the Dutch Miniſters had under their Hands declared——We deſire nothing more, than that Mr. Davenport, whoſe eminent Learning, and ſingular Piety is much approved and commended of all the Engliſh our Brethren, may be lawfully promoted unto the Miniſtry of the Engliſh Church: We do alſo greatly approve of his good Zeal and Care, of his having ſome precedent private Examination of the Parents, and Sureties of Children to be Baptiſed in the Chriſtian Religion. Yet the matter could not be accommodated; Mr. Davenport could not be allowed, except he would promiſe to Baptize the Children of ſuch whoſe Parents and Sureties were, upon Examination, found never ſo much Unchriſtianiſed, Ignorant, or Scandalous. He therefore deſiſted from his Publick Miniſtry in Amſterdam, about the beginning of the Year 1635, contenting himſelf to ſet up a Catechetical Exerciſe in the Family, where he ſojourned on the Afternoon of the Lord's Days, an Hour after the Publick Sermons were over. But ſome conſiderable number of People, at length, reſorting to this Exerciſe, a Jealouſie was pretended by his Adverſary, that the Deſign of it was to promote ſuch Sects, as indeed the chief Deſign of it was to prevent; and upon this pretence he was hindered, even from this leſſer Opportunity of doing Service alſo. The fuller Story of theſe uncomfortable and unreaſonable Brangles, the Reader may find in an Apologetical Diſcourſe of Mr. Davenport's, publiſhed for his own Vindication; wherein he do's with a Learned Pen, handle ſeveral Points much controverted in the Reformed Churches, and ſhew himſelf a Divine well ſtudied in the Controverſies of the preſent, and the former Ages. But the Upſhot of all was, that he returned back to London; where he told his Friends, That he thought God carried him over into Holland, on purpoſe to bear Witneſs againſt that promiſcuous Baptiſm, which at leaſt bordered very near upon a Profanation of the Holy Inſtitution.

§ 7. He obſerved, that when a Reformation of the Church has been brought about in any part of the World, it has rarely been afterwards carried on any one ſtep further, than the firſt Reformers did ſucceed in their firſt Endeavours he obſerved that as eaſily might the Ark have been removed from the Mountains of Ararat, where it firſt grounded, as a People get any Ground in Reformation, after and beyond the firſt Remove of the Reformers. And this Obſervation quickned him to embark in a Deſign of Reformation, wherein he might have Opportunity to drive things in the firſt Eſſay, as near to the Precept and Pattern of Scripture, as they could be driven. The Plantation of New England afforded him this Opportunity, with the chief Undertakers whereof he had many Conſultations, before he had ever taken up any purpoſe of going himſelf into that part of the World; and he had, indeed, a very great ſtroke in the encouraging and enlivening of that Noble Undertaking. He was one of thoſe by whom the Patent for the Maſſachuſet Colony was procured; and tho' his Name were not among the Patentees, becauſe he himſelf deſired it might be omitted, leſt his Enemy, the Biſhop of London, then of the King's Privy-Council, ſhould upon his Account appear the more fiercely againſt it; yet his Purſe was in it, his Time was in it, and he contributed unto it all manner of Aſſiſtances: This he did before his going to Holland. And while he was in Holland, he received Letters of Mr. Cotton, from the Country whereto he had thus been a Father; telling him, That the Order of the Churches, and the Common-Wealth, was now ſo ſettled in New-England, by common Conſent, that it brought into his Mind the New Heaven, and the New Earth, wherein dwells Righteouſneſs. Wherefore, ſoon after his Return for London, he ſhipp'd himſelf, with ſeveral eminent Chriſtians, and their Families, for New-England; where, by the good Hand of GOD upon them, they arrived in the Summer of the Year, 1637.

§ 8. Mr. Cotton welcomed Mr. Davenport, as Moſes did Jethro, hoping that he would be as Eyes unto them in the Wilderneſs. For by the Cunning and Malice of Satan, all things in this New-Engliſh Wilderneſs, were then ſurpriſed, into a deal of Confuſion, on the Occaſion of the Antinomian Opinions then ſpread abroad; but the Learning and Wiſdom of this worthy Man in the Synod then aſſembled at Cambridge, did contribute more than a little to diſpel the Faſcinating Miſts which had ſuddenly diſordered all our Affairs. Having done his part in that Bleſſed Work, (as we have elſewhere more fully related) He, with his Friends, who were more fit for Zebulon's Ports, than for Iſſachar's Tents, choſe to go farther Weſtward; where they began a Plantation and a Colony, ſince diſtinguiſhed by the Name of New-Haven; and endeavoured, according to his Underſtanding, a yet ſtricter Conformity to the Word of God, in ſettling of all Matters, both Civil and Sacred, than he had yet ſeen exemplified in any other Part of the World. There the Famous Church of New-Haven, as well as the other Neighbouring Towns, enjoyed his Miniſtry, his Diſcipline, his Government, and his Univerſal Direction for many Years together; even till after the Reſtoration of King Charles II. Connecticut and New-Haven, were by One Charter incorporated. And here, with what Holineſs, with what Watchfulneſs, with what Uſefulneſs he diſcharged his Miniſtry, it is worthy of a Remembrance among all that would propoſe unto themſelves a worthy Example. Neverthelesſs, all that I ſhall here preſerve of it, is this One Article. A young Miniſter, once receiving of wiſe and good Councils from this good and wiſe and great Man, he received this among the reſt, That he ſhould be much in Ejaculatory Prayer: For indeed, Ejaculatory Prayers, as Arrows in the Hand of a Mighty Man, ſo are they, Happy is the Man that has his Quiver full of them! And it was believed, by ſome curious Obſervers, That Mr. Davenport himſelf, was well uſed unto that ſacred Skill of, Walking with God, and, Having his Eyes ever towards the Lord, and, Being in the Fear of the Lord all the Day long, by the uſe of Ejaculatory Prayers, on the Innumerable Occaſions, which every Turn of our Lives does bring for thoſe Devotions. He was not only conſtant in more Settled, whether Social or Secret Prayers; but alſo in the midſt of all beſieging Incumbrances, tying the Wiſhes of his Devout Soul unto the Arrows of Ejaculatory Prayers, he would ſhoot them away unto the Heavens, from whence he ſtill expected all his Help. With ſuch a Glory, with ſuch a Defence, was New Haven Bleſſed!

§ 9. But his Influences were not confined unto his own Colony of New-Haven; they were extended as far as his general and generous Care of all the Churches, could carry him. And hence, I find him in a particular manner, expreſſing his good Affections unto the Irenio Deſigns and Studies, which were in thoſe Days managing by ſome great Men, for the reſtoing of Communion among the divided Churches of the Reformation. Perhaps, I cannot give an exacter Character of this eminent Perſon's Diſpoſition, than by my Tranſcribing and my Tranſlating of a few Paſſages in a Letter to the Famous Dury, by him compoſed, and by the reſt of the Miniſters in his Colony ſubſcribed.

Flagrante Schiſmatis Incendio, Eccleſias, quas oportebat Arctiſſimo Pacis & Unitatis Vinculo Colligari, miſera in ſectas Inviſa Deo Lacerabat Erinuys; Uſque adeo ut qui mutuam contra communes Hoſtes opem conferrent, proh dolor! Concertationes Midianiticas invicem agunt; Sicut Enim Juvenes quos ad Dimicandum Abnerus Provocabat, ſe mutuis Vulneribus Confecerunt; Sic, quorundam Vitio, qui partes potius agunt male Diſputantium, quam bene Evangelizantium, Jurgia, Lites, Animorum Divortia, Schiſmata & Scandala, in Eccleſiis Evangelicis, Suboriuntur, non ſine gravi Infirmorum Offendiculo, nec ſine Summo Bonorum Omnium Mærore, ac Inimicorum Evangelicæ Veritatis Oblectamento.——

‘While the Fire of Schiſm has been raging, the Hateful Fury has miſerably torn to Pieces, the Churches that ſhould have been held together in the ſtricteſt Bonds of Love and Unity; inſomuch that they who ſhould have united, for mutual Help againſt the common Enemy, alas, have even fallen upon one another, as in the Day of Midian. As the young Men, upon the Provocation of Abner, wounded one another to Death; thus, by the Fault of ſome, who do the part rather of Bad Wranglers, than of Good Preachers, there do ariſe in the Reformed Churches, thoſe Broils and Strifes, and Animoſities, and Schiſms and Scandals, which offend the Weak, and afflict the Good, and are no little Satisfaction to the Enemies of Goſpel-Truth.

Nunc Vero, Poſtquam Cuſtos Iſraelis, Deus Pacis, dedit in Corda tot Eccleſiarum & Magiſtratum, ut Vulneribus iſtis Medicinam faciendam eſſe, Neceſſarium Judicarint, En! Bonorum omnium Animi, in Spem erecti; Malorum iſtorum Salutarem Clauſulum Expectant, & Votis intimis, Patrem Miſericordiarum Vobiſcum invocant, ut Spiritus ſui Gratia, Secundum Verbum Suum, Conſilia & actiones Servorum Suorum dirigere, ad Sancti Nominis Sui Gloriam dignetur.——

‘But now that the Keeper of Iſrael, the God of Peace, hath put it into the Hearts of many Churches and Rulers, to apprehend it neceſſary, that a Cure ſhould be ſought for theſe Wounds, Behold! The Minds of all Good Men, do with a raiſed Hope expect an Happy Cloſe of theſe Miſchiefs; and with moſt hearty Prayers, do beſeech the Father of Mercies, that he would, by the Grace of his Spirit, according to his Word, pleaſe to direct the Counſels and Actions of his Servants, for the Glory of his own Holy Name.

Recte quidem feciſti, Reverende Frater Duræ, quod nos etiam in eodem Vobiſcum Corpore, Sub eodem Capite Jeſu Chriſto, Conſtitutos, ad Negotium hoc, in Sanctorum Communione, Promovendum, fraterne invitaſti. ——

‘You have done Right Well, Reverend Brother, in that you have, after a Brotherly manner, unto the Promoting of this Affair, in the Communion of Saints invited us, who belong to the ſame Myſtical Body, with your ſelves, under One Head, our Lord Jeſus Chriſt.

Dica Vero non eſt Orthodoxis impingenda, quaſi Optatiſſimæ illi Paci, quæ inter Sciſſas Evangelicas Eccleſias quæritur, Offendiculum poſuerint, & Remoram qui Neceſſitate Poſtulante, ea utuntur Libertate Refutandi Errores, quam Pax non debet impedire: adeoque ſuo Exemplo futuram pacem præmuniant, à Vitiis in Exceſſu poſitis. —— Quippe quod ſincere de Erroribus Judicare, & Errores tamen in Fratribus Infirmis Tolerare, Utrumque Judicamus eſſe Apoſtolicæ Doctrinæ Conſonum. Toleratio Vero Fratrum Infirmorum, non debet eſſe abſque Redargutione, Sed tantum abſque Rejectione.

‘Nevertheleſs, ’tis not to be made an Article of Complaint againſt the Orthodox, as if they would hinder or delay the Peace deſired ſo much among the Reformed Churches, becauſe they do, as Neceſſity ſhall call for it, uſe that Liberty of Refuting Errors, which Peace ought to be no Bar unto; and by their Example, would reſcue the future Peace from the Extremes wherewith it would be rendred Faulty.——For we reckon that as well to Judge what things are Errors, as to bear with ſuch Errors in Weaker Brethren, are both of them agreeable to what we have been taught by the Apoſtles. The Toleration of our Erroneous Brethren, ſhould not be without Rebuking, but it ſhould be without Rejecting of thoſe Brethren.

§ 10. It is a Notable Expreſſion, and a Wonderful Conceſſion of that great Cardinal Bellarmine, the laſt Goliah of the Romiſh Philiſtines; Eccleſia ex Intentione Fideles tantum Colligit, & ſi noſſet Impios & incredulos, eos aut nunquam admitteret, aut caſu Admiſſos Excluderet: ‘The Church (he ſays) intentionally gathers only True Believers, and if ſhe knew who were Wicked and Faithleſs, either ſhe would not admit them at all, or if they were accidentally admitted, ſhe would exclude them. Our Davenport conceiving it a Shame, that any Proteſtant ſhould proteſt for leſs Church Purity, than what the Confeſſions of a Learned Papiſt allow’d e’er he was aware, to be contended for, did now at New-haven, make Church Purity to be one of his greateſt Concernments and Endeavours. It was his declared Principle, That more is required of Men, in order to their being Members of an Inſtituted Church, than that they profeſs the Chriſtian Faith, and ask the Viſible Seals of the Covenant in the Fellowſhip of the Church; all which may be done, by Perſons notoriouſly ſcandalous in their Lives, from whom the Command is, Turn away: But only ſuch Perſons may be received as Members of a particular Church, who (according to Mat. 16. 18, 19.) make ſuch a Publick Profeſſion of their Faith, as the Church may, in charitable Diſcretion judge, has Bleſſedneſs annexed unto it, and ſuch as Fleſh and Blood hath not revealed. In purſuance of this Principle, he was, like his dear Friend, that Great Man, Dr. Thomas Goodwin, perſwaded, That (as he ſpeaks) there are many Rules in the Word, whereby it is meet for us, to judge who are Saints; by which Rules thoſe who are betruſted to receive Men unto Ordinances in Churches, are to be guided, and ſo to ſeparate between the Precious and the Unclean, as the Prieſts of old were enabled and commanded by Ceremonial Differences, which God then made to typifie the like Diſcrimination of Perſons. And therefore, making the Marks of a repenting and a believing Soul, given in the Word of God, the Rules of his Tryals, he uſed a more than ordinary Exactneſs in Trying, thoſe that were Admitted unto the Communion of the Church: Indeed ſo very thoroughly, and I had almoſt ſaid, ſeverely ſtrict, were the Terms of his Communion, and ſo much, I had well nigh ſaid, overmuch, were the Golden Snuffers of the Sanctuary employ’d by him in his Exerciſe of Diſcipline towards thoſe that were Admitted, that he did all that was poſſible, to render the Renowned Church of New-Haven, like the New Jeruſalem; and yet, after all, the Lord gave him to ſee that in this World, it was impoſſible to ſee a Church State, whereinto there enters nothing which defiles. This Great Man, hath himſelf, in one of his own Treatiſes obſerved it, The Officers and Brethren of the Church, are but Men, who judge by the outward appearance. Therefore their Judgment is fallible, and hath been deceived; as we ſee in the Judgment of the Apoſtles, and the Church at Jeruſalem, concerning Ananias and Sapphira; and in that of Philip, and the Church in Samaria, concerning Simon Magus. Their Duty is to proceed, as far as Men may, by Rule, with due Moderation and Gentleneſs, to try them, who offer themſelves to Fellowſhip, whether they be Believers or not; refuſing known Hypocrites; tho’ when they have done all they can, cloſe Hypocrites will creep in. And now, I might entertain my Reader, I hope, with a profitable, I am ſure, with a very prodigious Hiſtory; I will on this occaſion, relate moſt horrible things done in the Land, which this good Man ſaw, to confirm his own Obſervation: But I will take a fitter Occaſion for it.

§ 11. After this, the remaining Days of this eminent Perſon, were worn away under the unhappy Temptations of a Wilderneſs. It ſo happened, that the moſt part of the firſt Church in Boſton, the Metropolis of the Colony, out of Reſpect unto his vaſt Abilities, had applied themſelves unto him, to ſucceed thoſe famous Lights, Cotton, and Norton, and Wilſon, who having from that Golden Candleſtick, illuminated the whole Country, were now gone to ſhine in an higher Orb. His Removal from New-Haven was clogg’d with many temptatious Difficulties: (For, Miraculi inſtar, vitæ Iter, ſi longum, ſine Offenſione, Percurrere:) But he broke through them all, in Expectation to do what he judged would be a more comprehenſive Service unto the Churches of New-England, than could have been done by him, in his now undiſtinguiſhed Colony. On this occaſion, if I ſhould mention that lamentable Obſervation of Old Epiphanius, who ſays, I have known ſome Confeſſors, who delivered up their Body, and their Spirit, for the Lord, and perſevering in Confeſſion and Charity, obtained Great Proof of the Sincerity of their Faith, and excelled in Piety, Humanity, and Religion, and were continual in Faſtings, and in a word, flouriſhed in Vertue; and yet theſe very Men were blemiſhed with ſome Vice, as either they were prone to reproach Men, or would ſwear profanely, or were over talkative, or were prone to Anger, or got Gold and Silver, or were defiled with ſome ſuch Filth; which nevertheleſs detract not from the juſt Praiſes of their Vertue. I muſt add upon it, that Mr. Davenport was a Confeſſor flouriſhing in Vertue, upon whom they that upon the Score of his Removal, were moſt of all diſſatisfied at him, would not yet charge thoſe unhappy Blemiſhes: And if any good Men in the Sifting Times, did count him either too ſtrait, or too high, in ſome of his Apprehenſions: Nevertheleſs, theſe Things alſo detract not from the juſt Praiſes of his Vertue.

§ 12. So rich a Treaſure of the beſt Gifts, as was in our Davenport, was well worth coveting by the conſiderableſt Church in the Land. He was a moſt incomparable Preacher, and a Man of more than ordinary Accompliſhments; a Prince of Preachers, and worthy to have been a Preacher to Princes: He had been acquainted with Great Men, and Great Things, and was Great himſelf, and had a Great Fame abroad in the World; yea, now he was grown old, like Moſes, his Force was not abated. And the Character which I remember that old Pagan Hiſtorian, Diodorus the Sicilian, gave of our Moſes, every Body was ready to give of our Davenport, He was a Man of a Great Soul, and very powerful in his Life. But his Removal did ſeem too much to verifie an Obſervation, by the famous Dr. Tuckney thus expreſſed: It is ill tranſplanting a Tree that thrives in the Soyl: For accepting the Call of Boſton-Church, in the Year 1667, that Church, and the World, muſt enjoy him no longer than till the Year 1670: When on March 15. Aged Seventy two Years, he was by an Apoplexy fetch'd away to that Glorious World, where the Spirits of Cotton and Davenport, are together in Heaven, as their Bodies are now in one Tomb on Earth.

§ 13. His conſtant and various Employments otherwiſe, would not permit him to leave many Printed Effects of his Judicious Induſtry, beſides thoſe few already mentioned: Altho' he were ſo cloſe and bent a Student, that the rude Pagans themſelves took much Notice of it, and the Indian Salvages in the Neighbourhood, would call him, So Big Study Man. Only there is in the Hands of the Faithful, a Savory Treatiſe of his, entituled, The Saints Anchor-hold; in the Preface whereof, a Duumvirate of Renowned Men; to wit, Mr. Hook, and Mr. Caryl, give this Atteſtation: 'As touching the Author of this Treatiſe, in whoſe Heart the Text was written by the Finger of God, before the Diſcourſe was Penned by his own Hand; his Piety, Learning, Gravity, Experience, Judgment, do not more commend him to all that know him, than this Work of his may commend it ſelf to them that read it. The Chriſtian Faith has alſo been ſolidly and learnedly maintain'd by him, in a Diſcourſe long ſince publiſhed, for the Demonſtration of our bleſſed Jeſus, to be the true Meſſias. Nor would I forget a Sermon of his on 2 Sam. 23.3. at the Anniverſary Court of Election at Boſton, 1669, afterwards publiſhed. And among the many Epiſtles which he hath prefix'd unto the Books of other Authors, I know not whether his excellent Epiſtle before Mr. Scudder's Daily Walk, may not, for the worth of it, be reckon'd it ſelf a Book, as the Book it ſelf was the Directory of his own Daily Walk. Moreover, there is publiſhed a Treatiſe of his under this Title, The Power of Congregational Churches; in the Preface whereof Mr. Nathanael Mather, (at this time the worthy and well-known Paſtor of ſuch a Church in the City of London) has theſe very ſignificant Expreſſions concerning him: Certain it is, the Principles held forth in this Treatiſe, coſt the Reverend Author, not only many Sufferings, but alſo many, very many ſad Searchings, and much Reading and Study, on ſet purpoſe, accompanied with manifold Prayers and Cries to the Father of Lights, for Light therein. After all which, he was more confirmed in them, and attained to ſuch comfortable Clearneſs therein, as bore him up with much inward Peace and Satisfaction, under all his Afflictions, on the Account of his Perſwaſion in theſe Points. And ſo perſwaded, lived, and ſo died this grave and ſerious Spirited Man. There is likewiſe publiſhed, A Diſcourſe about Civil Government, in a New Plantation, whoſe Deſign is Religion: In the Title-Page whereof, the Name of Mr. Cotton, is, by a Miſtake, put for that of Mr. Davenport. And there was lately tranſcribed for the Preſs, from his Notes, a large Volume of Accurate and Elaborate Sermons, on the whole Book of Canticles. But the Death of the Gentleman chiefly concerned in the intended Impreſſion, proved the Death of the Impreſſion itſelf.

§ 14. To conclude: There will be but an unjuſt Account given of the things preached and written by this Reverend Man, if we do not mention one ſingular Favour of Heaven unto him. It is well known, that in the earlieſt of the Primitive Times, the Faithful did in a literal Sence, believe the Second Coming of the Lord Jeſus Chriſt, and the Riſing and Reigning of the Saints with him, a thouſand Years before the reſt of the Dead live again: A Doctrine, which however ſome of later Years have counted it Heretical; yet, in the Days of Irenæus, was queſtion'd by none but ſuch as were counted Hereticks. 'Tis evident from Juſtin Martyr, that this Doctrine of the Chiliad, was in his Days embraced, among all Orthodox Chriſtians; nor did this

Kingdom of our Lord, begin to be doubted, until the Kingdom of Antichriſt began to advance into a conſiderable Figure; and then it fell chiefly under the Reproaches of ſuch Men, as were fain to deny the Divine Authority of the Book of Revelation, and of the Second Epiſtle of Peter. He is a Stranger to Antiquity, who does not find and own the Ancients generally of the Perſwaſion, which is excellently ſumm'd up in thoſe Words of Lactantius, Veniet ſummi & maximi Dei Filius. Verum ille, eum deleverit injuſtitiam, Judiciumque maximum fecerit, ac Juſtos, qui a Principio fuerunt, ad vitam Reſtauraverit, Mille Annis inter Homines Verſabitur, eoſque Juſtiſſimo Imperio reget. Nevertheleſs, at laſt Men came, not only to lay aſide the Modeſty expreſſed, by one of the firſt conſiderable Anti-Millenaries, namely Jerom, when he ſaid, Quæ licet non ſequamur, tamen Condemnare non poſſumus, eo quod multi Virorum Eccleſiaſticorum & Martyrum, iſta dixerint: But alſo with Violence to perſecute the Millenary Truth as an Heretical Pravity. So the Myſtery of our Lord's appearing in his Kingdom, lay buried in Popiſh Darkneſs, till the Light thereof had a freſh Dawn, ſince the Antichriſt entred into the laſt half Time of the Period allotted for him; and now, within the laſt few Sevens of Years, as things grow nearer to Accompliſhment, Learned and Pious Men, in great Numbers every where, come to receive, explain, and maintain the Old Faith about it. But here was the ſpecal Favour of Heaven, to our Davenport, that ſo many Years ago, when in both Englands the true Notion of the Chiliad, was hardly apprehended by as many Divines of Note, as there are Mouths of Nilus, yet this worthy Man clearly ſaw into it, and both preach'd and wrote thoſe very things, about the Future State, the Coming of the Lord, the Calling of the Jews, and the Firſt and Second Reſurrection of the Dead; which do now of late Years get more ground againſt the oppoſition of the otherwiſe minded; and find a kinder Entertainment among them that ſearch the Scriptures: And whereof he afterwards, when he was an Old Man, gave the World a little Taſt, in a Judicious Preface before a moſt Learned and Nervous Treatiſe, compoſed by one that was then a Young Man, about the Myſtery of the Salvation of Iſrael. Even, then, ſo long ago it was, that he aſſerted, A Perſonal, Viſible, Powerful, and Glorious Coming of the Lord Jeſus Chriſt unto Judgment, long before the End of the World.

But thus we take our Leave of this Renowned Man, and leave him reſting in hope, to ſtand in his Lot, at that End.

The Light of the Weſtern Churches: Or, The LIFE of Mr. THOMAS HOOKER, the Renowned Paſtor of Hartford-Church, and Pillar of Connecticut-Colony, in New-England.

To the CHURCHES in the Colony of CONNECTICUT.

A*Ltho' the Providence of Heaven, whereby the* Bounds of People are ſet, hath carried you ſo far Weſtward, that ſome have pleaſantly, The laſt Conflict with Antichriſt, muſt be in your Colony: Yet, I believe, you do not reckon your ſelves removed beyond the reach of Temptation and Corruption. 'Tis a Great Work that you have done, for our Lord Jeſus Chriſt, in forming a Colony of Evangelical Churches for him, where Satan alone had Reigned without Controul in all former Ages: But your incomparable Hooker, who was one of the greateſt in the Foundation of that Work, was in his Day, well aware, that Satan would make all the haſt he could, unhappily to get all buried in the Degeneracies of Ignorance, Worldlineſs, and Profanity. To adviſe you of your Dangers, and uphold the Life of Religion among you, I preſume humbly to lay before you, the Life of that excellent Man, who for Learning, Wiſdom, and Religion, was a Patern well worthy of perpetual Conſideration. Having ſerved my own Province, with the Hiſtory of no leſs than Four famous Johns, all fetch'd from One Church, I was for certain ſpecial Cauſes, unwilling to have it complained, as once it was of the Diſciples, Thomas was not with them : Wherefore I was willing to make this Appendix unto that Hiſtory, confeſſing that thro' want of Information I have Under-done in this, more than in any part of the Compoſure; yet ſo done, that I hope the good Hand of the Lord, whom I have deſign'd therein to glorifie, will make what is done, to be neither unacceptable, nor unprofitable unto his People.

Φωςὴς τῶν Ἐκκλησιῶν ἑσπερίων. The LIFE of Mr. THOMAS HOOKER.

§ 1. WHen Toxaris met with his Countryman Anacharſis, in Athens, he gave him this Invitation, Come along with me, and I will ſhew thee at once all the Wonders of Greece: Whereupon he ſhewed him Solon, as the Perſon in whom there Centered all the Glories of that City, or Country. I ſhall now invite my Reader to behold at once the Wonders of New England, and it is one Thomas Hooker that he ſhall behold them: Even in that Hooker, whom a worthy Writer would needs call, Saint Hooker, for the ſame Reaſon, (he ſaid) and with the ſame Freedom that Latimer would ſpeak of Saint Bilney, in his Commemorations. 'Tis that Hooker, of whom I may venture to ſay, that the famous Romaniſt, who wrote a Book, De Tribus Thomis; or, Of Three Thomas's; meaning Thomas the Apoſtle, Thomas Becket, and Sir Thomas More, did not a Thouſandth part ſo well ſort his Thomas's, as a New-Englander might, if he ſhould write a Book, De Duobus Thomis, or, Of Two Thomas's; and with Thomas the Apoſtle, joyn our Celebrious Thomas Hooker: My One Thomas, even our Apoſtolical Hooker, would in juſt Ballances, weigh down two of Stapleton's Rebellious Arch-Biſhops, or Bigotted Lord Chancellors. 'Tis he, whom I may call, as Theodoret call'd Irenæus, The Light of the Weſtern Churches.

§ 2. This our Hooker was born at Marfield, in Leiceſterſhire, about the Year 1586, of Parents that were neither unable, nor unwilling to beſtow upon him a Liberal Education; whereto the early and lively Sparkles of Wit obſerved in him, did very much encourage them. His Natural Temper was cheerful and courteous; but it was accompanied with ſuch a ſenſible Grandeur of Mind, as cauſed his Friends, without the help of Aſtrology, to prognoſticate that he was born to be conſiderable. The Influence which he had upon the Reformation of ſome growing Abuſes, when he was one of the Proctors in the Univerſity, was a thing that more eminently ſignalized him, when his more publick Appearance in the World was coming on: Which was attended with an Advancement unto a Fellowſhip, in Emanuel Colledge, in Cambridge; the Students whereof were originally deſigned for the Study of Divinity.

§ 3. With what Ability and Fidelity he acquitted himſelf in his Fellowſhip, it was a thing ſenſible unto the whole Univerſity. And it was while he was in this Employment, that the more effectual Grace of God, gave him the Experience of a true Regeneration. It pleaſed the Spirit of God very powerfully to break into the Soul of this Perſon, with ſuch a Senſe of his being expoſed unto the juſt Wrath of Heaven, as fill'd him with moſt unuſual Degrees of Horror and Anguiſh, which broke not only his Reſt, but his Heart alſo, and cauſed him to cry out, While I ſuffer thy Terrors, O Lord, I am diſtracted! While he long had a Soul haraſſed with ſuch Diſtreſſes, he had a ſingular Help in the prudent and piteous Carriage of Mr. Aſh, who was the Sizer, that then waited upon him; and attended him with ſuch diſcreet and proper Compaſſions, as made him afterwards to reſpect him highly all his Days. He afterwards gave this Account of himſelf, That in the time of his Agonies, he could Reaſon himſelf to the Rule, and conclude that there was no way but Submiſſion to God, and lying at the Foot of his Mercy in Chriſt Jeſus, and waiting humbly there, till he ſhould pleaſe to perſwade the Soul of his Favour: Nevertheleſs when he came to apply this Rule unto himſelf in his own Condition, his Reaſoning would fail him, he was able to do nothing. Having been a conſiderable while thus troubled with ſuch Impreſſions for the Spirit of Bondage, as were to fit him for the great Services and Enjoyments, which God intended him; at length he received the Spirit of Adoption, with well-grounded Perſwaſions of his Intereſt in the New Covenant. It became his manner, at his lying down for Sleep, in the Evening, to ſingle out ſome certain Promiſe of God, which he would repeat and ponder, and keep his Heart cloſe unto it, until he found that Satisfaction of Soul wherewith he could ſay, I will lay me down in Peace, and Sleep; for thou, O Lord, makeſt me dwell in Aſſurance. And he would afterwards Counſel others to take the ſame Courſe; telling them, That the Promiſe was the Boat, which was to carry a periſhing Sinner over unto the Lord Jeſus Chriſt.

§ 4. Mr. Hooker being now well got through the Storm of Soul, which had helped him unto a moſt Experimental Acquaintance with the Truths of the Goſpel, and the way of employing, and applying thoſe Truths, he was willing to ſerve the Church of God in the Miniſtry, whereto he was devoted. At his firſt leaving of the Univerſity, he ſojourned in the Houſe of Mr. Drake, a Gentleman of great Note, not far from London; whoſe worthy Conſort being viſited with ſuch Diſtreſſes of Soul, as Mr. Hooker himſelf had paſſed through, it proved an unſpeakable advantage unto both of them, that he had that opportunity of being ſerviceable; for indeed he now had no Superiour, and ſcarce any Equal, for the Skill of Treating a troubled Soul. When he left Mr. Drake's Family, he did more publickly and frequently preach about London; and in a little time he grew famous for his Miniſterial Abilities, but eſpecially for his Notable Faculty at the wiſe and fit management of wounded Spirits. However, he was not Ambitious to exerciſe his Miniſtry among the Great Ones of the World, from whom the moſt of Preferment might be expected; but in this, imitating the Example and Character of our bleſſed Saviour, of whom 'tis noted, that according to the Propheſie of Iſaiah, by him, The Poor had the Goſpel preached unto them; he choſe to be where great Numbers of the Poor might receive the Goſpel from him.

§ 5. About this time it was, that Mr. Hooker grew into a moſt intimate Acquaintance with Mr. Rogers of Dedham; who ſo highly valued him for his Multifarious Abilities, that he uſed and gained many Endeavours to get him ſettled at Colcheſter; whereto Mr. Hooker did very much incline, becauſe of its being ſo near to Dedham, where he might enjoy the Labours and Lectures of Mr. Rogers, whom he would ſometimes call, The Prince of all the Preachers in England. But the Providence of God gave an Obſtruction to that Settlement; and, indeed, it was an Obſervation which Mr. Hooker would ſometimes afterwards uſe unto his Friends, That the Providence of God often diverted him from Employment in ſuch Places as he himſelf deſired, and ſtill directed him to ſuch Places, as he had no thoughts of. Accordingly, Chelmsford in Eſſex, a Town of great Concourſe, wanting one to break the Bread of Life unto them; and hearing the Fame of Mr. Hooker's powerful Miniſtry, addreſſed him to become their Lecturer: And he accepted their Offer about the Year 1626. becoming not only their Lecturer, but alſo on the Lord's Days, an Aſſiſtant unto one Mr. Mitchel, the Incumbent of the place, who tho' he were a Smaller, yet being a Godly Perſon, gladly encouraged Mr. Hooker, and liv'd with him in a moſt comfortable Amity.

§ 6. Here his Lecture was exceedingly frequented, and proportionably ſucceeded; and the Light of his Miniſtry ſhone through the whole County of Eſſex. There was a rare mixture of Pleaſure and Profit in his preaching; and his Hearers felt thoſe penetrating Impreſſions of his Miniſtry upon their Souls, which cauſed them to Reverence him, as a Teacher ſent from God. He had a moſt excellent Faculty at the Applications of his Doctrine; and he would therein ſo touch the Conſciences of his Auditors, that a Judicious Perſon would ſay of him, He was the Beſt at an Uſe that ever he heard. Hereby there was a great Reformation wrought, not only in the Town, but in the adjacent Country, from all parts whereof they came to hear the Wiſdom of the Lord Jeſus Chriſt, in his Goſpel, by this worthy Man diſpenſed: And ſome of great Quality among the reſt, would often reſort from far to his Aſſembly; particularly the truly Noble Earl of Warwick, whoſe Countenance of Good Miniſters, procured more Prayers to God for him, than moſt Noble men in England.

When he firſt ſet up his Lecture, there was more Profaneneſs than Devotion in the Town; And the multitude of Inns and Shops in the Town, produced one particular Diſorder, of Peoples filling the Streets with unſuitable Behaviours, after the Publick Services of the Lord's Day were over. But by the Power of his Miniſtry in Publick, and by the Prudence of his Carriage in Private, he quickly cleared the Streets of this Diſorder, and the Sabbath came to be very viſibly ſanctified among the People.

§ 7. The Joy of the People in this Light was but for a Seaſon. The Conſcientious Non-Conformity of Mr. Hooker, to ſome Rites of the Church of England, then vigorouſly preſſed, eſpecially upon ſuch able and uſeful Miniſters, as were moſt likely to be laid aſide by their ſcrupling of thoſe Rites, made it neceſſary for him to lay down his Miniſtry in Chelmsford, when he had been about four Years there employed in it. Hereupon, at the Requeſt of ſeveral eminent Perſons, he kept a School in his own hired Houſe, having one Mr. John Eliot for his Uſher, at little Baddow, not far from Chelmsford; where he managed his Charge with ſuch Diſcretion, ſuch Authority, and ſuch Efficacy, that able to do more with a Word, or a Look, than moſt other Men could have done by a ſeverer Diſcipline, he did very great Service to the Church of God, in the Education of ſuch, as afterwards proved themſelves not a little ſerviceable. I have in my Hands, a Manuſcript, written by the Hands of our bleſſed Eliot, wherein he gives a very great Account of the little Academy then maintained in the Houſe of Mr. Hooker; and among other things, he ſays, To this place I was call'd, through the infinite Riches of God's Mercy in Chriſt Jeſus to my poor Soul: For here the Lord ſaid unto my dead Soul, Live; and through the Grace of Chriſt, I do live, and I ſhall live for ever! When I came to this bleſſed Family, I then ſaw, and never before, the Power of Godlineſs, in its Lively Vigour, and Efficacy.

§ 8. While he continued thus in the Heart of Eſſex, and in the Hearts of the People there, he ſignalized his Uſefulneſs in many other Inſtances.

The Godly Miniſters round about the Country, would have recourſe unto him, to be directed and reſolved in their difficult Caſes; and it was by his means that thoſe Godly Miniſters held their Monthly Meetings, for Faſting and Prayer, and profitable Conferences. 'Twas the Effect of his Conſultations alſo, that ſuch Godly Miniſters came to be here and there ſettled in ſeveral parts of the Country; and many others came to be better eſtabliſh'd in ſome great Points of Chriſtianity, by being in his Neighbourhood and Acquaintance. He was indeed a General Bleſſing to the Church of God! But that which hindred his taking his Degree of Batchellor in Divinity, muſt alſo, it ſeems, hinder his being a Preacher of Divinity; namely, his being a Non-Conformiſt unto ſome things, whereof true Divinity could not approve. And indeed that which made the Silencing of Mr. Hooker more unaccountable was. that no leſs that Seven and forty Conformable Miniſters of the Neighbouring Towns, underſtanding that the Biſhop of London pretended Mr. Hooker's Miniſtry to be injurious or offenſive to them, ſubſcribed a Petition to the Biſhop for his Continuance in the Miniſtry at Chelmsford; in which Petition, tho' he was of a Perſwaſion ſo different from them, yet they teſtifie in ſo many words, That they eſteem and know the ſaid Mr. Thomas Hooker, to be for Doctrine, Orthodox; for Life and Converſation, Honeſt; for Diſpoſition, Peaceable, and in no wiſe Turbulent or Factious. And yet all would not avail: Bonus vir Hookerus, ſed ideo malus, quia Puritanus.

§ 9. The Ground-work of his Knowledge, and Study of the Arts, was in the Tables of Mr. Alexander Richardſon, whom he cloſely followed, admiring him for a Man of tranſcendent Ability, and a moſt exalted Piety; and would ſay of him, That he was a Maſter of ſo much Under*ſtanding*, that like the great Army of Gideon, he was too many to be employed in doing what was to be done for the Church of God. This moſt eminent Richardſon leaving the Univerſity, lived a private Life in Eſſex, whither many Students in Cambridge reſorted unto him, to be illuminated in the abſtruſer parts of Learning; and from him it was, that the incomparable Doctor Ames imbibed thoſe Principles both in Philoſophy, and in Divinity, which afterwards not only gave clearer Methods and Meaſures to all the Liberal Arts, but alſo fed the whole Church of God with the choiceſt Marrow. Nevertheleſs, this excellent Man, as he lived, ſo he died in a moſt retired Obſcurity; but ſo far as a Metempſychoſis was attainable, the Soul of him, I mean the Notions, the Accompliſhments, the Diſpoſitions of that Great Soul, tranſmigrated into our moſt Richardſonian Hooker.

§ 10. As his Perſon was thus adorned with a well-grounded Learning, ſo his Preaching was notably ſet off with a Livelineſs extraordinary: Inſomuch that I cannot give a fuller, and yet briefer Deſcription of him, than that which I find given of Bucholtzer, that Pattern of Preachers, before him; Vivida in eo omnia fuerunt, vivida vox, vividi oculi, vividæ manus, geſtus omnes vividi: He was all that he was, and he did all that he did, Unto the Life! He not only had that which Quintilian calls, A Natural Moveableneſs of Soul, whereby the diſtinct Images of things would come ſo nimbly, and yet ſo fitly into his Mind, that he could utter them with ſuch fluent Expreſſions, as the old Orators would uſually aſcribe unto a ſpecial Aſſiſtance of Heaven, [Deum tunc Adfuiſſe, veteres Oratores aibant] and counted that Men did therein THEIOS LEGEIN, or Speak Divinely; but the Riſe of this Fluency in him, was the Divine Reliſh which he had of the things to be ſpoken, the Sacred Panting of his holy Soul after the Glorious Objects of the Inviſible World, and the true Zeal of Religion giving Fire to his Diſcourſes. Whence, though the Ready and Noiſy Performances of many Preachers, when they are as Plato ſpeaks, THEATROU MESTOI, or Full of the Theatre, Acting to the Height in the Publick for their Applauſe, may be aſcribed unto very Mechanical Principles; yet the Vigour in the Miniſtry of our Hooker, being raiſed by a Coal from the Altar of a moſt real Devotion, touching his Heart; it would be a wrong unto the Good Spirit of our God, if he ſhould not be acknowledged the Author of it. That Spirit accordingly gave a wonderful and unuſual Succeſs, unto the Miniſtry wherein he Breathed ſo Remarkably. Of that Succeſs there were many Inſtances; but one particularly I find mentioned in Clark's Examples, to this purpoſe. A profane Perſon deſigning therein only an Ungodly Diverſion and Merriment, ſaid unto his Companions, Come, Let us go hear what that Bawling Hooker will ſay to us; and thereupon with an Intention to make Sport, unto Chelmsford Lecture they came. The Man had not been long in the Church, before the Quick and Powerful Word of God, in the Mouth of his Faithful Hooker, pierced the Soul of him; he came out with an awakened and a diſtreſſed Soul, and by the further Bleſſing of God upon Mr. Hooker's Miniſtry, he arrived unto a true Converſion; for which cauſe he would not afterwards leave that Bleſſed Miniſtry, but went a Thouſand Leagues to attend it, and enjoy it. Another Memorable thing of this kind, was this; it was Mr. Hooker's manner once a Year to viſit his Native County: And in one of thoſe Viſits, he had an Invitation to preach in the Great Church of Leiceſter. One of the Chief Burgeſſes in the Town much oppoſed his Preaching there; and when he could not prevail to hinder it, he ſet certain Fidlers a work to diſturb him in the Church-porch, or Church-yard. But ſuch was the Vivacity of Mr. Hooker, as to proceed in what he was about, without either the damping of his Mind, or the drowning of his Voice; whereupon the Man himſelf went unto the Church-door to over-hear what he ſaid. It pleaſed God ſo to accompany ſome Words uttered by Mr. Hooker, as thereby to procure, firſt the Attention and then the Conviction of that wretched Man; who then came to Mr. Hooker with a penitent Confeſſion of his Wickedneſs, and became indeed ſo penitent a Convert, as to be at length a ſincere Profeſſor and Practiſer of the Godlineſs, whereof he had been a Perſecutor.

§ 11. The Spiritual Court ſitting at Chelmsford, about the Year 1630. had not only ſilenced Mr. Hooker, but alſo bound him over in a Bond of Fifty Pound to appear before the High Commiſſion, which he could not now attend, becauſe of an Ague then upon him. One of his Hearers, namely Mr. Naſh, a very honeſt Yeoman, that rented a great Farm of the Earl of Warwick at Much-Waltham, was bound in that Sum for his Appearance, but as Paul was adviſed by his Friends, that he would not venture into the Theatre at Epheſus, thus Mr. Hooker's Friends adviſed him to forfeit his Bonds, rather than to throw himſelf any further into the Hands of his Enemies. Wherefore, when the Day for his Appearance came, his honeſt Surety being reimburſed by ſeveral good People in and near Chelmsford, ſent in the forfeited Sum into the Court; and Mr. Hooker having, by the Earl of Warwick, a courteous and private Receſs provided for his Family at a Place called Old Park, for which I find, the Thanks of Dr. Hill afterwards publickly given in his Dedication of Mr. Fenner's Treatiſe about Impenitency; he went over to Holland. In his Paſſage thither, he quickly had occaſion to diſcover himſelf, when they were in Eminent Hazzard of Shipwrack upon a Shelf of Sand, whereon they ran in the Night; but Mr. Hooker, like Paul, with a Remarkable Confidence, aſſured them, that they ſhould be all preſerved; and they had as Remarkable a Deliverance. I have alſo heard, that when he fled from the Purſevants, to take his Paſſage for the Low-Countries, at his laſt parting with ſome of his Friends, one of them ſaid, Sir, What if the Wind ſhould not be fair, when you come to the Veſſel? whereto he inſtantly replied, Brother, Let us leave that with him, who keeps the Wind in the hollow of his hand: And it was obſerv'd, That although the Wind was croſs, until he came aboard, yet it immediately then came about fair and freſh, and he was no ſooner under Sail, but the Officer arriv'd at the Sea ſide happily too late now to come at him: Which minds me of what befel Dr. Goodwin, not long after. That Great Man lay Wind bound in hourly Suſpicions that the Perſevants would ſtop his Voyage, and ſeize his Perſon before the Wind would favour his getting away for Holland. In this Diſtreſs, humbly praying to the Lord Jeſus Chriſt, for a more propitious Wind, he yet ſaid, Lord, If thou haſt at this time, any poor Servant of thine, that wants this Wind, more than I do another, I do not aſk for the Changing of it; I ſubmit unto it. And immediately the Wind came about, unto the Right Point; and carried him clear from his Purſuers.

§ 12. Arriving in Holland, he was invited unto a Settlement with old Mr. Paget; but the old Man being ſecretly willing that Mr. Hooker ſhould not accept of this Invitation, he contrived many ways to render him ſuſpected unto the Claſſis, on a Suſpicion that he favoured the Browniſts; unto whom he had, indeed, an extream Averſion. The Miſunderſtandings operated ſo far, as to occaſion Mr. Hooker's Removal from Amſterdam; notwithſtanding he had ſo fully expreſſed himſelf, when in his anſwer to one of Mr. Paget's Queſtions, he declared in theſe Words, To ſeparate from the Faithful Aſſemblies and Churches in England, as no Churches, is an Error in Judgment, and Sin in Practice, held and maintained by the Browniſts; and therefore to communicate with them in their Opinion or Practice, is ſinful and utterful unlawful; and care ſhould be taken to prevent Offence, either by encouraging them in their way, or by drawing others to a further Approbation of that way than is meet. Going from Amſterdam, he went unto Delft; where he was moſt kindly received by Mr. Forbs, an Aged and Holy Scotch Miniſter, under whoſe Miniſtry many Engliſh Merchants were then ſettled. The Text whereon he firſt Preached at his coming thither, was Phil. 1. 29. To you it is given not only to Believe, but alſo to Suffer; and after that Sermon, Mr. Forbs manifeſted a ſtrong Deſire to enjoy the Fellowſhip of Mr. Hooker in the Work of the Goſpel; which he did for about the ſpace of two Years: In all which time they lived ſo like Brethren, that an Obſerver might ſay of them, as they ſaid of Baſil and Nazianzen, They were but one Soul in two Bodies; and if they had been for any little while aſunder, they ſtill met with ſuch Friendly and Joyful Congratulations, as teſtified a moſt affectionate Satiſfaction in each others Company.

§ 13. At the end of two Years, he had a Call to Rotterdam; which he the more heartily and readily accepted, becauſe it renewed his Acquaintance with his Invaluable Dr. Ames, who had newly left his Place in the Friſian Univerſity. With him he ſpent the Reſidue of his Time in Holland, and aſſiſted him in compoſing ſome of his Diſcourſes, which are, His Freſh Suit againſt the Ceremonies: For ſuch was the Regard which Dr. Ames had for him, that notwithſtanding his vaſt Ability and Experience, yet when it came to the Narrow of any Queſtion about the Inſtituted Worſhip of God, he would ſtill profeſs himſelf conquered by Mr. Hooker's Reaſon; declaring, that though he had been acquainted with many Scholars of divers Nations, yet he never met with Mr. Hooker's Equal, either for Preaching or for Diſputing. And ſuch was the Regard, which on the other ſide, he had for Dr. Ames, that he would ſay, If a Scholar was but well ſtudied in Dr. Ames his Medulla Theologiæ, and Caſus Conſcientiæ, ſo as to underſtand them throughly, they would make him (ſuppoſing him verſed in the Scriptures,) a Good Divine, tho' he had no more Books in the World. But having tarried in Holland long enough to ſee the State of Religion in the Churches there, he became ſatiſfied, that it was neither Eligible for him to tarry in that Country, nor convenient for his Friends to be invited thither after him. I have at this time in my Hands, his Letter from Rotterdam to Mr. Cotton, wherein are theſe words; ‘ The State of theſe Provinces to my weak Eye, ſeems wonderfully tickliſh and miſerable. For the better part, Heart Religion, they content themſelves with very Forms, tho' much blemiſhed; but the Power of Godlineſs, for ought I can ſee or hear, they know not; and if it were throughly preſſed, I fear leaſt it will be fiercely oppoſed. My Ague yet holds me; the ways of God's Providence, wherein he has walked towards me, in this long time of my Sickneſs, and wherein I have drawn forth many weariſh Hours, under his Almighty Hand (Bleſſed be his Name) together with Purſuits and Baniſhment, which have waited upon me, as one Wave follows another, have driven me to an Amazement: His Paths being too ſecret and paſt finding out by ſuch an Ignorant, Worthleſs Worm as my ſelf. I have looked over my Heart and Life, according to my meaſure; aimed and gueſſed as well as I could: And entreated his Majeſty to make known his Mind, wherein I miſſed; and yet methinks I cannot ſpell out readily the purpoſe of his Proceedings; which I confeſs have been wonderful in Miſeries, and more than wonderful in Mercies to me and mine. Wherefore, about this time, underſtanding that many of his Friends in Eſſex, were upon the Wing, for a Wilderneſs in America; where they hoped for an opportunity to enjoy and practiſe the Pure Worſhip of the Lord Jeſus Chriſt, in Churches gathered according to his Direction, he readily anſwered their Invitation to accompany them in this Undertaking. Dr. Ames had a deſign to follow Mr. Hooker; but he died ſoon after Mr. Hooker's Removal from Rotterdam. However his Widow and Children afterwards came to New-England; where having her Houſe burnt, and being reduced unto much Poverty and Affliction, the charitable Heart of Mr. Hooker (and others that joined with him) upon Advice thereof, comfortably provided for them.

§ 14. Returning into England in order to a further Voyage, he was quickly ſcented by the Purſevants; who at length got ſo far up with him, as to knock at the Door of that very Chamber, where he was now diſcourſing with Mr. Stone; who was now become his deſigned Companion and Aſſiſtent for the New Engliſh Enterprize. Mr. Stone was at that Inſtant ſmoking of Tobacco; for which Mr. Hooker had been reproving him, as being then uſed by few Perſons of Sobriety; being alſo of a ſudden and pleaſant Wit, he ſtept unto the Door, with his Pipe in his mouth, and ſuch an Air of Speech and Look, as gave him ſome Credit with the Officer. The Officer demanded, Whether Mr. Hooker were not there? Mr. Stone replied with a braving ſort of Confidence, What Hooker? Do you mean Hooker that liv'd once at Chelmsford! The Officer anſwered, Yes, He! Mr. Stone immediately, with a Diverſion like that which once helped Athanaſius, made this true Anſwer, If it be he you look for, I ſaw him about an Hour ago, at ſuch an Houſe in the Town; you had beſt haſten thither after him. The Officer took this for a ſufficient Account, and went his way; but Mr. Hooker, upon this Intimation, concealed himſelf more carefully and ſecurely, till he went on Board, at the Downs, in the Year 1633. the Ship which brought him, and Mr. Cotton, and Mr. Stone to New-England: Where none but Mr. Stone was owned for a Preacher, at their firſt coming aboard; the other two delaying to take their Turns in the Publick Worſhip of the Ship, till they were got ſo far into the Main Ocean, that they might with Safety, diſcover who they were.

§ 15. Amongſt Mr. Fenner's Works, I find ſome imperfect and ſhattered, and I believe, Injurious Notes of a Farewel Sermon upon Jer. 14. 9. We are called by thy Name, leave us not: Which Farewel Sermon was indeed, Mr. Hooker's, at his leaving of England. There are in thoſe Fragments of a Sermon, ſome very Pathetical and moſt Prophetical Paſſages, where ſome are theſe.

It is not Gold and Proſperity which makes God to be our God; there is more Gold in the Weſt-Indies, than there is in all Chriſtendom; but it is God's Ordinances in the Vertue of them, that ſhow the Preſence of God.

Again, Is not England ripe? Is ſhe not weary of God? Nay, ſhe is fed fat for the ſlaughter.

Once more, England hath ſeen her beſt Days, and now evil Days are befalling us.

And, Thou England, which haſt been lifted up to Heaven with Means, ſhall be abaſed and brought down to Hell; for if the mighty Works, which have been done in thee, had been done in India or Turkey, they would have repented e'er this.

Theſe Paſſages I quote, that I may the more effectually deſcribe the Apprehenſions with which this worthy Man took his Farewel of his Native Country.

But there is one ſtrange Paſſage in that Sermon, that I know not what well to think of; and yet it is to be thought of. I remember, 'tis a Paſſage in the Life of the Reverend Old Blackerby, who died in the Year 1648. ‘ That he would often ſay it was very probable, the Engliſh Nation would be ſorely puniſhed by the French: And that he believed, Popery would come in, but it would not laſt, nor could it recover its former Strength. - The notable Fulfilment which that Paſſage hath ſeen, would carry one to conſider the unaccountable Words which Our Hooker uttered in his Farewel Sermon. 'Tis very likely, that the Scribe has all along wronged the Sermon; but the Words now referr'd unto, are of this Purport, That it had been told him from God, That God will deſtroy England, and lay it waſt; and that the People ſhould be put unto the Sword, and the Temples burnt, and many Houſes laid in Aſhes. Long after this, when he lived at Hartford in New-England, his Friends that heard that Sermon, having the News of the Miſeries upon England, by the Civil Wars, brought unto them, enquired of him, Whether this were not the time of God's deſtroying England,whereof he had ſpoken? He replied, No; this is not the time; there will be a time of reſpite after theſe Wars, and a time wherein God will further try England; and England will further ſin againſt him, and ſhew an Antipathy againſt the Government of the Lord Jeſus Chriſt in his Church; his Royal Power in the Governing thereof will be denied and rejected. There will therefore a time come, when the Lord Jeſus Chriſt will plead his own, and his own Cauſe, and the Cauſe of them who have ſuffered for their Fidelity to her Inſtitutions: He will plead it in a more dreadful way, and break the Nation of England in pieces, like a Potters Veſſel. Then a Man ſhall be precious as the Gold of Ophir; but a ſmall Remnant ſhall be left: And afterward God will raiſe up Churches to himſelf, after his own Heart, in his own time and way. God knows, what there may be in this Prediction.

§ 16. Mr. Hooker and Mr. Cotton were, for their different Genius, the Luther and Melancthon of New-England; at their Arrival unto which Country, Mr. Cotton ſettled with the Church of Boſton, but Mr. Hooker with the Church of New-Town, having Mr. Stone for his Aſſiſtant. Inexpreſſible now was the Joy of Mr. Hooker, to find himſelf ſurrounded with his Friends, who were come over the Year before, to prepare for his Reception; with open Arms he embraced them, and uttered theſe words, Now I live, if you ſtand faſt in the Lord. But ſuch multitudes flocked over to New-England after them, that the Plantation of New Town became to ſtraight for them; and it was Mr. Hooker's Advice, that they ſhould not incur the danger of a Sitna, or an Eſek, where they might have a Rehoboth. Accordingly in the Month of June 1636, they removed an Hundred Miles to the Weſtward, with a purpoſe to ſettle upon the delightful Banks of Connecticut River: And there were about an Hundred Perſons in the firſt Company that made this Removal; who not being able to walk above Ten Miles a Day, took up near a Fortnight in the Journey; having no Pillows to take their Nightly Reſt upon, but ſuch as their Father Jacob found in the way to Padan-Aram. Here Mr. Hooker was the chief Inſtrument of beginning another Colony, as Mr. Cotton, whom he left behind him, was, of preſerving and perfecting that Colony where he left him; for, indeed each of them were the Oracle of their ſeveral Colonies.

§ 17. Tho' Mr. Hooker had thus removed from the Maſſachuſet-Bay, yet he ſometimes came down to viſit the Churches in that Bay: But when ever he came, he was received with an Affection, like that which Paul found among the Galatians; yea, 'tis thought, that once there ſeemed ſome Intimation from Heaven, as if the good People had overdone in that Affection: For on May 26. 1639. Mr. Hooker being here to preach that Lord's Day in the Afternoon, his great Fame had gathered a vaſt Multitude of Hearers from ſeveral other Congregations, and among the reſt, the Governour himſelf, to be made Partaker of his Miniſtry. But when he came to preach, he found himſelf ſo unaccountably at a loſs, that after ſome ſhattered and broken Attempts to proceed, he made a full ſtop; ſaying to the Aſſembly, That every thing which he would have ſpoken, was taken both out of his Mouth, and out of his Mind alſo; wherefore he deſired them to ſing a Pſalm, while he withdrew about half an Hour from them: Returning then to the Congregation, he preached a moſt admirable Sermon, wherein he held them for two Hours together in an extraordinary Strain both of Pertinency and Vivacity.

After Sermon, when ſome of his Friends were ſpeaking of the Lords thus withdrawing his Aſſiſtance from him, he humbly replied, We daily confeſs, that we have nothing, and can do nothing, without Chriſt; and what if Chriſt will make this manifeſt in us, and on us, before our Congregations? What remains, but that we be humbly contented? And what manner of Diſcouragement is there in all of this? Thus content was he to be nullified, that the LORD might be magnified!

§ 18. Mr. Hooker that had been born to ſerve many, and was of ſuch a Publick Spirit, that I find him occaſionally celebrated in the Life of Mr. Angier, lately publiſhed for one, who would be continually inquiſitive how it fared with the Church of God, both at home and abroad, on purpoſe that he might order his Prayers and Cares accordingly: [Which, by the way, makes me think on Mr. Firmin's words: I look on it, (ſaith he) as an Act of a grown Chriſtian, whoſe Intereſt in Chriſt is well cleared, and his Heart walking cloſe with God, to be really taken up with the Publick Intereſt of Chriſt.] He never took his Opportunity to ſerve himſelf, but lived a ſort of Exile all his Days, except the laſt fourteen Years of his Life, among his own Spiritual Children at Hartford; however, here alſo he was an Exile. Accordingly, where-ever he came, he lived like a Stranger in the World! When at the Lands-end, he took his laſt ſight of England, he ſaid, Farewel England! I expect now no more to ſee that Religious Zeal, and Power of Godlineſs, which I have ſeen among Profeſſors in that Land! And he had Sagacious and Prophetical Apprehenſions of the Declenſions which would attend Reforming Churches, when they came to enjoy a place of Liberty: He ſaid, That Adverſity had ſlain its Thouſands, but Proſperity would ſlay its Ten Thouſands! He fear'd, That they who had been lively Chriſtians in the Fire of Perſecution, would ſoon become cold in the midſt of Univerſal Peace, except ſome few, whom God by ſharp Tryals, would keep in a Faithful, Watchful, Humble, and Praying Frame. But under theſe Pre apprehenſions, it was his own endeavour to beware of abating his own firſt Love! And of ſo Watchful, ſo Prayerful, ſo Fruitful a Spirit was Mr. Hooker, that the Spirit of Prophecy it ſelf, did ſeem to grant him ſome ſingular Afflations. Indeed, every wiſe Man is a Prophet; but one ſo eminently acquainted with Scripture and Reaſon, and Church-Hiſtory, as our Hooker, muſt needs be a Seer, from whom ſingular Prognoſtications were to be expected. Accordingly, there were many things prognoſticated by him, wherein the Future State of New-England, particularly of Connecticut has been ſo much concerned, that its pity they ſhould be forgotten. But I will in this Hiſtory, record only two of his Predictions. One was, That God would puniſh the wanton Spirit of the Profeſſors in this Country, with a ſad want of Able Men in all Orders. Another was, That in certain places of great Light here ſinned againſt, there would break forth ſuch horrible Sins, as would be the Amazement of the World.

§ 19. He was a Man of Prayer, which was indeed a ready way to become a Man of God. He would ſay, That Prayer was the principal part of a Miniſter's Work; 'twas by this, that he was to carry on the reſt. Accordingly, he ſtill devoted one Day in a Month to private Prayer, with Faſting, before the Lord, beſides the Publick Faſts, which often occurred unto him. He would ſay, That ſuch extraordinary Favours, as the Life of Religion, and the Power of Godlineſs, muſt be preſerved by the frequent Uſe of ſuch extraordinary Means, as Prayer with Faſting; and that if Profeſſors grow negligent of theſe Means, Iniquity will abound, and the Love of many wax cold. Nevertheleſs, in the Duty of Prayer, he affected Strength rather than Length; and tho' he had not ſo much variety in his Publick Praying, as in his Publick Preaching, yet he always had a ſeaſonable Reſpect unto preſent Occaſions. And it was obſerved, that his Prayer was uſually like Jacob's Ladder, wherein the nearer he came to an End, the nearer he drew towards Heaven; and he grew into ſuch Rapturous Pleadings with God, and Praiſings of God, as made ſome to ſay, That like the Maſter of the Feaſt, he reſerved the beſt Wine until the laſt. Nor was the wonderful Succeſs of his Prayer, upon ſpecial Concerns, unobſerved by the whole Colony; who reckoned him the Moſes, which turned away the Wrath of God from them, and obtained a Blaſt from Heaven upon their Indian Amalekites, by his uplifted Hands, in thoſe remarkable Deliverances which they ſometimes experienced. It was very particularly obſerved, when there was a Battel to be fought between the Narraganſet, and the Menhegin Indians, in the Year 1643. The Narraganſet Indians had complotted the Ruine of the Engliſh, but the Monhegin were Confederate with us; and a War now being between thoſe two Nations, much Notice was taken of the prevailing Importunity, wherewith Mr. Hooker urged for the Accompliſhment of that Great Promiſe unto the People of God, I will bleſs them that bleſs thee, but I will curſe him that curſes thee. And the Effect of it was, that the Narganſets received a wonderful Overthrow from the Monhegins, though the former did Three or Four to One for Number, exceed the latter. Such an Iſrael at Prayer, was our Hooker! And this Praying Paſtor was Bleſſed; as, indeed, ſuch Miniſters uſe to be, with a Praying People: There fell upon his pious People, a Double Portion of the Spirit, which they beheld in him.

§ 20. That Reverend and Excellent Man, Mr. Whitfield, having ſpent many Years in ſtudying of Books, did at length take two or three Years to ſtudy Men; and in purſuance of this Deſign, having acquainted himſelf with the moſt conſiderable Divines in England, at laſt he fell into the Acquaintance of Mr. Hooker; concerning whom, he afterwards gave this Teſtimony: 'That he had not thought there had 'been ſuch a Man on Earth; a Man in whom 'there ſhone ſo many Excellencies, as were in 'this incomparable Hooker; a Man in whom 'Learning and Wiſdom, were ſo tempered with 'Zeal, Holineſs, and Watchfulneſs. And the ſame Obſerver having exactly Noted Mr. Hooker, made this Remark, and gave this Report more particularly of him, That he had the beſt Command of his own Spirit, which he ever ſaw in any Man whatever. For though he were a Man of a Cholerick Diſpoſition, and had a mighty Vigour and Fervour of Spirit, which as occaſion ſerved, was wondrous uſeful unto him, yet he had ordinarily as much Government of his Choler, as a Man has of a Maſtiff Dog in a Chain; he could let out his Dog, and pull in his Dog, as he pleaſed. And another that obſerved the Heroical Spirit and Courage, with which this Great Man fulfilled his Miniſtry, gave this Account of him, He was a Perſon who while doing his Maſter's Work, would put a King in his Pocket.

Of this there was an Inſtance, when the Judges were in their Circuit, preſent at Chelmsford, on a Faſt kept throughout the Nation, Mr. Hooker then, in the preſence of the Judges, and before a vaſt Congregation, declared freely the Sins of England, and the Plagues that would come for ſuch Sins; and in his Prayer he beſought the God of Heaven, to ſet on the Heart of the King, what his own Mouth had ſpoken, in the Second Chapter of Malachy, and the Eleventh and Twelfth Verſes, [in his Prayer he ſo diſtinctly quoted it!] An Abomination is committed, Judah hath married the Daughter of a ſtrange God, the Lord will cut off the Man that doeth this. Though the Judges turned unto the place thus quoted, yet Mr. Hooker came into no trouble; but it was long before the Kingdom did.

§ 21. He was indeed of a very condeſcending Spirit, not only towards his Brethren in the Miniſtry, but alſo towards the meaneſt of any Chriſtians whatſoever. He was very willing to Sacrifice his own Apprehenſions into the Convincing Reaſon of another Man; and very ready to acknowledge any Miſtake, or Failing, in himſelf. I'll give one Example: There happened a damage to be done unto a Neighbour, immediately whereupon, Mr. Hooker meeting with an unlucky Boy, that often had his Name up, for the doing of ſuch Miſchiefs, he fell to chiding of that Boy, as the Doer of this. The Boy denied it, and Mr. Hooker ſtill went on in an angry manner, charging of him; whereupon ſaid the Boy, Sir, I ſee you are in a Paſſion, I'll ſay no more to you: And ſo ran away. Mr. Hooker, upon further Enquiry, not finding that the Boy could be proved Guilty, ſent for him; and having firſt by a calm Queſtion, given the Boy opportunity to renew his Denial of the Fact, he ſaid unto him: Since I cannot prove the contrary, I am bound to believe; and I do believe what you ſay: And then added, Indeed I was in a Paſſion, when I ſpake to you before; it was my Sin, and it is my Shame, and I am truly ſorry for it: And I hope in God I ſhall be more watchful hereafter. So giving the Boy ſome good Counſel, the poor Lad went away extreamly affected with ſuch a Carriage in ſo good a Man; and it proved an occaſion of good unto the Soul of the Lad all his Days.

On this occaſion it may be added, That Mr. Hooker did much abound in Acts of Charity. It was no rare thing for him to give ſometimes Five Pound, ſometimes Ten Pound at a time, towards the Support of Widows and Orphans, eſpecially thoſe of deceaſed Miniſters.

Thus alſo, when the People at Southampton, twenty Leagues from Hartford, wanted Corn, Mr. Hooker, and ſome few that joined with them, ſent them freely a whole Bark's Load of Corn, of many Hundred Buſhels, to relieve them. Thus he had thoſe that Chryſoſtom calls, Συλλογίσμȣς ἀναντιρρήτȣς, unanſwerable Syllogiſms, to demonſtrate Chriſtianity.

§ 22. He had a ſingular Ability, at giving Anſwers to Caſes of Conſcience; whereof happy was the Experience of ſome Thouſands: And for this Work he uſually ſet apart, the Second Day of the Week; wherein he admitted all ſorts of Perſons in their Diſcourſes with him, to reap the Benefit of the extraordinary Experience which himſelf had found of Satan's Devices. Once particularly, Mr. Hooker was addreſſed by a Student in Divinity, who entring upon his Miniſtry, was, as the moſt uſeful Miniſters, at their Entrance thereupon, uſe to be horridly buffeted with Temptations, which were become almoſt intolerable: Repairing to Mr. Hooker in the Diſtreſſes and Anguiſhes of his Mind, and bemoaning his own overwhelming Fears, while the Lion was thus roaring at him, Mr. Hooker anſwered, I can compare with any Man living for Fears! My Advice to you is, That you ſearch out, and analiſe the humbling Cauſes of them, and refer them to their proper places; then go and pour them out before the Lord; and they ſhall prove more profitable to you than any Books you can read. But Mr. Hooker in his dealing with troubled Conſciences, obſerved, that there were a ſort of crafty and guileful Souls, which he would find out with an admirable Dexterity; and of theſe he would ſay, as Paul of the Cretians, They muſt be reproved ſharply, that they may be ſound in the Faith; ſharp Rebukes make ſound Chriſtians. Indeed, of ſome he had Compaſſion, making a Difference; and others he ſaved with Fear, pulling them out of the Fire.

§ 23. Altho' he had a notable Hand at the Diſcuſſing and Adjuſting of Controverſal Points, yet he would hardly ever handle any Polemical Divinity in the Pulpit; but the very Spirit of his Miniſtry, lay in the Points of the moſt Practical Religion, and the Grand Concerns of a Sinner's Preparation for, Implantation in, and Salvation by, the Glorious Lord Jeſus Chriſt. And in theſe Diſcourſes he would frequently intermix moſt affectionate Warnings of the Declenſions which would quickly befal the Churches of New-England.

His Advice to young Miniſters, may on this occaſion be fitly mentioned. It was, That at their Entrance on their Miniſtry, they would with careful Study preach over the whole Body of Divinity methodically, (even in the Ameſian Method) which would acquaint them with all the more intelligible and agreeable Texts of Scripture, and prepare them for a further Acquaintance with the more difficult, and furniſh them with Abilities to preach on whole Chapters, and all Occaſional Subjects, which by the Providence of God, they might be directed unto.

Many Volumes of the Sermons preached by him were ſince Printed; and this Account is to be given of them.

While he was Fellow of Emanuel-Colledge, he entertained a ſpecial Inclination to thoſe Principles of Divinity, which concerned, The Application of Redemption; and that which eminently fitted him for the Handling of thoſe Principles, was, That he had been from his Youth trained up in the Experience of thoſe Humiliations and Conſolations, and Sacred Communions, which belong to the New Creature; and he had moſt critically compared his own Experience, with the Accounts which the quick and powerful Word of God, gives of thoſe Glorious Things. Accordingly he preached firſt more briefly on theſe Points, whilſt he was a Catechiſt in Emanuel-Colledge, in a more Scholaſtick way; which was moſt agreeable to his preſent Station; and the Notes of what he then delivered were ſo eſteemed, that many Copies thereof were tranſcribed and preſerved. Afterwards he preached more largely on thoſe Points, in a more popular way at Chelmsford, the Product of which were thoſe Books of Preparation for Chriſt, Contrition, Humiliation, Vocation, Union with Chriſt, and Communion, and the reſt, which go under his Name; for many wrote after him in Short-Hand; and ſome were ſo bold as to publiſh many of them, without his Conſent or Knowledge; whereby his Notions came to be deformedly miſrepreſented in multitudes of paſſages; among which I will ſuppoſe that crude paſſage, which Mr. Giles Firmin, in his Real Chriſtian, ſo well confutes, That if the Soul be rightly humbled, it is content to bear the State of Damnation. But when he came to New-England, many of his Church, which had been his old Eſſex Hearers, deſired him once more to go over the Points of God's Regenerating Works upon the Soul of his Elect; until, at laſt, their Deſires prevailed with him to Reſume that pleaſant Subject. The Subject hereby came to have a Third Concoction in the Head and Heart of one, as able to digeſt it, as moſt Men living in the World; and it was his deſign to perfect with his own Hand his Compoſures for the Preſs, and thereby vindicate both Author and Matter, from the Wrongs done to both, by Surreptitious Editions heretofore. He did not live to finiſh what he intended; yet a Worthy Miniſter, namely, Mr. John Higginſon, one richly able himſelf to have been an Author of a not unlike Matter, Tranſcribed from his Manuſcripts, near two Hundred of theſe Excellent Sermons, which were ſent over into England, that they might be publiſhed; but by what means I know not, ſcarce half of them have ſeen the Light unto this Day. However, 'tis poſſible, the Valuableneſs of thoſe that are publiſhed, may at ſome time or other awaken ſome Enquiries after the unknown Hands wherein the reſt are as yet concealed.

§ 24. But this was not all the Service which the Pen of Mr. Hooker did for the Church of God! It was his Opinion, That there were Two great Reſerves of Enquiry, for this Age of the World; the firſt, wherein the Spiritual Rule of our Lords Kingdom does conſiſt, and after what manner it is Internally Revealed, Managed and Maintained in the Souls of his People? The ſecond, after what Order the Government of our Lord's Kingdom is to be Externally managed and maintained in his Churches? Accordingly, having done his part for delivering the Former Subject from Phariſaical Formality, on the one Hand, and from Familiſtical Enthuſiam on the other, he was by the ſollicitous Importunity of his Friends, prevailed withal to compoſe a Treatiſe on the other Subject alſo. Upon this Occaſion, he wrote his Excellent Book, which is Entituled, A Survey of Church Diſcipline; wherein, having in the Name of the other Miniſters in the Country, as well as his own, profeſſed his Concurrence with Holy and Learned Mr. Rutherford, as to the Number and Nature of Church-Officers; the Right of People to call their own Officers; the Unfitneſs of Scandalous Perſons to be Members of a Viſible Church; the Unwarrantableneſs of Separation from Churches for certain Defective Circumſtances; the Lawfulneſs, yea, Needfulneſs of a Conſociation among Churches; and Calling in the Help of ſuch Conſociations, upon emerging Difficulties; and the Power of ſuch Conſociations to proceed againſt a Particular Church, pertinaciouſly offending, with a Sentence of Non-Communion: He then proceeds to conſider, a Church Congregational compleatly conſtituted with all its Officers, having full Power in its ſelf to exerciſe all Church Diſcipline, in all the Cenſures thereof; and the Intereſt, which the Conſent of the People is to have in the Exerciſe of this Diſcipline. The firſt fair and full Copy of this Book was drowned in its Paſſage to England, with many Serious and Eminent Chriſtians, which were then Buried by Shipwrack in the Ocean: For which cauſe there was another Copy ſent afterwards, which through the Pre-mature Death of the Author, was not ſo perfect as the former; but it was a Reflection, which Dr. Goodwin made upon it, The Deſtiny which hath attended this Book, hath viſited my Thoughts with an Apprehenſion of ſomething like Omen to the Cauſe it ſelf: That after the overwhelming of it with a Flood of Obloquies, and Diſadvantages and Miſrepreſentations, and injurious Oppreſſions caſt out after it, it might in the time, which God alone hath put in his own Power, be again emergent. He adds, I have looked for this; That this Truth and all that ſhould be ſaid of it, was Ordained as Chriſt of whom every Truth is a Ray, to be as a Seed corn, which unleſs it fall to the Ground and die, and this perhaps together with ſome of the Perſons that profeſs it, it brings yet forth much Fruit. However, the Ingenious Mr. Stone who was Collegue to Mr. Hooker, accompanied this Book, with a little Epigram, whereof theſe were the concluding Diſticks.

If any to this Platform can Reply
With better Reaſon, Let this Volume Die;
But better Arguments, if none can give,
Then Thomas Hooker's Policy ſhall Live.

§ 25. In his Adminiſtration of Church Diſcipline there were ſeveral things as Imitable, as Obſervable. As he was an hearty Friend unto the Conſociation of Churches; and hence all the time that he lived, the Paſtors of the Neighbouring Churches held their frequent Meetings for mutual Conſultation in things of common Concernment; ſo, in his own particular Church, he was very careful to have every thing done with a Chriſtian Moderation and Unanimity. Wherefore he would have nothing publickly propounded unto the Brethren of the Church, but what had been firſt privately prepared by the Elders; and if he feared the happening of any Debate, his way aforehand was, to viſit ſome of the more noted and leading Brethren, and having engaged them to ſecond what he ſhould move unto the Church, he rarely miſſed of a full Concurrence: To which purpoſe he would ſay, The Elders muſt have a Church in a Church, if they would preſerve the Peace of the Church: And he would ſay, The debating Matters of Difference, firſt before the whole Body of the Church, will doubtleſs break any Church in pieces, and deliver it up unto loathſome Contempt. But if any difficult or divided Agitation was raiſed in the Church, about any matter offered, he would ever put a ſtop to that publick Agitation, by delaying the Vote until another Meeting; before which time, he would ordinarily by private Conferences, gain over ſuch as were unſatisfied. As for the Admiſſion of Communicants unto the Lord's Table, he kept the Examination of them unto the Elders of the Church, as properly belonging unto their Work and Charge; and with his Elders he would order them to make before the whole Church a Profeſſion of a Repenting Faith, as they were able, or willing to do it. Some, that could unto Edification do it, he put upon thus relating the manner of their Converſion to God; but uſually they only anſwered unto certain probatory Queſtions, which were tendered them; and ſo after their Names had been for a few Weeks before ſignified unto the Congregation, to learn whether any Objection or Exception could be made againſt them, of any thing Scandalous in their Converſations, now conſenting unto the Covenant, they were admitted into the Church Communion. As for Eccleſiaſtical Cenſures, he was very watchful to prevent all Proceedures unto them, as far as was conſiſtent with the Rules of our Lord; for which cauſe (except in groſſer Abominations) when Offences happened, he did his utmoſt, that the Notice thereof might be extended no further, than it was when they firſt were laid before him; and having reconciled the Offenders with ſenſible and convenient Acknowledgments of their Miſcarriages, he would let the Notice thereof be confined unto ſuch as were aforehand therewith acquainted; and hence there was but one Perſon admoniſhed in, and but one Perſon excommunicated from the Church of Hartford, in all the Fourteen Years, that Mr. Hooker lived there. He was much troubled at the too frequent Cenſures in ſome other Churches; and he would ſay, 'Church Cenſures are things, wherewith neither we, nor our Father's have been acquainted in the practice of them; and therefore the utmoſt Circumſpection is needful, that we do not ſpoil the Ordinances of God, by our Management thereof. In this point he was like Beza, who defended the Ordinance of Excommunication againſt Eraſtus; and yet, he with his Collegues, were ſo cautelous in the uſe of it, that in eleven Years, there was but one Excommunication paſſed in all Geneva.

§ 26. He would ſay, That he ſhould Eſteem it a Favour from God, if he might live no longer than he ſhould be able to hold up lively in the Work of his Place; and that when the time of his Departure ſhould come, God would ſhorten the time: And he had his Deſire. Some of his moſt obſervant Hearers obſerved an aſtoniſhing ſort of a Cloud in his Congregation, the laſt Lord's Day of his publick Miniſtry, when he alſo adminiſtred the Lord's Supper among them; and a moſt unaccountable Heavineſs and Sleepineſs, even in the moſt Watchful Chriſtians of the Place, not unlike the Drowſineſs of the Diſciples, when our Lord was going to die; for which, one of the Elders publickly rebuked them. When thoſe Devout People afterwards perceived that this was the laſt Sermom and Sacrament wherein they were to have the Preſence of the Paſtor with them, 'tis inexpreſſible how much they bewailed their Unattentiveneſs unto his Farewel Diſpenſations; and ſome of them could enjoy no Peace in their own Souls, until they had obtained Leave of the Elders to confeſs before the whole Congregation with many Tears, that Inadvertency. But as for Mr. Hooker himſelf; an Epidemical Sickneſs, which had proved mortal to many, though at firſt ſmall or no Danger appeared in it, arreſted him. In the time of his Sickneſs he did not ſay much to the Standers by; but being asked, that he would utter his Apprehenſions about ſome important things, eſpecially about the State of New England, he anſwered, I have not that Work now to do; I have already declared the Counſel of the Lord: And when one that ſtood weeping by the Bed ſide ſaid unto him, Sir, You are going to receive the Reward of all your Labours, he replied, Brother, I am going to receive Mercy! At laſt he cloſed his own Eyes with his own Hands, and gently ſtroaking his own Forehead, with a Smile in his Countenance, he gave a little Groan, and ſo expired his bleſſed Soul into the Arms of his Fellow Servants, the Holy Angels, on July 7. 1647. In which laſt Hours, the Glorious Peace of Soul, which he had enjoyed without any Interruption for near Thirty Years together, ſo glorioſly accompanied him, that a worthy Spectator then writing to Mr. Cotton a Relation thereof, made this Reflection, Truly Sir, the Sight of his Death, will make me have more pleaſant Thoughts of Death, than ever I yet had in my Life!

§ 27. Thus lived and thus died one of the Firſt Three. He, of whom the great Mr. Cotton gave this Character, that he did, Agmen ducere & dominari in Concionibus, gratia Spiritus Sancti & virtute plenis; and that he was, Vir Solertis & Accerrimi Judicii; and at length uttered his Lamentations in a Funeral Elegy, whereof ſome Lines were theſe.

'Twas of Geneva's Worthies ſaid with Wonder,

This was He, of whom his Pupil Mr. Aſh, gives this Teſtimony; For his great Abilities and glorious Services, both in this and in the other England, he deſerves a Place in the firſt Rank of them, whoſe Lives are of late recorded. And this was He, of whom his Reverend Contemporary, Mr. Ezekiel Rogers, tendered this for an Epitaph; in every Line whereof, methinks the Writer deſerves a Reward equal to what Virgil had, when for every Line, referring to Marcellus in the end of his Sixth Æneid, he received a Sum, not much leſs than Eighty Pounds in Money, or as ample a Requital as Cardinal Richlieu gave to a Poet, when he beſtow'd upon him two Thouſand Sequins for a witty Conceit in one Verſe of but ſeven Words, upon his Coat of Arms.

perceived

Or, For a more extended Epitaph, we may take the Abridgement of his Life, as offered in ſome Lines of Mr. Elijah Corlet, that memorable old School-maſter in Cambridge, from whoſe Education our Colledge and Country has received ſo many of its Worthy Men, that he is himſelf Worthy to have his Name celebrated in no leſs a Paragraph of our Church Hiſtory, than that wherein I may introduce him, endeavouring to celebrate the Name of our Great Hooker, unto this purpoſe.

INTRODUCTION.

WHEN the Incomparable Hevelius was preparing for the World, his New, and Rare, and moſt Accurate Selenography, his Deſign was, to advance into the Heavens, the Names of the moſt Meritorious Aſtronomers, by Naming from them the ſeveral diſtinguiſhable Parts of the Planet, which was to be deſcribed by him; ſo that in the Moon, there would now have been ſeen, an Oceanus Copernicus, an Oceanus Tychonicus, a Mare Kepplerianum, a Lacus Galilæi, a Palus Mæſtlini, an Inſula Scheiveriana, a Peninſula Gaſſendi, a Mons Merſenni, a Vallis Bullialdi, a Sinus Wendelini, a Promontorum Crugerianum, a Deſertum Linnemanni, and other ſuch Denominations. But upon Second Thoughts, he ſaw that this could not be done without Envy and Offence; for there were certain Places more Eminent than others, and he might happen to aſſign them unto ſuch Perſons as were leſs Eminent, nent in the Opinions of Mankind about their Merits: Wherefore he choſe rather Geographical Denominations, for the Maculæ Lunares, which were now to be diſtinguiſhed.

Reader, There is a Number of Divines now before us, demanding their Places in our Church-Hiſtory; their Souls are in the Heavens; their Names alſo ſhould be there. I was thinking to have ranked them according to their Merits; I would have aſſigned their Places, according to their Eminencies in the Church of God. But finding that this Attempt would have been too invidious; I will have them to take their Places, as in the Hiſtory of Lives uſes to be done, Secundum Annorum Emortualium Seriem, according to the Years wherein they died.

What I write, ſhall be written with all Chriſtian Veracity, and Fidelity. Heaven forbid, that I ſhould indulge my Pen, in ſuch flouriſhing Flatteries, as fill the Lives of the Lutheran Divines, in the Collections that Witten has made of the Memoriæ Theologorum noſtri ſæculi Clariſſimorum, renovatæ. Heaven forbid, that I ſhould in any one Inſtance deſerve to be thought a Writer of ſuch Legends, as they generally (and it may be ſometimes unrighteouſly*) have reproached the* Lives of the Ancients, written by Simeon Metaphraſtes: For I will now confeſs to my Reader, one thing that has encouraged me, in my Endeavour to preſerve the Memory of theſe worthy Men.

I read in Prov. 10. 7. The Memory of the Juſt is bleſſed; or, for a Bleſſing: And I know the common Gloſſes upon it. But I have met with a Note of Dr. Jermyn's thereupon, which I will now count as worthy to be tranſcribed, as I have heretofore counted it worthy to be pondered.

> The very remembring of them [ſaith he] ſhall bring a Bleſſing to ſuch as do remember them. God will bleſs thoſe that honour the Memory of his Servants: And beſides, the Memory of them will make them imitated, which is a Bleſſing that will be rewarded with Bleſſedneſs.

I will add, That Examples do ſtrangely charm us into Imitation. When Holineſs is preſſed upon us, we are prone to think, that it is a Doctrine calculated for Angels and Spirits, whoſe Dwelling is not with Fleſh. But when we read the Lives of them that excelled in Holineſs, tho' they were Perſons of like Paſſions with our ſelves, the Conviction is wonderful and powerful. Reader, Behold loud Calls to Holineſs, from thoſe who ſaid, not, Ite illuc; but, Venite huc, when the Calls were uttered.

CHAP. I.

Semper Honor, Nomenque Tuum, Laudeſque Manebunt.

§ 1. WIthout Recourſe to any fabulous, whether Egyptian or Grecian Shams of Antiquity, we have other Intimations enough, that our Father Noah, after a New World began to be Peopled from him, did remove with his Eldeſt Son Japhet, from his own, and his old Country of Ogyge, or Paleſtine, into the Country which is now called Italy. And it is particularly remarkable, that his Great Grandſon Dodanim, removing with a Colony of his increaſing Poſterity, into Epirus, he built a City, which with the whole Province, was called by the Name of Dodona; where he built a Temple, in which the People did aſſemble to worſhip God, and hear the Precepts of the Patriarch preach'd upon. But it was not long before a fearful Degeneracy overtaking the Poſterity of theſe Planters, they ſoon left and loſt the Religion of their Progenitors; and in that very place where Dodanim had his Church, there ſucceeded the Dodonæan Oracles. Now among the memorable Names, which in other Monuments of Antiquity, beſides thoſe of Tuſcany, expos'd by Inghiramius, we find put upon our Illuſtrious Father Noah, one is that of Janus, which at firſt they pronounced Janes, from the Hebrew word, יין. Jajin, for Wine, which was the true Original of it; and ſo his famous Vineyard was therein commemorated. For which cauſe Cato alſo tells us, Janus primus invenit Far & Vinum, & ob id ductus ſuit Priſcus Oenotrius: And Antiochus Syracuſanus, mentions the Oenotrii, which Noah carried with him. Of this Janus, the Thuſcians employed a Ship, as a Memorial; they had a Ship on his Coins, doubtleſs with an Eye to the Ark of Noah; but there was alſo on the Reverſe, as Ovid relates, Altera Forma Biceps; and this Double Face was aſcrib'd unto Janus, becauſe of the View which he had of the Two Worlds, the Old and the New. The Covenant which God eſtabliſhed with Noah, was by After-Ages referr'd unto, when they feigned Janus to be the Preſident of all Covenant and Concord; and the Figure which Noah made among Mankind was confeſſed by them, when they gave Janus the Sir-name of Pater, as being ſo to all the Hero's, who obtained a place among the Gods. Moreover, the Mythical Writers tell us, that in the Reign of this Janus, all the Dwellings of Men were hedged in with Piety and Sanctity; in which Tradition the exemplary Righteouſneſs of Noah ſeems to have been celebrated: And hence in their old Rituals, he was called Cerus, Manus, which is as much as to ſay, Sanctus & Bonus. But without purſuing theſe Curioſities any further, I will now lay before my Reader the Story of that worthy Man; who when 'tis conſidered, that he croſſed the Sea with a Renowned Colony, and that having ſeen an Old World in Europe, where a Flood of Iniquity and Calamity carried all before it, he alſo ſaw a New World in America; where he appears the firſt in a Catalogue of Hero's, and where he with his People were admitted into the Covenant of God; whereupon an Hedge of Piety and Sanctity continued about that People as long as he lived, may therefore be called the Noah, or Janus of New-England. This was Mr. Francis Higginſon.

§ 2. If in the Hiſtory of the Church for more than Four thouſand Years, contained in the Scriptures, there is not recorded either the Birth day of any one Saint whatever, or the Birth day of him that is the Lord of all Saints; I hope it will be accounted no Defect in our Hiſtory of this worthy Man, if neither the Day, nor the Place of his Birth can be recovered. We will therefore begin the Hiſtory of his Life, where we find that he began to live.

Mr. Francis Higginſon, after he had been Educated at Emanuel-College, that Seminary of Puritans in Cambridge, until he was Maſter of Arts: And after that, the true Emanuel, our Lord Jeſus Chriſt, had by the Work of Regeneration upon his Heart, inſtructed him in the better and nobler Arts, of living unto God; he was by the ſpecial Providence of Heaven, made a Servant of our Emanuel, in the Miniſtry of the Goſpel, at one of the Five Pariſh-Churches in Leiceſter. The main Scope of his Miniſtry, was now to promote, firſt, a thorough Converſion, and then a godly Converſation, among his People: And beſides his being as the famous Preacher in the Wilderneſs was, a Voice, and preaching Lectures of Chriſtianity by his whole Chriſtian, and moſt Courteous and Obliging Behaviour, he had alſo a moſt charming Voice, which rendred him unto his Hearers, in all his Exerciſes, another Ezekiel: For, Lo, he was unto them, as a very lovely Song of one that hath a pleaſant Voice, and can play well upon an Inſtrument: And from all parts in the Neighbourhood they flocked unto him. Such was the Divine Preſence with, and Bleſſing on the Miniſtry of this good Man, in this place, that the Influence thereof on the whole Town, was quickly become a Matter of Obſervation: Many were turned from Darkneſs to Light, and from Satan to God; and many were built up in their moſt Holy Faith; and there was a notable Revival of Religion among them. And ſuch were his Endeavours to conform unto the Example of our Lord Jeſus Chriſt, our Grand Exemplar, in the whole Courſe of his Miniſtry, that we might eaſily have written a Book of thoſe Conformities.

§ 3. For ſome Years he continued in his Conformity, to the Rites then required and practiſed in the Church of England; but upon his Acquaintance with Mr. Arthur Hilderſham, and Mr. Thomas Hooker, he ſet himſelf to ſtudy the Controverſies, about the Evangelical Church-Diſcipline, then agitated in the Church of God: And then the more he ſtudied the Scripture, which is the ſole and full Rule of Church-Adminiſtrations, the more he became diſſatisfied with the Ceremonies, which had crept into the Worſhip of the Lord Jeſus Chriſt, not only without the Allowance of the Scripture, but alſo without the Countenance of the earlieſt Antiquity. From this time he became a Conſcientious Non-Conformiſt; and therefore he was deprived of his Opportunity to exerciſe his Miniſtry, in his Pariſh-Church: Nevertheleſs, his Miniſtry was generally ſo deſirable unto the People, that they procured for him the Liberty to preach a conſtant Lecture, on one part of the Lord's Day; and on the other part, as an Aſſiſtant unto a very aged Parſon, that wanted it. He was now maintained by the voluntary Contribution of the Inhabitants; and tho' the reſt of the Miniſters there continued Conformiſts, yet they all freely invited him unto the uſe of their Pulpits, as long as they could avoid any trouble to themſelves by their ſo doing: By which means he preached ſucceſſively in Three of the Pariſh-Churches, after that he had been by Non-Conformity made incapable. He preached alſo at Belgrave, a Mile out of the Town; but under God, the chief Author of theſe more eaſie Circumſtances unto ſuch a Non-Conformiſt, was the Generous Goodneſs and Candour of Dr. Williams, the Biſhop of Lincoln, to whoſe Dioceſs Leiceſter belonged. It continued until the Fray between that Biſhop, and Laud the Biſhop of London, who ſet himſelf to extirpate and extinguiſh all the Non-Conformiſts, that were Williams's Favourites, among whom one was Mr. Higginſon.

§ 4. The ſignal Bleſſing of God, which accompanied the Miniſtry of Mr. Higginſon, in Leiceſter, was followed with two very contrary Conſequences. On the one ſide, a great multitude of Chriſtians, then call'd Puritans, did not only attend the Worſhip of God more publickly in their Aſſemblies, and more ſecretly in their Families, but alſo they frequently had their private Meetings, for Prayer (ſometimes with Faſting) and repeating of Sermons, and maintaining of profitable Conferences, at all which Mr. Higginſon himſelf was often preſent: And at theſe times, if any of their Society were ſcandalous in their Converſation, they were perſonally admoniſhed, and means were uſed with them to bring them unto Repentance. On the other ſide, there was a profane Party, fill'd with Wolviſh Rage againſt the Flock of the Lord Jeſus Chriſt, and eſpecially againſt this good Man, who was the Paſtor of the Flock: Whoſe impartial Zeal in reproving the Common Sins of the Time and Place, did more then a little add unto the Exaſperations of that Party; but alſo divers of them turn'd Perſecutors hereupon, yet many remarkable Providences laid a Reſtraint upon them, and the Malignants were ſmitten with a Dread upon their Minds, That the Judgments of God would purſue thoſe, that ſhould go to harm ſuch a Follower of him that is good.

§ 5. Even the Epiſcopal Party of the Engliſh Nation, among whoſe Thirty Nine Articles, one is, That the viſible Church is a Congregation of Faithful Men, where the Word of Chriſt is duly preached, and the Sacraments be rightly administred; have concluded it, as a Godly Diſcipline in the Primitive Church, That Notorious Sinners were put to open Penance. And in the Rubric before the Communion, have ordered Miniſters to advertiſe all Notorious Evil Livers, and ſuch as have wronged their Neighbours by Word or Deed, or ſuch as have Malice and Hatred reigning between them, That they ſhould not preſume to come to the Lord's Table, till they have openly declared themſelves to have truly repented. Under the Encouragement hereof, Mr. Higginſon, before he became a Non-Conformiſt, profeſſed this Principle, That ignorant and ſcandalous Perſons, are not to be admitted unto the Lord's Supper : And as far as he could, he practiſed what he profeſſed. Wherefore he did Catechiſe and Examine Perſons about their Fitneſs for the Communion; and if any Perſons were notoriouſly ſcandalous, he not only told them of their Sins in private, but alſo in Publick declared, that they were not to be admitted unto the Lord's Supper, until the Congregation had ſome Teſtimonies of their ſerious Repentance.

It was a good Courage of Old Cyprian, to declare : If any think to join themſelves unto the Church, not by their Humiliation and Satisfaction, when they have ſcandalized the Brethren, but by their Great Words and Threats, let them know, that the Church of God will oppoſe them, and the Tents of Chriſt will not be conquered by them. And no leſs was the good Metal in our Higginſon. Accordingly after a Sermon on thoſe Words of our Saviour, Give not that which is holy unto Dogs, unto this purpoſe applied, going to adminiſter the Lord's Supper unto the Communicants, now come into the Chancel, he eſpied one that was known unto them all, to be a common Drunkard and Swearer, and a very vicious Perſon; he told that Man before them all, That he was not willing to give the Lord's Supper unto him, until he had profeſſed his Repentance, unto the Satisfaction of the Congregation : And therefore he deſired the Man to withdraw : The Sinner withdrew, but went out full of ſuch Paſſion and Poiſon againſt Mr. Higginſon, and Horror in his own Conſcience, that he fell ſick upon it; and while he lay ſick he was viſited, as well by good People, that endeavoured his Converſion, as by bad People that had been his old Companions, and now threatned what they would do againſt Mr. Higginſon. The Wretch continued in an exorbitant Frame for a few Days, and at laſt roared out, That he was damn'd, and that he was a Dog, and that he was going to the Dogs for ever. So he cried, and ſo he died : And this was known to all People.

§ 6. There were many ſuch marvellous Judgments of God, which came like Fire from Heaven, to reſtrain and revenge the Wrongs which were offer'd unto this faithful Witneſs of our Lord Jeſus Chriſt. Particularly, there was a pious Gentlewoman, the Wife of a very profane Gentleman, dwelling in another Pariſh, who would frequently go to attend upon Mr. Higginſon's Miniſtry, both in the publick and private Exerciſes of our Holy Religion; whereat her Husband, after many other Expreſſions of his deep Diſpleaſure, vowed, That he would be revenged on Higginſon; and accordingly he reſolved upon a Journey to London, there to exhibit a Complaint againſt this good Man, at the High-Commiſſion Court : But when he had got all things ready for his Journey, juſt as he was mounting his Horſe, he was by an immediate Hand of Heaven, ſmitten with an intolerable Torment of Body, and Horror of Conſcience, and was led into his Houſe, and laid upon his Bed; where within a few Hours, Death did his Office upon him.

§ 7. And unto the remarkable Appearances of Heaven, on the behalf of this faithful Man, may be enumerated that which befel a famous Doctor of Divinity, Prebend of a Cathedral, and Chaplain to His Majeſty, who then lived in Leiceſter : This Gentleman preached but very ſeldom; and when he did at all, it was after that Faſhion, which has been ſometimes called Gentleman-Preaching; after a flaunting manner, and with ſuch a vain Oſtentation of Learning, and Affectation of Language, as ill became the Oracles of God; the People generally flocking more to the more edifying Miniſtry of Mr. Higginſon, than to theſe Harangues. Our Doctor ſo extreamly reſented it, that both publickly and privately, on all Opportunities, he expreſſed his Indignation againſt Mr. Higginſon, and vow'd, That he would certainly drive him out of the Town. Now it ſo fell out, that the Sheriff appointed this Doctor to preach at the General Aſſizes there, and gave him a Quarter of a Year's time to provide a Sermon for that occaſion : But in all this time, he could not provide a Sermon unto his own Satisfaction; inſomuch, that a Fortnight before the time was expired, he expreſſed unto ſome of his Friends, a Deſpair of being well provided : Wherefore his Friends perſwaded him to try; telling him, That if it came to the worſt, Mr. Higginſon might be procured to preach in his room; he was always ready. The Doctor was wonderfully averſe unto this laſt Propoſal; and therefore ſtudied with all his might, for an agreeable Sermon; but he had ſuch a Blaſt from Heaven upon his poor Studies, that the very Night before the Aſſizes began, he ſent his Wife to the devout Lady Cave, who prevail'd with Mr. Higginſon to ſupply his place the Day enſuing; which he did, with a moſt ſuitable, profitable, and acceptable Sermon; and unto the great Satisfaction of the Auditory. When the Lady Cave had let it be known, how this thing, which was much wondered at, came about, the common Diſcourſe of the Town upon it, ſo confounded the Doctor, that he left the Town, vowing, That he would never come into it again. Thus Mr. Higginſon was left in the Town! But I pray, Who was driven out?

§ 8. We lately Styled Mr. Higginſon a Faithful Man: And innumerable were the Inſtances, wherein he ſo approved himſelf, particularly there was a time when many Courtiers, Lords, and Gentlemen coming in a Frolick to Leiceſter, which was counted a Puritanical Town, reſolved, that they would put a Trick upon it. Wherefore, they invited the Mayor and Aldermen, whereof divers were eſteemed Puritans, unto a Collation; and overcame them to drink a number of Healths, with the accuſtomed Ceremonies of drinking upon their Knees, till they all became ſhamefully and extreamly Drunk. This Buſineſs becoming the common Diſcourſe of the Town, Mr. Higginſon, from a Text choſen to the purpoſe, in the Audience of the Mayor and Aldermen themſelves, demonſtrated the Sinfulneſs of Health-drinking, and of Drunkenneſs, and the Aggravation of that Sinfulneſs, when it is found in Magiſtrates, whoſe Duty 'tis to puniſh it in other Men: Therewithal admoniſhing them to Repent ſeriouſly of the Scandal which they had given. This Faithfulneſs of Mr. Higginſon was variouſly Reſented: Some of the People diſliked it very much, and ſome of the Aldermen were ſo diſturbed and enraged at it, that they Breathed out Threatnings till they were out of Breath: But the better ſort of the People generally approved it, as a Conformity to that Rule, Them that ſin before all, Rebuke before all, that others may fear; and ſeveral of the Aldermen confeſſed their Sin with a very penitent and pertinent Ingenuity. The Iſſue was, that Mr. Higginſon was brought into no Trouble; and the God of Heaven ſo diſpoſed the Hearts of the Mayor and Aldermen, that after this, upon the Death of old Mr. Sacheverel, they choſe Mr. Higginſon to be their Town-preacher, unto which place there was annexed a large Maintenance, to be paid out of the Town-Treaſury. In anſwer hereunto, Mr. Higginſon thank'd them for their good Will; but he told them, that he could not accept of it, becauſe there were ſome Degrees of Conformity therein required, which he could not now comply withal: Nevertheleſs there being divers Competitors for the Place, about whom the Votes of the Aldermen were much divided, he prevailed with them to give their Votes for a Learned and Godly Conformiſt, one Mr. Angel; who thereby came to be ſettled in it. There were alſo made unto him, ſeveral Offers of ſome of the Greateſt and Richeſt Livings in the Country thereabouts; but the Conſcientious Diſpoſition to Non-Conformity, now growing upon him, hindred his Acceptance of them.

§ 9. While Mr. Higginſon continued in Leiceſter, he was not only a Good Man full of Faith, but alſo a Good Man full of Work. He preached conſtantly in the Pariſh-Churches; and he was called, while a Conformiſt, frequently to preach Viſitation Sermons, Aſſize-Sermons, and Funeral Sermons: And as well then, as afterwards, he was often engaged in Faſts, both publick and private, both at Home and Abroad; and many repaired unto him with Caſes of Conſcience, and for Help about their Interiour State. Beſides all this, he was very ſerviceable to the Education of Scholars, either going to, or coming from the Univerſity; and ſuch, as afterwards proved eminently ſerviceable to the Church of God: Whereof ſome were Dr. Seaman, Dr. Brian, Mr. Richardſon, and Mr. Howe, all of them Leiceſterſhire Men, who would often ſay, how much they owed unto Mr. Higginſon. And he was very uſeful in forwarding and promoting of Contributions, for the Relief of the Proteſtant-Exiles, which came over from the Ruined Bohemia, and the Diſtreſſed Palatinate, in thoſe Times; and many other Pious Deſigns. But when (as he that writes the Life of Holy Mr. Bains expreſſes it) the Hour and Power of Darkneſs was come from Lambeth, or when the Biſhop of London, prevailed, and the Biſhop of Lincoln retired, the Blades of the Laudian Faction about Leiceſter appeared, Informed and Articl'd againſt Mr. Higginſon, ſo that he lived in continual Expectation to be dragg'd away by the Purſevants, unto the High-Commiſſion-Court, where a Sentence of Perpetual Impriſonment was the beſt thing that could be looked for.

§ 10. Now behold the Interpoſing and Seaſonable Providence of Heaven! A conſiderable Number of Wealthy and Worthy Merchants, obtaining a Charter from K. Charles I. whereby they were Incorporated by the Name of, The Governour and Company of the Maſſachuſet-Bay in New-England; and intending to ſend over Ships with Paſſengers for the Beginning of a Plantation there, in the Beginning of the Year 1629. And reſolving to ſend none upon their Account, but godly and honeſt Men, profeſſing that Religion, which they declared was the End of this Plantation: Theſe were informed of the Circumſtances whereto Mr. Higginſon was now Reduced; and accordingly they diſpatched a couple of Meſſengers unto him, to invite him unto a Voyage into New-England, with kind Promiſes to ſupport him in the Voyage. Theſe two Meſſengers were Ingenious Men; and underſtanding that Purſevants were expected every Hour, to fetch Mr. Higginſon up to London, they deſigned for a while to Act the Parts of Purſevants: Coming therefore to his Door, they knock'd roundly and loudly, like Fellows equipp'd with ſome Authority; and ſaid, Where is Mr. Higginſon? We muſt ſpeak with Mr. Higginſon! Inſomuch that his affrighted Wife ran up to him, telling him that the Purſevants were come, and praying him to ſtep aſide out of their way, but Mr. Higginſon ſaid, No, I will go down and ſpeak with them; and the Will of the Lord be done! When the Meſſengers were come into the Hall, they held out their Papers unto him, and with a certain Roughneſs and Boldneſs of Addreſs told him, Sir, We come from London, and our Buſineſs is to fetch you up to London, as you may ſee by theſe Papers! Which they then put into his Hands; whereat the People in the Room were confirmed in their Opinion, that theſe Blades were Purſevants; and Mrs. Higginſon her ſelf ſaid, I thought ſo: And fell a weeping. But when Mr. Higginſon had lookt upon the Papers, he ſoon perceived, that they were Letters from the Governour and Company inviting him to New-England; with a Copy of the Charter, and Propoſitions for managing their deſign of Eſtabliſhing and Propagating Reformed Chriſtianity in the New Plantation: Whereupon he bad them welcome! And there enſued a pleaſant Converſation betwixt him, and his now undiſguiſed Friends. In anſwer to this Invitation, Mr. Higginſon having firſt conſulted Heaven with humble and fervent Supplications, for the Divine Direction about ſo great a Turn of his Life, he adviſed then with ſeveral Miniſters; eſpecially with his dear Friend Mr. Hilderſham, who told him, That were he himſelf a younger Man, and under his Caſe and Call, he ſhould think he had a plain Invitation of Heaven unto the Voyage; And ſo he came unto a Reſolution to comply therewithal.

§ 11. When Mr. Higginſon's Reſolution came to be known, it made ſo much Noiſe among the Puritans, that many of them receiving Satisfaction unto the many Enquiries which they made on this Occaſion, reſolved, that they would accompany him. And now it was not long before his Farewel Sermon was to be preached! Before he knew any thing about an Offer of a Voyage to New England. In his Meditations about the State of England, he had ſtrange and ſtrong Apprehenſions that God would ſhortly puniſh England with the Calamities of a War, and he therefore compoſed a Sermon upon thoſe Words of our Saviour, Luk. 21. 20,21. When you ſee Jeruſalem compaſſed with Armies, then flee to the Mountains. Now after he was determined for New-England, he did, in a vaſt Aſſembly, preach this for his Farewel-Sermon; and therein having mentioned unto them, what he took to be the Provoking Sins of England in General, and of Leiceſter in particular, he plainly told them, that he was perſwaded, God would chaſtiſe England with a War, in the Sufferings whereof Leiceſter would have a more than ordinary ſhare. How this Prediction was afterwards accompliſhed, is known to Mankind; and it was eſpecially known to Leiceſter, which being ſtrongly Fortified and Garriſon'd, and having the Wealth of all the Country about, brought into it, was Beſieged, and at length carried by Storm; and the Town was horribly plunder'd, and Eleven Hundred People were ſlain in the Streets.

But Mr. Higginſon having ended this his Prophetical Sermon, he gave thanks to the Magiſtrates, and the other Chriſtians of the Place, for all the Liberty, Countenance, and Encouragement, which they had given unto his Miniſtry: And he told them of his intended Removal to New England, the Principal End of which Plantation, he then declared, was the Propagation of Religion; and of the Hopes which he had, that New-England might be deſigned by Heaven, as a Refuge and Shelter for the Non-Conformiſts againſt the Storms that were coming upon the Nation, and a Region, where they might practiſe the Church Reformation, which they had been bearing Witneſs unto. And ſo he concluded with a moſt affectionate Prayer for the King, the Church, the State, and peculiarly for Leiceſter, the Seat of his former Labours. And after this he took his Journey, with his Family, for London; the Streets as he paſſed along being filled with People of all ſorts, who bid him Farewel, with loud Prayers and Cries for his Welfare.

§ 12. When he came to London, he found Three Ships ready to ſail for New England, with Two more, that were in a Month's Time, to follow after them: Filled with Godly and Honeſt Paſſengers, among whom there were Two other Non-Conformiſt Miniſters. They ſet ſail from the Iſle of Wight, about the firſt of May, 1629. and when they came to the Land's End, Mr. Higginſon calling up his Children, and other Paſſengers unto the Stern of the Ship, to take their laſt Sight of England. He ſaid, We will not ſay as the Separatiſts were wont to ſay at their leaving of England, Farewel Babylon! Farewel Rome! But we will ſay, Farewel Dear England! Farewel the Church of God in England, and all the Chriſtian Friends there! We do not go to New-England as Separatiſts from the Church of England; though we cannot but ſeparate from the Corruptions in it: But we go to practiſe the poſitive Part of Church Reformation, and propagate the Goſpel in America. And ſo he concluded with a fervent Prayer for the King, and Church, and State, in England; and for the Preſence and Bleſſing of God with themſelves, in their preſent Undertaking for New-England. At length by the Good Hand of God upon them, they arrived, after a comfortable Paſſage, unto Salem Harbour on the Twenty fourth of June enſuing.

§ 13. Mr. Higginſon being in this Voyage aſſociated with Mr. Skelton, a Miniſter of the like Principles with himſelf, they were no ſooner got on Shore, but they likewiſe aſſociated in purſuing their Principles and Intentions of Religion, which were the end of their coming hither. Accordingly, laying before the chief of the People their Deſires, and their Deſigns of ſettling a Reformed Congregation in the Place, after a frequent Converſe about the Methods of it, they came unto a hearty Concurrence, to take a Day in the following Auguſt for it. In order hereunto Mr. Higginſon drew up a Confeſſion of Faith with a Scriptural Repreſentation of the Covenant of Grace applied unto their preſent purpoſe, whereof Thirty Copies were taken for the Thirty Perſons, which were to begin the Working of Gathering the Church. The Day was kept as a Faſt; wherein, after the Prayers and Sermons of the Two Miniſters, theſe Thirty Perſons did ſolemnly and ſeverally profeſs their Conſent unto the Confeſſion and Covenant then read unto them; and they proceed then to chuſe Mr. Skelton, Mr. Higginſon their Teachers, and one Mr. Houghton, for a Ruling Elder. And after this, many others joined unto the Church, thus gathered; but none were admitted, of whoſe good Converſation in Chriſt, there was not a Satisfactory Teſtimony. By the ſame Token, that at this Firſt Church Gathering, there fell out a Remarkable Matter which is now to be Related. At a time when the Church was to be gathered at Salem, there was about 30 Miles to the Southward of that place, a Plantation of Rude, Lewd, Mad, Engliſh People, who did propoſe to themſelves a Gainful Trade with the Indians, but quickly came to nothing. A Young Gentleman belonging to that Plantation being at Salem, on the Day when the Church was gathered, was at what he ſaw and heard, ſo deeply affected, that he ſtood up expreſſing with much Affection, his deſire to be admitted into their Number, which when they demurr'd about, he deſired that they would at leaſt admit him to make his Profeſſion before them. When they allow'd this, he expreſſed himſelf ſo agreeably, and with ſo much Ingenuity and Simplicity, that they were extreamly pleaſed with it; and the Miniſters told him, That they highly approved of his Profeſſion, but inaſmuch as he was a Stranger to them, they could not Receive him into their Communion, until they had a further Acquaintance with his Converſation. However, ſuch was the Hold which the Grace of God now took of him, that he became an Eminent Chriſtian, and a Worthy and Uſeful Perſon, and not only afterwards joined unto the Church of Boſton, but alſo made a great Figure in the Commonwealth of New England, as the Major-General of all the Forces in the Colony; it was Major-General Gibbons.

§ 14. The Church of Salem now being ſettled, they enjoyed many Smiles of Heaven upon them; and yet there were many things, that lookt like Frowns: For, they were exerciſed with many Difficulties, and almoſt an Hundred of good People died the Firſt Winter of their being here; among whom was Mr. Houghton, an Elder of the Church. Mr. Higginſon alſo fell into an Hectic-Fever, which much diſabled him for the Work of his Miniſtry; and the laſt Sermon under the Incurable Growth of this Malady upon him, was upon the Arrival of many Gentlemen, and ſome Hundreds of Paſſengers to New-England, in the beginning of the enſuing Summer. He then preached on thoſe Words of our Saviour, Matth. 11. 7. What went you out into the Wilderneſs to ſee? From whence, he minded the People of the Deſign, whereupon this Plantation was erected, namely, Religion; And of the Streights, Wants, and various Trials, which in a Wilderneſs they muſt look to meet withal; and of the need which there was for them to evidence the Uprightneſs of their Hearts, in the end of their coming hither. After this, he was confined unto his Bed, and viſited by the chief Perſons of the New-Colony, who much bemoaned their Loſs of ſo uſeful a Perſon, but comforted him with the Conſideration of his Faithfulneſs to the Lord Jeſus, in his former Sufferings and Services, and the Honour which the Lord had granted him, to begin a Work of Church-Reformation, in America. He replied, I have been but an Unprofitable Servant; and all my own Doings I count but Loſs and Dung: All my Deſire is to win Chriſt, and be found in him, not having my own Righteouſneſs! And he ſeveral times declared, That though the Lord called him away, he was perſwaded God would raiſe up others, to carry on the Work that was begun, and that there would yet be many Churches of the Lord Jeſus Chriſt in this Wilderneſs. He likewiſe added, That though he ſhould leave his Deſolate Wife and Eight Children, whereof the Eldeſt but about fourteen Years old, in a low Condition, yet he left them with his God, and he doubted not but the Faithful God would graciouſly provide for them. So, in the midſt of many Prayers, he fell aſleep; as in the Month of Auguſt, 1630. and in the Forty Third Year of his Age, and his Funeral was attended with all poſſible Solemnity.

§ 15. Reader, Prepare to behold and admire and adore the Faithfulneſs of our God, in providing for the Children of them, that faithfully have ſerved him. He moved the Hearts of many Charitable Chriſtians, who yet were ſpending on the Stocks, which they brought out of England with them, to provide as comfortably for the Widow and Off ſpring of this deceaſed Miniſter, as if he had left them ſome Thouſands of Pounds. And his two Sons, who had been brought up at the Grammar School in Leiceſter, had a particular Taſt of this Liberality, in the Proviſion which was thus made for their having ſuch a Learned Education, as might fit them for the Service of the Church in the Miniſtry of the Goſpel.

One of theſe, Francis by Name, was for a Time a Schoolmaſter at our Cambridge; but having attained as much Learning as New England could then afford, he was deſirous to viſit ſome European Univerſity; and being recommended unto Roterdam, ſome Dutch Merchants, out of reſpect unto an hopeful Scholar of New England, contributed Fourſcore Pounds in Money to aſſiſt his Juvenile Studies at Leyden. Afterwards having viſited ſome other Univerſities in thoſe Parts, he returned into England; where he declined a Settlement in ſome other, which he thought more Opinionative, and ſo more Contentious and Undeſireable Places, to which he was invited, and ſettled at Kerby-Steven in Weſtmoreland, hoping to do moſt good among the ignorant People there. But it pleaſed the God of Heaven to permit the firſt out-breaking of that Prodigious and Comprehenſive Hereſy Quakeriſm in that very place; and a Multitude of People being bewitched thereinto, it was a great Affliction unto this worthy Man; but it occaſion'd his writing the firſt Book that ever was written againſt that Sink of Blaſphemies, Entituled, The Irreligion of Northern Quakers. This Learned Perſon was the Author of a Latin Treatiſe, De quinq; maximis Luminibus: De Luce Increata; De Luce creata; De Lumine Naturæ, Gratiæ & Gloriæ; and having Illuminated the Houſe of God in that part of it, where our Lord had ſet him to ſhine, he went away to the Light of Glory, in the Fifty Fifth Year of his Age.

The other named John, has been on ſome Laudable Accounts another Origen; for the Father of Origen would kiſs the uncovered Breaſt of that Excellent Youth, whilſt he lay aſleep, as being the Temple where the Spirit of God was reſident, and as Origen, after the untimely Death of his Father, had his poor Mother with Six other Children to look after; whereupon he taught firſt a Grammar-School, and then betook himſelf unto the Study of Divinity; thus this other Higginſon after a pious Childhood, having been a School-Maſter at Hartford, and a Miniſter at Say brook, and afterwards at Guilford, became at length in the Year 1659. a Paſtor, and a rich and long Bleſſing, ſucceeding his Father in his Church at Salem. This Reverend Perſon has been always valued for his uſeful Preaching, and his holy Living; and beſides his conſtant Labours in the Pulpit, whereby his own Flock has been edified; the whole Country has, by the Preſs, enjoyed ſome of his Compoſures, and by his Hand, the Compoſures of ſome others alſo, paſſing the Preſs, have been accompanied. Having formerly born his Teſtimony to, The Cauſe of God, and his People in New-England, in a Sermon ſo entituled, which he preached on the greateſt Anniverſary Solemnity, which occurr'd in the Land, namely, the Anniverſary Election; when he thought, that the Advances of Old Age upon him directed him to live in the hourly Expectation of Death, he publiſhed a moſt Savoury Book, on Our Dying Saviour's Legacy of Peace to his Diſciples in a Troubleſome World; with a Diſcourſe on the Duty of Chriſtians, to be Witneſſes unto Chriſt; unto which is added, ſome Help to Self-Examination.

Nevertheleſs, this true Simeon is yet Waiting for the Conſolation of Iſrael, This Good Old Man is yet alive; (in the Year 1696.) arrived unto the Eightieth Year of his Devout Age, and about the Sixtieth Year of his Publick Work, and he, that from a Child knew the Holy Scriptures, does at thoſe Years wherein Men uſe to be Twice Children, continue preaching them with ſuch a manly, pertinent, judicious Vigour, and with ſo little Decay of his Intellectual Abilities, as is indeed a Matter of Juſt Admiration. But there was a famous Divine in Germany, who on his Death bed when ſome of his Friends took Occaſion to commend his paſt painful, faithful, and fruitful Miniſtry, cried out unto them [Auferte Ignem adhuc enim puleus habeo!] Oh! bring not the Sparks of your Praiſes near me, as long as I have any Chaff left in me! And I am ſenſible that I ſhall receive the like Check from this my Reverend Father, if I preſume to do him the Juſtice, which a few Months hence will be done him, in all the Churches; nor would I deſerve at his Hands, the Blow which Conſtantine gave to him, who Imperatorem auſus eſt, in Os Beatum dicere.

§ 16. At the ſame time, that Mr. Francis Higginſon was perſecuted for his Non-Conformity in Leiceſter-ſhire, there was one Mr. Samuel Skelton, who underwent the like Perſecution in Lincolnſhire; and by means hereof they became Fellow-Travellers in their Voyage to New-England, and Fellow-Labourers in their Service here. All the Remembrance that I can recover of this Worthy Man is, that he ſurviv'd his Colleague, a Good and Faithful Servant of our Lord, well doing, until Aug. 2. 1634. and retired from an Evil World, then to partake with him in the Joy of their Lord.

CHAP. II.

The DEATH of Mr. JOHN AVERY.

THE Divine Oracles have told us, That the Judgments of God are a Great Deep: And indeed it is in the Deep, that we have ſeen ſome of thoſe Judgments executed.

It has been Remarked, that there miſcarried but One Veſſel of all thoſe Great Fleets which brought Paſſengers unto New-England upon the Pious and Holy Deſigns of the Firſt Settlement; which Veſſel alſo was but a Pinnace; nevertheleſs richly laden, as having in it Mr. Avery.

Mr. Avery, a Worthy Miniſter, coming into New-England, was invited unto Marble head; but there being no Church there, and the Fiſhermen being there generally too remiſs to form a Church, he went rather to Newberry, intending there to ſettle.

Nevertheleſs, both the Magiſtrates and the Miniſters of the Country urging the Common Good, that would ariſe from his being at Marble-head, he embarked in a Pinnace, with Two Families, his own and his Couſin Mr. Anthony Thacher's, which, with ſome others then aboard, made in all Twenty Three Souls; deſigning in a few Hours to have reached the Port.

But on Auguſt 14. 1635. in the Night, there came on as mighty a Storm as perhaps was ever known in theſe Parts of the World; a Storm which drove the Veſſel upon a Rock, and ſo tore it, that the poor People ſat preſently up to the middle in Water, expecting every moment the Waves of Death to be rolling over them.

The Veſſel was quickly broken all to pieces, and almoſt the whole Company drowned, by being ſucceſſively waſhed off the Rock; only Mr. Thacher, having been a conſiderable while toſſed hither and thither, by the Violent Seas, was at laſt very ſtrangely caſt alive upon the Shore; where much wounded, he found his Wife a Sharer with him in the like Deliverance.

While theſe diſtreſſed Servants of God were hanging about the Rock, and Mr. Thacher had Mr. Avery by the Hand, reſolving to die together, and expecting by the Stroke of the next Wave to die, Mr. Avery lift up his Eyes to Heaven, ſaying, We know not what the Pleaſure of God is; I fear we have been too unmindful of former Deliverances: Lord, I cannot challenge a Promiſe of the Preſervation of my Life; but thou haſt promiſed to deliver us from Sin and Condemnation, and to bring us ſafe to Heaven, through the All-ſufficient Satisfaction of Jeſus Chriſt; this therefore I do challenge of thee. Which he had no ſooner ſpoken, but he was by a Wave ſweeping him off, immediately wafted away to Heaven indeed: being well furniſhed with thoſe unperiſhable Things: Whereto refers the Advice of the famous Duke of Bavaria, Hujuſmodi comparandæ ſunt opes, quæ nobiſcum poſſunt ſimul evatare in Naufragio.

The next Iſland was therefore called Thacher's Woe, and that Rock Avery's Fall.

Who can without ſhedding Tears, almoſt enough to make a ſenſible Addition unto the Lake Leman, call to mind the Fate of the incomparable Hottinger, upon that Lake, in the Year 1667? That incomparably Learned and Godly Man, being by the States-General of the United Provinces, after much Importunity, prevailed withal, to come unto Leyden, the Boat wherein he was, with his Wife and three Children, and a Kinſman, and another Perſon of Quality, unhappily overſet, by ſtriking on an unſeen Rock, a little way off the Shoar. He, with the two Gentlemen, got ſafe out of the Water; but ſeeing his Wife, and Three Children, in extream Danger of Drowning, they went into the Water again to ſave them, and there he, with one of the Gentlemen, (and his three Children) were drowned themſelves. But eight Days before this lamentable Accident, he found this Verſe written on the Doctor's Chair, at his aſcending it for the Publick Exerciſes; whereof the Writer could never be found:

> Carmina jam Moriens, Canit Exequialia Cygnus.

Reader, From Hottinger, now return to Avery. Compare the manner of their Death; and never forget the memorable Swan-Song, which Avery not eight Days, but ſcarce eight Seconds of a Minute, before his Expiration, ſang in the Ears of Heaven.

What was applied once to Hottinger, ſhall now be borrowed for Avery, as an Natus ad Exemplar. The LIFE of Mr. JONATHAN BURR.

Exemplo monſtrante Viam.

§ 1. WHen the Intereſts of David were carried into a Wilderneſs, the Reſpects and Regards by his Jonathan, had thereunto were ſuch, that he at laſt uttered this Exclamation thereupon, Thy Love to me was wonderful! The Intereſts of our Jeſus, the true David, being lodged very much in an American Wilderneſs, there was a Jonathan, whoſe Love thereunto was indeed ſo wonderful, that it carried him through the many Waters of the Atlantic Ocean, to be ſerviceable thereunto; and this was Mr. Jonathan Burr.

§ 2. He was born at Redgrave, in Suffolk, about the Year 1604; deſcended of Godly Parents, who gratified the Inclinations of this their Son, with a Learned Education. But altho' Literature did much adorn his Childhood, Religion did ſo much more; for he had from a Child known the Holy Scriptures, which made him wiſe unto Salvation. It is noted, that the Rod of Aaron was made of an Almond-Tree; of which 'twill be no Plinyiſm to obſerve (tho' Pliny obſerve it), that it flowers the firſt of all Trees, even in January, in the more Southern Countries, and bears in March; which has been ſometimes employ'd as an Intimation, how quickly thoſe that are deſigned for the Miniſtry, ſhould Bloſſom towards Heaven, and be young Jeremiahs, and Johns, and Timothies. Thus did our Jonathan. Even in his very Childhood, ſo ſtudious he was, as to leave his Food for his Book, but withal ſo pious, that he could neither Morning nor Evening dare to go without Prayers to God for his Bleſſing. And as it was his endeavour, whilſt a School-boy, to be every Day in the Fear of the Lord, ſo he would on the Lord's Day diſcover a ſingular Meaſure of that Fear; not only by abſtaining from the Liberties which others of his Age then uſe to take, to paſs the time away, but alſo by devoting the time to the Exerciſes of Devotion. His Father, obſerving this Diſpoſition of the Child, hoped, as well he might, that whatever was expended in fitting him for Service, would be well repaid, in the Service which might be done by him for the Church of God; and therefore after due Preparations for it, he ſent him unto the Univerſity.

§ 3. After he had ſpent three or four Years in Academical Studies, the Death of his Father fetch'd him ſooner than he would have gone, into the Country; where, tho' he kept a School, yet he purſued the Deſign of accompliſhing himſelf with every part of Learning, that when thoſe of his Years were to take their Degrees of Maſterſhip, he was one of the Moderators, which place he diſcharged with great Acceptation. But he afterwards would ſay, That the awful and humbling Providence of God, in the Death of his Father, which hindred him from thoſe Employments and Preferments in the Univerſity, for which he had a particular Fondneſs, had an effect upon him, for which he had Reaſon to admire the Wiſdom of Heaven; inaſmuch as it reduced him to that modeſt, gracious, careful Frame, which made him the fitter for the Work of turning many to Righteouſneſs.

§ 4. Having for a while attended that Work at Horninger, near Bury in Suffolk, he afterwards undertook the Charge of Reckingſhal, in the ſame County, wherein he did moſt exemplarily expreſs the Spirit of a Miniſter of the New Teſtament. He would therein be ſometimes ready to envy the more eaſie Condition of the Husbandmen; but in Submiſſion and Obedience unto the Call of God, he now ſet his Hand unto the Plough of the Lord Jeſus Chriſt: And therefore in the Form of a Solemn Covenant, he obliged himſelf unto the moſt Conſcientious Diſcharge of his Miniſterial Duties; in which Diſcharge he would always beg of God, that whatever Exhortation he gave unto others, might firſt be ſhaped in his own Experience: And yet ſometimes he would complain unto his Friends: Alas, I preach not what I am, but what I ought to be.

§ 5. This gracious Man, was indeed a very humble Man, and his Humility carried him even into a Dejection of Spirit; eſpecially when by Importunities he had been prevailed upon to preach abroad. Once particularly, there was a Perſon of Quality, for whoſe Converſion many Prayers had been put up to God, by thoſe who hoped that God might have much Honour from a Man of Honour brought unto himſelf. Mr. Burr preaching at a place, far from his own Congregation, had a moſt happy Succeſs in the Converſion of this Gentleman, who not only acknowledged this Change, with much Thankfulneſs, both to God, and the Inſtrument; but alſo approved himſelf a changed Man, in the whole Frame of his After-Converſation. And yet coming home, from the Preaching of that Sermon, Mr. Burr had a particular Meaſure of his lowly and modeſt Reflections thereupon; adding, I ſhall conclude, it is of God, if any Good be done by any thing preached by ſuch an Unworthy Inſtrument.

§ 6. Hence on the Lord's Day, after he came home from his publick Work, it was his manner preſently to Retire, and ſpend ſome time in praying to God, for the pardon of the Sins, which accompanied him in his Work, and in praiſing of God, for enabling him to go, in any meaſure, through it; with Petitions for the good Succeſs of his Labours.

He then would come down to his Family-Worſhip, wherein he ſpent ſome Hours inſtructing of the Family, and performing of other Duties: And when his Wife deſired him to abate of his exceſſive Pains, his Anſwer would be, 'Tis better to be worn out with Work, than to be eaten out with Ruſt. It was indeed his Joy, to be ſpending his Life unto the uttermoſt for God, and for his People; yea, he would ſay, tho' he ſhould have no Temporal Rewards. Accordingly, when any that had been benefited by his Miniſtry, ſent him any Tokens of their Gratitude, he would (like Luther) beg of God, That he might not have his Portion in ſuch things: And he deſired of his grateful Friends, That if they had gotten any good of him, they would give unto God alone the Glory of it. Moreover, if he had underſtood, that any had gained in the Concern of their Souls, by his Labours, he would mention it, in ſome of his privater Devotions, with this Expreſſion, Lord, of thine own have I given, take then the Glory unto thy ſelf: As for me, let my Portion be in thy ſelf, and not in the Things of this World. But when he was debarred of his Liberty to preach, he was even like a Fiſh out of the Water; and his very Body languiſhed through a Sympathy, with the Reſentments of his Mind; ſaying, That his Preaching was his Life; and if he were laid aſide from that, he ſhould quickly be dead.

§ 7. It was not on the Lord's Day only, but every Day, that this good Man was uſually, In the Fear of the Lord all the Day long. He might ſay with the Pſalmiſt, When I awake, I am ſtill with God: For at his firſt awaking, he would bleſs God for the Mercies of the Night, and then pray, That he might ſo number his Days, as to apply his Heart to Wiſdom: And if he awaked in the Night, it would commonly be with ſome Thankſgivings unto Heaven. Riſing in the Morning, he would repair to his beloved Study, where he began the Day with Secret Prayer before the Lord: After this he would read a Chapter in the Old Teſtament, ſpending ſome time in Serious and Solemn, and Heart-ſearching Meditations thereupon: He would then come down into his Family; where, with his Prayers, he would then Read and Expound, and apply the ſame Chapter unto his own Folks, and ſuch of the Neighbours as would come in, to enjoy his Meditations, at the uſual Seaſon of them. Retiring then to his Study again, he would continue there, till called unto his Dinner; and if none came to ſpeak with him after Dinner, he would, after ſome Diverſion for a while with his Children, return to his Study, where he would then have a time to pray with his Wife: But if at any time he were invited unto a Dinner abroad, he would have a time for that Service in the Forenoon, before his going out.

As the Evening drew on, after the like manner, he would read a Chapter in the New Teſtament, making his Family Partakers of his Reflections, with his Prayer upon it. And before his going to Bed, he uſually walked up and down the Room, for half an Hour, or more, pondering upon ſomething, which his Wife deſiring to know, What it was? He replied, Seeing thou art ſo near me, if it may do thee good, I'll tell thee: Firſt, He ſaid, he called himſelf unto an Account, How he had ſpent the Day? And what ſinful Commiſſions, or Omiſſions, he had been overtaken with; for which, he then, begg'd Pardon of God. Secondly, He reckon'd up the particular Mercies he had received in the Day, rendring of Praiſes to Heaven for thoſe Mercies. Laſtly, He made his Petitions to God, that he might be prepared for ſudden Death: Unto which Third Article in his Thoughts, that which gave more ſpecial Occaſion was, the ſudden Death of his Brother, an eminent and excellent Chriſtian, whom, he ſaid, he could never forget.

§ 8. When he travelled abroad, he thought long to be at home again, through his Diſſatiſfaction at his not having elſewhere, ſo convenient Seaſons for his Communion with God. And when he took any Journeys with his Friends, it was his manner to enquire, What Good had been done, or gained therein? And what good Examples had been ſeen? And what good Inſtructions had been heard? And that there might be no loſs of time in the Journeys, he would be full of profitable Diſcourſe, eſpecially by way of Occaſional Reflection, upon things that then occurr'd unto Obſervation. What he was in a Journey, the ſame he was at the Table; even like the Fire, (what was once writ of Athenodorus) ’Εξάπτων πάντα τὰ παρακείμενα. So that they who would bear no part in a gracious Communication, would be dumb, where-ever he came; and ſome of the roughеſt and rudeſt Hearers, would have Tears fetched from their Eyes, at the Soul melting Expreſſions that paſſed from his Mouth. Moreover, at a Feaſt he would eat more ſparingly than at another time, giving us his Reaſon for his Temperance, the Advice of the Wiſe Man: Put a Knife to thy Throat: And he would ſay, Where there are many Varieties, there are many Temptations.

§ 9. It was his wont, before the Lord's Supper, to keep a Day of ſolemn Faſting and Prayer alone, with his Wife, as well to prepare themſelves for that Sacred Ordinance; as to obtain the manifold Bleſſings of Heaven upon his Family and Neighbourhood. Such was his Piety. And as for his Charity, he ſeldom viſited the Poor, but with Spirituals, he communicated alſo Temporals unto them: For which, when ſome of his Friends intimated, that he might err, in reſerving no more for himſelf, he would anſwer, I often think of thoſe Words, He that ſoweth ſparingly, ſhall reap ſparingly. It was alſo remarkable, to ſee how much his own Perſonal Joys, and Griefs, were ſwallowed up in the Simpathy which he had, with the Condition of the whole Church abroad: When he heard it was well with the Church, he would ſay, Bleſſed be God, that it goes well with them, whatever ever becomes of me! But if ill, none of his own private Proſperity kept him from feeling it, as a true Member of that Myſtical Body. Finally, All the Graces which thus rendred him amiable to thoſe that were about him, were attended with ſuch Moſaic Meekneſs, as made him yet further amiable: He would be zealous, when he ſaw Diſhonour caſt on the Name of God, but patient under Injury offer'd unto himſelf. If he were informed, that any thought meanly of him, he would not be moved at it, but ſay, I think as meanly of my ſelf, and therefore may well be content, that others think meanly of me: And when Evil hath been charged on him, he has replied, If Men ſee ſo much, what does God ſee? Diſgraceful and unworthy Speeches beſtowed upon him, he would call, his Gains; but it was his Trouble to find himſelf applauded. His Friends might indeed have ſaid of him, as Luther of Melancthon, Mihi plane videtur ſaltem in hoc errare, quod Chriſtum ipſe fingat longius abeſſe à Corde ſuo, quàm ſit reverà, certè nimis Nullus in hoc eſt noſter Jonathan.

§ 10. This bright Star muſt move Weſtward. He, with many Fellow-Sufferers for the Teſtimony of Jeſus, being ſilenced in England; and foreſeeing a diſmal Storm a coming upon the Nation, till the overpaſſing whereof he ſaw many Praying Saints directed unto America, for Chambers of Safety; and willing to forego all Worldly Advantages, for the Enjoyment of Goſpel Ordinances, adminiſtred without the mixtures of Humane Inventions; he removed into New England, having his three Children with him, and his Wife big with a Fourth, in his Remove; where arriving, it refreſhed him not a little, to ſee the eſcaped People of God, with Harps in their Hands, there ſinging the Song of Moſes. He came into New-England, at a time, when there was not ſo much want of Lights, as of Golden Candleſticks, wherein to place the Lights; but he was not long there, before he was invited by the Church of Dorcheſter, to be an Aſſiſtant unto the well-known Mr. Richard Mather.

§ 11. The Evil One, diſturbed at the Happineſs of Dorcheſter, very ſtrongly endeavoured a Miſunderſtanding between Mr. Mather and Mr. Burr; and the Miſunderſtanding did proceed ſo far, as to produce a Paroxiſm.

It was judged by ſome of the Brethren in the Church, that Mr. Burr had expreſſed himſelf erroneouſly in certain Points, then much agitated throughout the Country; and Mr. Mather, upon their Deſire, examining the Propoſitions which this Good Man had written, thought he could not altogether clear them from Exceptions. Hereupon grew ſuch Alienations, that they could not be well Re-united, without calling in the Help of Neighbour-Churches in a Council; which Council directing both Mr. Mather and Mr. Burr, to acknowledge what Miſunderſtandings were then diſcovered in this Buſineſs, thoſe two Good Men ſet apart a Day for the Reconciliation; and with ſuch Exemplary Expreſſions of Humility and Affection, Rectified all that had been out of Joint, that God was exceedingly Glorified, and the Peace of the Church effectually reſtored and maintained.

§ 12. This true Barnabas, was not only to give the Churches of New England a Conſolatory Viſit, in his Paſſage unto Glory, that he might leave them an Example of that Love, Patience, Holineſs, and Fruitfulneſs, which would make them an Happy People. Tho' he had not Perſecution to try him in this Wilderneſs, yet he was not without his Trials: For, as 'tis well obſerved in the Diſcourſe, De Duplici Martyrio, which goes under the Name of Cyprian; Si deeſt Tyrannus, ſi Tortor, ſi Spoliator, non deerit concupiſcentia, Martyrii, Materiam, quotidianam nobis exhibens. The next Year after he came to New-England, he was taken Sick of the Small-Pox; out of which he nevertheleſs recovered, and came forth as Gold that had been tryed in the Fire. He then renewed and applied the Covenant of Grace, by the ſuitable Recognitions of the following Inſtrument.

'I Jonathan Burr, being brought in the Arms of Almighty God over the Vaſt Ocean, with my Family and Friends, and Graciouſly provided for in a Wilderneſs; and being ſenſible of my own Unprofitableneſs and Self-ſeeking; yet of Infinite Mercy, being called unto the Tremendous Work of Feeding Souls, and being of late with my Family deliver'd out of a Great Affliction of the Small-Pox; and having found the Fruit of that Affliction; God Tempering, Ordering, Mitigating the Evil thereof, ſo as I have been graciouſly and ſpeedily deliver'd; I do promiſe and vow to him, that hath done all things for me; Firſt, That I will aim only at his Glory, and the Good of Souls, and not my ſelf and Vain Glory: And that, Secondly, I will walk Humbly, with lower Thoughts of my ſelf, conſidering what a poor Creature I am; a Puff of Breath, ſuſtained only by the Power of his Grace; And therefore, Thirdly, I will be more watchful over my Heart, to keep it in a due Frame of Holineſs and Obedience, without running out ſo far to the Creature; for I have ſeen, That he is mine only Help in time of need; Fourthly, That I will put more weight upon that firm Promiſe, and ſure Truth, That God is a God hearing Prayer: Fifthly, That I will ſet up God, more in my Family, more in my ſelf, Wife, Children and Servants; converſing with them in a more ſerious and conſtant manner; for This, God aimed at, in ſending his Hand into my Family at this time.

Memento Mori.

' In Meipſo Nihil; in Chriſto Omne.

Not

Nor was his Heavenly Converſation afterwards diſagreeable to theſe Grateful Reſolutions of his Devout Soul. By the ſame Token, that the famous Mr. Thomas Hooker, being one of his Auditors, when he preached in a great Audience at Charleſtown, had this Expreſſion about him. Surely, this Man wont be long out of Heaven, for he preaches as if he were there already. And the moſt experienced Chriſtians in the Country, found ſtill in his Miniſtry, as well as in his whole Behaviour, the Breathing of ſuch a Spirit, as was very greatly to their Satisfaction. They could not but call him, as Dionyſius was once called, Πετεινὸν τοῦ οὐρανοῦ, The Bird of Heaven. Had it not been Old Adam's World, ſo Innocent, ſo Excellent, ſo Heavenly a Perſon, could not have met with ſuch Exerciſes as he and others like him, then ſometimes did, even from their Trueſt Brethren, § 13. Having juſt been preaching about the Redemption of Time, he fell into a Sickneſs of Ten Days Continuance; during which Time, he expreſſed a wonderful Patience, and Submiſſion, upon all Occaſions. His Wife perceiving his Willingneſs to die, asked him, Whether he were deſirous to leave her and his Children? Whereto his Anſwer was, Do not miſtake me, I am not deſirous of that; but I bleſs God, that now my Will is the Lord's Will: If he will have me to live yet with my dear Wife and Children, I am willing. I will ſay to you my dear Wife and Children, as the Apoſtle ſays, It is better for you, that I abide with you; but it is better for me to be diſſolved and to be with Chriſt. And perceiving his Wife's Diſconſolation, he asked her, If ſhe could not be willing to part with him; whereupon, when ſhe intimated how hard it was, he exhorted her to acquieſce in that God, who would be Better than Ten Husbands: Adding, Our Parting is but for a Time, I am ſure we ſhall one Day meet again. Being diſcouraged by finding himſelf unable to put on his Clothes, one of his Friends told him, his Work was now to lie ſtill: At which he complained, I lie ſlugging a Bed, when others are at work! But being minded of God's Will, That it ſhould be ſo, that quieted him. Obſerving how diligently his Wife tended him, he ſaid unto her, Don't ſpend ſo much Time with me, but go thy way and ſpend ſome time in Prayer; thou knoweſt not what thou mayſt obtain from God; I fear leſt thou look too much upon this Affliction. A Day or two before his Death, he bleſſed his Children; and the Night before he died, he was overheard ſometimes to ſay, I will wait until my Change come; and Why art thou ſo loath to die? A few Hours before his Death, it was obſerved, that he had a ſore Conflict with the Angel of Death, who was now ſhooting his laſt Arrows at him; and when one of the Standers-by ſaid, The Sting of Death is taken away; the Lord Jeſus Chriſt has overcome Death for you; this is one of Satan's laſt Aſſaults; his Work is now almoſt at an end; though he be a ſubtil Enemy, and would if it were poſſible, deceive the very Elect; he preſently laid hold on that laſt Expreſſion, If it were poſſible; ſaid he, Bleſſed be God there is no Poſſibility! After this, he requeſted the Company might withdraw, that ſo he might have an Opportunity to pray for a while by himſelf; but ſeeing the Company loth to leave the Room, he pray'd in Latin as long as he had Strength to do it. When he was to Appearance juſt expiring, he called for his Wife; and ſtedfaſtly fixing his Eyes upon her, he ſaid, Caſt thy Care upon God, for he careth for thee. About half an Hour after this, when Death had been for ſome while drawing the Curtains about him, his laſt Words were thoſe unto his Wife. Hold Faſt, Hold Faſt! So he finiſhed his Pilgrimage, on Aug. 9. 1641.

§ 14. Unto that Vertuous Gentlewoman his Wife, he expreſſed himſelf with great Confidence, That God would certainly provide well for her; and that Gentlewoman, ſhortly after being Honourably and Comfortably married unto another Gentleman of Good Eſtate, namely, Richard Dummer, Eſq; once a Magiſtrate of the Colony, lived with him near Forty Years; and was more than Forty Years after alive to teſtify her Experience of the Accompliſhment, which God had given unto that Faith of her Dying Husband: Who at his Death commended his Family to God, in Strains not unlike thoſe of the Dying Widerus;

CHAP. IV.

The LIFE of Mr. GEORGE PHILIPS.

Vita Miniſtri eſt Cenſura & Cynoſura.

§ 1. NOT only the Common Sign-Poſts of every Town, but alſo ſome famous Orders of Knighthood in the moſt famous Nations of Europe, have entertained us with Traditions of a certain Champion, by the Name of St. GEORGE dignified and diſtinguiſhed. Now whilſt many do with Calvin, reckon this Notable St. George, with his Brother St. Kit, among the Larvæ and Fables of the Romantic Monks; others from the Honourable mention of him in ſo many Liturgies, do think there might be ſuch a Man: But then, he muſt be no other, neither better nor worſe, in the moſt probable Opinion of Rainolds, than George the Arrian Biſhop of Alexandria, the Antagoniſt and Adverſary of Athanaſius; of this Memorable Trooper, the Arrians feigned Miracles, and with certain Diſguiſes, impoſed the Fame of him upon the Orthodox. But the Churches of New-England being wholly unconcerned with any ſuch a St. George, and wiſhing that they had been leſs concerned with many Quakers, whoſe chief Apoſtles have been ſo many of them call'd George's, but in Effect ſo many Dragons, there was one George who was indeed among the firſt Saints of New-England! And that Excellent Man of our Land was Mr. George Philips.

§ 2. He was born at Raymund, in the County of Norfolk; deſcended of Honeſt Parents, who were encouraged by his great Proficiency at the Grammar-School, to ſend him unto the Univerſity; where his good Invention, ſtrong Memory, and ſolid Judgment, with the Bleſſing of God upon all, attained a Degree of Learning that may be called Eminent. The diligent Reading of the Fathers, while he was yet himſelf among Young Men, was one of the things that gave a ſpecial Ornament unto that Skill in Theology, whereto he attained; but that which yet further fitted him to become a Divine, was his being made Partaker of the Divine Nature, by the Sanctification of all his Abilities for the Service of God, in a True Regeneration.

§ 3. Devoting himſelf to the Work of the Miniſtry, his Employment befel him at Boxford in Eſſex; whereof he found much Acceptance with Good Men; as being a Man Mighty in the Scriptures. But his Acquaintance with the Writings and Perſons of ſome Old Non-Conformiſts had inſtilled into him ſuch Principles about Church Government, as were like to make him unacceptable unto ſome, who then drove the World before them. Some of theſe Principles he had intimated in his publick Preaching; whereupon ſome of his unſatiſfied Hearers repair'd unto Old Mr. Rogers of Dedham, with ſome Intimations of their Diſſatisfaction. But Mr. Rogers, although he had not much ſtudied the Controverſy, yet had ſo high a Reſpect for Mr. Philips, that he ſaid, He believed Mr. Philips would preach nothing without ſome good Evidence for it from the Word of God, and therefore they ſhould be willing to regard whatever Mr. Philips might, from that Word, make evident unto them. And as for Mr. Philips, the more he was put upon the Study and ſearching of the Truth, in the Matter controverted, the more he was confirmed in his own Opinion of it.

§ 4. When the Spirit of Perſecution did at length with the extreameſt Violence, urge a Conformity to Ways and Parts of Divine Worſhip, conſcientiouſly ſcrupled by ſuch Perſons as our Mr. Philips. He, with many more of his Neighbours, entertained Thoughts of tranſporting themſelves and their Families into the Deſarts of America, to proſecute and propagate the Glorious Deſigns of the Goſpel, and ſpread the Light of it in thoſe Goings down of the Sun, and being reſolved accordingly to accompany the Excellent Mr. Winthrop in that Undertaking, he with many other Devout Chriſtians, embarqued for New-England, where they arrived in the Year 1630. through the Good Hand of God upon them. Here, quickly after his Landing, he loſt the Deſire of his Eyes, in the Death of his Deſirable Conſort, who, though an only Child, had cheerfully left her Parents, to ſerve the Lord Jeſus Chriſt, with her Husband, in a Terrible Wilderneſs. At Salem ſhe died, entering into the Everlaſting Peace; and was very ſolemnly interr'd near the Right Honourable the Lady Arabella; the Siſter of the Earl of Lincoln, who alſo took New England in her Way to Heaven.

§ 5. Mr. Philips, with ſeveral Gentlemen, and other Chriſtians having choſen a place upon Charles-River, for a Town which they called Water-Town, they reſolved that they would combine into a Church-Fellowſhip there, as their firſt Work; and build the Houſe of God, before they could build many Houſes for themſelves; thus they ſought, firſt, the Kingdom of God! And indeed, Mr. Philips being better acquainted with the True Church-Diſcipline, than moſt of the Miniſters that came with him into the Country, their Proceedings about the gathering and ordering of their Church, were Methodical enough, though not made in all things a Pattern for all the reſt. Upon a Day ſet apart for ſolemn Faſting and Prayer, the very next Month after they came aſhore, they entred into this Holy Covenant.

July 30. 1630.

'We whoſe Names are hereto ſubſcribed, having through God's Mercy, eſcaped out of Pollutions of the World, and been taken into the Society of his People, with all Thankfulneſs do hereby both with Heart and Hand acknowledge, That his Gracious Goodneſs, and Fatherly Care, towards us: And for further and more full Declaration thereof, to the preſent and future Ages, have undertaken (for the promoting of his Glory and the Churches Good, and the Honour of our Bleſſed Jeſus, in our more full and free ſubjecting of our ſelves and ours, under his Gracious Government, in the Practice of, and Obedience unto all his Holy Ordinances and Orders, which he hath pleaſed to preſcribe and impoſe upon us) a long and hazardous Voyage from Eaſt to Weſt, from Old England in Europe, to New-England in America; that we may walk before him, and ſerve him without Fear in Holineſs and Righteouſneſs, all the Days of our Lives: And being ſafely arrived here, and thus far onwards peaceably preſerved by his ſpecial Providence, that we may bring forth our Intentions into Actions, and perfect our Reſolutions, in the Beginnings of ſome Juſt and Meet Executions; We have ſeparated the Day above written from all other Services, and Dedicated it wholly to the Lord in Divine Employments, for a Day of Afflicting our Souls, and humbling our ſelves before the Lord, to ſeek him, and at his Hands, a Way to walk in, by Faſting and Prayer, that we might know what was Good in his Sight: And the Lord was intreated of us.

'For in the End of that Day, after the finiſhing of our publick Duties, we do all, before we depart, ſolemnly and with all our Hearts, perſonally, Man by Man for our ſelves and ours (charging them before Chriſt and his Elect Angels, even them that are not here with us this Day, or are yet unborn, That they keep the Promiſe unblameably and faithfully unto the coming of our Lord Jeſus) promiſe, and enter into a ſure Covenant with the Lord our God, and before him with one another, by Oath and ſerious Proteſtation made, to Renounce all Idolatry and Superſtition, Will-Worſhip, all Humane Traditions and Inventions whatſoever, in the Worſhip of God; and forſaking all Evil Ways, do give our ſelves wholly unto the Lord Jeſus, to do him faithful Service, obſerving and keeping all his Statutes, Commands, and Ordinances, in all Matters concerning our Reformation; his Worſhip, Adminiſtrations, Miniſtry, and Government; and in the Carriage of our ſelves among our ſelves, and one towards another, as he hath preſcribed in his Holy Word. Further ſwearing to cleave unto that alone, and the true Senſe and meaning thereof to the utmoſt of our Power, as unto the moſt clear Light and infallible Rule, and All-ſufficient Canon, in all things that concern us in this our Way. In Witneſs of all, we do ex Animo, and in the preſence of God, hereto ſet our Names or Marks, in the Day and Year above written.

About Forty Men, whereof the Firſt was that Excellent Knight Sir Richard Saltonſtal, then ſubſcribed this Inſtrument, in Order unto their Coaleſcence into a Church-Eſtate; which I have the more particularly Recited, becauſe it was one of the Firſt Eccleſiaſtical Tranſactions of this Nature managed in the Colony. But in after time, they that joined unto the Church, ſubſcribed a Form of the Covenant, ſomewhat altered, with a Confeſſion of Faith annexed unto it.

§ 6. A Church of Believers being thus gathered at Watertown, this Reverend Man continued for divers Years among them, faithfully diſcharging the Duties of his Miniſtry, to the Flock, whereof he was made the Overſeer; and as a Faithful Steward giving to every one their Meat in due Seaſon. Herein he demonſtrated himſelf to be a Real Divine: But not in any thing more, than in his moſt intimate Acquaintance with the Divine Oracles of the Scripture: Being fully of Jerom's Perſwaſion, Ama Scientiam Scripturarum, & Vitia Carnis non amabis. He had ſo thoroughly peruſed and pondered them, that he was able on the ſudden to turn unto any Text, without the Help of Concordances; and they were ſo much his Delight, that as it has been by ſome of his Family affirmed, He read over the whole Bible ſix times every Year: Nevertheleſs he did uſe to ſay, That every time he read the Bible, he obſerved or collected ſomething, which he never did before. There was a Famous Prince of Tranſylvania, who found the time to read over the Bible no leſs than Twenty Seven Times. There was a Famous King of Arragon, who read over the Bible fourteen Times, with Lyra's Commentaries. A Religious Perſon, who was a cloſe Priſoner, in a dark Dungeon, having a Candle brought him, for the few Minutes in the Day when his poor Meals were to be eaten, choſe then to read a little of his Bible, and eat his Neceſſary Food, when the Candle was gone. Yea, the Emperour Theodoſius wrote out the New-Teſtament with his own Hand; and Bonaventure did as much by the Old; and ſome have, like Zuinglius and Beza, lodg'd vaſt Paragraphs of it in the Memories. Among ſuch Memorable Students in the Scriptures, our Philips deſerves to have ſome Remembrance: Who was fully of the Opinion expreſſed by Luther, If the Letters of Princes are to be read three times over, ſurely then God's Letters (as Gregory calls the Scriptures) are to be read Seven times Thrice, yea, Seventy times Seven, and if it could be a Thouſand times over; and he might ſay with Ridley, giving an Account how much of the Bible he had learnt by Heart, Tho' in time a great Part of the Study departed from me, yet the ſweet Smell thereof, I truſt I ſhall carry with me to Heaven. Indeed being well ſkill'd in the Original Tongues, he could not ſee further into the Scriptures than moſt other Men; And thereby being made Wiſe unto Salvation, he alſo became a Man of God, throughly furniſhed unto all good Works.

§ 7. Hence alſo, he became an able Diſputant; and ready upon all Occaſions, to maintain what he delivered from the Word of God; for which Cauſe, his Hearers counted him, The Irreſragable Doctor: Though he were ſo Humble and Modeſt, as to be very averſe unto Diſputation, until driven thereto by extream Neceſſity. One of his Hearers after ſome Conference with him about Infant-Baptiſm, and ſeveral Points of Church-Diſcipline, obtain'd a Copy of the Arguments in Writing for his further Satisfaction. This Copy the Man ſends over to England, which an Anabaptiſt there publiſhed with a pretended Confutation; whereby the Truth loſt nothing, for Mr. Philips hereupon publiſhed a Judicious Treatiſe, Entituled, A Vindication of Infant-Baptiſm, whereto there is added another, Of the Church. This Book was honourably received and mentioned, by the Eminent Aſſembly of London-Miniſters; and a Preface full of Honour was thereto prefixed by the famous Mr. Thomas Shepard; notwithſtanding the Difference between him and Mr. Philips, upon one or two Points, whereabouts thoſe two Learned Neighbours managed a Controverſy with ſo much Reaſon, and yet Candor and Kindneſs, that if all Theological Controverſies, had been ſo handled, we need not ſo much wiſh, Liberari ab Implacabilibus Theologorum Odiis.

§ 8. About fourteen Years continued he in his Miniſtry at Watertown; in which time his Miniſtry was Bleſſed, for the Converſion of many unto God, and for the Edification and Confirmation of many that were converted. He was, indeed, A Good Man, and full of Faith, and of the Holy Ghoſt: And for that Cauſe he was not only in publick but in private alſo, very full of Holy Diſcourſe on all Occaſions; eſpecially on the Lord's Day at Noon, the time intervening between the Two Exerciſes, he would ſpend in conferring with ſuch of his Good People, as reſorted unto his Houſe, at ſuch a Rate, as marvellouſly Miniſtred Grace unto the Hearers; not wanting any time then, as it ſeems, for any further Preparations, than what he had ſtill aforehand made, for the publick Sermons of the Afternoon.

§ 9. He laboured under many Bodily Infirmities: But was eſpecially liable unto the Cholick; the Extremity of one Fit whereof, was the Wind which carried him afore it, into the Haven of Eternal Reſt, on July 1. in the Year 1644. much Deſired and Lamented by his Church at Watertown; who teſtified their Affection to their Deceaſed Paſtor, by a ſpecial Care to promote and perfect the Education of his Eldeſt Son, whereof all the Country, but eſpecially the Town of Rowly, have ſince reaped the Benefit.

CHAP. V.

Paſtor Evangelicus. The LIFE of Mr. THOMAS SHEPARD.

—— Nec Mireris,
Animam tam Subitò in Cœlum avolaſſe, nam Vicem
Alarum ſibi ſupplerunt Preces ſuæ & ſuſpiria.

§ 1. IT was the Gracious and Savoury Speech uttered by one of the greateſt Perſonages in England, and perhaps in all Europe, unto a Grave Miniſter: I have (ſaid he) paſſed through many Places of Honour and Truſt, both in Church and State, more than any of my Order in England, for Seventy Years before. But were I aſſured that by my Preaching, I had converted but one Soul unto God, I ſhould herein take more Comfort, than in all the Honours and Offices that have ever been beſtowed upon me. Let my Reader now go with me, and I will ſhow him one of the Happieſt Men, that ever we ſaw; as great a Converter of Souls, as has ordinarily been known in our Days.

§ 2. Amongſt thoſe Famous, whereof there were Diverſe, Miniſters of New-England, which were Born in or near the Firſt Luſtre of King James's Reign, one of the leaſt Inconſiderable was our Mr. Thomas Shepard; whoſe Father

Mr. William Shepard, called him Thomas, becauſe his Birth was Nov. 5. Anno 1605. as near as could be gueſſed, at the very Hour, when the Blow ſhould have been given in the Execrable Gun-powder Treaſon; a Villany, concerning which he ſaid, This Child of his would hardly be able to believe, that ever ſuch a Wickedneſs could be attempted by the Sons of Men. His Father had ſix Daughters and three Sons, whereof this Thomas born in Towceſter, near Northampton, was the youngeſt; and as he lived a prudent, ſo he died a pious Man, while his youngeſt Son was but a Youth. Our Thomas had in his Childhood, labour'd under the Diſcouragements, firſt of a Bitter Step-Mother, and then of a Cruel School-Maſter, till God ſtirred up the Heart of his Elder Brother, to become a Father unto him who, for the Uſe of his Portion, brought him up.

§ 3. Bending his Mind now to Study, he became fit for the Univerſity, at fifteen Years of Age; where he was placed under the Tuition of Mr. Cockrel, a Northamptonſhire Man, Fellow of Immanuel Colledge.

But when he had been upwards of two Years in that Colledge, this young Man, who had been heretofore under more Ineffectual Operations of the Divine Word upon him, was now more Effectuallly Called unto a ſaving Acquaintance with him, that is our true Immanuel. The Miniſtry of Mr. Chaderton and Mr. Dickinſon, ſtruck his Heart with powerful Convictions of his Miſeries in his Unregeneracy; and while he ſhook off thoſe Convictions, it pleaſed God that a Devout Scholar walking with him, fell into Diſcourſes about the Miſeries of an Unregenerate Man, whereby the Arrows of God were ſtruck deeper into him. At another time, falling into a pious Company, where they conferred about, The Wrath of God, and the Extremity and Eternity of it, this added unto his Awakenings; and tho' profane Company afterwards cauſed him to loſe much of the Senſe, which he had of theſe things, yet when Dr. Preſton came thither, his firſt Sermon on that [Be Renewed in the Spirit of your Mind] ſo Renewed the former Impreſſions, which had been upon him, that he ſoon approved himſelf a Perſon truly Renewed in his own Spirit, and converted unto God. From this time, which was in the Year 1624. he ſet himſelf eſpecially on the Work of Daily Meditation, which he attended every Evening before Supper; Meditating on, The Evil of Sin, The Terror of God's Wrath, The Day of Death and Judgment, The Beauty of the Lord Jeſus Chriſt, and The Deceitfulneſs of his own Heart, until he found the Transforming Influence of thoſe Things upon his own Soul; a Courſe which afterwards, he would mightily commend unto others that conſulted him; and he reſted not until coming to ſee, that in the Lord Jeſus Chriſt alone, there was laid up the full Supply of all Spiritual Wants, he found the Grace of God enabling him to accept of that precious Lord, and rejoice in that Wiſdom, and Righteouſneſs, and Sanctification, and Redemption, which He is made unto us: Whence afterwards, drawing up a Catalogue of the Divine Favours unto him, he had therein theſe Paſſages among the reſt, which are from thence now tranſcribed. The Lord is the God that ſent, I think, the beſt Miniſters in the World to call me; Dr. Preſton and Mr. Goodwin. The Words of the firſt, at the firſt Sermon he made, when he came into the Colledge, as Maſter of it; and divers that he preached at that time, did open my Heart, and convince me of my Unbelief, and my total Emptineſs of all, and Enmity againſt all Good. And the Lord made me honour him highly, and love him dearly, though many Godly Men ſpake againſt him. And he is the God that in theſe Ordinances convinced me of my Guilt and Filth of Sin, eſpecially ſelf ſeeking, and Love of Honour of Men in all I did; and humbled me tender both, ſo as to make me ſet an higher price upon Chriſt, and Grace, and loath my ſelf the more, and ſo I was eaſed of a World of Diſcouragement. He alſo ſhow'd me the Worth of Chriſt, and made my Soul ſatisfied with him, and cleave to him, becauſe God had made him Righteouſneſs; and hence alſo Revealed his Free Juſtification, and gave me Support and Reſt upon and in his Promiſes made to them that Receive him as Lord and King; which I found my Heart long unwilling to. And this was the Ground, or rather Occaſion of many horrid Temptations of Atheiſm, Judaiſm, Familiſm, Popery, Deſpair, as having ſinned the Unpardonable Sin; yet the Lord, at laſt, made me yield up my ſelf to his Condemning Will, as good; which gave me great Peace and Quietneſs of Heart, through the Blood and Pity of Chriſt. I have met with all Kinds of Temptations, but after my Converſion. I was never tempted to Arminianiſm, my own Experience ſo ſenſibly confuting the Freedom of Will.

§ 4. One Dr. Wilſon, having a purpoſe, with a moſt Noble and Pious Charity, to maintain a Lecture, the Miniſters of Eſſex, in one of their Monthly Faſts, propounded unto Mr. Shepard, the Service of this Lecture to be attended in the Great Town of Coggeſhal. But the People of Earl's Coln, on that very Day, when the Miniſters were together in Tarling at Prayer, for the Direction of Heaven in this Matter, ſo affectionately addreſſed them, for the Benefit of this Lecture, that it was granted unto Them, for the Three Years enſuing. Mr. Shepard, having proceeded Maſter of Arts at Cambridge, accepted now an Invitation to Earls Coln; and at the End of Three Years the Inhabitants were ſo loath to let him go, that they gathered among themſelves a convenient Salary to ſupport him ſtill amongſt them: Though his Lecture were gone. At Earls-Coln then he tarried, and prevailed for the Lecture to be ſettled the next Three Years in Towceſter, the Place of his Nativity; and for Mr. Stone to be employed in the Labour of it; which was to him an Extreame Satisfaction.

§ 5. Altho' Mr. Shepard were but a young Man, yet there was that Majeſty and Energy in his Preaching, and that Holineſs in his Life, which was not ordinary. And God made him a rich Bleſſing, not only to Coln, but unto all the Towns round about; wherein there were many converted unto God, and ſundry were ſo affected unto this Inſtrument of their Converſion, that they afterwards went a thouſand Leagues to enjoy his Miniſtry. But when Dr. Laud becomes Biſhop of London, Mr. Shepard muſt no longer be Preacher at Coln: He was quickly ſilenced, for none but that Fault, which was then known by the Name of Puritaniſm: And being ſilenced, he withdrew to the kind Family of the Harlackinden's, where applying himſelf more exactly to the Study of the Ceremonies in the Worſhip of God then impoſed, the more he ſtudied them, the leſs he liked them. Among other things that ſignalized him, after his Acquaintance with Mr. Harlackinden, I find one memorable paſſage reported by Mr. Woodcock, with ſufficient Evidence, in Mr. Baxter's Book about, The Worlds of Spirits. In the Chamber of a Toumb houſe, where two of Mr. Harlackinden's Men did uſe to lie, there was always, at Two a Clock in the Morning, the Sound of a Great Bell tolling. Mr. Harlackinden would once lie there, between his two Servants, to ſatisfie himſelf about it. At the uſual time came the uſual Sound, which threw the Gentleman into no little Conſternation. But Mr. Shepard, with ſome Chriſtians, having ſpent a Night in Prayer at this place, the Noiſe never gave any diſturbance after.

Once and again after this, finding the Reſolution of the Biſhop to ruine him, if he did not leave the Country, he ſeaſonably received Letters of Mr. Ezekiel Rogers, Miniſter of Rowly, in Yorkſhire, encouraging him to viſit thoſe parts, and accept Employment in the Houſe of Sir Richard Darly, of Buttercrambe, in that County. Driven to follow this Counſel, his Journey proved as troubleſome in all the Winter-Circumſtances of it, as a Traveller could have wiſhed for; and after he had ſwam for his Life, by miſſing his way over ſome overflown Bridges, he made it late on Saturday-night, before he came to York; but there having refreſhed himſelf, he went on to Buttercrambe that Night, which was about ſeven Miles further, where wet, and cold, and late, he that Night arrived.

§ 6. It added unto his Diſcouragements, when on the firſt Night of his Arrival, he found groſs Profanities prevailing both in the Family, and in the Neighbourhood; but God quickly made him inſtrumental to a bleſſed Change in both. The profaneſt Perſons thereabouts were ſoon touched with the Efficacy of his Miniſtry, and his Conference; and Prayer with Faſting, as well as other Exerciſes of Devotion, ſucceeded in the room of their former Wildneſſes. Both Sir Richard, and all his Sons, as well as many others there, had cauſe to bleſs God, that ever they ſaw the Face of this Holy Man: And as a Teſtimony of their Affection for him, they encouraged his Marriage with the Knight's near Kinſwoman, who upon this Account alſo enlarged her Portion, about the Year 1632. But Biſhop Neal here, would not allow him any Liberty for his Miniſtry, without a Subſcription, which his better informed Conſcience could not make; and this occaſioned his Removal upon a Call, unto a Town of Northumberland, call'd Heddon; where his Labours were proſpered unto the Souls of many People. One of the Houſes which he then hired, was haunted with a Devil, as was commonly conceived upon the departure of a noted Witch, who had been the former Inhabitant; and the Houſe was troubled with ſtrange Noiſes, till the earneſt Prayers of this Man of God procured a Deliverance from ſo extream a Trouble. But thither alſo the Zeal of the Biſhop reached him, and forbad his preaching there any more; no, nor durſt the more Ingenuous Dr. Morton, the Biſhop of Durham, afford him any Countenance or Connivance, inaſmuch as the Primate of England had look'd with ſo hard an Eye upon him.

§ 7. While he was thus deny'd the Liberty of preaching the Truths of the Goſpel, as much as in the remoteſt Corners of the Land, the Removal of Mr. Cotton, Mr. Hooker, Mr. Stone, and Mr. Weld into New-England, had awaken'd many pious People, all England over, to think of the like Removal; and ſeveral of his Friends already gat into New-England, as well as others, that were now going thither, invited him to accompany them in the Condition of that Plantation. Wherefore he conſider'd with himſelf, that he could not propoſe to himſelf the peaceable Exerciſe of his Miniſtry in any part of England; that his moſt intimate Friends had many ways expreſſed their Deſires of his going with them into another Country; that many eminent Miniſters, and excellent Chriſtians, had already tranſplanted themſelves; that he could not with a ſafe Conſcience comply with the Ceremonies, and Mixt Communion at home; that it was his Duty to ſeek the Enjoyment of Divine Ordinances in a further meaſure, than was there attainable; and that it would be a ſad thing for him, in Caſe of Mortality, to leave his Wife and Son, in the midſt of the Northern Barbarities; which Conſiderations now diſpoſed him for New-England. So having preach'd his Farewel Sermon at Newcaſtle, he came from thence in a Diſguiſe to Ipſwich, and from thence to Earls-Cold: Longing to be in a Country, where he might not loſe any more precious time, thro' the Inconveniences of Unſettlement.

§ 8. Mr. Shepard, and Mr. Norton coming now together unto Yarmouth, to take Shipping for New-England, they were much way-laid by Purſevants, employ'd for the Trepanning and Entrapping of them; and theſe Purſevants had proceeded ſo far, as by a Sum of Money to obtain a Promiſe from a Boy, belonging to the Houſe, where they ſcented Mr. Shepard's Quarters, that he would open the Door for them, to take him at a certain Hour of the Night. But behold the watchful Providence of God, over his faithful Servants! The gracious and ſerious

Words of Mr. Shepard, in the Hearing of this unlucky Boy, ſtruck him with Horror to think, that he ſhould be ſo wicked, as to betray ſuch an Holy Man. Whereupon the convinced Boy, did with Tears diſcover the whole Plot, unto his Godly Maſter, who forthwith convey'd Mr. Shepard, out of the way, and confounded the Setters that would have catched him.

§ 9. It was the latter end of the Year 1634, when Sailing was now dangerous, that Mr. Shepard ſhipped himſelf, in a Ship of about Four hundred Tun; commanded by a very able Seaman, but under a perpetual Entail and Series of Diſaſters, after ſome Injuſtice had been uſed about her. They ſet Sail from Harwich, upon the Edge of the Winter; but after ſeveral Deliverances from ſeveral Diſtreſſes, within a few Hours of their firſt ſetting out, the Winds drove them again back into Yarmouth Road; where there aroſe one of the moſt fearful Storms that ever was known. They thought they had loſt all their Anchors, and with their Anchors all their Hopes; and tho' Thouſands from Yarmouth Walls did pity them, yet none could relieve them: However, the Compaſſions of an eminent Officer, then amongſt the Spectators, were a little diſtinguiſhed, when he ſcoffingly ſaid: As for a poor Collier there in the Road, he pitied him very much; but as for the Puritans in the other Ship, he was not concern'd, their Faith would ſave them. In this Extremity, Mr. Shepard, with all the Mariners in one part of the Ship, and Mr. Norton, with Two hundred Paſſengers in the other, poured out their moſt fervent Prayers unto Almighty God; whereupon the Wind immediately ſo abated, that the Ship ſtay'd; and they found, tho' the upper part of the Veſſel all broken, yet their laſt Anchor unbroken, and themſelves deliver'd from ſo great a Death.

§ 10. The next Day, which was the Lord's Day, he went aſhore to Yarmouth, where one of his firſt Works, was to bury his Firſt-born Son; tho' he durſt not himſelf be preſent at the Burial, becauſe his Danger from the horrid Mancatchers aſhore, had leſs of Mercy, and more of Horror in it, than what he eſcaped from the mercileſs and horrible Waves of the Sea. Mr. Bridge of Norwich, now kindly invited him thither; whither, when he came, the worthy Madam Corbet freely offered him a great Houſe of hers, then ſtanding empty at Baſtwick; and there he ſpent all the Winter, in the Company, and with the Aſſiſtance of Mr. Harlackinden, a Friend that loved him at all times. In the Spring he went up to London; where by a Removal from the Lodgings, which he took at his firſt Arrival there, he again very narrowly eſcaped thoſe, to whom ſuch a Shepherd was an Abomination.

The Perils wherein he was continually, from his own Country-men, compell'd him once more to encounter the Perils at Sea; ſo that in July following, he ſailed from Graveſend, in a Bottom too decay'd and feeble indeed, for ſuch a Voyage; but yet well accommodated with the Society of Mr. Wilſon, Mr. Jones, and other Chriſtians, which more ſignificantly made good the Name of the Ship, The Defence. In their firſt Storm, the Veſſel ſprang a Leak, which let in the Water faſter, than both Pumps were able to turn it out; a Leak eighteen Inches long, and an Inch wide: But it was, tho' with much difficulty found and ſtop'd, juſt as they were upon diverting into Ireland for their Safety. Being thus again delivered, they got into New-England, and on Oct. 3. they were ſet aſhore at Boſton; from whence, within a Day or two, his Friends at Cambridge gladly fetched him.

§ 11. Mr. Hooker, with his Congregation at Cambridge, now removing to Hartford, upon Connecticut River, many comfortable Dwellings, and conſiderable Demeſnes, were hereby ſomewhat prepared for Sale to the good People, which Mr. Shepard brought over with him, who were loth to loſe any more of their ſhort Lives, by more tedious Removals. Accordingly, taking up their Station at Cambridge, Mr. Shepard, with ſeveral of his good People, did on the firſt of the enſuing February, in a vaſt Aſſembly, wherein were preſent the Magiſtrates of the Colony, with the Miniſters and Meſſengers of the Neighbouring Churches, keep a Day of Prayer; in the Cloſe of which Day, they made a Confeſſion of their Faith, with a Declaration of what Regenerating Impreſſions the Grace of God had made upon them; and then they entred into their Covenant, whereby they became a Church; to which Mr. Cotton, in the Name of the reſt, gave the Right Hand of Fellowſhip. However, the Ordination of Mr. Shepard, unto the Paſtoral Charge of this Church, was deferred, until another Day, wherein there was more time to go thro' the other Solemnities, proper to ſuch a great Occaſion.

§ 12. Within a Year after the gathering of the Church at Cambridge, and the Ordaining of Mr. Shepard in that Church; the Country was miſerably diſtracted by a Storm of Antinomian and Familiſtical Opinions then raiſed. The Mother Opinion of all the reſt was, That a Chriſtian ſhould not fetch any Evidence of his good State before God, from the ſight of any inherent Qualification in him; or from any Conditional Promiſe made unto ſuch a Qualification. From the Womb of this fruitful Opinion, and from the Countenance hereby given to immediate and unwarranted Revelations, 'tis not eaſie to relate, how many Monſters, worſe than African, aroſe in theſe Regions of America: But a Synod aſſembled at Cambridge, whereof Mr. Shepard was no ſmall part, moſt happily cruſh'd them all. The Vigilancy of Mr. Shepard was bleſſed, not only for the Preſervation of his own Congregation from the Rot of theſe Opinions, but alſo for the Deliverance of all the Flocks, which our Lord had in the Wilderneſs. And it was with a reſpect unto this Vigilancy, and the Enlightning and Powerful Miniſtry of Mr. Shepard, that when the Foundation of a Colledge was to be laid, Cambridge rather than any other place, was pitch'd upon to be the Seat of that happy Seminary: Out of which there proceeded many notable Preachers, who were made ſuch, very much by their ſitting under Mr. Shepard's Miniſtry.

§ 13. It has been a Queſtion of ſome Curioſity, what might be the Diſtemper of Hezekiah, whereof he recovered ſo remarkably, and miraculouſly? Now when I conſider the Chattering, whereto the ſick Prince was brought by his Diſeaſe, and the Cataplaſm which he uſed of things diſcuſſive and emollient, I incline, with Bartholinus, to think, that his Diſtemper might be a Malignant Quinſie, whereof uſually the Sick are either kill'd, or (like Hezekiah) cur'd on the Third Day. Such a Diſtemper arreſted our holy Shepard, when in the Courſe of Nature, and in the Wiſh of good Men, he might have yet lived with us, for much more than Fifteen Years; yea, twice Fiſteen more, would ſcarce have carried him further than the Common Age of Man. Returning home from a Council at Rowly, he fell into a Quinſie, with a Symptomatical Fever, which ſuddenly ſtop'd a Silver Trumpet, from whence the People of God had often heard the joyful Sound. Among other Paſſages uttered by him, when he lay a dying, he addreſſed thoſe that were about him, with theſe words: Oh love the Lord Jeſus very dearly; that little part that I have in him, is no ſmall Comfort to me now. He died, Auguſt 25. 1649. when he was Forty Three Years, and Nine Months old; and left behind him of Three Wives, which he ſucceſſively married, Three Sons, who have ſince been the Shepherds of three ſeveral Churches in this Country.

§ 14. 'Tis a good Saying, Non Annis ſed Factis vivunt mortales. Accordingly, we will over-again meaſure the ſhort Life of Mr. Shepard, by the great Work which he did in it: In all of which, the Motto of Weber was the Deſign of our Shepard, Autori Vitæ Vivendum Deo.

Now beſides the other frequent and conſtant Labours of his Miniſtry, which left their Impreſſions on the Souls of Multitude, where-ever he came, the Preſs has preſerved ſome of his Labours for the ſurviving Generation: And the publiſhed Compoſures of this Laborious Perſon, are of two ſorts; namely, the more Doctrinal, and the more Practical; tho' indeed he was of ſuch a Spirit, as always to gain the Point, of mixing both in the ſame Diſcourſes.

§ 15. Among his Compoſures of the more Doctrinal ſort, the Bell ſeems to be born by his Elaborate and Judicious Treatiſe, entituled, Theſes Sabbaticæ; wherein he hath handled the Morality of the Sabbath, with a degree of Reaſon, Reading, and Religion, which is truly extraordinary. It was his Obſervation, If any State would reduce the People under it, unto all ſort of Superſtition and Impiety, let them erect a Dancing Sabbath; and if the God of this World would have all Profeſſors enjoy a total Immunity from the Law of God, and all manner of Licentiouſneſs allow'd them without Check of Conſcience, let him then make an Every-day Sabbath. And it was an extreme Grief unto his devout Soul, to ſee the extreme Ignorance and Profaneneſs, wherewith many in the Engliſh Nation decried the Sacred Obſervation of the Lord's Day, as a Novelty no older than Perkins, and as the Stratagem of a few old Diſciplinarian Puritans. Wherefore as the moſt Comprehenſive Service to be done for the true Power of Godlineſs, which he ſaw would riſe and fall with the Sabbath, he did in theſe learned Theſes maintain the Morality, and adviſe the Sanctification of that Sacred Reſt. Having thus manifeſted his Concern for the Fourth Commandment, he manifeſted a Concern for the Second alſo; by a Diſcourſe, wherein beſides a more full opening of ſundry Particulars concerning Liturgies, the Power of the Keys, the Matter of the Viſible Church, there is more largely handled the Controverſie concerning the Catholick Viſible Church; tending to clear up the Old Way of Chriſt, in the Churches of New-England. That which inſpired him, with Mr. John Allin of Dedham, to write this Diſcourſe, was eſpecially a two-fold Conſideration, expreſſed among other things, in the Fair Porch of this Book, about the Temple of God. One thing that moved him, was his Deſire of Reformation; whereof he ſays, We freely confeſs, that we think the Reformation of the Church doth not only conſiſt in purging out corrupt Worſhip, and ſetting up the true, but alſo in purging the Churches from ſuch Profaneneſs and Sinfulneſs, as is ſcandalous to the Goſpel, and makes the Lord weary of his own Ordinances.

About the way of attaining which Reformation, he adds, 'Tis true; where there is no Church-Relation, but a People are ready to begin a new Conſtituting of Churches, Reformation is to be ſought in the firſt Conſtitution: This is our Caſe——But where corrupted Churches (ſuch as we conceive the Congregation of England generally to be) are to be Reformed; there we conceive, that ſuch Congregations ſhould be called by able Miniſters unto Repentance for former Evils, and confeſſing and bewailing their Sins, renew a Solemn Covenant with God, to reform themſelves, and to ſubmit unto the Diſcipline of Chriſt. By which means ſuch as refuſe ſo to do, exclude themſelves, and others, by the Severity of Diſcipline ſhould be purged out, if falling into Sin they remain impenitent in the ſame.

Another thing that moved him, was his Regard for New-England, whereof his Words there muſt never be forgotten; and the Reaſon of my tranſcribing them, is, becauſe the Church Hiſtory of my Country, is briefly compriſed in them, ſaith he, 'The Lord knows how many 'Longings and Pantings of Heart, have been in 'many after the Lord Jeſus, to ſee his Goings 'in the Sanctuary, as the one thing their Souls 'deſired and requeſted of him, and that they 'might dwell in his Houſe for ever; the Fruit 'of which Prayers, and Deſires, this Liberty of 'New-England, hath been taken to be, and 'thankfully received of God. Yea, how many 'ſerious Conſultations with one another, and with the faithful Miniſters, and other eminent Servants of Chriſt, have been taken about this Work, is not unknown to ſome; and ſurely all the Perſons, whoſe Hearts the Lord ſtirred up in this Buſineſs, were not raſh, weak-ſpirited, inconſiderate of what they left behind, or of what it was to go into a Wilderneſs. But if we were able to recount the ſingular Workings of Divine Providence, for the bringing on this Work, to what it is come unto, it would ſtop the Mouths of all; whatever many may ſay or think, we believe After-times will admire and adore the Lord herein, when all his Holy Ends, and the Ways he has uſed to bring them about, ſhall appear. Look from one end of the Heaven unto another, Whether the Lord hath aſſayed to do ſuch a Work as this, in any Nation! To carry out a People of his own, from ſo flouriſhing a State, to a Wilderneſs ſo far diſtant, for ſuch Ends, and for ſuch a Work; yea, and in few Years hath done for them, as he hath here done, for his poor deſpiſed People. When we look back and conſider, what a ſtrange Poiſe of Spirit, he hath laid upon many of our Hearts, we cannot but wonder at our ſelves, that ſo many, and ſome ſo weak and tender, with ſuch Cheerfulneſs and conſtant Reſolutions, againſt ſo many Perſwaſions of Friends, and Diſcouragements from the ill Report of this Country, the Straits, Wants, and Trials of God's People in it, yet ſhould leave our Accommodations, and Comforts, forſake our deareſt Relations, Parents, Brethren, Siſters, Chriſtian Friends and Acquaintances; over-look all the Dangers and Difficulties of the vaſt Seas, the Thoughts whereof was a Terror to many; and all this, to go into a Wilderneſs, where we could forecaſt nothing but Care and Temptations, only in hopes of enjoying Chriſt in his Ordinances, in the Fellowſhip of his People. Was this from a ſtupid Senceleſneſs, or deſperate Careleſneſs, what became of us, or ours? Or want of Natural Affections to our dear Country, or neareſt Relations? No ſurely, with what Bowels of Compaſſions to our dear Country; with what Heart-breaking Affections to our dear Relations, and Chriſtian Friends, many of us at leaſt, came away, the Lord is Witneſs. What ſhall we ſay of the ſingular Providence of God, bringing ſo many Ship-loads of his People thro' ſo many Dangers, as upon Eagles Wings, with ſo much Safety from Year to Year? The Fatherly Care of our God, in Feeding and Cloathing ſo many in a Wilderneſs, giving ſuch Healthfulneſs, and great Increaſe of Poſterity? What ſhall we ſay of the Work it ſelf of the Kingdom of Chriſt? And the Form of a Commonwealth erected in a Wilderneſs, and in ſo few Years brought to that State, that ſcarce the like can be ſeen in any of our Engliſh Colonies, in the richeſt places of this America, after many more Years ſtanding? That the Lord hath carried the Spirits of ſo many of his People, through all their toilſome Labours, Wants, Difficulties, Loſſes, with ſuch a Meaſure of Cheerfulneſs and Contentment. But above all, we muſt acknowledge the ſingular Pity and Mercies of our God, that hath done all this, and much more, for a People ſo unworthy, ſo ſinful, that by Murmurings of many, Unfaithfulneſs in Promiſes, Oppreſſions, and other Evils, which are found among us, have ſo diſhonoured his Majeſty, expoſed his Work here to much Scandal and Obloquy, for which we have cauſe for ever to be aſhamed, that the Lord ſhould yet own us, and rather correct us in Mercy, than caſt us off in Diſpleaſure, and ſcatter us in this Wilderneſs; which gives us cauſe to ſay, Who is a God like our God, that pardons Iniquities, and paſſes by the Tranſgreſſions of the Remnant of his Heritage; even becauſe he delighteth in Mercy!

Having almoſt written the Life of Mr. Shepard; yea, and of many other his Fellow Exiles, in tranſcribing this Paſſage, I may now go on to add, That there has been directed now unto the whole Engliſh World, a moſt excellent Letter of Mr. Shepard, about, The Church-Memberſhip of Children, and their Right to Baptiſm. This Letter, like that of the glorious Martyr Philpot, written at the like Time, for the like End, recited in Foxe's Acts and Monuments, was written by him, not three Months before his going to that Lord, whoſe Charge had been, For little Children to be conſidered as belonging to the Kingdom of Heaven: And it was written to one that was then wavering about the Point of Infant-Baptiſm, but hereby recovered and eſtabliſhed. The Son of this Reverend Perſon publiſhed this Letter, with hopes, that it might have a better Effect, than the famous Letter of Elijah had upon Jehoram, which many think written before his Tranſlation, and concealed until a fit Seaſon, afterwards, appeared, for the preſenting of it. But I ſhall conclude the Catalogue of his Doctrinal Tracts, with the mention of another Letter of his, Printed at London in the Year 1645, under the Title of, New England's Lamentation, for Old England's Errors.

§ 16. But Compoſures of a more Practical ſort, were thoſe to the writing whereof he had a more lively Diſpoſition of Mind. And among theſe, to paſs by the Sermon of his, Printed under the Title of, Wine for Goſpel Wantons, or Cautions againſt Spiritual Drunkenneſs. In which Sermon, about as long as fifty Years ago, he uttered his Complaint of this Tenour, Do not we ſee great Unſetledneſs in the Covenant of God, walking with God at Peradventures, and Hanckerings after the Whoredoms of the World, at this Day? And Diviſions and Diſtractions? Nothing done without Diviſion and Contention? Certainly ſomething is amiſs? And to paſs by a Treatiſe of his, Printed under the Title of, Subjection to Chriſt, in all his Ordinances and Appointments, the beſt Means to preſerve our Liberty. To which Treatiſe is annexed another, Concerning Ineffectual Hearing of the Word. There are eſpecially three of his Books, which have been more conſidered. The firſt and leaſt of thoſe Books, is called, The Sincere Convert: Which the Author would commonly call, His Ragged Child: And once, even after its Fourth Edition, wrote unto Mr. Giles Firmin, thus concerning it: That which is call'd, The Sincere Convert: I have not the Book: I once ſaw it. It was a Collection of ſuch Notes in a dark Town in England, which one procuring of me, publiſhed them without my Will, or my Privity. I ſcarce know what it contains, nor do I like to ſee it; conſidering the many Σφάλματα Typographica, moſt abſurd; and the Confeſſion of him that publiſhed it, That it comes out much altered from what was firſt written. The many Injudicious Readers, which that uſeful Book has found, among devout and ſerious People, and the woful Horrors which have thereby been raiſed in many Godly Souls, oblige me to add the Cenſure of Mr. Giles Firmin, whoſe Words in his Real Chriſtian are: ‘In ſhort, as to that Book, for the general part of it, the Book is very ſolid, quick, and ſearching, it cuts very ſharply. It is not a Book for an unſound Heart to delight in: I mean, in thoſe Places where he agrees, both with the Scriptures, and with other able Divines, and of theſe makes uſe; but for the other paſſages which do not agree with either (as there are ſome things in it) I will let them go, as being none of Mr. Shepard's, and not trouble my ſelf with 'em; and wiſh no Chriſtian that is tender and ſincere, to trouble himſelf with them. This I put in, becauſe I hear that Book hath cauſ'd much Trouble in Gracious Chriſtians: Had it been to Chriſtians in Name only, unſound Believers, Hypocrites, I ſhould not have troubled my ſelf about it, for I know it is not for their Tooth. But this Book was followed with a ſecond and larger, called, The Sound Believer; which in a more diſtinct, correct, and moſt judicious Treatiſe of Evangelical Converſion, diſcovers the Work of the Spirit of the Lord Jeſus Chriſt, in reconciling of a Sinner unto God. And, as in the Preface to that Book, he gives that Reaſon for his writing it, ‘I conſidered my weak Body, and my ſhort Time of ſojourning here, and that I ſhall not ſpeak long to Children, Friends or God's precious People; I am ſure not to many in England, to whom I owe almoſt my whole ſelf, and whom I ſhall ſee in this World no more; I have been therefore willing to take the Seaſon, that I might leave ſome part of God's precious Truth on Record, that it might ſpeak (Oh! that it might be to the Heart) among whom I cannot, and when I ſhall not be: So the next Book of his occurring to our Notice, is a Poſthumous one. And that is a Volume in Folio, opening and applying the Parable of the Ten Virgins; and handling the Dangers incident unto the moſt Flouriſhing Churches or Chriſtians; which Book is from the Author's Notes, a Tranſcript of Sermons preached at his Lecture, from June 1696. to May 1640. Whereof the Venerable Names of Greenhil, Calamy, Jackſon, Aſh, Taylor, have ſubſcribed the Teſtimony, That though a Vein of ſerious, ſolid and hearty Piety run through all this Author's Works, yet he hath reſerved the beſt Wine till the laſt. Theſe were the Works of that Man, whoſe Death in the Lord has now carried him to a Reſt from his his Labours.

§ 17. As he was a very Studious Perſon, and a very Lively Preacher; and one who therefore took great Pains in his Preparations, for his publick Labours, which Preparations he would uſually finiſh on Saturday, by two a Clock in the Afternoon; with Reſpect whereunto he once uſed theſe Words, God will curſe that Man's Labours, that lumbers up and down in the World all the Week, and then upon Saturday in the Afternoon goes to his Study; whenas God knows, that Time were little enough to pray in and weep in, and get his Heart into a fit Frame for the Duties of the approaching Sabbath. So the Character of his daily Converſation was A Trembling Walk with God. Now to take true Meaſures of his Converſation, one of the beſt Glaſſes that can be uſed, is the Diary, wherein he did himſelf keep the Remembrances of many Remarkables that paſſed betwixt his God and himſelf; who were indeed A ſufficient Theatre to one another. It would give ſome Inequality to this Part of our Church Hiſtory, if all the Holy Memoirs left in the Private Writings of this Walker with God, ſhould here be Tranſcribed: But I will ſingle out from thence a few Paſſages, which might be more agreeably and profitably expoſed unto the World.

§ 19. How experimentally acquainted he himſelf was with the Practice and Import of the Doctrine wherein he chiefly inſiſted, in his preaching unto others, will be illuſtrated from this moſt Edifying Record in his Diary.

‘April 10. I had many Thoughts which came in, to preſs me to give up my ſelf to Chriſt Jeſus, which was the Deareſt Thing I had: And I ſaw, that if when I gave my ſelf to Chriſt, he would give himſelf to me again, it would be a Wonderful Change; to have the Bottomleſs Fountain of all Good, ‘thus communicated unto me! Thus, Two or Three Days, I was exerciſed about this; and at laſt, (which was the Day wherein I fell ſick on the Sabbath) in my Study I was put to a Double Queſtion; Firſt, Whether Chriſt would take me, if I gave my ſelf to him? Then, Whether I might take him again upon it? And ſo I reſolved to ſeek an Anſwer to both, from God in Meditation. So on the Saturday, April 11. I gave my ſelf to the Lord Jeſus, thus. Firſt, I acknowledged all I was, or had, was his own; as David ſpake of their Offerings, I acknowledged him the Owner of all. Secondly, I reſigned not only my Goods and Eſtate, but my Child, Wife, Church and Self unto the Lord; out of Love, as being the beſt and deareſt things, which I have. Thirdly, I prized it as the Greateſt Mercy, if the Lord will take them; and ſo I deſired the Lord to do it. Fourthly, I deſired him to take all for a Threefold end; to do with me what he would; to love me; to honour himſelf by me, and all mine. Fifthly, Becauſe there is a ſecret Reſervation, that the Lord ſhall do all for the Soul that giveth up it ſelf to the Lord; but 'tis that God may pleaſe my Will and Love me, and if he doth not, then the Heart dieth; hence I gave up my Will alſo, into the Lord's Hands, to do with it what he pleaſe. Sixthly, My many Whoriſh Luſts I alſo reſigned, but that he would take them all away. And Seventhly, That he would keep me alſo from all Sin and Evil. Thus, I gave my ſelf unto the Lord; but then I queſtioned, Will the Lord take me? In anſwer whereto, Firſt, I ſaw that the Lord deſired and commanded me to Give me my Heart. Secondly, I ſaw, that this was pleaſing to him, and the contrary diſpleaſing. Thirdly, I ſaw, that it was fit for him to take me, and to do what he will with me. But then I queſtioned, Will the Lord receive, and do me good everlaſtingly? becauſe I gave up my Friends and the whole Church to the Lord alſo, as I did my ſelf; and will the Lord take all them? For anſwer, Here I ſaw the Great Privilege of it, and the Wiſdom of God in committing ſome Men's Souls to the Care of One Godly Man of a Publick Spirit, becauſe he, like Moſes, commends them, gives them, returns them all to the Lord again; and ſo a World of Good is communicated for his Sake. The Third Queſtion was, But might I take the Lord? And my Anſwer was, If the Lord did apprehend and take me to himſelf, then I might take him, for I had no other to lay hold on.

§ 20. Of what Thoughts and what Frames, he ſometimes had in his Preparations, for the Lord's Table, we will recite but one Expreſſive Meditation.

‘July 10. 1641. On the Evening of this Day, before the Sacrament, I ſaw it my Duty to ſequeſter my ſelf from all other things, for the Lord the next Day —— And now I ſaw my Bleſſedneſs did not lie in Receiving of Good and Comfort from God, but in holding forth the Glory of God, and his Virtues. For 'tis, I ſaw, an Amazing Glorious Object, To ſee God in the Creature! God ſpeak, God act, the Deity not being the Creature, and turned into it; but filling of it, ſhining through it; to be covered with God as with a Cloud, or as a Glaſs-Lanthorn to have his Beams penetrate through it. Nothing is good but God, and I am no further good than as I hold forth God. The Devil overcame Eve to damn her ſelf, by telling her, that ſhe ſhould be like God. Oh! That is a Glorious Thing! And ſhould not I be Holy, and be like him? Moreover, I found my Heart drawn more ſweetly to cloſe with God, thus as my End, and to place my Happineſs therein. Alſo, I ſaw it was my Miſery, to hold forth Sin and Satan and Self in my Courſe. And I ſaw one of theſe two things muſt be done. Now becauſe my Soul wanted Pleaſure, I purpoſed then to hold forth God, and did hope it ſhould be my Pleaſure ſo to do, as it would be my Pain to do otherwiſe.

‘Auguſt 15. I ſaw, on the Sabbath, Four Evils which attend me in my Miniſtry. Firſt, Either the Devil treads me down by Diſcouragement and Shame; from the Senſe of the Meanneſs of what I have provided in private Meditations, and unto this I ſaw alſo an Anſwer; to wit, that every thing ſanctified to do Good, Its Glory is not to be ſeen in it ſelf, but in the Lord's ſanctifying of it: Or, from an Apprehenſion of the Unſavourineſs of Peoples Spirits, or their Unreadineſs to hear in Hot or Cold Times. Secondly, or Careleſneſs poſſeſſes me; ariſing, becauſe I have done well, and been enlarged, and have been reſpected formerly, hence it is no ſuch matter, though I be not always alike; Beſides, I have a Natural Dulneſs and Cloudineſs of Spirit, which does naturally prevail. Thirdly, Infirmities and Weakneſs, as want of Light, want of Life, want of a Spirit of Power to Deliver what I am affected with for Chriſt; and hence I ſaw many Souls not ſet forward nor God felt in my Miniſtry. Fourthly, Want of Succeſs, when I have done my beſt. I ſaw theſe, and that I was to be humbled for theſe. I ſaw alſo many other Sins, and how the Lord might be angry. And this Day, in muſing thus, I ſaw, that when I ſaw God angry, I thought to pacify him by abſtaining from all Sin, for the time to come. But then I remembred, Firſt, that my Righteouſneſs could not ſatisfie, and that this was Reſting on my own Righteouſneſs. Secondly, I ſaw I could not do it. Thirdly, I ſaw Righteouſneſs ready made, and already finiſhed, ſhed, fit only for that purpoſe. And I ſaw that God's afflicting me for Sin, was not that I ſhould go and ſatisfy by reforming, but only be humbled for, and ſeparated from Sin, being reconciled and made Righteous by Faith in Chriſt, which I ſaw a little of that Night. This Day alſo I found my Heart untoward, ſad and heavy, by muſing on the many Evils to come; but I ſaw, if I carried four things in my Mind always, I ſhould be comforted. Firſt, That in my ſelf, I am a dying condemned Wretch, but by Chriſt reconciled and alive. Secondly, In my ſelf and in all Creatures finding Inſufficiency, and no Reſt but God All-ſufficient, and enough to me. Thirdly, Feeble and unable to do any thing my ſelf; but in Chriſt able to do all things. Fourthly, Although I enjoyed all theſe but in part, in this World, yet I ſhould have them all perfectly ſhortly in Heaven; where God will ſhow himſelf fully reconciled, ſufficient and efficient, and aboliſh all Sin, and live in me perfectly.

§ 22. How ſenſible he was of the Leaſt Failings in himſelf, and how deſirous to mend thoſe Failings, may be gathered from the enſuing Brief Meditations.

' Decemb. 1. A ſmall thing troubled me. Hence I ſaw that though the Lord had made me that Night attain that part of Humiliation, that I deſerved nothing but Miſery, yet I fell ſhort in this other part; namely, to ſubmit unto God in any Croſſing Providence, or Commandment; but I had a Spirit ſoon touched and provoked. I ſaw alſo, that the Lord let Sin and Satan prevail there, that I might ſee my Sin and be more humbled by it, and ſo get Strength againſt it.

Again,

' Mar. 19. I ſaid, as Pride was my Sin, ſo Shame ſhould be my Puniſhment. And many Fears I had of Eli's Puniſhment, for not reproving Sin, when I ſaw it, and that ſharply; and here I conſidered, that the Lord may, and doth ſometimes make one Good Man a Terrour and dreadful Example of Outward Miſeries, that all others may fear that be Godly, leſt his Commands ſhould be ſlighted, as he did Eli.

Once more.

' Octob. 10. When I ſaw the Gifts and Honour attending them in another, I began to affect ſuch an Excellency; and I ſaw hereby that uſually in my Miniſtry, I did affect an Excellency, and hence ſet upon the Work: Whereas the Lord hereupon humbled me for this, by letting me ſee this was, A Diabolical Pride; and ſo the Lord made me thankful for ſeeing it, and put me in Mind to watch againſt it.

§ 23. Of how Humble and of how Publick a Spirit he was, we will inform our ſelves, eſpecially from Two Meditations, which he wrote on ſuch Days of Prayer, as he was uſed unto.

The Firſt was this.

' Nov. 3. On a Faſt-Day at Night, in Preparation for the Duty, the Lord made me ſenſible of theſe Sins in the Churches. 1. Ignorance of themſelves; becauſe of ſecret Evils. 2. Of God; becauſe moſt Men were full of Dark and Doubtful Conſciences. 3. Not caring for Chriſt, dearly, only. 4. Neglect of Duties; becauſe of our Place of Security. 5. Standing againſt all Means, becauſe we grow not better. 6. Earthlineſs; becauſe we long not to be with Chriſt. And I ſaw Sin, as my Greateſt Evil, becauſe I ſaw my ſelf was not better than God: I was vile, but he was Good only, whom my Sin did croſs; and I ſaw what cauſe I had to loath my ſelf, and not to ſeek Honour unto my ſelf. Will any deſire his Dunghill to be commended? Will he grieve, if it be not? If he judge ſo indeed of it. So my Heart began to fall off from it; and the Lord alſo gave me ſome Glimpſe of my ſelf, and a good Day and time it was to me.

' On the End of the Faſt, I firſt went unto God, I reſted upon him as ſufficient; Secondly, Waited on him as efficient; and ſaid, Now, Lord, Do for thy Churches and Help in Mercy! In the Beginning of the Day, I began to conſider, Whether all the Country did not fare the worſe for my Sins? I ſaw it was ſo, and this was an humbling Thought to me; and I thought, if every one in particular, thought ſo and was humbled, it would do well. I conſider alſo, That if Repentance turn away Judgments, then, if the Queſtion be, Who they are that bring Judgments? The Anſwer would be, They that think their Sins ſo ſmall as that God is not angry with them at all.

The Second was this.

April 4. Preparing for a Faſt.

' May not I be the Cauſe of the Church's Sorrows, which are Renewed upon us? For, What have the Sheep done?

' I. My Heart has been long lying out from the Lord. The Lord firſt ſent a Terrible Storm at Sea, to awaken me; and the Deliverance from it was ſo ſweet, that I could not but think my Life after that, ſhould be only Heavenly, as being pull'd from an apparent Death to live a New Life. Then, immediately upon this my Child was taken away from me; my Firſt-Born, which made me remember, how bitter it was to croſs the Lord's 'Love. Thirdly, I ſet my Face to New England, where conſidering the Liberties of God's Houſe, I reſolved and thought it fit to be wholly for the Lord, in all manner of Holineſs, at Bed, at Board, every where. Fourthly Then the Lord took my Dear Wife from me, and this made me reſolve to delight no more in Creatures, but in the Lord, and to ſeek him. Fifthly, The Lord then threatned Blindneſs to my Child; and this made God's Will Afflicting ſweet to me, but much more Commanding and Promiſing: And then I could do his Will, and leave thoſe things to himſelf. But Oh! How is my Gold become dim? And how little have I anſwered the Lord! Conſidering my Ship Reſolutions. I have wanted Remembrance, Heart and Strength or Will to do any of theſe things. And therefore, I have not cauſe to blame the Lord; for he has perſwaded my Heart to this; but my own Concupiſcence and vile Nature, which Lord! that I might mourn for! That thou mayſt Reſtore Comforts to me! Apoſtacy from God is grievous, tho' it be in a little Degree; to ſerve Satan without Promiſe! To forſake the Lord againſt Promiſe! What Evil have I found in the Lord? This brings more Diſgrace upon the Lord, than if there had never been any coming to him.

'II. The People committed to me: They are not pitied ſo much nor prayed for, nor viſited, as ought to have been; nor have I ſhewed ſo much Love unto them.

'III. The Family, I have not Edified nor Inſtructed, nor taken all Occaſions of Speech with them.

'IV. The Goſpel, I have preached, has not been ſeen in its Glory; not Believed, not Affecting.

'V. Not ſeeking to Chriſt for Supply; ſo that all hath been Dead Works, and Fruit of Pride, walking daily without Chriſt, and without approving my ſelf unto him. And hence, tho' I do his Work, I don't mind him in it; His Command, His Preſence, nor yet endeavour to grow ſomewhat every Day.

'My not lamenting the Falls of Profeſſors, and the Condition of the Country, who are not indeed the Glory of God in the World, nor the Holy People. Is it not hence, that many Pillars in the Church have fallen, as if the Lord would not beturſt ſuch precious Veſſels to my Care? And hath not the Sorrow lain upon me? And hence Univerſal Mortality? When Hezekiah's Heart was lifted up, then Wrath came not only on him, but on all the reſt:

'And I have now had a long Sickneſs, as if the Lord would delight no more in me to uſe me. Oh! My God, who ſhall be like o thee in pardoning and ſubduing mine Iniquities.

Behold, Reader, the Language of an Holy Soul!

But I will now take my Leave of Mr. Shepard's Memory, with one Diſtick, in the Funeral Elegy, which Mr. Peter Bulkly made on him: A Comprehenſive.

CHAP. VI.

Prudentius.

The LIFE of Mr. PETER PRUDDEN, and ſeveral other Divines, Famous in the Colony of Newhaven.

THAT Greateſt of Peace-Makers, the Son of God, has aſſured us, Bleſſed are the Peace-Makers, for they ſhall be called the Children of God. I am ſure then, 'tis a Bleſſed Child of God, whoſe Name is now before us; (Prudden ſhall we call him? or, Prudent,) who beſides his other Excellent Qualities, was noted for a Singular Faculty to ſweeten, compoſe and qualify Exaſperated Spirits, and ſtop or heal all Contentions. Whence 'twas that his Town of Milford enjoyed Peace with Truth all his Days, notwithſtanding ſome Diſpoſitions to Variance, which afterwards broke forth among them.

God had marvellouſly Bleſſed his Miniſtry in England, unto many about Herefordſhire, and near Wales; from whence when he came into New England, there came therefore many conſiderable Perſons with him.

At their Arrival in this Country, they were ſo mindful of their Buſineſs here, that they gathered Churches, before they had erected Houſes, for the Churches to meet in. There were then Two Famous Churches gathered at New-haven; gathered in Two Days, one following upon t'other; Mr. Davenport's and Mr. Prudden's: And this with one ſingular Circumſtances, That a mighty Barn was the Place, wherein the Duties of that Solemnity were attended. Our Glorious Lord Jeſus Chriſt himſelf being Born in a Stable, and laid in one of thoſe Moveable and Four-ſquar'd Little Veſſels wherein they brought Meat unto the Cattel, it was the more allowable, that a Church, Church, which is the Myſtical Body of that Lord, ſhould thus be born in a Barn. And in this Tranſlation, I behold our Lord, With his Fan in his Hand, purging his Floor, and gathering her Wheat into the Garner.

That holy Man, Mr. Philip Henry, being reproached by his Perſecutors, that his Meeting-place had been a Barn, pleaſantly anſwered, No new thing, to turn a Threſhing-floor into a Temple. So did our Chriſtians at New-haven.

The next Year Mr. Prudden, with his Church, removed unto Milford; where he lived many Years an Example of Piety, Gravity, and boiling Zeal, againſt the growing Evils of the Times.

And tho' he had a numerous Family, yet ſuch was his Diſcretion, that without much Diſtraction, he provided comfortably for them, notwithſtanding the difficult Circumſtances, wherewith an Infant-Plantation was encumbred.

He continued an able and faithful Servant of the Churches, until about the Fifty ſixth Year of his own Age, and the Fifty ſixth of the preſent Age; when his Death was felt by the Colony, as the Fall of a Pillar, which made the whole Fabrick to ſhake.

Like that of Piccart, now let our Prudden, lie under this

But our Pen having flown as far off as the Colony of New-haven, it may not return, without ſome Remarks and Memoirs, of Three other Worthy Divines, that were ſometimes famous in that Colony. The LIFE of Mr. ADAM BLACKMAN.

AMong thoſe Believers who firſt enjoyed the Name of Chriſtians, there were ſeveral famous Teachers, whereof one (Acts 13. 1.) had the Name of Niger. And in the Primitive Churches of New-England alſo, there was among our famous Teachers, a good Man, who wore the ſame Sir name, this was our Mr. Blackman, concerning whom, none but a Romaniſt would have uſed that Rule:

Hic Niger eſt, hunc tu Romane, caveto.

For he was highly eſteemed in the Proteſtant Country, where he ſpent the latter Days of his Life.

He was a uſeful Preacher of the Goſpel, firſt in Leiceſterſhire, then in Derbyſhire: But comming to New-England, from the Storm that began to look black upon him, he was attended with a deſirable Company of the Faithful, who ſaid unto him, Entreat us not to leave you, or to return from following after you: For whither you go, we will go; and your God ſhall be our God.

New-England having received this Holy Man, who notwithſtanding his Name, was for his Holineſs, A Nazarite purer than Snow, whiter than Milk. It was firſt at Guilford, and afterwards at Stratford, that he employ'd his Talents: And if a famous Modern Author be known by the Name of Adamus Adamandus, our Adam Blackman, was by the Affections of his People ſo likewiſe called.

It was his Opinion, that as for our Bodies, thus for our Spirits alſo, Cibus ſimplex eſt Optimus: And accordingly he ſtudied plain Preaching, which was entertained by his People with a profitable Hearing. And as Luther would ſay, He is the ableſt Preacher, Qui pueriliter, Trivialiter, Populariter, ſimpliciſſime docet: So our Hooker, for the ſake of the ſacred and ſolid Simplicity, in the Diſcourſes of this worthy Man, would ſay, If I might have my Choice, I would chooſe to live and die under Mr. Blackman's Miniſtry.

There was a Great Perſon among the Reformers in Germany, who had almoſt the ſame Name with our Blackman; that was Melancthon, and indeed this good Perſon was a Melancthon, among the Reformers of Newhaven; in this happier than he, that his Lot was caſt among a pious People, who did not adminiſter ſo frequent Occaſions as the Germans did for the Complaint, That Old Adam was too hard for his young Name-ſake.

For a Cloſe, I may apply to him the ingenious Epitaph of Beza upon Melancthon.

Cui Niveus toto Regnabat pectore Candor;
Unum cui Cœlum, cura laborque fuit:
Num Rogitus, quâ ſit dictus Ratione Melancthon?
Scilicet Euxinum, quâ Ratione vocant.

[For this is a well known Sea, call'd Euxine, or Harborous, becauſe there are no good Harbors in it.]

CHAP. VIII.

The LIFE of Mr. ABRAHAM PIERSON.

'TIs reported by Pliny, and perhaps 'tis but a Plinyiſm, that there is a Fiſh called Lucerna, whoſe Tongue doth ſhine like a Torch, if it be a Fable, yet let the Tongue of a Miniſter be the Moral of that Fable: Now ſuch an illuminating Tongue, was that of our Pierſon.

He was a Yorkſhire Man, and coming to New-England, he became a Member of the Church at Boſton; but afterwards thus employed, towards the Year 1640. The Inhabitannts of Lyn, ſtraitned at home, looked out for a new Plantation; ſo going to Long-Iſland, they agreed both with the Lord Starling's Agent, and with the Indian Proprietors, for a Situation at the Weſt-end of that Iſland: Where the Dutch gave them ſuch diſturbance, that they deſerted their Place for another at the Eaſt-end of it. Proceeding in their Plantation, by the Acceſſion of near an hundred Families, they called Mr. Pierſon to go thither with them; who with ſeven or eight more of their Company, regularly incorporated themſelves into a Church State before their going: the whole Companyalſo entring at the ſame time, with the Advice of the Government of the Maſſachuſet-Bay, into a Civil Combination, for the maintaining Government among themſelves. Thus was there ſetled a Church at Southampton, under the Paſtoral Charge of this worthy Man; where he did with a laudable Diligence undergo two of the three hard Labors, Docentis and Regentis, to make it become (what Paradiſe was called), An Iſland of the Innocent.

It was afterward found neceſſary for this Church to be divided. Upon which occaſion Mr. Pierſon referring his Caſe to Council, his Removal was directed unto Brainford, over upon the Main, and Mr. Fordham came to ſerve, and to feed that part of the Flock, which was left at Southampton; but where-ever he came, he ſhone.

He left behind him the Character of a pious and prudent Man; and a true Child of Abraham, now ſafely lodged in Sinu-Abraha.

CHAP. IX.

The LIFE of Mr. RICHARD DENTON.

THE Apoſtle deſcribing the falſe Miniſters of thoſe Primitive Times, he calls them, Clouds without Water, carried about of Winds. As for the true Miniſters of our Primitive Times, they were indeed carried about of Winds; tho' not the Winds of ſtrange Doctrines; yet the Winds of Hard Sufferings, did carry them as far as from Europe into America; the Hurricano's of Perſecution, whereon doubtleſs the Prince of the Power of the Air had his Influence, drove the Heavenly Clouds, from one part of that Heaven, the Church, unto another. But they were not Clouds without Water, where they came; they came with Showers of Bleſſing, and rained very gracious Impreſſions upon the Vineyard of the Lord.

Among theſe Clouds was our Pious and Learned Mr. Richard Denton, a Yorkſhire Man, who having watered Halifax in England, with his fruitful Miniſtry, was by a Tempeſt then hurried into New-England, where firſt at Weathersfield, and then at Stamford, his Doctrine dropt as the Rain, his Speech diſtilled as the Dew, as the ſmall Rain upon the tender Herb, and as the Show'rs upon the Graſs.

Tho' he were a little Man, yet he had a great Soul; his well-accompliſhed Mind, in his leſſer Body, was an Iliad in a Nut-ſhell.

I think he was blind of one Eye; nevertheleſs he was not the leaſt among the Seers of our Iſ- rael; he ſaw a very conſiderable Proportion of thoſe things which Eye hath not ſeen.

He was far from Cloudy in his Conceptions and Principles of Divinity; whereof he wrote a Syſtem, entituled, Soliloquia Sacra; ſo acurately, conſidering the Fourfold State of Man, in his, I. Created Purity. II. Contracted Deformity. III. Reſtored Beauty. IV. Cœleſtial Glory. That Judicious Perſons, who have ſeen it, very much lament the Churches being ſo much deprived of it.

At length he got into Heaven beyond Clouds, and ſo beyond Storms; waiting the Return of the Lord Jeſus Chriſt, in the Clouds of Heaven, when he will have his Reward among the Saints.

CHAP. X.

The LIFE of Mr. PETER BULKLY.

Ipſe Aſpectus Boni viri delectat. Sen.

§ 1. IT has been a Matter of ſome Reflection, that among the pretended Succeſſors of Saint Peter, there never was any Pope, that would pretend unto the Name of Peter; but if any of them had been Chriſtened by that Name at the Font, they afterwards changed it, when they came unto the Chair. No doubt, as Raphael Urbine, the famous Painter, being tax'd, for making the Face in the Picture of Peter too Red, replied, He did it on purpoſe, that he might repreſent the Apoſtle Bluſhing in Heaven, to ſee what Succeſſors he had on Earth: So theſe infamous Apoſtates, might bluſh to hear themſelves called Peter, while they are Conſcious unto themſelves, of their being Strangers to all the Vertues of that Great Apoſtle. But the Denomination of Peter, might be with an Everlaſting Agreeableneſs claimed by our eminent Bulkly, who, according to the Spirit and Counſel of Peter, Fed the Flock of God among us, taking the Overſight thereof, not by Conſtraint, but Willingly; not for filthy Lucre, but of a willing Mind.

§ 2. He was deſcended of an Honourable Family, in Bedfordſhire; where for many ſucceſſive Generations, the Names of Edward and Peter, were alternatively worn by the Heirs of the Family. His Father was Edward Bulkly. D D. a faithful Miniſter of the Goſpel; the ſame whom we find making a Supplement unto the laſt Volume of our Books of Martyrs. He was born at Woodhil, (or Odel) in Bedford-ſhire, January 31ſt. 1582.

His Education was anſwerable unto his Original; it was Learned, it was Genteel, and which was the top of all, it was very Pious: At length it made him a Batchellor of Divinity, and a Fellow of Saint John's Colledge in Cambridge: The Colledge whereinto he had been Admitted, about the Sixteenth Year of his Age; and it was while he was but a Junior Batchellor that he was choſen a Fellow.

§ 3. When he came abroad into the World, a good Benefice befel him, added unto the Eſtate of a Gentleman, left him by his Father; whom he ſucceeded in his Miniſtry, at the place of his Nativity: Which one would imagine Temptations enough to keep him out of a Wilderneſs.

Nevertheleſs, the Concern which his renewed Soul had for the pure Worſhip of our Lord Jeſus Chriſt, and for the Planting of Evangelical Churches to exerciſe that Worſhip, cauſed him to leave and ſell all, in hopes of gaining the Pearl of great Price, among thoſe that firſt Peopled New-England, upon thoſe Glorious Ends. It was not long that he continued in Conformity to the Ceremonies of the Church of England; but the good Biſhop of Lincoln connived at his Non-Conformity (as he did at his Fathers), and he lived an unmoleſted Non-Conformiſt, until he had been Three Prentice-ſhips of Years in his Miniſtry. Towards the latter end of this time, his Miniſtry had a notable Succeſs, in the Converſion of many unto God; and this was one occaſion of a latter end for this time. When Sir Nathanael Brent was Arch-Biſhop Laud's General, as Arch-Biſhop Laud was another's, Complaints were made againſt Mr. Bulkly, for his Non-Conformity, and he was therefore Silenced.

§ 4. To New-England he therefore came, in the Year 1635; and there having been for a while, at Cambridge, he carried a good Number of Planters with him, up further into the Woods, where they gathered the Twelfth Church, then formed in the Colony, and call'd the Town by the Name of Concord.

Here he buried a great Eſtate, while he raiſed one ſtill, for almoſt every Perſon whom he employ'd in the Affairs of his Husbandry. He had many, and godly Servants, whom after they had lived with him a fit Number of Years, he ſtill diſmiſſed with beſtowing Farms upon them, and ſo took others after the like manner, to ſucceed them in their Service, and his Kindneſs. Thus he caſt his Bread both upon the Waters, and into the Earth, not expecting the Return of this his Charity to a Religious Plantation, until after many Days.

§ 5. He was a moſt excellent Scholar, a very well-read Perſon, and one, who in his Advice to young Students, gave Demonſtrations, that he knew what would go to make a Scholar. But it being eſſential unto a Scholar, to love a Scholar, ſo did he; and in Token thereof, endowed the Library of Harvard-Colledge, with no ſmall part of his own.

And he was therewithal a moſt exalted Chriſtian; full of thoſe Devotions, which accompany a Converſation in Heaven; eſpecially, ſo an exact a Sabbath-keeper, that if at any time he had been asked, Whether he had ſtrictly kept the Sabbath? He would have replied, Chriſtianus ſum, intermittere non poſſum. And Conſcientious even to a degree of Scrupuloſity. That Scrupuloſity appeared particularly in his avoiding all Novelties of Apparel, and the Cutting of Hair ſo cloſe, that of all the famous Name-ſakes he had in the World, he could have leaſt born the Sir-name of that well-known Author, Petrus Crinitus.

§ 6. It was obſerved, that his Neighbours hardly ever came into his Company, but whatever Buſineſs he had been talking of, he would let fall ſome Holy, Serious, Divine, and Uſeful Sentences upon them, e'er they parted: An Example many ways worthy to be imitated, by every one that is called, A Miniſter of the Goſpel.

In his Miniſtry he was another Farel, Quo Nemo tonuit fortius: He was very Laborious, and becauſe he was through ſome Infirmities of Body, not ſo able to Viſit his Flock, and inſtruct them from Houſe to Houſe, he added unto his other Publick Labours on the Lord's Days, that of conſtant Catechiſing; wherein, after all the Unmarried People had anſwered, all the People of the whole Aſſembly were edified, by his Expoſitions and Applications.

His firſt Sermon was on Rom. 1. 16. I am not aſhamed of the Goſpel of Chriſt. At Odel he preached on part of the Prophecy of Iſaiah, and part of Jonah, and a great part of the Goſpel of Matthew, and of Luke; the Epiſtles to the Philippians, and of Peter and of Jude; beſides many other Scriptures. At Concord he preached over the Illuſtrious Truths, about the Perſon, the Natures, the Offices of Chriſt. [What would he have ſaid, if he had lived unto this Evil Day, when 'tis counted good Advice for a Miniſter of the Goſpel, Not to preach much on the Perſon of Chriſt?] The greateſt part of the Book of Pſalms; the Converſion of Zacheus; Paul's Commiſſion, in Act. 26. 18. His Death found him handling the Commandments; and John 16. 7, 8, 9. He expounded Mr. Perkins his Six Principles, whereto he added a Seventh, and Examined the young People, what they underſtood and remembred of his Expoſition.

Moreover, by a ſort of winning, and yet prudent Familiarity, he drew Perſons of all Ages in his Congregation to come and ſit with him, when he could not go and ſit with them; whereby he had opportunity to do the part of a faithful Paſtor, in conſidering the State of his Flock.

Such was his pious Conduct, that he was had in much Reverence by his People; and when at any time, he was either haſty in ſpeaking to ſuch as were about him, whereto he was diſpoſed by his Bodily Pains, or ſevere in Preaching againſt ſome things, that others thought were no way momentous, whereto the great Exactneſs of his Piety inclined him; yet thoſe little Stingineſſes took not away the Intereſt which he had in their Hearts; they knowing him to be a juſt Man, and an holy, obſerved him.

And the Obſervance which his own People had for him, was alſo paid him from all ſorts of People throughout the Land; but eſpecially from the Miniſters of the Country, who would ſtill addreſs him as a Father, a Prophet, a Counſellor, on all Occaſions.

§ 8. Upon his importunate preſſing a piece of Charity, diſagreeable to the Will of the Ruling Elder, there was occaſioned an unhappy Diſcord in the Church of Concord; which yet was at laſt healed, by their calling in the help of a Council, and the Ruling Elder's Abdication. Of the Temptations which occurr'd on theſe Occaſions, Mr. Bulkly would ſay, He thereby came, 1. To know more of God. 2. To know more of Himſelf. 3. To know more of Men. Peace being thus reſtored, the ſmall things in the beginning of the Church there, increaſed in the Hands of their faithful Bulkly, until he was tranſlated into the Regions, which afford nothing but Concord and Glory; leaving his well-fed Flock in the Wilderneſs, unto the Paſtoral Care of his worthy Son Mr. Edward Bulkly.

§ 9. It is remarked, That a Man's Whole Religion is according to his Acquaintance with the New Covenant. If then, any Perſon would know what Mr. Peter Bulkly was, let him read his Judicious and Savory Treatiſe of the Goſpel Covenant; which has paſſed through ſeveral Editions, with much Acceptance among the People of God. Quickly after his firſt coming into this Country, he preached many Sermons on Zech. 9. 11. The Blood of thy Covenant. The Importunity of his Congregation prevailed with him, to preach this Doctrine of the Covenant over again in his Lectures, and fit it for the Preſs. He did accordingly; and of that Book the well-known Mr. Shepard of Cambridge, has given this Teſtimony. The Church of God is bound to bleſs God, for the holy, judicious, and learned Labours, of this aged, experienced, and precious Servant of Jeſus Chriſt, who hath taken much pains to diſcover, and that not in Words and Allegories, but in the Demonſtration and Evidence of the Spirit, the great Myſtery of Godlineſs wrapt up in the Covenant; and hath now fully opened many knotty Queſtions concerning the ſame, which happily have not been brought ſo full to Light until now; which cannot but be of ſingular and ſeaſonable uſe to prevent Apoſtaſies from the Simplicity of the Covenant and Goſpel of Chriſt.

§ 10. Having offered this particular Account of a Book, which is to be reckoned among the Firſt-born of New England, I may not forbear doing my Country the Service of extracting from it one Paragraph, which we may reckon the dying Charge of a Moſes to an Iſrael in a Wilderneſs.

> ‘ And thou, New-England, which art exalted in Priviledges of the Goſpel, above many other People, know thou the Time of thy Viſitation, and conſider the Great Things the Lord hath done for thee. The Goſpel hath free paſſage in all Places where thou dwelleſt: Oh! that it might be glorified alſo by thee! Thou enjoyeſt many faithful Witneſſes, which have teſtified unto thee, the Goſpel of the Grace of God. Thou haſt many bright Stars ſhining in thy Firmament, to give thee the Knowledge of Salvation from on high, to guide thy Feet in the way of Peace. Be not high-minded, becauſe of thy Priviledges, but fear becauſe of thy danger. The more thou haſt committed unto thee, the more thou muſt account for. No Peoples Account will be heavier than thine, if thou do not walk worthy of the Means of thy Salvation. The Lord looks for more from thee, than from other People, more Zeal for God, more Love to his Truth, more Juſtice and Equity in thy ways: Thou ſhouldeſt be a ſpecial People, an only People, none like thee in all the Earth. Oh! be ſo, in loving the Goſpel, and the Miniſters of it, having them in ſingular Love for their Work's ſake.
> ‘ Glorifie thou the Word of the Lord, which has glorified thee. Take heed, leaſt for neglect of either, God remove thy Candleſtick out of the midſt of thee; leſt being now, as a City upon an Hill, which many ſeek unto, thou be left like a Beacon upon the top of a Mountain, deſolate and forſaken. If we walk unworthy of the Goſpel brought unto us, the greater our Mercy hath been, in the enjoying of it, the greater will our Judgment be for the Contempt.

§ 11. His firſt Wife was the Daughter of Mr. Thomas Allen, of Goldington: A moſt vertuous Gentlewoman, whoſe Nephew was the Lord Mayor of London, Sir Thomas Allen. By her he had nine Sons, and two Daughters. After her Death, he lived eight Years a Widdower, and then married a vertuous Daughter of Sir Richard Chitwood; by whom he had three Sons, and one Daughter.

Age at length creeping on him, he grew much afraid of out-living his Work; and his Fear he thus expreſſed, in a ſhort Epigram, compoſed March 25. 1657.

Pigra ſenectutis jam venit inutilis ætas,
Nil aliud nunc ſum quàm ferè pondus iners.
Da tamen, Alme Deus, dum vivam, vivere laudi
Æternùm ſancti Nomines uſque Tui.
Ne vivam (moriar potius!) nil utile Agendo;
Finiat opto magis, mors properata Dies.
Vel doceam in Sancto Cœtu tua verba ſalutis,
Cæleſtive canam Cantica ſacra Choro.
Seu vivam, moriarve, tuus ſim, Chriſte, quod uni
Debita Vita mea eſt, debita morſque tibi.

He was ill, as well as old, when he writ theſe Verſes; but God granted him his Deſire. He recovered, and preached near two Years after this, and then expired, March 9. 165$\frac{8}{9}$, in the Seventy ſeventh Year of his Age.

§ 12. The Epigram newly mentioned, invites me to remember, that he had a competently good Stroke at Latin Poetry; and even in his Old Age, affected ſometimes to improve it. Many of his Compoſure are yet in our Hands. One was written on his Birth-Day, June 31ſt, 1654.

Ultimus iſte Dies Menſes, mihi primus habetur;
Quo cœpi lucem cernere primus erat.
Septuaginta duos Annos exindè peregi.
Atque tot Annorum eſt Ultimus iſte Dies.
Præterito Veteri jam nunc novus incipit Annus
O utinam mihi ſit mens nova, vita nova.

Another of them was written on an Earthquake, Oct. 29. 1653.

Ecce Dei nutu Pellus pavefacta tremiſcit,
Terra Tremens mota eſt ſedibus ipſa ſuis,
Nutant Fulcra Orbis, mundi compago ſoluta eſt;
Ex vultu frati contremit ille Dei.
Contremuit tellus, imis concuſſa Cavernis,
Ponderibus quanquam ſit gravis illa ſuis.
Evomit ore putres magno cum murmure ventos,
Quos in viſceribus clauſerat ante ſuis.
Ipſa tremit Tellus ſcelerum gravitate virorum,
Sub ſceleris noſtri pondere Terra tremit.
O nos quam duri! Sunt ferrea pectora nobis
Non etenim gemimus cum gemit omne ſolum.
Quis te non metuit, metuit quem Fabrica mundi
Quemque timent cæli, terraque tota tremit.
Motibus à Tantis nunc tandem terra quieſcat,
Sed ceſſent potius crimina noſtra precor.

The LIFE of Mr. RALPH PARTRIDGE.

WHen David was driven from his Friends into the Wilderneſs, he made this Pathetical Repreſentation of his Condition, 'Twas as when one doth hunt a Partridge in the Mountains. Among the many worthy Perſons who were perſecuted into an American Wilderneſs, for their Fidelity to the Eccleſiaſtical Kingdom of our true David, there was one that bore the Name, as well as the State, of an hunted Partridge. What befel him, was, as Bede ſaith of what was done by Fœlix, Juxta nominis ſui Sacramentum.

This was Mr. Ralph Partridge, who for no Fault but the Delicacy of his good Spirit, being diſtreſs'd by the Eccleſiaſtical Setters, had no Defence, neither of Beak, nor Claw, but a Flight over the Ocean.

The Place where he took Covert, was the Colony of Plymouth, and the Town of Duxbury in that Colony.

This Partridge had not only the Innocency of the Dove, conſpicuous in his blameleſs and pious Life, which made him very acceptable in his Converſation; but alſo the Loftineſs of an Eagle, in the great Soar of his intellectual Abilities. There are ſome Interpreters, who underſtanding Church Officers by the living Creatures, in the Fourth Chapter of the Apocalypſe, will have the Teacher to be intended by the Eagle there, for his quick Inſight into remote and hidden things. The Church of Duxbury had ſuch an Eagle in their Partridge, when they enjoy'd ſuch a Teacher.

By the ſame Token, when the Platform of Church-Diſcipline was to be compos'd, the Synod at Cambridge appointed three Perſons to draw up each of them, A Model of Church-Government, according to the Word of God, unto the end, that out of thoſe, the Synod might form what ſhould be found moſt agreeable; which three Perſons were Mr. Cotton, and Mr. Mather, and Mr. Partridge. So that in the Opinion of that Reverend Aſſembly, this Perſon did not come far behind the firſt three, for ſome of his Accompliſhments.

After he had been Forty Years a faithful and painful Preacher of the Goſpel, rarely, if ever, in all that while interrupted in his Work, by any Bodily Sickneſs, he dy'd in a good Old Age about the Year 1658.

There was one ſingular Inſtance of a weaned Spirit, whereby he ſignalized himſelf unto the Churches of God. That was this: There was a time, when moſt of the Miniſters in the Colony of Plymouth, left the Colony, upon the Diſcouragement which the want of a competent Maintenance among the needy and froward Inhabitants, gave unto them. Nevertheleſs Mr. Partridge was, notwithſtanding the Paucity and the Poverty of his Congregation, ſo afraid of being any thing that look'd like a Bird wandring from his Neſt, that he remained with his poor People, till he took Wing to become a Bird of Paradiſe, along with the winged Seraphim of Heaven.

Pſaltes. The LIFE of Mr. HENRY DUNSTER.

NOtwithſtanding the Veneration which we pay to the Names and Works of thoſe Reverend Men, whom we call the Fathers, yet even the Roman Catholicks themſelves confeſs, that thoſe Fathers were not infallible. Andradius, among others, in his Defence of the Council of Trent, has this paſſage, There can be nothing deviſed more ſuperſtitious, than to count all things delivered by the Fathers, Divine Oracles. And indeed, it is plain enough, that thoſe excellent Men, were not without Errors and Frailties, of which, I hope, 'twill not be the part of a Cham to take ſome little Notice. Thus Jerom had his Erroneous Opinion of Peter's being unjuſtly reprehended; and was fearfully aſleep in the other matters, wherein he oppoſed Vigilantius. Auguſtin was for admitting the Infants of Chriſtians unto the Lord's Supper: And alas! How much of Babylon is there in his beſt Book, De Civitate Dei. Hilary deny'd the Soul Sorrows of our Lord in his Paſſion, if you will believe the Report of Bellarmine. Clemens Alexandrinus affirm'd, That our Lord neither Eat nor Drank from the Neceſſities of Human Life; and that he and his Apoſtles after their Death, preached unto the Damned in Hell, of whom there were many converted. Origen taught many things contrary unto the true Faith, and frequently confounded the Scriptures with Falſe Expoſitions. Tertullian fell into Montaniſm, and forbad all ſecond Marriages. How little Agreement was there between Epiphanius and Chryſoſtom, Irenæus and Victor, Cornelius and Cyprian? And indeed, that I may draw near to my preſent purpoſe, the Erroneous Opinion of Rebaptiſm in Cyprian, is well known to the World.

Wherefore it may not be wondred at, if among the firſt Fathers of New-England, there were ſome things, not altogether ſo agreeable to the Principles, whereupon the Country was in the main Eſtabliſhed. But among thoſe of our Fathers, who differ'd ſomewhat from his Brethren, was that Learned and Worthy Man Mr. Henry Dunſter.

He was the Preſident of our Harvard College in Cambridge, and an able Man: [As we may give ſome Account, when the Hiſtory of that College comes to be offered.]

But wonderfully falling into the Errors of Antipædobaptiſm, the Overſeers of the College became ſollicitous, that the Students there might not be unawares enſnared in the Errors of their Preſident. Wherefore they laboured with an extreme Agony, either to reſcue the Good Man from his own Miſtake; or to Reſtrain him from impoſing them upon The Hope of the Flock, of both which, finding themſelves to Deſpair, they did as quietly as they could, procure his Removal, and provide him a Succeſſor, in Mr. Charles Chauncey.

He was a very good Hebrician, and for that Cauſe, he bore a great Part in the Metrical Verſion of the Pſalms, now uſed in our Churches. But after ſome ſhort Retirement and Seceſſion from all Publick Buſineſs, at Scituate in the Year 1659. he went thither, where he bears his part in Everlaſting and Cæleſtial Hallelujahs. It was juſtly counted an Inſtance of an Excellent Spirit, in Margaret Meering; That tho' ſhe had been excommunicated by the Congregation of Proteſtants, whereof Mr. Rough was Paſtor, and ſhe ſeem'd to have hard Meaſure alſo in her Excommunication; yet when Mr. Rough was impriſon'd for the Truth, ſhe was very ſerviceable to him, and at length ſuffer'd Martyrdom for the Truth with him. Something that was not altogether unlike this Excellent Spirit was inſtanced by our Dunſter. For, he died in ſuch Harmony of Affection with the Good Men, who had been the Authors of his Removal from Cambridge, that he, by his Will, ordered his Body to be carried unto Cambridge for its Burial, and bequeathed Legacies to thoſe very Perſons.

Now I know not where, better than here, to inſert that Article of our Church-Hiſtory, which concerns our Metrical Tranſlation of the PSALMS now ſung in our Churches.

About the Year 1639. the New-Engliſh Reformers, conſidering that their Churches enjoy'd the other Ordinances of Heaven in their Scriptural Purity, were willing that the Ordinance of The Singing of Pſalms, as ſhould be reſtored among them, unto a Share in that Purity. Tho' they bleſſed God for the Religious Endeavours of them who tranſlated the Pſalms into the Meetre uſually annex'd at the End of the Bible, yet they beheld in the Tranſlation ſo many Detractions from, Additions to, and Variations of, not only the Text, but the very Senſe of the Pſalmiſt, that it was an Offence unto them. Reſolving then upon a New Tranſlation, the chief Divines in the Country, took each of them a Portion to be Tranſlated: Among whom were Mr. Welds and Mr. Eliot of Roxbury, and Mr. Mather of Dorcheſter. Theſe, like the reſt, were of ſo different a Genius for their Poetry, that Mr. Shepard of Cambridge, on the Occaſion addreſſed them to this Purpoſe.

You Roxb'ry Poets, keep clear of the Crime,
Of miſſing to give us very good Rhime.
And you of Dorcheſter, your Verſes lengthen,
But with the Texts own Words, you will them
ſtrengthen.

The Pſalms thus turn'd into Meetre were Printed at Cambridge, in the Year 1640. But afterwards, it was thought, that a little more of Art was to be employ'd upon them: And for that Cauſe, they were committed unto Mr. Dunſter, who Reviſed and Refined this Tranſlation; and (with ſome Aſſiſtance from one Mr. Richard Lyon, who being ſent over by Sir Henry Mildmay, as an Attendant unto his Son, then a Student in Harvard-Colledge, now reſided in Mr. Dunſter's Houſe:) he brought it into the Condition wherein our Churches ever ſince have uſed it.

Now, tho' I heartily join with thoſe Gentlemen, who wiſh that the Poetry hereof were mended; yet I muſt confeſs, That the Pſalms have never yet ſeen a Tranſlation, that I know of, nearer to the Hebrew Original: And I am willing to receive the Excuſe which our Tranſlators themſelves do offer us, when they ſay; If the Verſes are not always ſo elegant, as ſome deſire or expect, let them conſider, That God's Altar needs not our Poliſhings; we have reſpected rather a plain Tranſlation, than to ſmooth our Verſes with the Sweetneſs of any Paraphraſe. We have attended Conſcience rather than Elegance, Fidelity rather than Ingenuity; that ſo we may ſing in Zion the Lords Songs of Praiſe according unto his own Will, until he bid us enter into our Maſters Joy, to ſing Eternal Hallelujahs.

Reader, When the Reformation in France began, Clement Marot, and Theodore Beza, turn'd the Pſalms into French Meetre; and Lewis Guadimel ſet Melodious Tunes unto them. The Singing hereof charm'd the Souls of Court and City, Town and Country. They were ſung in the Lovre it ſelf, as well as in the Proteſtant Churches: Ladies, Nobles, Princes, yea, King Henry himſelf ſang them. This one thing mightily contributed unto the Downfal of Popery, and the Progreſs of the Goſpel. All Ranks of Men practis'd it; a Gentleman of the Reformed Religion, would not eat a Meal without it. The Popiſh Clergy raging hereat, the Cardinal of Lorrain got the Profane and Obſcene Odes of the Pagan Poets to be turn'd into French, and ſang at the Court: And the Divine Pſalms were thus baniſhed from that Wicked Court.

Behold, the Reformation purſued in the Churches of New England, by the Pſalms in a New Meetre: God grant the Reformation may never be loſt, while the Pſalms are ſung in our Churches.

But in this Matter, Mr. Dunſter is to be acknowledged. And if unto the Chriſtian, while ſinging of Pſalms on Earth, Chryſoſtom could well ſay, Μετ' Ἀγγέλων ᾄδεις, μετ' Ἀγγέλων ὑμνεῖς, Thou art in a Conſort with Angels! How much more may that Now be ſaid of our Dunſter?

From the Epitaph of Henricus Rentzius, we will now furniſh our Henry Dunſter with an

The LIFE of Mr. EZEKIEL ROGERS.

Melc. Adam. in Vita Hatteri.

§ 1. IT is among the Greater Prophets of Iſrael, that we find an Ezekiel; who had in his very Name The Fortitude of God. And it is not among the ſmaller Prophets of New-England, that we have alſo ſeen an Ezekiel; one inſpired with a Divine Fortitude, for the Work of a Witneſs propheſying in the Sackcloth of a Wilderneſs. This was our famous Ezekiel Rogers, of whom we have more to ſay, than barely that he was born in the Year 1590. and that he died in the Year 1660.

§ 2. His Father was Mr. Richard Rogers of Weathersfield in England, the well-known Author of the Book, that is known by the Name of The Seven Treatiſes. Of that Richard we will content our ſelves with one pithy Paſſage, mentioned by his Grandſon Mr. William Jenkyns, in his Expoſition upon Jude, 'That 'Bleſſed Saint, ſaith he, was another Enoch in 'his Age; a Man whoſe walking with God ap'peared by that Incomparable Directory of a 'Chriſtian Life, called The Seven Treatiſes, 'woven out of Scripture, and his own experi'mental Practice; he would ſometimes ſay, 'That he ſhould be ſorry, if every Day were 'not to him as his laſt Day. It is his Ezekiel Rogers, whereof we are now to give an Account. The early Sparklings of Wit, Judgment and Learning, in him, gave his Father no little Satiſfaction, and Expectation of his Proficiency; and at Thirteen Years of Age made him capable of Preferment in the Univerſity; where he proceeded Maſter of Arts at the Age of Twenty. Removing thence to be Chaplain in a Family, famous for both Religion and Civility, namely the Family of Sir Francis Barrington at Hatfield Broad-Oak in Eſſex, he there had opportunity not only to do Good, by his profitable Preaching, but alſo to get Good, by his Converſation with Perſons of Honour, who continually reſorted thither, and he knew and us'd his opportunity to the utmoſt.

§ 3. Both in Praying and Preaching, he had a very notable Faculty; 'twas accompanied with Strains of Oratory, which made his Miniſtry very acceptable. Hence, after Five or Six Years Reſidence in this Worſhipful Family, Sir Francis beſtowed upon him the Benefice of Rowly in Yorkſhire; in hopes, that his more lively Miniſtry might be particularly ſucceſsful in Awakening thoſe drowſy Corners of the North: And accordingly the Church there, ſtanding in the Center of many Villages, there was now a great Reſort unto the Service therein performed.

§ 4. Neverthleſs Mr. Rogers had much Uneaſineſs in his Mind about his own Experience of thoſe Truths which he preached unto others; he feared, that notwithſtanding his pathetical Expreſſions, wherewith his Hearers were affected, he was himſelf, in his own Soul, a Stranger to that Faith, and Repentance, and Converſion, which he preſſed upon them. This Conſideration very much perplexed him; and his Perplexity was the greater, becauſe he could not hear of any Experienced Miniſter in thoſe

Parts of the Kingdom, to whom he might utter the Trouble that was upon him. At laſt, hoping that either from his Brother of Weathersfield, or his Coſin of Dedham, he might receive ſome Satisfaction, he took a Journey into Eſſex on purpoſe to be by them reſolved of his Doubts. His Deſign was to have came at his famous Kinſman before his Lecture began; but miſſing of that, he got into the Aſſembly before the Beginning of the Sermon; where he found that by the ſingular Providence of God, his Doubts were as punctually and exactly reſolved, as if the excellent Preacher had been acquainted with his Doubts beforehand.

§ 5. Being now ſatisfied of his own Effectual Vocation, he went on in his Miniſtry with a very ſignal Bleſſing of Heaven upon it, unto the Effectual Vocation of many more: His Miniſtry was much frequented, and remarkably ſucceſsful. In the Exerciſe whereof, he once had opportunity to preach in the ſtately Minſter of York, on a publick Occaſion, which he ſerved and ſuited notably. Dr. Matthews was then the Arch-Biſhop of York, who permitted the uſe of thoſe Lectures, which Arch-Biſhop Grindal had erected; whereby the Light of the Goſpel was marvellouſly diffuſed unto many Places that ſat in the Region and the Shadow of Death. All the pious Miniſters in ſuch a Precinct, had a Meeting once a Month, in ſome noted Place, when and where ſeveral of them did uſe to preach one after another; beginning and concluding the whole Exerciſe with Prayer. Mr. Rogers bore his part in theſe Lectures, as long as Dr. Matthews lived; from one of which, an Accuſer of the Brethren, went once unto the Arch-Biſhop with this Accuſation, That one of the Miniſters had made his Petition in his Prayer, May the Almighty ſhut Heaven againſt the Arch-Biſhop's Grace; whereat the Arch-Biſhop inſtead of being offended, as the Pick-thankly Reporter hoped he would have been, fell a laughing heartily and anſwered, Thoſe Good Men know well enough, that if I were gone to Heaven, their Exerciſes would ſoon be put down. And it came to paſs accordingly!

§ 6. In Deliverying the Word of God, he would ſometimes go beyond the Strength, which God had given him; for though he had a Lively Spirit, yet he had a Crazy Body; which put him upon ſtudying Phyſick, wherein he attained unto a Skill conſiderable. But the worſt was this, That riding far from home, ſome violent Motion uſed by him in ordering of his Horſe, broke a Vein within him; whereupon he betook himſelf to his Chamber, and there kept private, that his Friends might not perſecute him, with any of their Unſeaſonable Kindneſs. But in two Month's time, he obtained a Cure, ſo that he returned unto his Family and his Employment: God would not ſuffer that Mouth to be ſtopped, which had ſo many Teſtimonies to bear ſtill for his Truths and Ways!

§ 7. At laſt, the Severity wherewith Subſcription was then urged, put a Period unto the Twenty Years publick Miniſtry of our Uſeful Rogers although the Man, who ſuſpended him, ſhew'd him ſo much Reſpect, as to let him enjoy the Profits of his Living, two Years after the Suſpenſion, and let him alſo put in another, as good as he could get. He employed one Mr Biſhop to ſupply his Place in the Miniſtry, from which a Biſhop had confined him; nevertheleſs this good Man alſo was quickly ſilenced, becauſe he would not in publick read the Cenſure which was paſſed upon Mr. Rogers.

§ 8. Many prudent Men in thoſe times, foreſeeing the Storms that were likely in a few Years to break upon the Engliſh Nation, did propoſe New England for their Hiding-place. And of theſe, our Mr. Rogers was one, who had been accompanied by Sir William Conſtable and Sir Matthew Boynton alſo in his Voyage hither, if ſome ſingular Providences had not hindred them. Hither did the Good Hand of God bring him, with many of his Yorkſhire Friends, in the Year 1638. Ships having been by his Diſcretion and Influence brought from London unto Hull, to take in the Paſſengers. Arriving at New England, he was urged very much to ſettle with his Yorkſhire Folks at New-Haven; but in Conſideration of the Dependance, that ſeveral Perſons of Quality had on him to chuſe a meet Place for their Entertainment in this Wilderneſs, when they ſhould come hither after him, he was adviſed rather to another Place, which he was profered very near his Reverend Kinſman, Mr. Nathanael Rogers of Ipſwich. The Towns of Ipſwich and Newberry were willing, on eaſy Terms, to part with much of their Land, that they might admit a Third Plantation in the middle between them; which was a Great Advantage to Mr. Ezekiel Rogers; who called the Town Rowly, and continued in it about the ſame Number of Years, that he had ſpent in that Rowly, from whence he came on the other ſide of the Atlantic Ocean.

§ 9. About five Years after his coming to New England, he was choſen to preach at the Court of Election at Boſton; wherein though the Occaſion and the Auditory were Great, yet he ſhew'd his Abilities to be Greater; inſomuch, that he became famous through the whole Country. And what Reſpect all the Churches abroad paid him, he much more found in his own Church at Home; where he was exceedingly ſucceſsful, and approved in his Miniſtry, in which the Points of Regeneration and Union with the Lord Jeſus Chriſt by Faith, were thoſe whereon he moſt inſiſted.

In the Management of thoſe Points, he had a notable Faculty at penetrating into the Souls of his Hearers, and manifeſting the very Secrets of their Hearts. His Prayers and Sermons would make ſuch lively Repreſentations of the Thoughts then working in the Minds of his People, that it would amaze them to ſee their own Condition ſo exactly repreſented. And his Occaſional Diſcourſes with his People; eſpecially with the young ones among them; and moſt of all, with ſuch as had been, by their Deceaſed Parents, recommended unto his watchful Care; were marvellouſly profitable. He was a Tree of Knowledge, but ſo laden with Fruit, that he ſtoopt for the very Children to pick off the Apples ready to drop into their Mouths. Sometimes they would come to his Houſe, a Dozen in an Evening; and calling them up into his Study, one by one, he would examine them, How they walked with God? How they ſpent their Time? What good Books they read? Whether they pray'd without ceaſing? And he would therewithal admoniſh them to take heed of ſuch Temptations and Corruptions, as he thought moſt endangered them. And if any Differences had fallen out amongſt his People, he would forthwith ſend for them, to lay before him the Reaſon of their Differences; and ſuch was his Intereſt in them, that he uſually heal'd and ſtopt all their little Contentions, before they could break out into any open Flames.

§ 10. After Ten or Twelve Years moſt proſperous Attendance on his Miniſtry in Rowly, ſome unhappy Griefs befel him, which were thus occaſioned. It was thought pity, that ſo Great an Ability, as that wherewith Mr. Rogers was Talented, ſhould be confined into ſo ſmall an Auditory, as that whereto his Lord's Day Labours were confined; and he was perſwaded therefore to ſet up a Lecture, once in a Fortnight, whereto the Inhabitants of other Towns reſorted, with no ſmall Satisfaction. A moſt Excellent Young Man was, upon this Increaſe of his Labours, obtained for his Aſſiſtent: But through the Devices of Satan, there was raiſed a Jealouſy in the Hearts of many among the People, that their Old Paſtor was not Real and Forward enough, in proſecuting the Settlement of that Aſſiſtent; and this Jealouſy broke forth into almoſt unaccountable Diſſatisfactions between him and them; which though they were afterwards cured, yet the Cure was in ſome Regards too Palliative.

§ 11. The Reſt of this Good Man's Time in the World was Winter; he ſaw more Nights than Days, and in Viciſſitudes of Affliction, The Clouds returning after the Rain. He buried his Firſt Wife, and all the Children he had by that Wife. He then married a Virgin Daughter of the well-known Mr. John Wilſon, in hopes of Iſſue by her; but God alſo took her away, with the Child ſhe had conceived by him.

After this, he married once more a Perſon, in Years agreeable to him; but that very Night a Fire burnt his Dwelling-Houſe to the Ground, with all the Goods that he had under his Roof. Having Rebuilt his Houſe, he received a Fall from his Horſe, which gave to his Right Arm ſuch a Bruiſe, as made it ever after uſeleſs unto him; upon which Account he was now put upon Learning to Write with his Left Hand.

—Pollebat mira Dexteritate tamen.—

Thus having done the Will of God, he was put upon further Trial of his Patience! But there was this Comfortable in his Trial, that the Good Spirit of God enabled him to bear his Croſſes chearfully, and Rejoice in his Tribulations.

§ 12. The Natural Conſtitution of his Body was but Feeble and Crazy: Nevertheleſs, by a Prudent Attendance to the Rules of Health, his Life was lengthened out conſiderably: But at laſt a Lingring Sickneſs ended his Days, Jan. 23. 1660. in the Seventieth Year of his Age. His Books wherewith he had Recruited his Library, after the Fire, which conſumed the good Library, that he had brought out of England, he beſtowed upon Harvard College.

His Lands, the greateſt part of them, with his Houſe, he gave to the Town and Church of Rowly.

§ 13. Becauſe 'twill give ſome Illuſtration unto our Church Hiſtory, as well as notably deſcribe the Excellent and Exemplary Spirit of this Good Man, and it hath been ſometimes noted, Optima Hiſtoria, eſt Hiſtoria Epiſtolaris; I will here inſert one of his Letters, written (with his Left Hand) unto a Worthy Miniſter in Charleſtown, the 6th of the 12th Month, 1657.

Dear Brother,

‘THough I have now done my Errand in the other Paper, yet methinks, I am not ſatisfied to leave you ſo ſuddenly, ſo barely. Let us hear from you, I pray you; How you do. Doth your Miniſtry go on comfortably? Find you Fruit of your Labours? Are New Converts brought in? Do your Children and Family grow more Godly? I find greateſt Trouble and Grief about the Riſing Generation. Young People are little ſtirred here; but they ſtrengthen one another in Evil, by Example, by Counſel. Much a do I have with my own Family; hard to get a Servant that is Glad of Catechiſing, or Family-Duties: I had a rare Bleſſing of Servants in Yorkſhire; and thoſe that I brought over were a Bleſſing: But the Young Brood doth much afflict me. Even the Children of the Godly here, and elſewhere, make a woful Proof. So that, I tremble to think, what will become of this Glorious Work that we have begun, when the Ancient ſhall be gathered unto their Fathers. I fear Grace and Bleſſing will die with them, if the Lord do not alſo ſhow ſome Signs of Diſpleaſure, even in our Days. ——— We grow Worldly every where; methinks I ſee little Godlineſs, but all in a Hurry about the World; every one for himſelf, little Care of Publick or Common Good.

‘It hath been God's way, not to ſend ſweeping Judgments, when the Chief Magiſtrates are Godly and grow more ſo. I beſeech all the Bay-Miniſters, to call earneſtly upon Magiſtrates (that are often among them) tell them, That their Godlineſs will be our Protection: If they fail, I ſhall fear ſome ſweeping Judgment ſhortly. The Clouds ſeems to be gathering.

‘I am haſtning Home, and grown very Aſthmatical, and Short-breathed. Oh! that I might ſee ſome Signs of Good to the Generations following, to ſend me away Rejoicing! Thus I could weary you and my ſelf, and my Left Hand; but I break off ſuddenly. O, Good Brother, I thank God, I am near Home; and you too are not far. Oh! the Weight of Glory, that is ready waiting for us, God's poor Exiles! We ſhall ſit next to the Martyrs and Confeſſors. O, the Embraces wherewith Chriſt will embrace us! Cheer up your Spirits in the Thoughts thereof; and let us be zealous for our God and Chriſt, and make a Concluſion. Now the Lord bring us well thro' our Poor Pilgrimage.

Your Affectionate Brother,

Ez. Rogers.

Eulogius. The LIFE of Mr. NATHANAEL ROGERS.

In JESU mea Vita meo, mea Clauſula Vitæ
Eſt, & in hoc JESU Vita perennis erit.

§1. IT is a Reflection, carrying in it ſomewhat of Curioſity; that as in the Old Teſtament, God ſaw the Firſt Sinners under a Tree, ſo in the New Teſtament, Chriſt ſaw one of the Firſt Believers under a Tree, with a particular Obſervation. The Sinner hid himſelf among the Trees of the Garden, aſſiſted with Fig-Leaves, but it was a falſe Covert and Shelter whereto he truſted; the moſt High diſcovered him. The Believer alſo hid himſelf under a Fig-Tree, where nevertheleſs, the Shady Leaves hindred not our Lord from ſeeing of him. The Sinner when he was diſcovered, expreſſed his Fear, ſaying, I heard thy Voice, and I was afraid. The Believer ſeen by our Lord, expreſſed his Faith, ſaying, Maſter, Thou art the Son of God. The Name of this Believer was Nathanael, At the Beginning of the Law under the Old Teſtament, you have Nature in an Adam under a Tree; at the Beginning of the Goſpel, under the New Teſtament, you have Grace under a Tree in a Nathanael. Truly, at the Beginning of New-England alſo, among the Firſt Believers, that formed a Church for our God in the Country, there was a Famous Nathanael, who retired into theſe American Woods, that he might ſerve the King of Iſrael: This was our Nathanael Rogers. One of the Firſt Engliſh Arch-biſhops aſſumed the Name of Deus dedit, and the Hiſtorian ſays, he anſwered the Name that he aſſumed. Our Nathanael was not in the Rank of Arch-biſhops; but as was his Name, A GIFT OF GOD, ſo was he!

§ 2. Cornelius Tacitus, who is by the Great Budæus called, The Wickedeſt of all Writers, reports of the Jews, That they adored an Aſs's Head; Becauſe by a Direction from a Company of Aſſes, errorem ſitimque depeclerant; and this Report, received by him from a Railing Egyptian, became ſo received, that no Defence againſt it would be allowed. That Excellent Company of Divines, which led the People of God, unto the ſweet Waters of his Inſtitutions, in the Wilderneſs of New-England, whereinto they were driven, have been eſteemed no better than a Company of Aſſes, by the Romiſhly affected Writers of this Age. But thoſe Heads, which are juſtly admired (tho' not adored) among that People, had more of Angels, than of Aſſes in them: The Engliſh Nation had few better Chriſtians than moſt, and it had not many better Scholars than ſome, who then retired into theſe Ends of the Earth. Now among all thoſe Great Men who ſubmitted themſelves unto all the Littleneſſes of a Wilderneſs, there is a very high Rank to be aſſigned unto one, who is now to be deſcribed.

He was the Second Son of that famous Man, Mr. John Rogers of Dedham; and born while his Father was Miniſter of Haveril, about the Year 1598. He was educated at the Grammar School in Dedham, till he was near Fourteen Years old, and then he was admitted into Emanuel College in Cambridge. There he became a remarkable and incomperable Proficient in all Academick Learning; but ſome Circumſtances of his Father would not permit him to wait for Preferments, after he was become capable of Employments in other places. His uſual manner there, was to be an early and an exact Student; by which means he was quickly laid in with a good Stock of Learning; but unto all his other Learning, there was that Glory added, The Fear of God, for the Crown of all; the Principles whereof were inſtilled into his young Soul, with the Counſels of his pious Mother, while he yet ſat on her Knees, as well as his holy Father, when he came to riper Years. From his very Childhood he was exemplary for the Succeſs which God gave unto the Cares of his Parents, to principle him with ſuch things, as rendred him wiſe unto Salvation.

§ 4. Tho' he were of a pleaſant and cheerful Behaviour, yet he was therewithal ſometimes inclined unto Melancholly; which was attended with, and perhaps productive of ſome Dejections in his own Mind, about his Intereſt in the Favour of God. Whence even after he had been a Preacher of ſome ſtanding, he had ſometimes very ſore Deſpondencies and Objections in his own Soul, about the Evidences of his own Regeneration; he would conclude, that no Grace of God had ever been wrought in him. Whereupon a Miniſter, that was his near Friend, gave him once that Advice, To let all go for loſt, and begin again upon a new Foundation; but upon his recollecting himſelf, he found that he could not forego, he might not renounce all his former bleſſed Experience. And ſo his Doubts expired.

§ 5. The firſt Specimen that he gave of his Miniſterial Abilities, was as a Chaplain in the Houſe of a Perſon of Quality; whence after a Year or two thus fledged, he adventured a Flight unto a great Congregation at Bocking, in Eſſex, under Dr. Barkam; not without the wonder of many, how the Son of the moſt noted Puritan in England, ſhould come to be employed under an Epiſcopal Doctor, ſo gracious with Biſhop Laud; but this Dr. Barkam was a good Preacher himſelf, and he was alſo willing to gratifie his Pariſhioners, who were many of them Religiouſly diſpoſed: Hence, tho' the Doctor would not ſpare a Tenth-part of his Revenues, which from his divers Livings, amounted unto near a Thouſand a Year, to one who did above Three Quarters of his Work, yet he was otherwiſe very Courteous and Civil to our Mr. Rogers, whom his Pariſhioners handſomely maintained out of their own Purſes, and ſhew'd what a room he had in their Hearts, by their doing ſo.

§ 6. All this while, Mr. Rogers had, like his Father, applied his Thoughts only to the main Points of Repentance from dead Works, and Faith towards God; and he had never yet look'd into the controverted Points of Diſcipline. Indeed the Diſpoſition of his famous Father towards thoſe things, I am willing to relate on this occaſion; and I will relate it in his own words, which I will faithfully tranſcribe, from a MSS. of his now in my Hands: ‘If ever I come into Trouble, [he writes] for want of Conformity, I reſolve with my ſelf, by God's Aſſiſtance, to come away with a clear Conſcience, and yield to nothing in preſent, until I have prayed and faſted, and conferred: And tho' the Liberty of my Miniſtry be precious, yet buy it not with a guilty Conſcience. I am ſomewhat troubled ſometimes at my Subſcription, but I ſaw ſundry Men of good Gifts, and good Hearts, as I thought, that did ſo. And I could not prove that there was any thing contrary to the Word of God: Tho' I miſliked them much, and I knew them unprofitable Burthens to the Church of God. But if I be urged unto the Uſe of them, I am rather reſolved never to yield thereto. They are to me very irkſome Things; yet ſeeing I was not able to prove them flatly unlawful, or contrary to God's Word, I therefore thought better to ſave my Liberty with Subſcribing, (ſeeing I did it not againſt my Conſcience) than to loſe it, for not yielding ſo far. Yet this was ſome ſmall trouble to me, that I did it, when I was in no ſpecial Peril of any preſent Trouble; which yet I thought I were as good do of my ſelf, as when I ſhould be urged to it. But it may be, I might not have been urged of a long time, or not at all; but might have eſcaped

‘ by Friends and Money, as before; which yet
‘ I feared: But it was my Weakneſs, as I now
‘ conceive it; which I beſeech God to pardon ‘ unto me. Written 1627. This I ſmarted for ‘ 1631. If I had read this, it may be, I had ‘ not done what I did.

Reader, In this one Paſſage thou haſt a large Hiſtory, of the Thoughts and Fears, and Cares, with which the Puritans of thoſe Times were exerciſed.

But Mr. Hooker, now Lecturer at Chelmsford, underſtanding that this young Preacher was the Son of a Father, whom he moſt highly reſpected, he communicated unto him the Grounds of his own Diſſatisfaction, at the Ceremonies then impoſed. Quickly after this, the Doctor of Bocking being preſent at the Funeral of ſome eminent Perſon there, he obſerved that Mr. Rogers forbore to put on the Surplice, in the Exerciſe of his Miniſtry on that occaſion; which inſpired him with as much Diſguſt againſt his Curate, as his Curate had againſt the Surplice it ſelf. Whereupon, tho' the Doctor were ſo much a Gentleman, as to put no Publick Affront upon Mr. Rogers, yet he gave him his private Advice to provide for himſelf, in ſome other place.

§ 7. See the Providence of our Lord! About that very time, Aſſington, in Suffolk, being void by the Death of the former Incumbent, the Patron thereof was willing to beſtow it upon the Son of his honoured Friend in Dedham; whither he now removed, after that Bocking had for four or five Years enjoyed his Labours. The Inhabitants of Bromly, near Colcheſter, were at the ſame time extreamly diſcontented at their miſſing of him. However, ſee again the Providence of our Lord; the Biſhop of Norwich let him live quietly five Years at Aſſington, which the Biſhop of London would not have done at Bromly. This was the Charge now betruſted with our Rogers; concerning whom, I find an eminent Perſon publiſhing unto the World, this Account: Mr. Nathanael Rogers, a Man ſo able and ſo judicious, in Soul-work, that I would have betruſted my Soul with him, as ſoon as with any Man in the Church of Chriſt.

§ 8. Here his Miniſtry was both highly reſpected, and greatly proſpered, among Perſons of all Qualities, not only in the Town it ſelf, but in the Neighbourhood. He was a lively, curious, florid Preacher; and by his Holy Living, he ſo farther preached, as to give much Life unto all his other preaching. He had uſually, every Lord's Day, a greater Number of Hearers than could croud into the Church; and of theſe many Ignorant Ones were inſtructed, many Ungodly Ones were Converted, and many Sorrowful Ones were comforted. Tho' he had not his Father's notable Voice, yet he had ſeveral Miniſterial Qualifications, as was judged, beyond his Father; and he was one prepared unto every good Work; tho' he was alſo exerciſed with Bodily Infirmities, which his Labours brought upon him. 'Tis a thing I find obſerv'd by Mr. Firmin, John Rogers was not John Chryſoſtom; and yet God honoured no Man in thoſe Parts of England with the Converſion of Souls more than him. And good Biſhop Brownrig would ſay, John Rogers will do more good with his Wild Notes, than we ſhall do with our Set Muſick. But our Nathanael Rogers, was a Fiſher of Men, who came with a Silken Line, and a Golden Hook, and God proſpered him alſo. He was an Apollo, who had his Harp and his Arrows; and the Arrows his charming and piercing Eloquence, which had ὕψος καὶ Βάθος, in it were Arrows in the Hand of a mighty Man. He not only knew how to build the Temple, but alſo how to carve it: And he could ſay with Lactantius, (his very Names-ſake) Vellem mihi dari Eloquentiam, vel quia magis credunt Homines Veritati ornatæ vel ut ipſi ſuis Armis vincantur.

§ 9. But a Courſe was taken to extinguiſh theſe Lights, as faſt as any Notice could be taken of them. It was the Reſolution of the Hierarchy, that the Miniſters who would not conform to their Impoſitions, muſt be ſilenced all over the Kingdom. Our Mr. Rogers perceiving the Approaches of the Storm towards himſelf, did out of a particular Circumſpection in his own Temper, chooſe rather to prevent than to receive the Cenſures of the Eccleſiaſtical Courts; and therefore he reſigned his place to the Patron, that ſo ſome Godly and Learned Conformiſt, might be inveſted with it: Nevertheleſs, not being free in his Conſcience, wholly to lay down the Exerciſe of his Miniſtry, he deſigned a Removal into New-England; whereunto he was the rather moved, by his Reſpect unto Mr. Hooker, for whom his Value was extraordinary. Reader, In all this, there is no Reproach caſt upon this excellent Rogers. Κατηγορεία τοιαύτη ἐγκώμιον ἐστιν·

§ 10. He had married the Daughter of one Mr. Crane of Cogeſhal, a Gentleman of a very conſiderable Eſtate, who would gladly have mentioned this his worthy Son-in-Law, with his Family, if he would have tarried in England; but obſerving the ſtrong Inclination of his Mind unto a New-Engliſh Voyage, he durſt not oppoſe it. Now, tho Mr. Rogers were a Perſon very unable to bear the Hardſhips of Travel, yet the Impreſſion which God had made upon his Heart, like what he then made upon the Hearts of many Hundreds more, perhaps as weakly and feeble as he, carried him through the Enterprize with an unwearied Reſolution; which Reſolution was tried, indeed, unto the utmoſt. For whereas the Voyage from Graveſſend unto Boſton, uſes to be diſpatched in about Nine or Ten Weeks, the Ships which came with Mr. Rogers, were fully Twenty four Weeks in the Voyage; and yet in this tedious Paſſage, not one Perſon did miſcarry. After they had come Two Thirds of their way, having reached the length of Newfound-land, their Wants were ſo multiplied, and their Winds were ſo contrary, that they entred into a ſerious Debate, about returning back to England: But upon their ſetting apart a Day for ſolemn Faſting and Prayer, the Weather cleared up; and in a little time they arrived at their deſired Port; namely, about bout the middle of November, in the Year 1636.

§ 11. It was an extream Diſcouragement unto him, at his Arrival, to find the Country thrown into an horrible Combuſtion, by the Familiſtical Opinions, which had newly made ſuch a Diſturbance, as to engage all Perſons, on one ſide or t'other of the Controverſies, all the Country over. But God bleſſed the Prayers and Pains of his People, for the ſpeedy ſtopping of that Gangreen; and ſetled the Country in a comfortable Peace, by a Synod convened at Cambridge the next Year; whereto our Mr. Rogers, and Mr. Patridge, who came in the ſame Ship with him, contributed not a little by their Judicious Diſcourſes and Collations.

§ 12. His firſt Invitation was to Dorcheſter; but the Number of Good Men who came hither, deſirous of a Settlement under his Miniſtry, could not be there accommodated; which cauſed him to accept rather of an Invitation to Ipſwich, where he was Ordained Paſtor of the Church, on Feb. 20. 1638. At his Ordination preaching on 2 Cor. 2. 16. Who is ſufficient for theſe things: A Sermon ſo Copious, Judicious, Accurate, and Elegant, that it ſtruck the Hearers with admiration. Here was a Renowned Church conſiſting moſtly of ſuch illuminated Chriſtians, that their Paſtors in the Exerciſe of their Miniſtry, might (as Jerom ſaid of that brave Woman Marcella) Sentire ſe non tam Diſcipulos habere quam Judices. His Collegue here, was the Celebrious Norton; and glorious was the Church of Ipſwich now, in two ſuch extraordinary Perſons, with their different Gifts; but united Hearts, carrying on the Concerns of the Lord's Kingdom in it. While our humble Rogers was none of thoſe, who do, Τὰς τῶν ἀδελφῶν λαμπρότητας, ἑαυτῶν ἀμαυρώσεις νομίζειν, Think the Brightneſs of their Brethren to ſhadow and obſcure themſelves. But if Norton were excellent, there are Perſons of good Judgment, who think themſelves bound in Juſtice to ſay, That Rogers came not ſhort of Norton, in his greateſt Excellencies.

§ 13. While he lived in Ipſwich, he went over the Five laſt Chapters of the Epiſtle to the Epheſians, in his Miniſtry; the Twelfth Chapter to the Hebrews; the Fourteenth Chapter of Hoſea; the Doctrine of Self-denial, and walking with God; and the Fifty third Chapter of Iſaiah; to the great Satisfaction of all his Hearers, with many other Subjects more occaſionally handled. It was counted pity that the Publick ſhould not enjoy ſome of his Diſcourſes, in all which he was, οὐ τῶν ἐμούντων ἀλλὰ τῶν ἀκριβούντων: But his Phyſician told him, That if he went upon tranſcribing any of his Compoſures, his Diſpoſition to Accuracy would ſo deeply engage him in it, as to endanger his Life: Wherefore he left few Monuments of his Miniſtry, but in the Hearts of his People, which were many. But tho' they were ſo many, that he did juſtly reckon that well-inſtructed, and well-inclined People, his Crown, yet in the Paroxiſm of Temptation among them, upon Mr. Norton's Removal, the melancholy Heart of Mr. Rogers, thought for a while, they were too much a Crown of Thorns unto him.

§ 14. It belongs to his Character, that he feared God above many, and walked with God, at a great Rate of Holineſs: Tho' ſuch was his Reſervedneſs, that none but his intimate Friends knew the Particularities of his Walk, yet ſuch as were indeed intimate with him could obſerve, that he was much in Faſting and Prayer, and Meditation, and thoſe Duties wherein the Power of Godlineſs is moſt maintained: And as the Graces of a Chriſtian, ſo the Gifts of a Miniſter, in him, were beyond the ordinary Attainments of good Men. Yea, I ſhall do a wrong unto his Name, if I do not freely ſay, That he was one of the greateſt Men, that ever ſet foot on the American Strand. Indeed, when the Apoſtle Paul makes that juſt Boaſt, I was not a whit behind the very chiefeſt Apoſtles: He does not ſpeak (as we commonly take it) in reſpect of ſuch as were true Apoſtles, but in reference to thoſe falſe Apoſtles, who had nothing to ſet them out, but their own lofty Words, with an unjuſt ſlight of him. Whereas our bleſſed Rogers, I may without Injury, or Odium, venture to compare with the very beſt of the true Miniſters, which made the beſt Days of New-England, and ſay, He came little, if at all behind the very chiefeſt of them all.

§ 15. He was much troubled with Spitting of Blood; wherein he would comfort himſelf with the Saying of one Mr. Price, upon ſuch an Occaſion, That tho' he ſhould ſpit out his own Blood, by which his Life was to be maintained, yet he ſhould never, Expuere Sanguinem Chriſti, or loſe the Benefits of Chriſt's Blood, by which he was redeemed. He was alſo ſubject unto the Flatus Hypocondriacus, even from his Youth; wherewith when he was firſt ſurprized, he thought himſelf a dying Man; but a good Phyſician, and a long Experience, convinced him, that it was a more Chronical Diſtemper. And while he was under the early Diſcouragements of this Diſtemper, I find the famous Mr. Cotton, in a Letter dated March 9. 1631. thus encouraging of him:

> ‘I bleſs the Lord with you, who ſupporteth your feeble Body, to do him Service, and mean while perfecteth the Power of his Grace in your Weakneſs. You know who ſaid it, Unmortified Strength poſteth hard to Hell, but ſanctified Weakneſs creepeth faſt to Heaven. Let not your Spirit faint, tho' your Body do. Your Soul is precious in God's ſight; your Hairs are numbred, and the number and meaſure of your fainting Fits, and weariſome Nights, are weighed and limited by his Hand, who hath given you his Lord Jeſus Chriſt, to take upon him your Infirmities, and bear your Sickneſſes.

Nor was it this Diſtemper which at laſt ended his Days; but it was a Flood of Rheum, occaſioned partly by his diſuſe of Tobacco, whereto he had formerly accuſtomed himſelf, but now left it off, becauſe he found himſelf in Danger of being Enſlaved unto it; which he thought a thing below a Chriſtian, and much more a Miniſter. He had often been ſeized with Fits of Sickneſs in the Courſe of his Life: And his laſt ſeemed no more threatning than the former, till the laſt Morning of it. An Epidemical ſort of Cough had arreſted moſt of the Families in the Country; which proved moſt particularly Fatal to Bodies, before labouring with Rheumatic Indiſpoſitions. This he felt; but in the whole time of his Illneſs, he was full of Heavenly Diſcourſe and Counſel, to thoſe that came to viſit him. One of the laſt things he did, was to Bleſs the Three Children of his only Daughter, who had purchaſed his Bleſſing by her ſingular Dutifulneſs unto him. It is a notable Paſſage in the Talmuds, That the Inhabitants of Tſippor expreſſing an extreme Unwillingneſs to have the Death of R. Judah (whom they Surnamed, The Holy,) reported unto them, he that brought the Report, thus expreſſed himſelf, Holy Men and Angels took hold of the Tables of the Covenant, and the Hand of the Angels prevailed, ſo that they took away the Tables! And the People then perceived the meaning of the Parabolizer to be, That Holy Men would fain have detained R. Judah ſtill in this World; but the Angels took him away. Reader, I am as lothe to tell the Death of Rogers the Holy; and the Inhabitants of Ipſwich were as lothe to hear it: But I muſt ſay, The Hand of the Angels prevailed, on July 3. 1655. in the Afternoon, when he had uttered thoſe for his laſt Words, My Times are in thy hands.

§ 16. He was known to keep a Diary; but he kept it with ſo much Reſervation, that it is not known, that ever any one but himſelf did read one Word of it: And he determined that none ever ſhould; for he ordered a couple of his Intimate Friends to caſt it all into the Fire, without ever looking into the Contents of it.

Surely, with the Loſs of ſo Incomparable a Perſon, the Survivors muſt lament the Loſs of thoſe Experiences, which might in theſe Rich Papers, have kept him, after a ſort, ſtill Alive unto us! But as they would have prov'd him, An Incarnate Seraphim, ſo the other Seraphim, who carried him away with them, were no Strangers to the Methods, by which he had Ripened and Winged himſelf, to become one of their Society.

I cannot find any Compoſures of this Worthy Man's offered by the Preſs unto the World; except one, and that is only a Letter which he wrote from New-England, unto a Member of the Honourable Houſe of Commons, at Weſtminſter, in the Year 1643. Wherein obſerving, That Eccleſiam ad Mundi Normam Regnorum & ſtatuum componere, eſt mere Domum Tapetibus accommodare; he pathetically urged, That the Parliament would confeſs the Guilt of Neglecting, yea, Rejecting Motions of Reformation in former Parliaments, and proceed now more fully to anſwer the juſt Expectations of Heaven. But I have in my Hands, a brief Manuſcript, written in a Neat Latin Style, whereof he was an Incomparable Maſter. 'Tis a Vindication of the Congregational Church-Government; and there is one Paſſage in it, by Tranſcribing whereof, I will take the Leave to addreſs the preſent Age.

APPENDIX.

THE Invaluable Diary of Mr. Nathanael Rogers is loſt: Something of his Fathers is not ſo: We'll do ſomething towards Repairing our Loſs out of That: Some Secret Papers of Old Mr. John Rogers, are fallen into my Hands: I will make them as Publick as I can; and I will annex them to the Life of his Excellent Son, becauſe that Son of his, did live over the Life of his Renowned Father. Thus, Father and Son ſhall live here together; and by offering the Reader an Extract of ſome Obſervable Memorials for a Godly Life, contained in Reſerved Experiences of Mr. John Rogers of Dedham, I ſhall alſo deſcribe the very Spirit of the Old Puritans, in the Former Age, by the View whereof, I hope there will more be made in that Age which is to come. Sirs, Read theſe Holy Memorials, and let it not be ſaid of us, according to the Complaint which the Talmuds thus utter; Si priſci fuerunt Filii Regnum, nos ſumus Filii Hominum Vulgarium; & ſi priſci fuerunt Homines Vulgares, nos ſumus velut Aſini. Let it not be ſaid, as it uſes to be by the Jewiſh Rabbi's, Elegantior eſt Sermo familiaris Patrum, quam Lex Filiorum.

Sixty MEMORIALS for a Godly Life.

A COVENANT.

I. I Have firmly purpoſed, (by God's Grace,) to make my whole Life, a Meditation of a Better Life, and Godlineſs in every part; That I may from Point to Point, and from Step to Step, with more Watchfulneſs, walk with the Lord.

Oh! The Infinite Gain of it! No ſmall Help hereto, is Daily Meditation and often Conference. Therefore, ſince the Lord hath given me to ſee in ſome ſort, the Coldneſs of the Half Service, that is done to his Majeſty, by the moſt, and even by my ſelf, I renew my Covenant more firmly with the Lord, to come nearer unto the Practice of Godlineſs, and oftener to have my Converſation in Heaven, my Mind ſeldomer, and more lightly ſet upon the things of this Life, to give to my ſelf leſs Liberty in the ſecreteſt and ſmalleſt Provocations to Evil, and to endeavour after a more continual Watch from thing to thing, that as much as may be, I may walk with the Lord for the Time of my abiding here below.

A Form of Direction.

II. This Reſolutely Determine, That God be always my Glory, through the Day: And, as occaſion ſhall be offered, help forward ſuch as ſhall Repair to me, or among whom, by God's Providence, I ſhall come: And theſe two being regarded, That I may tend my own Good, going forward, (my own Heart, I mean, Calling and Life, and my Family and Charge) looking for my Change, and preparing for the Croſs, yea, for Death it ſelf: And to like little of mine Eſtate, when I ſhall not ſenſibly find it thus with me: And whiles God affordeth me Peace, Health, Liberty, an Heart delighting in him, outward Bleſſings with the ſame, to beware that Godlineſs ſeem not pleaſant to me, for Earthly Commodity, but for it ſelf: If in this Courſe, or any part of it, I ſhould halt, or miſlike, not to admit of any ſuch Deceit: And for the Maintenance of this Courſe, to take my Part in all the good Helps, appointed by God for the ſame; as theſe: Firſt, To Begin the Day with Meditation, Thankſgiving, Confeſſion and Prayer: To put on my Armour: To Watch and Pray oft and earneſtly in the Day, for holding faſt this Courſe: To hearten on my ſelf hereto by mine own Experience (who have ever ſeen, that it goeth well with thoſe, which walk after this Rule, 1 Pet. 3. 13. Gal. 6. 16.) and by the Example of others. (Heb. 13. 7.) And for the better helping my ſelf forward, ſtill in this Courſe, my Purpoſe and Deſire is, to learn Humility and Meekneſs more and more, by God's Chaſtiſements, and encourage my ſelf to this Courſe of Life, by his daily Bleſſings and Mercies; and to make the ſame uſe of all Exerciſes in my Family. And faithfully to peruſe and examine the ſeveral parts of my Life every Evening, how this Courſe hath been kept of me, where it hath to keep it ſtill, where it hath not, to ſeek Pardon and Recovery; and all Behaviour that will not ſtand with this, to hold me from it, as from Bane.

ard

A Form for a Miniſter's Life

III. In Solitarineſs to be leaſt ſolitary: In Company, taking or doing of Good; to Wife, to Family, to Neighbours, to Fellow-Miniſters, to all with whom I deal, kind; amiable, yet modeſt; low in mine own Eyes; oft with the Sick and Afflicted: Attending to Reading; painful for my Sermons, not eaſily provoked unto Anger; not carried away with Conceits haſtily; not wandring in fond Dreams, about Eaſe and deceivable Pleaſures; not ſnared in the World, nor making lawful Liberties my delight; helpful to all that need my help, readily, and all thoſe that I ought to regard: And all this, with continuance, even all my Days.

IV. Chief Corruptions to be watch'd againſt, be, Sourneſs, Sadneſs, Timorouſneſs, Forgetfulneſs, Fretting, and Inability to bear Wrongs.

V. I am very backward to private Viſiting of Neighbours Houſes, which doth much hurt: For thereby their Love to me cannot be ſo great as it would be; and I know not their particular Wants and States ſo well, and therefore cannot ſpeak ſo fitly to them as I might.

VI. A Miniſter had need look, that he profit by all his Preaching himſelf, becauſe he knows not what others do: Many, he knows, get no good; of many more he is uncertain: So that if he get no good himſelf, his Labour and Travail ſhall be in vain.

VII. Begin the Day with half an Hour's Meditation and Prayer. And let me reſolutely ſet my ſelf to walk with God through the Day: If any thing fall out amiſs, recover again ſpeedily, by humble Confeſſion, hearty Prayer for Pardon, with Confidence of obtaining. And ſo proceed.

VIII. Oh! Mildneſs, and Cheerfulneſs, with Reverence, how ſweet a Companion art thou!

IX. Few rare and worthy Men, continue ſo to their End; but one way or other, fall into Coldneſs, groſs Sin, or to the World: Therefore beware.

X. Count not the Daily Direction, nor Chriſtian Life, to be Bondage; but count it the ſweeteſt Liberty, and the only way of true Peace. Whenſoever this is counted hard, that State that is embraced inſtead thereof, ſhall be harder.

XI. Worldly Dealings, are great Lets to Fruitfulneſs in Study, and cheerful proceeding in our Chriſtian Courſe.

XII. One can never go about Study, or Preaching, if any thing lie heavy on the Conſcience.

XIII. The worſt Day wherein a Man keeps his Watch, and holds to the daily Rules of Directions, is freer from danger, and brings more Safety than the beſt Day, wherein this is not known or practiſed.

XIV. I am oft, I confeſs, aſhamed of my ſelf, when I have been in Company, and ſeen Gifts of Knowledge, in many careleſs unconſcionable, and odd Miniſters; which (with better Reaſons) hath ſtirred up a Deſire oftimes in me, that I could follow my Studies. Yet I would never have been willing to have changed with them: For what is all Knowledge, without a ſanctified and comfortable uſe of it, thro' Love; and without Fruit of our Labour, in doing good, and winning and building up of Souls, or at leaſt a great endeavour after it.

XV. Many Miniſters ſet their Minds much upon this World, either Profit, or Preferment, for which they venture dangerouſly, and ſome of them are ſoon ſnatch'd away. Therefore God keep me ever from ſetting my Foot on ſuch a Path, as hath no Continuance, and is not without much Danger in the End.

XVI. It's good for a Man to delight in that, wherein he may be bold to delight without Repentance: And that is, to be always doing, or ſeeking occaſion to do ſome Good. The Lord help me herein.

XVII. When God hedgeth in a Man with many Mercies, and gives him a comfortable Condition, its good to acknowledge it often, and be highly thankful for it. Elſe God may ſoon bring a Man ſo low, as he would think that State happy, that he was in before, if now he had it again. Therefore, God make me wiſe.

XVIII. Right good Men have complained, that they are oft-times in very bad Caſe, their Hearts diſordered and diſtempered very ſore, for want of taking to themſelves a certain Direction for the Government of their Lives.

XIX. Idle and unprofitable Talk of By-matters, is a Canker that conſumeth all Good, and yet our Heart much luſteth after it: Therefore reſolve firmly againſt it.

XX. A neceſſary and moſt comely thing it is, for a Miniſter to carry himſelf ſo wiſely and amiably unto all, as he may do good unto all ſorts; to bring back them that be fallen off, in meekneſs and kindneſs, to paſs by an Offence in thoſe that have wronged him, which is an high Point of Honour, and not to keep from them, and eſtrange himſelf from their Acquaintance, and ſo ſuffer them to fall further, to be lowly towards the meaner ſort of Chriſtians; to keep the Credit of his Miniſtry with all.

I am perſwaded, If my Light did ſhine more clearly, and mine Example were ſeen more manifeſtly, in theſe and ſuch things (which are of no ſmall force to perſwade the People) that both my Miniſtry would be of more power, and that I ſhould draw them alſo to be better.

XXI. Look, that I lie not down in Bed, but in Peace with God any Night, and never my Heart reſt, until it relent truly, for any thing that hath paſſed amiſs in the Day.

XXII. It is good for a Miniſter, not to deal much with his People about Worldly Matters, yet not to be ſtrange to them: Nor to be a Stumbling-block unto the People, by Worldlineſs, or any other Fault, elſe he deprives himſelf of all liberty and advantage of dealing with them for their Errors.

XXIII. Buffetings of Satan, tho' they be grievous, yet they are a very good Medicine againſt Pride and Security.

XXIV. Chriſt's Death, and God's Mercy, is not ſweet, but where Sin is ſour.

XXV. It is an hard thing for a Man to keep the Rules of Daily Direction, at Times of Sickneſs or Pain. Let a Man labour to keep out Evil, when he wants Fitneſs, Strength, and Occaſion, to do Good, and that is a good Portion for a ſick Body. Alſo in Sickneſs that is ſore and ſharp, if a Man can help himſelf with ſhort and oft Prayers to God, for Patience, Contentment, Meekneſs, and Obedience to his holy Hand, its well, tho' he can't bend the Mind much, or earneſtly upon any thing.

XXVI. Innocence is a very good Fence and Fort againſt Impatience, in falſe Accuſations, or great Afflictions. Let them that be Guilty fret and vex themſelves, and ſhew Bitterneſs of Stomach againſt ſuch as ſpeak ill of them; but they that look carefully to their Hearts and Ways; (without looking at Mens Eye), let them be ſtill, and of a meek and quiet Spirit.

XXVII. Beſides the uſe of the Daily Direction, and following ſtrictly the Rules thereof, yet there muſt be now and then the uſe of Faſting, to purge out Wearineſs, and Commonneſs, in the uſe of it.

XXVIII. 'Tis a rare thing for any Man, ſo to uſe Proſperity, as that his Heart be drawn the nearer to God. Therefore we had need in that Eſtate, to watch diligently, and labour to walk humbly.

XXIX. Oh, Frowardneſs! How unſeemly and hurtful a thing to a Man's ſelf and others! Amiable Cheerfulneſs, with Watchfulneſs and Sobriety, is the beſt Eſtate, and meeteſt to do good, eſpecially to others.

XXX. Follow my Calling: Loſe no Time at home or abroad; but be doing ſome Good: Mind my going Homeward: Let my Life never be pleaſant unto me, when I am not fruitful, and fit to be employ'd in doing good, one way or other.

XXXI. It is a great Mercy of God to a Miniſter, and a thing much to be deſired, that he be well moved with the Matter that he preaches to the People; either in his private Meditation, or in his publick Delivery, or both: Better hope there is then, that the People will be moved therewith: Which we ſhould ever aim at.

XXXII. If the Heart be heavy at any time, and wounded, for any thing, ſhame our ſelves, and be humbled for our Sin, before we attempt any good Exerciſe or Duty.

XXXIII. It's a very good Help, and moſt what a preſent Remedy, when one feels himſelf dull, and in an ill Condition, ſtraightway to confeſs it to God, accuſe himſelf, and pray for Quickning. God ſends Redreſs.

XXXIV. There is as much need to pray to be kept in Old Age, and unto the End, as at any time. And yet a Body would think, that he that hath eſcaped the Danger of his younger, ſhould have no great Fear in his latter Days, but that his Experience might prepare him againſt any thing. However, it is not ſo: For many that have done well, and very commendably for a while, have ſhrewdly fallen to great Hurt. This may moderate our Grief, when young Men of great Hopes be taken away.

Oh! how much rather had I die in Peace quickly, than live to diſgrace the Goſpel, and be a Stumbling-block to any, and live with Reproach!

XXXV. What a ſweet Life is it, when every part of the Day, hath ſome Work or other allotted unto it, and this done conſtantly, but without Commonneſs, or Cuſtomarineſs of Spirit in the doing it.

XXXVI. When a Man is in a drowſie unprofitable Courſe, and is not humbled for it, God oft lets him fall into ſome ſenſible Sin, to ſhame him with, to humble his Heart, and drive him more throughly to God, to bewail and repent of both.

XXXVII. A true Godly Man, hath never his Life joyful unto him, any longer than his Converſation is holy and heavenly. Oh! let it be ſo with me!

XXXVIII. It is ſome Comfort for a Man, whoſe Heart is out of Order, if he ſeeth it, and that with hearty Miſlike, and cannot be content until it be bettered.

XXXIX. I have ſeen of others, (which I deſire to die, rather than it ſhould be verified of me!) that many Miniſters did never ſeem groſly to depart from God, until they grew wealthy and great.

XL. How much better is it to reſiſt Sin, when we be tempted thereunto, than to repent of it after we have committed it?

XLI. Whatſoever a juſtified Man doth by Direction of God's Word, and for which he hath either Precept, or Promiſe, he pleaſes God in it, and may be comfortable, in whatſoever falls out thereupon. But where Ignorance, Raſhneſs, or our own Will carry us, we offend.

XLII. Let no Man boaſt of the Grace he hath had; for we ſtand not now by that, but it muſt be daily nouriſhed; or elſe a Man ſhall become as other Men, and fall into noiſome Evils: For what are we but a Lump of Sin of our ſelves?

XLIII. If God in Mercy arm us not, and keep us not in compaſs, Lord what Stuff will break from us! For what a deal of Poiſon is in our Hearts, if it may have Iſſue! And therefore what need of Watchfulneſs continually?

XLIV. The worſt Day (commonly) of him that knoweth, and endeavoureth to walk by the Daily Direction, is freer from danger, and paſſed in greater Safety, than the beſt Day of a Godly Man, that knows not this Direction.

XLV. Many ſhew themſelves forward Chriſtians in Company abroad, that yet where they ſhould ſhew moſt Fruits, (as at home) are too ſecure; either thinking they are not marked, or if they be, do not much regard it. This ought not to be.

XLVI. Be careful to mark what falls out in the Day, in Heart, or Life; and be ſure to look over all at Night, that hath been amiſs in the Day: That ſo I may lie down in Peace with God, and Conſcience. The contrary were a woful thing, and would cauſe Helliſh Unquietneſs. Be ſure therefore, that none of the malicious Subtleties of the Devil, nor the Naughtineſs of my own Heart, do carry me further than at Night, I may ſleep with quiet to Godward.

XLVII. When God ſaith, Deut. 12. 7. That his may rejoyce before him, in all that they put their Hands unto: It's a great Liberty, and enjoy'd of but few. No doubt, many of our Sorrows come through our own Default, which we might avoid. And as for Godly Sorrow, it may ſtand with this Rejoicing. If therefore we may in all things rejoice, then from one thing to another, from our Waking to our Sleeping: Firſt, In our firſt Thoughts of God in the Morning; then in our Prayer; after in our Calling, and while we are at it; then at our Meat, and in Company, and Alone, at Home, and Abroad, in Proſperity, and Adverſity, in Meditation, in Dealings, and Affairs: And Laſtly, in ſhutting up the Day in Examination, and viewing it over. And what hinders? If we be willing and reſolved to do the Will of God, throughout the Day, but that we may rejoice before him, in all we put our Hand unto.

XLVIII. He that makes Conſcience of his Ways, and to pleaſe God his only Way, is to take him to a Daily Direction, and ſome ſet Rules, thereby looking conſtantly to his Heart all the Day: And thus, for the moſt part, he may live comfortably; either not falling into any thing that ſhould much diſquiet him, or ſoon returning by Repentance to Peace again. But if a Man tie not himſelf thus to Rules, his Heart will break from him, and be diſguiſed one way or another, which will breed continual Wound unto his Conſcience, and ſo he ſhall never live any time together in Peace. The Cauſe why many Chriſtians alſo give themſelves great Liberty, in not accuſing themſelves for many Offences, is the want of ſome certain Direction to follow in the Day.

XLIX. When we feel unfitneſs to our ordinary Duties, we either begin to be diſcouraged, or elſe yield to Corruption, and neglect our Duties: Neither of both which ſhould be, but without Diſcouragement we ſhould reſiſt our Untowerdneſs, and ſhake it off, and flee to God by Prayer, even force our ſelves to pray for Grace, and fitneſs to pray; and being earneſt, and praying in Faith, we may be aſſured, that we ſhall obtain Life and Grace.

L. When the Mind is diſtracted any way, unſettled, unquiet, or out of order, then get alone and muſe, and ſee what hath brought us to this paſs; conſider how irkſome a State this is, and unprofitable, pray to God, and work with thy own Heart, until it be brought in frame. An Hour or two alone, ſhall do a Man more good, than any other Courſes or Duties.

LI. Aim (if it be poſſible) to ſpend one Afternoon in a Week, in viſiting the Neighbours houſes, Great uſe there is of it: Their Love to me will be much increaſed: Much occaſion will be miniſtred unto me, for Direction to ſpeak the more fitly in my Miniſtry. I am exceedingly grieved, that I am ſo diſtracted with Journeyings about, that I cannot bring this to paſs.

LII. I never go abroad, (except I ſeaſon my Mind with good Meditations by the way, or read, or confer) but beſides the loſs of my Time, neglecting my ordinary Task at home, at my Study, I come home weary in Body, unſettled in Mind, untoward to Study. So that I have ſmall cauſe to rejoice in my Goings forth, and I deſire God to free me more and more from them: So may I alſo attend my own Neighbours more diligently, which is my great deſire; and the contrary hath been, and is my great Burthen.

LIII. I have ever obſerved, that by Journeyings and Diſtractions of divers kinds, in theſe my later Times, and by too often Preaching in my younger Years, I have been held from uſing means to get Knowledge, and grow therein: Which I counted ever the juſt Puniſhment of God upon me, for the neglect of my young Time, when I ſhould and might have furniſhed my ſelf.

LIV. When I am in the beſt Eſtate my ſelf, I preach moſt zealouſly and profitably for the People.

LV. It breeds an incredible Comfort and Joy, when one hath got power over ſome ſuch Corruption, as in former Times hath uſed to get the Maſtery over him. This is a good Provocation to ſtrive hard ſo to do, and a Cauſe of great Thankfulneſs when it ſo comes to paſs.

LVI. If we be at any time much dejected for Sin, or otherwiſe diſquieted in our Minds, the beſt way that can be, is to ſettle and quiet them by private Meditation and Prayer. Probatum eſt.

LVII. The humble Man is the ſtrongeſt Man in the World, and ſureſt to ſtand, for he goes out of himſelf for help. The proud Man is the weakeſt Man, and ſureſt to fall: For he truſts to his own ſtrength.

LVIII. It's good in all the Changes of our Life, whatſoever they be, to hold our own, and be not changed therewith from our Goodneſs: As Abraham, wheresoever he came (after his Calling) ſtill built his Altar to the true God, and called upon his Name: He changed his Place, but never changed his God.

LIX. Our whole Life under the Goſpel ſhould be nothing but Thankfulneſs and Fruitfulneſs. And if we muſt judge our ſelves for our inward Luſtre and Corruptions of Pride, Dulneſs in good Duties, Earthlineſs, Impatience. If we make not Conſcience of, and be not humbled for theſe, God will and doth, oft give us up to open Sins, that Stain and Blemiſh our Profeſſion.

LX. The more we Judge our ſelves Daily, the leſs we ſhall have to do on our Sick-beds, and when we come to die. Oh! That is an unfit Time for This! We ſhould have nothing to do then, but bear our Pain wiſely, and be ready to die. Therefore, let us be exact in our Accounts every Day!

Reader, Having thus entertained thee with the Memorials of the Famous Mr. John Rogers, I will conclude them with tranſcribing a Remark, which I find in a Book publiſhed by Mr. Giles Firmin, 1681.

> ‘ Some Excellent Men at home conformed, but groaned under the Burden; as, I remember, Mr. John Rogers of Dedham, an Eminent Saint; tho' he did conform, I never ſaw him wear a Surplice, nor heard him uſe but a few Prayers; and thoſe, I think, he ſaid memoriter, he did not read them: But this he would do in his Preaching, draw his Finger about his Throat, and ſay, Let them take me and hang me up, ſo they will but remove theſe Stumbling Blocks out of the Church. But how many Thouſands of Choice Chriſtians pluck'd up their Stakes here, forſook their Dear Friends and Native Country, ſhut up themſelves in Ships, (to whom a Priſon for the time, had been more eligible) went remote into an howling Wilderneſs, there underwent great Hardſhips, Water was their common Drink, and glad if they might have had but that which they had given at their Doors here, (many of them!) and all this Suffering was to avoid your Impoſitions, and that they might dwell in the Houſe of God, and enjoy all things therein, according to his own Appointment.

CHAP. XV.

Bibliander Nov-Anglicanus. The LIFE of Mr. SAMUEL NEWMAN.

Nulla Tuas unquam Virtutes neſciet Ætas;
Non Jus in Laudes Mors habet Atra Tuas.

§ 1. NONE of the leaſt Services, which the Pens of Ingenious and Induſtrious Men have done for the Church of God, hath been in the Writing of CONCORDANCES for that Miraculous Book, where, Quicquid docetur eſt Veritas; Quicquid præcipitur, Bonitas; Quicquid promittitur, Fœlicitas. The Uſe of ſuch Concordances is well underſtood by all that ſearch the Scriptures, and think thereby to have Eternal Life: But moſt of all by thoſe Bezaleels, whoſe Buſineſs 'tis (as one ſpeaks) to cut and ſet in Gold the Diamonds of the Divine Word.

And therefore there have been many Concordances of the Bible ſince that Origen firſt led the way for ſuch Compoſures, and divers Languages; whereof, it may be, the Maximæ & abſolutiſſimæ Concordantiæ, moſt Compleat, have been thoſe that were compoſed by the Two Stephens, Robert the Father and Henry the Son; theſe, as their Name ſignifies a Crown, ſo in this Work of theirs, like Demoſthenes in his Oration, Dei Corona, have carried away the Garland from all that went afore them.

Now, in the Catalogue of Concordances, even from that of R. Iſaac Nathans, in Hebrew, to all that have in many other derived Languages imitated it, there is none to be compared unto that of Mr. Samuel Newman, in Engliſh. Indeed, firſt Marbeck in a Concordance, which pointed unto Chapters, but not unto Verſes; then Cotton, who though no Clergy-man himſelf, yet by his more, but yet not quite perfect Concordance and his Diligence, obliged all Clergy-men; and afterwards Bernard, who yet (no more than his Name's ſake) ſaw not all things; and then Downham, Wickens, Bennet, and how many more? have done vertuouſly; but Thou, Newman, haſt excelled them all! It hath been a juſt Remark, ſometimes, made by them, who are ſo wiſe as to obſerve theſe things, that the Lord Jeſus Chriſt, in his Holy Providence, hath choſe eſpecially to make the Names of thoſe Perſons Honourable, who have laboured in their Works, eſpecially to put Honour upon the Sacred Scriptures. And in Conformity to that Obſervation, there are Dues to be now paid unto the Memory of Mr. Samuel Newman, who that the Scriptures might be preſerved for the Memory, as well as the Underſtanding of the Chriſtian World, firſt compiled in England, a more Elaborate Concordance of the Bible, than had ever yet been ſeen in Europe; and after he came to New-England, made that Concordance yet more elaborate, by the Addition of not only many Texts, that were not in the former, but alſo the Marginal Readings of all the Texts that had them, and by ſeveral other Contrivances to made the whole more Expedite, for the Uſe of them that Conſulted it.

§ 2. The Life of Mr. Samuel Newman, commenced with the Century now running; at Banbury, where he was born of a Family, more Eminent and more Ancient for the Profeſſion of the True Proteſtant Religion, than moſt in the Realm of England. After his Parents, who had more Piety and Honeſty, than Worldly Greatneſs to ſignalize them, had beſtowed a Good Education upon him, and after his Abode in the Univerſity of Oxford, had given more Perfection to that Education, he became an Able Miniſter of the New Teſtament. But being under the Conſcientious Diſpoſitions of Real Chriſtianity, which was then called Puritaniſm, the Perſecution from the Prevailing Hierarchy, whereto he therefore became Obnoxious, deprived him of Liberty, for the peaceable Exerciſe of his Miniſtry. Whence it came to paſs, that although we might otherwiſe have termed him a Presbyter of One Town by Ordination, we muſt now call him an Evangeliſt of many, through Perſecution: For the Epiſcopal Moleſtations compelled him to no leſs than Seven Removes, and as many Places may now contend for the Honour of his Miniſtry, as there did for Homer's Nativity. But an Eighth Remove, whereto a Wearineſs of the former Seven drove him, ſhall bury in Silence the Claims of all other places unto him; for after the Year 1638. (in which Year, with many others, as Excellent Chriſtians, as any Breathing upon Earth, he croſs'd the Water to America) he muſt be ſtyled, A New-England Man.

§ 3. After Mr. Newman's Arrival at New-England, he ſpent a Year and half at Dorcheſter, Five Years at Weymouth, and Nineteen Years at Rehoboth, which Name he gave unto the Town, becauſe his Flock, which were before ſtraitned for Want of Room, now might ſay, The Lord hath made Room for us, and we ſhall be Fruitful in the Land: Nor will it be wondered at, if one ſo well-verſed in the Scripture, could think of none but a Scripture-Name, for the Place of his Habitation. How many Straits he afterwards underwent at Rehoboth, in the Dark-Day, when he was almoſt the only Miniſter, whoſe Invincible Patience held out, under the Scandalous Neglect and Contempt of the Miniſtry, which the whole Colony of Plymouth, was for a while Bewitched into, it is beſt known unto the Compaſſionate Lord, who ſaid unto him, I know thy Works, and how thou haſt born and haſt Patience, and for my Name's ſake haſt laboured, and haſt not fainted. But, no doubt, the Straits did but more effectually Recommend Heaven to him as the only Rehoboth; whether he went July 5. in the Year of our Lord 1663. when by paſſing through Nine Sevens of Years, he was come to that which we call, The Grand Climacterical. Nor let it be forgotten, that in this Memorable and Miſerable Year, each of the Three Colonies of New-England was beheaded of the Miniſter from whence they had moſt of their Influences; Norton went from the Maſſachuſet Colony, Stone went from Connecticut Colony, and Newman from Plymouth Colony, within a few Weeks of one another.

§ 4. He was a very Lively Preacher, and a very Preaching Liver. He lov'd his Church as if it had been his Family, and he taught his Family, as if it had been his Church. He was an Hard-Student; and as much Toyl and Oyl, as his Learned Name's ſake Neander employed in Illuſtrations and Commentaries, upon the Old, Greek, Pagan Poets, our Newman beſtowed in compiling his Concordances of the Sacred Scriptures: And the Incomparable Reliſh which the Sacred Scriptures had with him, while he had them thus under his Continual Rumination, was as well a Mean, as a Sign of his arriving to an extraordinary Meaſure of that Sanctity, which the Truth produces. But of his Family-Diſcipline there was no part more notable, than this one; That once a Year he kept a Solemn day of Humiliation with his Family; and once a Year, a day of Thankſgiving; and on theſe days, he would not only enquire of his Houſhold, what they had met withal to be Humbled, or to be Thankful for, but alſo he would Recruit the Memoirs of his Diary; by being denied the Sight whereof, our Hiſtory of him is neceſſarily Creepled with much Imperfection.

But whether it were entred in that Diary or no, there was one Remarkable which once befel him, worthy of a mention in this Hiſtory. He was once on a Journey home from Boſton to Rehoboth: But hearing of a Lecture at Dorcheſter by the way, he thought with himſelf, Perhaps I ſhall not be out of my way, if I go ſo far out of my way, as to take that Lecture. There he found Mr. Mather at Prayer; the Prayer being ended, Mr. Mather would not be ſatisfied except he would Preach. Accordingly after the ſinging of a Pſalm, he preached an Excellent Sermon; and by that Sermon, a poor Sinner, well known in the Place, was remarkably converted unto God, and became a Serious and Eminent Chriſtian.

§ 5. Hoſpitality was an Eſſential of his Character; and I can tell when he entertained Angels not Unawares. 'Tis doubtleſs, a Faulty piece of Inſenſibility, among too many of the Faithful, that they do little conſider the Guard of Holy Angels, wherewith our Lord Jeſus Chriſt wonderfully ſupplies us againſt the Miſchief and Malice of Wicked Spirits. Thoſe Holy Angels, are, it may be, Two Hundred and Sixty times mentioned in the Sacred Oracles of Heaven; and yet we that read ſo much in thoſe Oracles, are ſo Earthly-minded, as to take little Notice of them. 'Tis a marvellous thing, that as one ſays, The Natives of Heaven do not grudge to attend upon thoſe, who are only the Deniſons thereof; and that, as the Ancient expreſſes it, we may ſee the whole Heaven at work for our Salvation, God the Father ſending his Son to Redem us, both the Father and the Son ſending their Spirit to guide us, the Father, Son and Spirit ſending their Angels to miniſter for us. Now of the whole Angelical Miniſtration concerned for our Good, there is, it may be, none more conſiderable, than the Illuſtrious Convoy and Conduct, which they give unto the Spirits of Believers, when being expired, pired, they paſs through the Territories of the Prince of the Power of the Air, unto the Regions, where they muſt attend until the Reſurrection. What Elijah had at his Tranſlation, A Chariot of Angels, does, in ſome ſort, accompany all the Saints at their Expiration; they are carried by Angels unto the Feaſt with Abraham, and Angels do then Receive them into Everlaſting Habitations. The Faith of this matter has therefore filled the Departing Souls of many Good Men, with A Joy unſpeakable and full of Glory: Thus, the Famous Lord Mornay, when Dying, ſaid, I am taking my Flight to Heaven; here are Angels that ſtand ready to carry my Soul into the Boſom of my Saviour; thus the Famous Dr. Holland, when dying, ſaid, O thou Fiery Chariot, which cameſt down to fetch up Elijah, you Angels, that attended the Soul of Lazarus, bear me into the Boſom of my beſt Beloved: Thus we know of another, that when Dying, ſaid, O that you had your Eyes opened to ſee what I ſee; I ſee Millions of Angels; God has appointed them to carry my Soul up to Heaven, where I ſhall behold the Lord Face to Face. And now, let my Reader accept another Inſtance of this Dying and moſt Lively Expectation!

Our Newman, towards the Concluſion of his Days, advanced more and more towards the Beginning of his Joys: And a Joyſul as well as a Prayerful, Watchful, and Fruitful Temper of Soul, obſervably irradiated him. At length, being yet in Health, he preached a Sermon on theſe Words in Job 14. 14. All the Days of my appointed Time will I wait, until my Change come: Which proved his Laſt. Falling ſick hereupon, he did in the Afternoon of a following Lords Day, aſk a Deacon of his Church to pray with him; and the pious Deacon having finiſhed his Prayer, this Excellent Man turned about, ſaying, And now ye Angels of the Lord Jeſus Chriſt, Come, Do your Office! with which Words he immediately expired his Holy Soul, into the Arms of Angels: The Spirit of this Juſt Man, was immediately with the Innumerable Company of Angels.

§ 6. The Believing Sinner, then has the Forgiveneſs of Sin effectually declar'd and aſſur'd unto him, when the Holy Spirit of God, with a Special Operation (which is call'd, The Seal of the Holy Spirit) produces in him a Solid, Powerful, Wonderful, and Well grounded Perſwaſion of it; and when he brings home the Pardoning Love of God unto the Heart, with ſuch Immediate and Irreſiſtible Efficacy, as marvelouſly moves and melts the Heart, and overwhelms it with the Inexpreſſible Conſolations of a Pardon. The Forgiveneſs of Sin, may be Hopefully, but cannot be Joyfully, evident unto us, without ſuch a Special Operation of the Holy Spirit, giving Evidence thereunto. When we ſet our ſelves to argue our Juſtification, from the Marks of our Sanctification, that we can find upon our ſelves, we do well; we work right; we are in an orderly way of proceeding. But yet, we cannot well ſee our Sanctification, except a Special Operation of the Spirit of God, help our Sight; and if we do ſee our Sanctification, yet our Sight of our Juſtification will be no more than feeble, except a Special Operation of the Spirit of God ſhall comfort us. Our own Argument may make us a little eaſy; and it is our Duty to be found in that Rational way of Arguing; but this meer Argument of our own, will not bring us to that Joyful Peace of Soul, that will carry us triumphantly thro' the Dark Valley of the Shadow of Death, and make us Triumph over our Doubts, our Fears, and all our Diſcouragements. At laſt, the Spirit of God, He will come in glorioſly upon our Hearts, and cauſe us to receive the Pardon of our Sins, offered freely thro' Chriſt unto us; and then, we ſhall Rejoice with Joy unſpeakable and full of Glory. Nevertheleſs, Whenever the Forgiveneſs of our Sins, is by a Special Operation of the Holy Spirit Reveal'd unto us, the Symptoms of a Regenerate Soul, do always accompany it. Tho' the Marks of Sanctification are not enough, to give us the full Joy of our Juſtification; yet they give us the Proof of it. When a Special Operation of the Holy Spirit, gives us to ſee our Juſtification, it will give us to ſee our Sanctification too.

In writing this, I have written a conſiderable Article of our Church-Hiſtory: For it was this Article, that perhaps more than any whatſoever, exerciſed the Thoughts and Pens of our Churches, for many Years together. But the mention hereof, ſerves particularly to introduce a few more Memoirs of our Holy Newman.

All Good Chriſtians do ſometimes Examine themſelves about their Interiour State: And they that would be Great Chriſtians, muſt often do it. Tho' the Reſerv'd Papers of our Newman, are too careleſly loſt, yet I have recovered one, which runs in ſuch Terms as theſe:

'Notes, or Marks of Grace, I find in my ſelf; Not wherein I deſire to glory, but to take ground of Aſſurance, and after our Apoſtles Rules, To make my Election ſure, tho' I find them but in weak Meaſure.

'1. I find, I love God, and deſire to love God, principally for himſelf.

'2. A Deſire to Requite Evil with Good.

'3. A looking up to God, to ſee him, and his Hand, in all things that befal me.

'4. A Greater Fear of diſpleaſing God, than all the World.

'5. A Love to ſuch Chriſtians as I never ſaw, or received Good from.

'6. A Grief, When I ſee God's Commands broken by any Perſon.

'7. A Mourning for not finding the Aſſurance of God's Love, and the Senſe of his Favour, in that comfortable manner, at one Time, as at another; and not being Able to ſerve God as I ſhould.

'8. A Willingneſs to give God the Glory of any Ability to do Good.

‘ 9. A Joy, when I am in Chriſtian Company,
‘ in Godly Conference.
‘ 10. A Grief, when I perceive it goes ill with ‘ Chriſtians, and the contrary.
‘ 11. A conſtant Performance of Secret Duties, ‘ between God and my ſelf, Morning and ‘ Evening.
‘ 12. A bewailing of ſuch Sins, which none
‘ in the World can accuſe me of.
‘ 13. A chooſing of Suffering to avoid Sin.

But having thus mentioned the Self-Examination, which this holy Man accuſtomed himſelf unto, I know not; but this may be a very proper Opportunity, to obſerve, That the Holineſs of our Primitive Chriſtians, in this Land, was more than a little expreſſed and improved, by this piece of Chriſtianity. And that I may ſerve this Deſign of Chriſtianity, upon the devout Reader, I will take this Opportunity to digreſs, (if it be a Digreſſion) ſo far, as to recite a paſſage I lately read in a Paper, which a private Chriſtian, one of our Godly Old Men, who died not long ſince, (namely Mr. Clap, once the Captain of our Caſtle) did, at his Death, leave behind him.

That Godly Man had long been labouring under Doubts and Fears, about his interiour State before God. At laſt he was one Day conſidering with himſelf, what was his moſt beloved Sin. Herewithal he conſidered, whether in caſe the Lord would aſſure him, that all Sin ſhould be for ever pardoned unto him, and he ſhould arrive ſafe to Heaven in the Iſſue, yet he ſhould not in the mean time have that one Sin mortified, and be delivered from the Reign and Rage of that one Sin,——Whether this would content him? Hereunto he found and ſaid, before the Lord, That this would not content him. And hereupon the Spirit of God immediately irradiated his Mind, with a ſtrange and a ſtrong Aſſurance of the Divine Love unto him. He was diſſolved into a Flood of Tears, with aſſurance, That God had loved him with an everlaſting Love. And from this time, the Aſſurance of his Pardon, conquered his Doubts and Fears, I think, all the reſt of his Days.

Our too defective Hiſtory of our Newman, I will conclude, as Blahoſlius did in his Hiſtory of Johannes Cornu: Longum eſſet Elogia hujus viri narrare. Sed perfectior Hiſtoria, ut de aliis vires, ità & de iſto, conſummatur, & quotidie augetur in Vitâ eternâ; Quam da nobis, O Domino Deus, in gloriâ cum gaudio legendam. Amen.

CHAP. XVI.

Doctor Irrefragabiles. The LIFE of Mr. SAMUEL STONE.

§ 1. IF the Church of Rome do boaſt of her Cornelius à Lapide, who hath publiſhed Learned Commentaries upon almoſt the whole Bible, the Proteſtant and Reformed Church of New England, may boaſt of her Samuel Stone, who was better skill'd than the other in Sacred Philology, and whoſe Learned Sermons and Writings were not ſtuffed with ſuch Trifles and Fables, and other Impertinencies, as fill many Pages in the Compoſures of the other.

§ 2. In his Youth, after his leaving of the Univerſity of Cambridge, where Emanuel-Colledge had inſtructed him with the Light, and nouriſh'd him with the Cup of that famous Univerſity, he did, with ſeveral other Perſons, that proved famous in their Generation, ſit at the Feet of a moſt excellent Gamaliel; attending upon that eminently Holy Man of God, whom I will venture to call, Saint Blackerby. That Reverend Richard Blackerby, whoſe moſt Angelical ſort of Life, you may read among the laſt of Sam. Clark's Collections, was a Tutor to Mr. Stone; and you may reaſonably expect, that ſuch a Scholar, ſhould have a double Portion of the Spirit, which there was in ſuch a Tutor.

§ 3. Having been an accompliſhed, induſtrious, but yet perſecuted Miniſter of the Goſpel, in England, he came to New-England, in the ſame Ship that brought over Mr. Cotton, and Mr. Hooker. A Ship, which in thoſe Three Worthies, brought from Europe a richer Loading, than the richeſt that ever ſail'd back from America in the Spaniſh Flota; even that Wreck which had on Board, among other Treaſures, one entire Table of Gold, weighing above Three thouſand and three hundred Pound. Indeed the Foundation of New England had a precious Jem laid in it, when Mr. Stone arrived in theſe Regions.

But the Circumſtances of this Removal, require to be related with more of Particularities. The Judicious Chriſtians that were coming to New-England with Mr. Hooker, were deſirous to obtain a Collegue for him, and being diſappointed pointed of obtaining Mr. Cotton for that purpoſe, (who nevertheleſs took it very kindly, that Mr. Hooker had ſent them unto him) they began to think, that a couple of ſuch great Men might be more ſerviceable aſunder, than together. So their next Agreement was, to procure ſome able and godly young Man, who might be an Aſſiſtant unto Mr. Hooker, with ſomething of a Diſciple alſo; and thoſe Three, Mr. Shepard, Mr. Norton, and Mr. Stone, were to this end propoſed; and Mr. Stone, then a Lecturer at Torceſter in Northampton-ſhire, was the Perſon upon whom at length it fell, to accompany Mr. Hooker into America.

§ 4. From the New-Engliſh Cambridge, he went Collegue to Mr. Hooker, with a choſen and a devout Company of Chriſtians, who gathered a famous Church, at a Town which they call'd Hartford, upon the well-known River of Connecticut. There he continued feeding the Flock of our Lord, fourteen Years, with Mr. Hooker, and ſixteen Years after him; till he that was born at Hartford in England, now on July 20. 1663. died in Hartford of New-England; and went unto the Heavenly Society, whereof he would with ſome Longing ſay, Heaven is the more deſirable, for ſuch Company as Hooker, and Shepard, and Hains, who are got there before me.

§ 5. His way of living was godly, ſober, and righteous, and like that great Apoſtle who was his Name-ſake, he could ſeriouſly and ſincerely profeſs, Lord, thou knoweſt all things; thou knoweſt that I love thee. But there were two things, wherein the Power of Godlineſs uſes to be moſt remarkably manifeſted and maintained; and he was remarkable for both of theſe things; namely, frequent Faſtings, and exact Sabbaths. He would, not rarely, ſet apart whole Days for Faſting and Prayer before the Lord, whereby he ripened his bleſſed Soul for the Inheritance of the Saints in Light. And when the Weekly Sabbath came, which he ſtill began in the Evening before, he would compoſe himſelf unto a moſt heavenly Frame in all things, and not let fall a Word, but what ſhould be grave, ſerious, pertinent. Moreover, it was his Cuſtom, that the Sermon which he was to preach on the Lord's Day in his Aſſembly, he would the Night before, deliver to his own Family. A Cuſtom which was attended with ſeveral Advantages.

§ 6. Being ordained the Teacher of the Church in Hartford, he apprehending himſelf under a particular and peculiar Obligation, to endeavour the Edification of his People, by a more Doctrinal way of Preaching: Accordingly, as he had the Art of keeping to his Hour, ſo he had an incomparable Skill at filling of that Hour with Nervous Diſcourſes, in the way of Common-place and Propoſition, handling the Points of Divinity, which he would conclude with a brief and cloſe Application: And then he would in his Prayer, after Sermon, put all into ſuch pertinent Confeſſions, Petitions, and Thankſgivings, as notably digeſted his Doctrine into Devotion. He was a Man of Principles, and in the Management of thoſe Principles, he was both a Load ſtone, and a Flint-ſtone.

§ 7. He had a certain Pleaſancy in Converſation, which was the Effect and Symptom of his moſt ready Wit; and made Ingenious Men to be as Covetous of his Familiarity, as Admirers of his Ingenuity. Poſſibly he might think of what Suidas reports concerning Macarius, That by the Pleaſancy of his Diſcourſes on all Occaſions, he drew many to the Ways of God. He might be inclined, like Dr. Staunton, who ſaid, I have uſed my ſelf to be cheerful in Company, that ſo Standers-by might be the more in Love with Religion, ſeeing it conſiſtent with Cheerfulneſs. Hence Facetious Turns were almoſt Natural to him, in his Converſation with ſuch, as had the Sence to comprehend the Subtleties of his Reparties. But ſtill under ſuch a Reſerve, as to eſcape the Sentence of the Canon of the Council of Carthage, Clericum ſcurrilem & verbis turpibus Joculatorem, ab officio Retrahendum eſſe cenſemus.

§ 8. Reader, What ſhould be the meaning of this? Our Mr. Stone, about, or before the Year 1650, when all things were in a profound Calm, delivered in a Sermon his Pre-apprehenſions, that Churches among them would come to be broken by Schiſm, and ſudden Cenſures, and angry Removes: And that e'er they were aware, theſe Miſchiefs would ariſe among them; in the Churches Prayers againſt Prayers, Hearts againſt Hearts, Tears againſt Tears, Tongues againſt Tongues, and Faſts againſt Faſts, and horrible Prejudices and Underminings. Many Years did not paſs, before he ſaw in his own Church, all of this accompliſhed. He little thought that his own Church, muſt be the Stage of theſe Tragedies, when he told ſome of his Friends, That he ſhould never want their Love. He did live to undergo what we are now going to ſignifie:

Towards the latter end of his time, this preſent evil World, was made yet more Evil unto him, through an unhappy Difference, which aroſe between him and a Ruling Elder in the Church, whereof he was himſelf a Teaching Elder. They were both of them Godly Men; and the true Original of the Miſunderſtanding between Men that were of ſo Good an Underſtanding, has been rendred almoſt as obſcure as the Riſe of Connecticut-River. But it proved in its unhappy Conſequences, too like that River in its great Annual Inundations; for it overſpread the whole Colony of Connecticut. Such a monſtrous Enchantment there was upon the Minds even of thoſe who were Chriſtians, and Brethren, that in all the Towns round about, the People generally made themſelves Parties, either to one ſide, or t'other, in this Quarrel; tho' Multitudes of them, ſcarce ever diſtinctly knew, what the Quarrel was: And the Factions inſinuated themſelves into the ſmalleſt, as well as the greateſt Affairs of thoſe Towns. From the Fire of the Altar, there iſſued Thundrings and Lightnings, and Earthquakes, through the Colony. As once in Conſtantinople, a Fire that began in the Church conſumed the Senate-Houſe. Thus the Fire which began in the Church more than a little affected the Senate-Houſe in Connecticut: And the People alſo were many of them as fiercely ſet againſt one another, as the Combites in the Poet were againſt the Tentyrites. A World of Sin was doubtleſs committed, even by Pious Men on this Occaſion, while they permitted ſo many things contrary to the Law of Charity, and ſo much miſpending of their Time, and miſplacing of their Zeal, as muſt needs occur in their woful Variance. Alas! How many of Solomon's wiſe Proverbs were explained and inſtanced in the Follies of theſe Conteſts! Indeed, for the compoſing of theſe Brangles, there was the Help of Council called in; but every Council fetch'd from the Neighbourhood, was thought prejudiced; for which Cauſe, at laſt, a Council was deſired from the Churches about Boſton, in the Maſſachuſet Bay, whoſe Meſſengers took the pains, thus to Travel more than an Hundred Miles for the Pacification of theſe Animoſities; and a ſort of Pacification was thereby attained; but yet not without the Diſmiſſion and Removal of many Vertuous People, further up the River; whereby ſome other Churches came to be gathered, which are now famous in our Iſrael. 'Tis not eaſy to comprehend, and I wiſh no ſuch Faithful Servant of God may experience it; how much the Spirit of Mr. Stone, was worn by the Continual Dropping of this Contention. — Gutta cavat Lapidem. But the Duſt of Mortality being thrown upon thoſe Good Men, they have not only left ſtinging one another, but alſo they are together Hived with Unjarring Love, in the Land that flows with what is better than Milk and Honey. As for Mr. Stone, if it were Metaphorically true (what they Proverbially ſaid) of Beza, that he had no Gall, the Phyſicians that opened him after his Death, found it Literally true in this worthy Man.

§ 9. In his Church-Diſcipline, he was, perhaps, the exacteſt of that which we call Congregational, and being asked once to give a Deſcription of the Congregational Church-Government, he replied, It was a ſpeaking Ariſtacracy in the Face of a ſilent Democracy.

§ 10. He was an Extraordinary Perſon at an Argument; and as clear, and ſmart a Diſputant, as moſt that ever lived in the World. Hence, when any Scholar came to him with any Queſtion, it was his Cuſtom to bid him take which part the Quæriſt himſelf pleaſed, either Poſitive or Negative, and he would moſt Argumentatively diſpute againſt him; whereby having diſputed one another into the Narrow of the Caſe, he would then give the Enquirer the moſt Judicious and ſatisfying Determination of his Problem, that could be imagined. Yea, what Cicero ſays of one, might almoſt be ſaid of him, Nullam unquam in Diſputationibus rem deſendit, quam non probarit; nullum oppugnavit, quem non everterit.

§ 11. The World has not been entertained with many of his Compoſures. But certain Strokes of Mr. Hudſon and Mr. Cowdrey, fetch'd one Spark out of this well compacted Stone; which was, A Diſcourſe about the Logical Notion of a Congregational Church; wherein ſome thought, that as a Stone from the Sling of David, he has mortally wounded the Head of that Goliah, A National Political Church. At leaſt, he made an Eſſay, to do what was done by the Stone of Bohan, ſetting the Bounds between Church and Church, as That between Tribe and Tribe.

Moreover, I find in a Book, which a late Author hath written On Free-Grace, this Paſſage; Might the World be ſo happy, as to ſee a very Elaborate Confutation of the Antinomians, written by a very acute and ſolid Perſon, a Great Diſputant, viz. Mr. Stone of New-England, a Congregational Divine, it would eaſily appear, that the Congregational are not Antinomian. And Mr. Baxter, in one of his laſt Works, does utter his Dying Wiſhes, for the Reſurrection of that buried Manuſcript.

But one of the moſt Elaborate things written by Mr. Stone, or indeed, in this Land, is his Body of Divinity; wherein the Reader has in a Richardſonian Method, curiouſly drawn up the Doctrine of the Proteſtant, and Reformed, and New-Engliſh Churches; and the Marrow of all that had been Reached, by the hard and long Studies of this Great Student in Theology. This Rich Treaſure has often been Tranſcribed by the vaſt Pains of our Candidates for the Miniſtry; and it has made ſome of our moſt Conſiderable Divines. But all Attempts for the Printing of it, hitherto proved Abortive.

CHAP. XVII.

The LIFE of Mr. WILLIAM THOMPSON.

§ 1. THere is no Experienced Miniſter of the Goſpel, who hath not in the Caſes of Tempted Souls, often had this Experience, that the Ill Caſes of their diſtempered Bodies, are the frequent Occaſion and Original of their Temptations. There are many Men, who in the very Conſtitution of their Bodies, do afford a Bed, wherein buſy and bloody Devils, have a ſort of a Lodging provided for them. The Maſs of Blood in them, is diſordered with ſome Fiery Acid, and their Brains or Bowels have ſome Juices or Ferments, or Vapours about them, which are moſt unhappy Engines for Devils to work upon their Souls withal. The Vitiated Humours in many Perſons, yield the Steams, whereinto Satan does inſinuate himſelf, till he has gained a ſort of Poſſeſſion in them, or at leaſt, an Opportunity to ſhoot into the Mind, as many Fiery Darts, as may cauſe a ſad Life unto them; yea, 'tis well if Self-Murder be not the ſad end, into which theſe hurred People are thus precipitated. New-England, a Country where Splenetic Maladies are prevailing and pernicious, perhaps above any other, hath afforded Numberleſs Inſtances, of even pious People, who have contracted thoſe Melancholy Indiſpoſitions, which have unhinged them from all Service or Comfort; yea, not a few Perſons have been hurried thereby to lay Violent Hands upon themſelves at the laſt. Theſe are among the unſearchable Judgments of God!

§ 2. Mr. William Thompſon was a Reverend Miniſter of the Goſpel, who felt in himſelf, the Vexations of that Melancholy, which Perſons in his Office do ſo often ſee in others. He was a very powerful and ſucceſsful Preacher; and we find his Name ſometimes joined in the Title-Page of ſeveral Books, with his Countryman, Mr. Richard Mather, as a Writer. Nor was New-England the only part of America, where he zealouſly publiſhed the Meſſages and Myſteries of Heaven, after that the Engliſh Hierarchy had perſecuted him from the like Labours in Lancaſhire, over into America; but upon a Miſſion from the Churches of New-England, he carried the Tidings of Salvation by our Lord Jeſus Chriſt into Virginia: Where he ſaw a Notable Fruit of his Labours, until that Faction there, which call'd it ſelf, The Church of England, perſecuted him from thence alſo. Satan, who had been after an extraordinary manner irritated by the Evangelic Labours of this Holy Man, obtained the Liberty to ſift him; and hence, after this Worthy Man had ſerved the Lord Jeſus Chriſt, in the Church of our New-Engliſh Braintree, he fell into that Balneum Diaboli, a black Melancholy, which for divers Years almoſt wholly diſabled him for the Exerciſe of his Miniſtry: But the end of this Melancholy, was not ſo Tragical, as it ſometimes is with ſome, whom yet becauſe of their Exemplary Lives, we dare not cenſure for their Prodigious Deaths. It is an Obſervation of no little Conſequence, in our Chriſtian Warfare, That for all the fierce Temptations of the Devil upon us, there is a Time limited; an Hour of Temptation. During this Time, the Devil may grow the more furious upon us, the more we do Reſiſt him. We muſt Reſiſt until the Time, which is prefixt by God, but unknown to us, is expired: And then, we ſhall find it a Law in the Inviſible World ſtrictly kept unto, That if the Reſiſtance be carried on to ſuch a Period, tho' perhaps with many Intervening Foyle, the Devil will be gone; yea, whether he will or no, we muſt be gone. There is a Law for it, which obliges him to a Flight, and a Flight that carries a Fright in it; a Fear from an Apprehenſion that God, with his Good Angels, will come in, with terrible Chaſtiſements upon him, if he preſume to continue his Temptations one Moment longer, than the Time that had been allow'd unto him. All this, may be implied, in that Paſſage of the Apoſtle, Reſiſt the Devil, and he will flee from you. And as our Lord, being Twice more furiouſly Tempted by the Devil, Drew near to God, with Extraordinary Prayer; but when the Time for the Temptation was out, God by his Angels then ſenſibly drew near unto him, with freſh Conſolations: To this, no doubt, the Apoſtle refers, when he adds, Draw nigh to God, and he ſhall draw nigh to you. Accordingly, the Paſtors and the Faithful, of the Churches in the Neighbourhood, kept Reſiſting of the Devil, in his cruel Aſſaults upon Mr. Thompſon, by continually Drawing near to God, with ardent Supplications on his Behalf: And by praying always, without Fainting, without ceaſing, they ſaw the Devil at length Flee from him, and God himſelf Draw near unto him, with unutterable Joy. The End of that Man is Peace!

§ 3. A ſhort Flight of our Poetry ſhall tell the reſt.

REMARKS

On the Bright and the Dark Side, of that American Pillar,
The Reverend Mr. William Thompſon;
Paſtor of the Church at Braintree.
Who Triumphed on Dec. 10. 1666.

BUT may a Rural Pen try to ſet forth
Such a Great Fathers Ancient Grace and Worth!

I undertake a no leſs Arduos Theme,
Than the Old Sages found the Chaldee Dream.
'Tis more than Tythes of a profound Reſpect,
That muſt be paid ſuch a Melchizedeck.

Oxford this Light, with Tongues and Arts doth Trim;
And then his Northern Town doth challenge him.
His Time and Strength he center'd there in this;
To do Good Works, and Be what Now he is.
His Fulgent Vertues there, and Learned Strains,
Tall comely Preſence, Life unſoil'd with Stains,
Things moſt on WORTHIES, in their Stories writ,
Did him to moves in Orbs of Service fit.
Things more peculiar yet, my Muſe, intend,
Say Stranger Things than theſe; ſo weep and end.

When he forſook firſt his Oxonian Cell,
Some Scores at once from Popiſh Darkneſs fell;
So this Reformer ſtudied! Rare Firſt Fruits!
Shaking a Crab-Tree thus by hot Diſputes,
The Acid Juice by Miracle turn'd Wine,
And rais'd the Spirits of our Young Divine.
Hearers, like Doves, flock't with contentious Wing,
Who ſhould be firſt, feed moſt, moſt Homeward bring.
Laden with Honey, like Hyblæan Bees,
They knead it into Combs upon their Knees.

Why he from Europe's Pleaſant Garden fled,
In the Next Age, will be with Horrour ſaid.
Braintree was of this Jewel then poſſeſt,
Until himſelf, he labour'd into Reſt.
His Inventory then, with Johns, was took;
A Rough Coat, Girdle with the Sacred Book.

When Reverend Knowles and he, ſail'd hand in hand,
To CHRIST eſpouſing the Virginian Land,
Upon a Ledge of Craggy Rocks near ſtav'd,
His Bible in his Boſom thruſting ſav'd;
The Bible, the beſt of Cordial of his Heart,
Come Floods, Come Flames, (cry'd he) we'll never part.
A Conſtellation of Great Converts there,
Shone round him, and his Heavenly Glory were.
GOOKINS was one of theſe: By Thompſon's Pains,
CHRIST and NEW-ENGLAND, a dear GOOKINS gains.

With a Rare Skill in Hearts, this Doctor cou'd
Steal into them Words that ſhould do them Good.
His Balſams from the Tree of Life diſtill'd,
Hearts cleans'd and heal'd, and with Rich Comforts fill'd.
But here's the Wo! Balſams which others cur'd,
Would in his own Turn hardly be endur'd.

Apollyon owing him a curſed Spleen
Who an Apollos in the Church had been,
Dreading his Traffick here would be undone
By Num'rous Proſelytes he daily won,
Accus'd him of Imaginary Faults,
And puſh'd him down ſo into diſmal Vaults:
Vaults, where he kept long Ember-Weeks of Grief,
Till Heaven Alarm'd ſent him in Relief.
Then was a Daniel in the Lions Den,
A Man, oh, how Belov'd of God and Men!
By his Bed-ſide an Hebrew Sword there lay,
With which at laſt he drove the Devil away.
Quakers too durſt not bear his keen Replies,
But Fearing it half drawn, the Trembler flies.
Like Lazarus, new raiſed from Death, appears
The Saint that had been Dead for many Years.
Our Nehemiah ſaid, Shall ſuch as I
Deſert my Flock, and like a Coward fly!
Long had the Churches begg'd the Saints Releaſe;
Releas'd at laſt, he dies in Glorious Peace.
The Night is not ſo long, but Phoſphor's Ray
Approaching Glories doth on High diſplay.
Faith's Eye in him diſcern'd the Morning Star,
His Heart leap'd; ſure the Sun cannot be far.
In Extaſies of Joy, he Raviſh'd cries,
Love, love the Lamb, the Lamb! In whom he dies.

Dec. 10. 1666.

But the Churches of New England having had another Inſtance of Affliction like that which exerciſed our Thompſon, I ſhall chuſe this Place to introduce it. Lives have been ſometimes beſt written in the way of Parallel. To Mr. William Thompſon, ſhall now therefore be Parallel'd, our Mr. John Warham.

CHAP. XVIII.

The LIFE of Mr. JOHN WARHAM.

WHen the Time of Reformation was come on, one of the more effectual things, done towards that Reformation in England, about the middle of the former Century, was to ſend about the Kingdom certain Itinerant Preachers, with a Licenſe to preach the Fundamentals of Religion, inſtead of the Stuff, with which the Souls of the People had been formerly famiſhed. Upon this occaſion, 'tis a Paſſage mentioned by the famous Dr. Burnet: Many Complaints were made of thoſe that were Licenſed to Preach; and that they might be able to juſtifie themſelves, they begin generally to write and read their Sermons: And thus did this Cuſtom begin; in which, what is wanting in the Heat and Force of Delivery, is much made up by the Strength and Solidity of the Matter: And it has produced many Volumes of as excellent Sermons, as have been preached in any Age.

The Cuſtom of Preaching with Notes, thus introduced, has been decried by many good Men, beſides Fanaticks, in the preſent Age, and many poor and weak Prejudices againſt it have been pretended. But hear the Words of the moſt accompliſhed Mr. Baxter, unto ſome Gainſayers: It is not the want of our Abilities, that makes us uſe our Notes; but it's a Regard unto our Work, and the Good of our Hearers. I uſe Notes as much as any Man, when I take Pains; and as little as any Man, when I am lazy, or buſie, and have not leiſure to prepare. Its eaſier unto us, to preach three Sermons without Notes, than one with them. He is a ſimple Preacher, that is not able to preach a Day, without Preparation, if his Strength would ſerve. Indeed I would have Diſtinction made between the reading of Notes, and the uſing of Notes. It is pity that a Miniſter ſhould ſo read his Notes, as to take away the Vivacity, and Efficacy of his Delivery; but if he ſo uſe his Notes, as a Lawyer do's the Minutes whereupon he is to plead, and carry a full Quiver into the Pulpit with him, from whence he may with one caſt of his Eye, after the lively ſhooting of one Arrow, fetch out the next, it might be a thouſand ways advantageous.

I ſuppoſe the firſt Preacher that ever thus preach'd with Notes in our New-England, was the Reverend Warham: Who though he were ſometimes faulted for it, by ſome Judicious Men, who had never heard him, yet when once they came to hear him, they could not but admire the notable Energy of his Miniſtry. He was a more vigorous Preacher than the moſt of them who have been applauded for, never looking in a Book in their Lives. His latter Days were ſpent in the Paſtoral Care and Charge of the Church at Windſor, where the whole Colony of Connecticut conſider'd him as a principal Pillar, and Father of the Colony.

But I have one thing to relate concerning him, which I would not mention, if I did not by the mention thereof, propound and expect the advantage of ſome, that may be my Readers. Know then, that tho' our Warham were as pious a Man as moſt that were out of Heaven, yet Satan often threw him into thoſe deadly Pangs of Melancholly, that made him deſpair of ever getting thither. Such were the terrible Temptations, and horrible Buffetings, undergone ſometimes by the Soul of this holy Man, that when he has adminiſtred the Lord's Supper to his Flock, whom he durſt not ſtarve by omitting to adminiſter that Ordinance; yet he has forborn himſelf to partake at the ſame time in the Ordinance, through the fearful Dejections of his Mind, which perſwaded him that thoſe bleſſed Souls did not belong unto him. The dreadful Darkneſs which overwhelmed this Child of Light in his Life, did not wholly leave him till his Death. 'Tis reported, that he did even ſet in a Cloud, when he retired unto the glorified Society of thoſe Righteous Ones, that are to ſhine forth, as the Sun in the Kingdom of their Father: Tho' ſome have aſſerted, that the Cloud was diſpelled, before he expired.

What was deſired by Joannes Matheſius, may now be inſcribed on our WARHAM, for an

EPITAPH.

CHAP. XIX.

The LIFE of Mr. HENRY FLINT.

ALtho' there is a moſt ſenſible and glorious Demonſtration of the Divine Providence over Human Affairs, in the ſtupend Variety of Human Faces, that among ſo many Millions of Men, their Countenances are diſtinguiſhable enough to preſerve the Order of Human Society, and Converſation thereon depending; yet there have been ſome notable Inſtances of Reſemblance in the World. They are not only Twins, which have ſometimes had this Reſemblance, in ſuch a degree, as to occaſion more Diverſion, than the two Soſia's in Plautus's Amphytrio; but ſome other Perſons have been too like one another to be known aſunder, without Critical Obſervations of Accidental Circumſtances. I will not mention the ſeveral Examples of Likeneſs reported by Pliny, becauſe there is frequently as much Likelineſs between a Plinyiſm and a Fable. But Merſennus gives us the Names of two Men ſo extreamly alike, that their neareſt Relations were thereby moſt notoriouſly impoſed upon. Yea, this Likeneſs has proceeded ſo far, that Polyſtratus, and Hippoclides, two Philoſophers much alike, were both born in the ſame Day; they were School-Fellows, and of the ſame Sect; they both dy'd in a great Age, and at the very ſame Inſtant. Further yet, the two famous Brothers at Riez, in France, perfectly alike, if one of them were ſick, or ſad, or ſleepy, the other would immediately be ſo too. And the Story of the three Gordians, the one exactly like Auguſtus, the ſecond exactly like Pompey, the third exactly like Scipio; he that has read Pezelius, doubtleſs will remember it.

I know not whether any of theſe Likeneſſes are greater, than what it was the Deſire and Study, and in a leſſer meaſure the Attainment of that holy and worthy Man, Mr. Henry Flint, the Teacher of Brain-tree, to have unto Mr. Cotton, the well-known Teacher of Boſton. Having Twins once born unto him, he called the one John, t'oher Cotton, and his Honouring Imitation of that Great Man, was as if he had been a Twin to John Cotton himſelf. In his exemplary Life, he was John Cotton to the Life; and in all the Circumſtances of his Miniſtry, he propounded John Cotton for his Pattern; as apprehending that he followed Jeſus Chriſt.

You may be ſure, he that Copied after ſuch an excellent Perſon, muſt write fair, tho' he ſhould happen to fall any thing ſhort of the Original.

Wherefore, having already written the Life of John Cotton, I need ſay nothing more of Henry Flint; but they are now both of them gone, where the Harmony is become yet more agreeable.

He that was a Solid Stone, in the Foundations of New-England, is gone to be a glorious One, in the Walls of the New Jeruſalem.

He died April 27. 1668. and at his Death deſerved the Epitaph once allowed unto Mentzer.

CHAP. XX.

The LIFE of Mr. RICHARD MATHER.

Florente verbo, omnia Florent in Eccleſia. Luther.

§ 1. IT is a memorable Paſſage, which Doctor Hall, after a Perſonal Examination of it, ventures to relate, as moſt credible, [in his Book of Angels,] That a certain Cripple called John Trelille, having been ſixteen Years a miſerable Cripple, did upon three Monitions in a Dream to do ſo, waſh himſelf in S. Mathern's Well, and was immediately reſtored unto the uſe of his Limbs, and became able to walk, and work, and maintain himſelf.

Reader, If thou haſt any Feebleneſs upon thy Mind, in regard either of Piety, or thy Perſwaſion about the Church-Order of the Goſpel, I will carry thee now to a Well of a S. Mathern; which Name, I ſuppoſe, to be the Corniſh Pronunciation of that, which was worn by the good Man, whoſe Hiſtory is now going to be offered.

In the Night whereon our Lord was born, there was a glorious Light, with an Hoſt of Angels gels glorioſly ſinging over Bethlehem; and the Birth of the great and good Shepherd, was thus revealed unto the Shepherds of that Country. The Magicians in the Eaſt, whether they had by their Converſations with the Inviſible World, a readier Eye to diſcern ſuch Objects, or whether it were only the Sovereign and Gracious Providence of God, which thus directed them, they probably ſaw that Glory of the Lord. Poſſibly to them at a diſtance, it might ſeem a new Star hanging over Judæa; but after two Years of Wonder and Suſpence about it, they were informed by God, what it ſignified; and when they came near the place of the Lord's Nativity, 'tis likely that this Glory, once again appeared, for their fulleſt Satisfaction. This, till I ſee a better Account, muſt be that which I ſhall take about, The Star of the Wiſe Men in the Eaſt. But I am now to add, that in all Ages, there have been Stars to lead Men unto the Lord Jeſus Chriſt: Angelical Men employ'd in the Miniſtry of our Lord, have been thoſe happy Stars; and we in the Weſt, have been ſo happy, as to ſee ſome of the firſt Magnitude; among which one was Mr. Richard Mather.

§ 2. It was at a ſmall Town, called Lowton, in the County of Lancaſter, Anno 1596, that ſo great a Man, as Mr. Richard Mather was born, of Parents that were of Credible and Ancient Families. And theſe his Parents, tho' by ſome Diſaſters, their Eſtate was not a little ſunk below the Means of their Anceſtors, yet were willing to beſtow a Liberal Education on him; upon occaſion whereof Mr. Mather afterwards thus expreſſed himſelf: By what Principles and Motives my Parents were chiefly induced to keep me at School, I have not to ſay, nor do I certainly know: But this I muſt needs ſay, that this was the ſingular good Providence of God towards me, (who hath the Hearts of all Men in his Hands) thus to incline the Hearts of my Parents; for in this thing the Lord of Heaven ſhewed me ſuch Favour, as had not been ſhewed to many my Predeceſſors and Contemporaries in that place. They ſent him to School at Winwick, where they Boarded him in the Winter; but in the Summer ſo warm was his deſire of Learning, that he travelled every Day thither, which was four Miles from his Father's Houſe. Whilſt he was thus at School, Multu tulit fecitque Puer—he met with an Extremity of Diſcouragement from the Orbilium Harſhneſs and Fierceneſs of the Pædagogue; who tho' he had bred many fine Scholars, yet for the Severity of his Diſcipline, came not much behind the Maſter of Junius, who would beat him eight times a Day, whether he were in a Fault, or no Fault. Our young Mather, tired under this Captivity, at laſt frequently and earneſtly importuned of his Father, that being taken from the School, he might be diſpoſed unto ſome Secular Calling; but when he had waded through his Difficulties, he wrote this Reflection thereupon: God intended better for me, than I would have choſen for my ſelf; and therefore, my Father, tho' in other things indulgent enough, yet in this would never condeſcend to my Requeſt, but by putting me in hope, that by his ſpeaking to the Maſter, things would be amended, would ſtill over-rule me to go on in my Studies: And good it was for me to be over-ruled by him, and his Diſcretion, rather than to be left to my own Affections and Deſire. But, O, that all School-Maſters would learn Wiſdom, Moderation, and Equity, towards their Scholars; and ſeek rather to win the Hearts of Children by righteous Loving, and courteous Uſage, than to alienate their Minds by Partiality, and undue Severity; which had been my utter Undoing, had not the good Providence of God, and the Wiſdom and Authority of my Father prevented.

§ 3. Yea, and here Almighty God made uſe of his otherwiſe cruel School-Maſter, to deliver this hopeful young Man from an Apprenticeſhip unto a Popiſh Merchant, when he was very near falling into the woful Snares of ſuch a Condition; which Mercy of Heaven unto him was accompanied with the further Mercy of living under the Miniſtry of one Mr. Palin, then Preacher at Leagh: Of whom he would long after ſay, That tho' his Knowledge of that good Man was only in his Childhood, yet the Remembrance of him was even in his Old Age comfortable to him; inaſmuch as he obſerved ſuch a penetrating Efficacy in the Miniſtry of that Man, as was not in the common ſort of Preachers.

§ 4. There were at this time, in Toxteth Park near Liverpool, a well-diſpoſed People, who were deſirous to erect a School among them, for the good Education of their Poſterity. This People ſending unto the School-Maſter of Winwick, to know whether he had any Scholar that he could recommend for a Maſter of their New School. Richard Mather was by him recommended unto that Service; and at the Perſwaſion of his Friends to attend that Service, he laid aſide his Deſire, and his Deſign of going to the Univerſity: Not unſenſible of what hath been ſtill obſerved, Scholas eſſe Theologiæ pediſſequas, ac ſeminaria Reipublicæ. Now as it cannot juſtly be reckoned any Blemiſh unto him, that at fifteen Years of Age he was a School-Maſter, who carried it with ſuch Wiſdom, Kindneſs, and grave Reſervation, as to be loved and feared by his young Folks, much above the moſt that ever uſed the Ferula; ſo 'twas many ways advantageous unto him, to be thus employed. Hereby he became a more accurate Grammarian, than Divines too often are; and at his leiſure Hours he ſo ſtudied, as to become a notable Proficient in the other Liberal Arts.

Moreover, 'twas by means hereof, that he experienced an effectual Converſion of Soul to God, in his tender Years, even before his going to Oxford; and thus he was preſerved from the Temptations and Corruptions, which undid many of his Contemporaries in the Univerſity. That more thorough and real Converſion in him, was occaſioned by obſerving a Difference between his own Walk, and the moſt exact, watchful, fruitful, and prayerful Converſation of ſome in the Family, of the learned and pious Mr. Edward Aſpinwal, of Toxteth, where he ſojourned.

journed. This Exemplary Walk of that Holy Man, cauſed many ſad Fears to ariſe in his own Soul, that he was himſelf out of the way; which Conſideration with his hearing of Mr. Harriſon, then a Famous Miniſter at Hyton, preach about Regeneration, and his reading of Mr. Perkins's Book, that ſhows, How far a Reprobate may go in Religion; were the means whereby the God of Heaven brought him into the State of a New Creature. The Troubles of Soul, which attended his New Birth, were ſo exceeding Terrible, that he would often retire from his appointed Meals unto ſecret Places, to lament his Miſeries; but after ſome time, and about the Eighteenth Year of his Age, the Good Spirit of God healed his Broken Heart, by pouring thereinto the Evangelical Conſolations of His Great and Precious Promiſes.

§ 5. After this, he became a more Eminent Bleſſing, in the Calling, wherein God had now diſpoſed him; and ſuch Notice was taken of him, that many Perſons were ſent unto him, even from Remote Places, for their Education; whereof, not a few went well accompliſhed, from him to the Univerſity. But having ſpent ſome Years in this Employment, he judged it many ways advantageous for him to go unto the Univerſity himſelf, that he might there converſe with Learned Men and Books, and more improve himſelf in Learning, than he could have done at Home. Accordingly, at Oxford, and particularly at Brazen-Noſe-College in Oxford, he now reſided, where together with the Satisfaction of ſeeing his Old Scholars, who had by his Education, been fitted for their being there, he had the Opportunity further to enrich himſelf by Study, by Conference, by Diſputation, and other Academical Entertainment: As conſidering, that the Lamps were to be lighted, before the Incenſe was to be burned in the Sanctuary. And here, he was more intimately acquainted with famous Dr. Woral, by whoſe Advice, he read the Works of Peter Ramus, with a ſingular Attention and Affection; which Advice, he did not afterwards repent that he had followed.

§ 6. But it was not very long before the People of Toxteth ſent after him, that he would return unto them, and inſtruct, not their Children as a School-maſter, but themſelves as a Miniſter: With which Invitation, he at laſt complied; and at Toxteth, Nov. 13. 1618. he preached his Firſt Sermon, with great Acceptance in a vaſt Aſſembly of People: But ſuch was the Strength of his Memory, that what he had prepared for one, contained no leſs than Six long Diſcourſes. He was after this ordained, with many others, by Dr. Morton, the Biſhop of Cheſter, who after the Ordination was over, ſingled out Mr. Mather from the reſt, ſaying, I have ſomething to ſay betwixt you and me alone. Mr. Mather was now jealous, that ſome Informations might have been exhibited againſt him for his Puritaniſm, inſtead of which when the Biſhop had him alone, what he ſaid unto him was, I have an earneſt Requeſt unto you, Sir, and you muſt not deny me: 'Tis, that you would pray for me; for I know (ſaid he) the Prayers of Men that fear God will avail much, and you I believe are ſuch a one. And being ſo ſettled in Toxteth, he married the Daughter of Edmund Holt, Eſq; of Bury in Lancaſhire, Sept. 29. 1624. which Vertuous Gentlewoman, God made a Rich Bleſſing to him, for Thirty Years together; and a Mother of Six Sons, moſt of whom afterwards proved famous in their Generation.

§ 7. He preached every Lord's Day twice at Toxteth, and every Fortnight he held a Tueſday Lecture, at Preſcot: Beſides which, he often preached upon the Holy-Days, not as thinking that any Day was now Holy, except the Chriſtian Weekly Sabbath, but becauſe there was then an Opportunity to caſt the Net of the Goſpel among much Fiſh, in Great Aſſemblies, which then were convened, and would otherwiſe have been worſe employed. In this, he followed the Examples of the Apoſtles, who preached moſt in populous Places, and this alſo on the Jewiſh Sabbaths, which yet were ſo far abrogated, that they charged the Faithful to Let no Man judge them in impoſing the Obſervation thereof upon them.

He preached likewiſe very frequently at Funerals, as knowing, that though Funeral Sermons are wholly diſuſed in ſome Reformed Churches, and have been condemned by ſome Decrees of Councils, yet this was chiefly becauſe of the common Error committed in the Laviſh Praiſes of the Dead on ſuch Occaſions, which therefore he avoided, inſtead thereof, only giving Counſels to the Living. Indeed, the Cuſtom of Preaching at Funerals may ſeem Ethnical in its Original; for Publicola made an Excellent Oration in the Praiſe of Brutus, with which the People were ſo taken, that it became a Cuſtom, for famous Men, after this, at their Death, to be ſo celebrated; and when the Women among the Romans parted with their Ornaments, for the Publick Weal, the Senate made it lawful for Women alſo to be in the like manner celebrated. Hinc mortuos Laudandi Mos fluxit, quem nos hodie ſervamus, if Polydore Virgil may, as he ſometimes may be believed. But the Magdeburgenſian Centuriators tell us that this Rite was not practiſed in the Church, before the Beginning of the Apoſtacy. However, this Watchful Miniſter of our Lord, made his Funeral-Speeches to be but a Faithful Diſcharge of his Miniſtry in Admonitions concerning the laſt things, whereby the Living might be edified. But thus in his Publick Miniſtry, he went over the 24th Chapter in the ſecond of Samuel; the firſt Chapter of Proverbs; the firſt and ſixth Chapters of Iſaiah; the twenty ſecond and twenty third Chapters of Luke; the Eighth Chapter of the Romans; the ſecond Epiſtle to Timothy; the ſecond Epiſtle of John, and the Epiſtle of Jude.

§ 8. Having ſpent about Fifteen Years, thus, in the Labours of his Miniſtry, his Lecture at Preſcot in fine, gave him to find the Truth of Quintilian's Obſervation, Magnam Famam & Magnam Quietem, eodem Tempore, Nemo poteſt Acquirere. Through the Malice of Satan, and the Envy of the Satanical, there were now brought againſt him, thoſe Complaints for his Non Conformity to the Ceremonies, which in Auguſt, 1633. procured him to be ſuſpended. The Suſpenſion continued upon him, till the November following, but then by the Interceſſion of ſome Gentlemen in Lancaſhire, and the Influence of Simon Biby, a near Alliance of the Biſhop's Viſitor, he was Reſtored. After his Reſtoration, he more exactly than ever, ſtudied the Points of Church-Diſcipline; and the Effect of his moſt careful Studies was, that the Congregational way, aſſerted by Cartwright, Parker, Baines and Ames, was the Pitch of Reformation, which he judged the Scriptures directed the Servants of the Lord humbly to endeavour. But this Liberty was not longer lived than the Year 1634. for the Arch-Biſhop of York now was that Gentleman, whom King James pleaſantly admoniſhed of his Preaching Popery, becauſe of ſome Unacceptable things in his Conduct, which taught the People to pray for a Bleſſing on his Dead Predeceſſor; and he now ſending his Viſitors, among whom the Famous Dr. Couſins was one, into Lancaſhire; where they kept their Court at Wigan, among other Hard Things, they paſſed a Sentence of Suſpenſion upon Mr. Mather, meerly for his Non Conformity. His Judges were not willing, that he ſhould offer the Reaſons, which made him Conſcientiouſly ſo diſpoſed, as then he was, but the Glorious Spirit of God enabled him with much Wiſdom, to encounter what they put upon him; inſomuch, that in his Private Manuſcripts, he entred this Memorial of it, In the Paſſages of that Day, I have this to Bleſs the Name of God for, That the Terrour of their Threatning Words, of their Purſevants, and of the reſt of their Pomp, did not terrifie my Mind, but that I could ſtand before them without being daunted in the leaſt Meaſure, but anſwered for my ſelf ſuch Words of Truth and Soberneſs, as the Lord put into my Mouth, not being afraid of their Faces at all: Which ſupporting and comforting Preſence of the Lord, I count not much leſs Mercy, than if I had been altogether preſerved out of their Hands. But all means uſed afterwards, to get off this unhappy Suſpenſion, were ineffectual; for when the Viſitors had been informed, that he had been a Miniſter Fifteen Years, and all that while never wore a Surpliſs, One of them ſwore, It had been better for him, that he had gotten Seven Baſtards.

§ 9. He now betook himſelf to a private Life, without Hope of again enjoying the Liberty of doing any more publick Work, in his Native Land; but herewithal fore-ſeeing a Storm of Calamities like to be haſtned on the Land, by the Wrath of Heaven incenſed, particularly at the Injuſtice uſed in depriving the truly Conſcientious of their Liberty, his Wiſhes became like thoſe of the Deprived Pſalmiſt, O, that I had Wings like a Dove! Lo, then would I wander far off, and remain in the Wilderneſs; I would haſten my eſcape from the Windy Storm and Tempeſt.

New-England was the Retreat which now offered it ſelf unto him; and accordingly, he drew up ſome Arguments for his Removal thither, which Arguments were indeed, the very Reaſons, that moved the Firſt Fathers of New-England unto that unparallel'd Undertaking of Tranſporting their Families with themſelves, over the Atlantic Ocean.

I. A Removal from a Corrupt Church to a Purer.
II. A Removal from a Place, where the Truth and Profeſſors of it are perſecuted, unto a Place of more Quiet and Safety.
III. A Removal from a Place, where all the Ordinances of God cannot be enjoyed, unto a Place where they may.
IV. A Removal from a Church, where the Diſcipline of the Lord Jeſus Chriſt is wanting, unto a Church where it may be practiſed.
V. A Removal from a Place, where the Miniſters of God are unjuſtly inhibited from the Execution of their Functions, to a Place where they may more freely execute the ſame.
VI. A Removal from a Place, where there are Fearful Signs of Deſolation, to a Place where one may have well grounded Hope of God's Protection.

Such a Removal, he judged That unto New-England now before him.

Theſe Conſiderations were preſented unto many Miniſters and Chriſtians of Lancaſhire, at ſeveral Meetings, whereby they were perſwaded, and even his own People of Toxteth, who dearly loved him and prized him, could not gain-ſay it, that by removing to New England, he would not Go out of his way. And hereunto he was the more inclined by the Letters of ſome Great Perſons, who had already ſettled in the Country; among whom the Renowned Hooker was one, who in his Letters thus expreſſed himſelf, In a Word, if I may ſpeak my own Thoughts freely and fully, though there are very many Places where Men may receive and expect more Earthly Commodities, yet do I believe there is no Place this Day upon the Face of the Earth, where a Gracious Heart and a Judicious Head, may receive more Spiritual Good to himſelf, and do more Temporal and Spiritual Good to others. Wherefore being ſatisfied in his Deſign for New England, after Extraordinary Supplication for the Smiles of Heaven upon him in it, he took his Leave of his Friends in Lancaſhire, with Affections on both ſides like thoſe, wherewith Paul bid Farewel to his in Epheſus; and in April, 1635. he made his Journey unto Briſtol, to take Ship there; being forced as once Brentius was, to change his Apparel, that he might eſcape the he Purſevants, who were endeavouring to apprehend him.

§ 10. On May 23. 1635, he ſet Sail from Briſtol for New-England: But when he came upon the Coaſts of New-England, there aroſe an horrible Hurricane, from the Dangers whereof his Deliverance was remarkable, and well nigh miraculous. The beſt Account of it, will be from his own Journal; where the Relation runs in theſe Words:

Auguſt 15. 1635.

'The Lord had not yet done with us, nor had he let us ſee all his Power and Goodneſs, which he would have us take the knowledge of. And therefore about break of Day, he ſent a moſt terrible Storm of Rain, and Eaſterly Wind, whereby we were, I think, in as much Danger ar ever People were. When we came to Land, we found many mighty Trees rent in pieces, in the midſt of the Bole, and others turned up by the Roots, by Fierceneſs thereof. We loſt in that Morning three Anchors and Cables; one having never been in the Water before; two were broken by the Violence of the Storm, and a third cut by the Sea-men in extremity of Diſtreſs, to ſave the Ship, and their, and our Lives. And when our Cables and Anchors were all loſt, we had no outward Means of Deliverance, but by hoiſting Sail, if ſo be we might get to Sea, from among the Iſlands and Rocks, where we were Anchored. But the Lord let us ſee, that our Sails could not help us neither, no more than the Cables and Anchors; for by the force of the Wind and Storm, the Sails were rent aſunder, and ſplit in pieces, as if they had been but rotten Rags; ſo that of divers of them, there was ſcarce left ſo much as an Hand's-breadth, that was not rent in pieces, or blown away into the Sea; ſo that at that time, all Hope that we ſhould be ſaved, in regard of any outward Appearance, was utterly taken away: and the rather, becauſe we ſeemed to drive with full force of Wind, directly upon a mighty Rock, ſtanding out in ſight above Water; ſo that we did but continually wait, when we ſhould hear and feel the doleful Cruſhing of the Ship upon the Rock. In this Extremity and Appearance of Death, as Diſtreſs and Diſtraction would ſuffer us, we cried unto the Lord, and he was pleaſed to have Compaſſion upon us; for by his over-ruling Providence, and his own immediate good Hand, he guided the Ship paſt the Rock, aſſwaged the Violence of the Sea, and of the Wind. It was a Day much to be remembred, becauſe on that Day the Lord granted us as wonderful a Deliverance as, I think, ever any People had felt. The Sea-men confeſſed, they never knew the like. The Lord ſo imprint the Memory of it in our Hearts, that we may be the better for it, and be careful to pleaſe him, and to walk uprightly before him as long as we live. And I hope we ſhall not forget the Paſſages of that Morning, until our Dying Day. In all this grievous Storm, my Fear was the leſs, when I conſidered the Clearneſs of my Calling from God this way. And in ſome meaſure (the Lord's holy Name be bleſſed for it) he gave us Hearts contented and willing, that he ſhould do with us, and ours, what he pleaſed, and what might be moſt for the Glory of his Name; and in that we reſted our ſelves. But when News was brought us into the Gun-Room, that the Danger was paſt, Oh! how our Hearts did then relent and melt within us! We burſt out into Tears of Joy among our ſelves, in Love unto the gracious God, and Admiration of his Kindneſs, in granting to his poor Servants ſuch an extraordinary and miraculous Deliverance, his Holy Name be bleſſed for evermore.

The Storm being thus allay'd, they came to an Anchor before Boſton, Auguſt 17. 1635. Where Mr. Mather abode for a little while, and with his vertuous Conſort, joined unto the Church in that place.

§ 11. He quickly had Invitations from ſeveral Towns, to beſtow himſelf upon them; and was in a great Strait, which of thoſe Invitations to accept. But applying himſelf unto Counſel, as an Ordinance of God, for his Direction, Dorcheſter was the place, whereto a Council, wherein Mr. Cotton, and Mr. Hooker, were the principal, did adviſe him. Accordingly to Dorcheſter he repaired; and the Church formerly planted there, being tranſplanted with Mr. Warham to Connecticut, another Church was now gathered here, Auguſt 23. 1636. by whoſe Choice Mr. Mather was now become their Teacher. Here he continued a Bleſſing unto all the Churches in this Wilderneſs, until his dying Day, even for near upon Four and thirty Years together. He underwent not now ſo many Changes, as he did before his coming hither; and he never changed his Habitation after this, till he went unto the Houſe Eternal in the Heavens; albeit his old People of Toxteth vehemently ſollicited his Return unto them, when the troubleſome Hierarchy in England was depoſed.

§ 12. Nevertheleſs, if Luther's three Tutors for an able Divine, Study, and Prayer, and Temptation, as Mr. Mather could not leave the two firſt, ſo the laſt would not leave him; the Wilderneſs whereinto he was come, he found not without its Temptations. He was for ſome Years exerciſed with Spiritual Diſtreſſes, and Internal Deſertions, and Uncertainties about his Everlaſting Happineſs; which Troubles of his Mind he revealed unto that eminent Perſon Mr. Norton, whoſe well-adapted Words, comforted his weary Soul. It was in theſe dark Hours, that a glorious Light roſe unto him, with a certain Diſpoſition of Soul, which I find in his private Papers thus expreſſed: My Heart relented with Tears at this Prayer, That God would not deny me an Heart to bleſs him, and not blaſpheme him, that is ſo holy, juſt, and good; tho' I ſhould be excluded from his Preſence, and go down into ever- everlaſting Darkneſs and Diſcomfort. But when theſe terrible Temptations from within were over, there were ſeveral and ſucceſſive Afflictions, which he did from abroad meet withal: Of all which Afflictions, the moſt calamitous was, the Death of his dear, good, and wiſe Conſort, by whoſe diſcreet Management of his Affairs, he had been ſo releaſed from all Secular Incumbrances, as to be wholly at Liberty, for the Sacred Employment of his Miniſtry. However, after he had continued in his Widowhood a Year and half, the State of his Family made it neceſſary for him to apply himſelf unto a Second Marriage; which he made with the pious Widow of the moſt famous Mr. John Cotton; and her did God make a Bleſſing unto him the reſt of his Days.

§ 13. My deſcribing his general Manner of Life, after he came to New-England, ſhall be only a tranſcribing of thoſe Vows, which tho' he made before his coming thither, yet he then renewed. In his private Papers, wherein he left ſome Records of the Days which he ſpent ſometimes in ſecret Humiliations, and Supplications, before the God of Heaven, and of the Aſſurances which with the Tears of a melted Soul, in thoſe Days, he received of Bleſſings obtained for himſelf, his Children, his People, and the whole Country, I find Recording the enſuing Inſtrument.

‘ 2. To be ready to do Offices of Love and Kindneſs, not only, or principally, for the Praiſe of Men, to purchaſe Commendation for a good Neighbour, but rather out of Conſcience to the Commandment of God. Phil. 2. 4. 1 Cor. 10. 24. Heb. 13. 16.

‘ Renewed with a Profeſſion of Diſabilities in my ſelf, for Performance, and of Deſire to fetch Power from Chriſt, thereunto to live upon him, and act from him, in all Spiritual Duties.

15. D. 6. M. 1636.

Richard Mather.

§ 14. His way of Preaching was very plain, ſtudiouſly avoiding obſcure and foreign Terms, and unneceſſary Citation of Latine Sentences; and aiming to ſhoot his Arrows, not over the Heads, but into the Hearts of his Hearers. Yet ſo Scripturally, and ſo Powerfully did he preach his plain Sermons, that Mr. Hooker would ſay, My Brother Mather is a mighty Man; and indeed he ſaw a great Succeſs of his Labours, in both Englands, converting many Souls unto God. His Voice was loud and big, and uttered with a deliberate Vehemency, it procured unto his Miniſtry an awful and very taking Majeſty; nevertheleſs, the ſubſtantial and rational Matter delivered by him, cauſed his Miniſtry to take yet more, where-ever he came. Whence, even while he was a young Man, Mr. Gellibrand, a famous Miniſter in Lancaſhire, hearing him, enquired, What his Name was? When Anſwer was made, That his Name was Mather; he replied, Nay, his Name ſhall be Matter; for believe it, this Man hath good Subſtance in him. He was indeed a Perſon eminently Judicious, in the Opinion of ſuch as were not in Controverſies then managed, of his own Opinion; by the ſame Token, that when Dr. Parr, then Biſhop in the Iſle of Man, heard of Mr. Mather's being ſilenced, he lamented it, ſaying, *If Mr.*Mather be ſilenced, I am ſorry for it; for he was a Solid Man, and the Church of God hath a great Loſs of him. And it was becauſe of his being eſteemed ſo Judicious a Perſon, that among the Miniſters of New-England, he was improved more than the moſt, in explaining and maintaining the Points of Church-Government then debated. The Diſcourſe about the Church-Covenant, and the Anſwer to the Thirty two Queſtions, both written in the Year 1639, tho' they paſs under the Name of the Miniſters of New-England, Mr. Mather was the ſole Author of them. And when the Platform of Church-Diſcipline was agreed by a Synod of theſe Churches, in the Year 1647. Mr. Mather's Model was that out of which it was chiefly taken.

And being thereto deſired, he alſo prepared for the Preſs, a very elaborate Compoſure, which he entituled, A Plea for the Churches of New-England.

Moreover, to defend the Congregational, in thoſe leſſer Punctilio's, wherein it ſeems to differ from the Presbyterian Way of Church-Government; he Printed one little Book in Anſwer to Mr. Herl, and another in Anſwer to Mr. Rutherford: And yet was he ſo little Browniſtically affected, that beſides his Apprehenſion of ſo vicious and infamous a Man, as Brown's not being likely to be the Diſcoverer of any momentous Truth in Religion, he wrote a Treatiſe to prove, That whatever Priviledge and Liberty may belong to the Fraternity, the Rule of the Church belongs only to its Presbytery. Furthermore, when the Propoſitions of the Synod, in 1662. were oppoſed by Mr. Davenport, Mr. Mather was called upon to Anſwer him; which he did, and therein, as in his former Anſwers, he gave ſuch Inſtances of a cloſe Regard unto the Truth, and the Cauſe, without the leaſt Expreſſion of Diſreſpect unto the Perſons anſwered, That as my Reverend Friend Mr. Higginſon hath ſaid ſometimes to me, He was a Patern for all Anſwerers to the end of the World.

But as he judged that a Preacher of the Goſpel ſhould be, he was, a very hard Student: Yea, ſo intent was he upon his beloved Studies, that the Morning before he died, he importuned the Friends that watched with him, to help him into the Room, where he thought his uſual Works and Books expected him; to ſatisfie his Importunity, they begun to lead him thither; but finding himſelf unable to get out of his Lodging-Room, he ſaid, I ſee I am not able, I have not been in my Study ſeveral Days; and is it not a lamentable thing, that I ſhould loſe ſo much time? He was truly abundant in his Labours: For tho' he was very frequent in hearing the Word from others, riding to the Lectures in the Neighbouring Towns, till his Diſeaſe diſabled him, and even to Old Age writing Notes at thoſe Lectures, as the Renowned Hilderſham likewiſe did before him; yet he preached for the moſt part every Lord's Day twice; and a Lecture once a Fortnight, beſides many Occaſional Sermons both in publick and private; and many Caſes of Conſcience, which were brought unto him to be diſcuſſed. Thus his Miniſtry in Dorcheſter, beſides innumerable other Texts of Scripture, went over the Book of Geneſis, to Chap. 38. the Sixteenth Pſalm; the whole Book of the Prophet Zechariah; Matthew's Goſpel to Chap. 15. the Fifth Chapter in the Firſt Epiſtle to the Theſſalonians; and the whole Second Epiſtle of Peter; his Notes whereon he reviewed and renewed, and fitted for the Preſs before his Death.

He alſo publiſhed a Treatiſe of Juſtification, whereof Mr. Cotton and Mr. Wilſon gave this Teſtimony: Thou ſhalt find this little Treatiſe to be like Mary*'s Box of Spikenard, which waſhing the* Paths of Chriſt towards us, (as that did his Feet) will be fit to perfume not only the whole Houſe of God with the Odour of his Grace, but alſo thy Soul with the Oyl of Gladneſs, above what Creature Comforts can afford. The manner of handling thou ſhalt find to be ſolid, judicious, ſuccinct, and pithy, fit (by the Bleſſing of Chriſt) to make wiſe unto Salvation. And beſides theſe things, he publiſhed Catechiſms, a leſſer and a larger, ſo well formed, that a Luther himſelf would not have been aſhamed of being a Learner from them.

Nevertheleſs, after all theſe Works, he was as Nazianzen ſaith of Athanaſius, Ὑψηλὸς τοῖς ἔργοις, ταπεινὸς δὲ τοῖς φρονήμασι· As low in his Thoughts, as he was high in his Works. He never became twice a Child through Infirmity, but was always one, as our Saviour hath commanded us, in Humility.

§ 15. A Jerom would weep at the Death of ſuch a Man, as portending Evil to the Place of his former, uſeful, holy Life: But ſuch an occaſion of Tears, the Death of Mr. Mather muſt at laſt give to his bereaved People. Some Years before his Death, [having ſent over unto his old Flock in Lancaſhire, a like Teſtimony of his Concernment for them] he compoſed and publiſhed, A Farewel Exhortation to the Church and People of Dorcheſter, conſiſting of Seven Directions, wherein his Flock might read the Deſign and Spirit of his whole Miniſtry among them; on a certain Lord's Day, he did, by the Hands of his Deacons, put theſe little Books into the Hands of his Congregation, that ſo whenever he ſhould by Death take his Farewel of them, they might ſtill remember how they had been exhorted. But Old Age came now upon him, wherein tho' his Hearing was decay'd, and (as with Great Zanchy) the Sight of one of his Eyes: Yet upon all other Accounts he enjoyed an Health both of Body and Spirit, which was very wonderful, and agreeable as well to his Hardy Conſtitution, as to the ſimple and wholſome Diet, whereto he ſtill accuſtomed himſelf. He never made uſe of any Phyſician all his Days; nor was he ever ſick of any Acute Diſeaſe, nor in Fifty Years together, by any Sickneſs detained ſo much as one Lord's Day from his Publick Labours. Only the two laſt Years of his Life, he felt that which has been called Flagellum Studioſorum, namely, The Stone which proved the Tombſtone, whereby all his Labours and Sorrows, were, in fine, brought unto a Period.

§ 16. A Council of Neighbouring Churches being aſſembled at Boſton, Apr. 13. 1669. to adviſe about ſome Differences ariſen there, Mr. Mather, for his Age, Grace and Wiſdom, was choſen the Moderator of that Reverend Aſſembly. For divers Days, whilſt he was attending this Conſultation, he enjoyed his Health better, than of ſome later Months; but as Luther was at a Synod ſurprized with a Violent Fit of the Stone, which cauſed him to Return home, with little Hope of Life, ſo it was with this Holy Man. On Apr. 16. lodging at the Houſe of his Worthy Son, a Miniſter in Boſton, he was taken very Ill with a Total Stoppage of Urine, wherein according to Solomon's Expreſſion for it, The Wheel was broken at the Ciſtern. So his Lord found him about the Bleſſed Work of a Peace-maker; and with an Alluſion to the Note of the German Phœnix, Mr. Shepard of Charls-town, put that Stroke afterwards into his Epitaph:

Vixerat in Synodis, Moritur Moderator in Illis.

Returning by Coach, thus Ill, unto his Houſe in Dorcheſter, he lay patiently expecting of his Change; and, indeed was a Pattern of Patience, to all Spectators, for all Survivors. Though he lay in a Mortal Extremity of Pain, he never ſhrieked, he rarely groaned, with it; and when he was able, he took Delight in Reading Dr. Goodwin's Diſcourſe, about Patience, in which Book he read until the very Day of his Death. When they asked him, how he did? His uſual Anſwer was, Far from well, yet far better than mine Iniquities deſerve. And when his Son ſaid unto him, Sir, God hath ſhewed his great Faithfulneſs unto you, having upheld you now for the Space of more than Fifty Years in his Service, and employed you therein without ceaſing, which can be ſaid of very few Men, on the Face of the Earth; he Replied, you ſay true; I muſt acknowledge, the Mercy of God hath been great towards me, all my Days; but I muſt alſo acknowledge, that I have had many Failings, and the Thoughts of them abaſeth me, and worketh Patience in me. So did he, like Auſtin having the Penitential Pſalms before him, until he died, keep up a Spirit of Repentance, as long as he lived. Indeed this Excellent Man did not ſpeak much in his laſt Sickneſs, to thoſe that were about him, having ſpoken ſo much before. Only his Son perceiving the Symptoms of Death upon him, ſaid, Sir, If there be any ſpecial thing, which you would recommend unto me to do, in caſe the Lord ſhould ſpare me on Earth, after you are in Heaven, I would intreat you to expreſs it; at which, after a little Pauſe, with lifted Eyes and Hands, he returned, A ſpecial thing which I would commend to you, is, Care concerning the Riſing Generation in this Country, that they be brought under the Government of Chriſt in his Church, and that when grown up, and qualified, they have Baptiſm, for their Children. I muſt confeſs, I have been Defective, as to Practice; yet I have publickly declared my Judgment, and manifeſted my Deſires to practiſe that which I think ought to be attended; but the Diſſenting of ſome in our Church, diſcouraged me. I have thought, that Perſons might have Right to Baptiſm, and yet not to the Lord's Supper; and I ſee no cauſe to alter my Judgment, as to that particular. And I ſtill think, that Perſons Qualified, according to the Fifth Propoſition of the late Synod-Book, have Right to Baptiſm for their Children. His Dolours continued on him, till April 22. at Night; when he quietly breathed forth his laſt; after he had been about Seventy Three Years, a Citizen of the World, and Fifty Years a Miniſter in the Church of God.

§ 17. The Preſage which he had upon his Mind, of his own approaching Diſſolution, was like that in Ambroſe among the Ancients, and in Geſner, Melancthon, and Sandford, among the Modern Divines; whence the laſt of the Texts, whereon he inſiſted, in his Public Miniſtry, was that in 2 Tim. 4. 6, 7, 8. The Time of my Departure is at hand, — I have finiſhed my Courſe. And the laſt before that, was that in Job 14. 14. All the Days of my appointed Time will I wait, till my Change come. And for a Private Conference, he had prepared a Sermon on thoſe Words, in 2 Cor. 5. 1. For we know, that if our Earthly Houſe of this Tabernacle were Diſſolved, we have a Building of God, an Houſe not made with Hands, Eternal in the Heavens; but by his Removal from this Houſe to that, he was prevented in the Preaching of the Sermon. How ready he was for the Laſt End of his Days thus expected, is a little expreſſed in certain Paſſages of his Laſt Will; the whole, of which if I ſhould here tranſcribe it, after the Example of Beza, writing the Life of Calvin, and Bannoſius writing the Life of Ramus, and other ſuch Examples, it would be no Ungrateful Entertainment, but I ſhall only offer that one Paragraph, wherein his Words were:

Concerning Death, as I do believe, it is appointed for all Men once to die; ſo becauſe I ſee a great deal of Unprofitableneſs in my own Life, and becauſe God hath alſo let me ſee ſuch Vanity and Emptineſs even in the beſt of thoſe Comforts, which this Life can afford, that I think I may truly ſay, That I have ſeen an end of all Perfection: Therefore if it were the Will of God, I ſhould be glad to be removed hence, where the Beſt, that is to be had, doth yield ſuch little Satisfaction to my Soul, and to be brought into his Preſence in Glory, That there I might find, (for there I know it is to be had) that ſatisfying and All ſufficient Contentment, in him, which under the Sun is not to be enjoyed; in the mean time I deſire to ſtay the Lord's Leiſure. But thou, O Lord, how long!

Thus Lived, and thus Died Richard Mather; able to make his Appeal unto an Evil World, at his leaving of it.

Nullum Turbavi; Diſcordes Pacificavi:
Læſus Suſtinui; nec mihi Complacui.

§ 18. The Special Favour of God, which was granted unto ſome of the Ancients, that that their Sons after them ſucceeded in the Miniſtry of the Goſpel; and which was particularly granted unto the Happy Fathers of Gregory Nazianzen, Gregory Nyſſen, Baſil and Hilary; This was enjoyed by many of thoſe good Men, that planted our New Engliſh Churches, but by none more comfortably, than by Mr. Mather. It is mentioned as the Felicity of the Bleſſed Vetterus a Bohemian Paſtor in the former Century, that he gave the Church no leſs than Four Sons, to be Worthy Miniſters of the Goſpel. Such was the Felicity of our Mather. Many Years before he died, he had the Comfort of ſeeing Four Sons that were Preachers of no mean Conſideration among the People of God; It was counted the ſingular Happineſs of the Great Roman Metellus, that he expired in the Arms of his Four Sons, who were all of them Eminent Perſons; As happy was our Mather; and in a Chriſtian Account, much more happy. And ſince his Death, our common Lord, has been ſerved by Mr. Samuel Mather Paſtor of a Church in Dublin, Mr. Nathanael Mather, Paſtor after him of the ſame Church, but before that, of Barnſtable, and then of Roterdam, and ſince that of a Church in London; Mr. Eleazar Mather, Paſtor of a Church at our Northampton; and Mr. Increaſe Mather, Teacher of a Church in Boſton, and Preſident of Harvard Colledge. Now becauſe this Mighty Man, and the youngeſt but one of theſe Arrows in his Hand, were not only Lovely and Uſeful in their Lives, but alſo, in their Deaths not divided (for he died about Three Months after his Father) it will be Pity to Divide them, in the Hiſtory of their Lives: And therefore of this Mr. Eleazar Mather, we will here ſubjoin ſome ſmall Account.

§ 19. Mr. Eleazar Mather (Born May 13. 1637.) having paſſed through his Education in Harvard-Colledge, and having by the Living and Lively Proofs of a Renewed Heart, as well as a well-inſtructed Head, recommended himſelf unto the Service of the Churches, the Church of Northampton became the happy Owner of his Talents. Here he laboured for Eleven Years in the Vineyard of our Lord; and then the Twelve Hours of his Days Labour did expire, not without the deepeſt Lamentations of all the Churches, as well as his own; then ſitting along the River of Connecticut. As he was a very zealous Preacher, and accordingly ſaw many Seals of his Miniſtry, ſo he was a very pious Walker; and as he drew towards the End of his Days, he grew ſo remarkably Ripe for Heaven, in an Holy, Watchful, Fruitful Diſpoſition, that many obſerving Perſons did prognoſticate his being not far from his End. He kept a Diary of his Experiences; wherein the laſt Words that ever he wrote were Theſe.

July 10. 1669.

‘This Evening, if my Heart deceive me not, I had ſome ſweet Workings of Soul after God in Chriſt, according to the Terms of the Covenant of Grace. The General and Indefinite Expreſſion of the Promiſe, was an Encouragement unto me to look unto Chriſt, that he would do that for me, which he has promiſed to do for ſome, nor dare I exclude my ſelf; but if the Lord will help me, I deſire to lie at his Feet, and accept of Grace, in his own way, and with his own Time, through his Power enabling of me. Though I am Dead, without Strength, Help or Hope in my ſelf, yet the Lord requireth nothing at my Hands in my own Strength; but that by his Power, I ſhould look to him. To work all his Works in me and for me. When I find a dead Heart, the Thoughts of this are exceeding ſweet and reviving, being full of Grace, and diſcovering the very Heart and Love of Jeſus.

He Died July 24. 1669. Aged Years, about Thirty Two.

Sic Roſa, ſic Violæ, prima Moriuntur in Herba,

§ 20. The Dying Words of his Father unto his Brother, about the Riſing Generation, cauſed him, in the few Sabbaths now left, before his own Death, to preach ſeveral Sermons upon the Methods that ſhould be taken for the conveying and ſecuring of Religion, with the good Preſence of God unto that Generation. [on 1 Kings 8. 57.] The Notes which he left written of thoſe pungent Sermons, were afterwards Printed, and Reprinted, with a Preface of his Brothers: And when unto the other Signs of Churches left by God, therein mentioned; namely, the People's being abandoned unto a ſleighty Spirit; an ill Uſe made of Temporal Proſperity; A Spirit of Diviſion and Contention, turning Religion it ſelf into Faction; The Efficacious and Victorious Operations of the Holy Spirit, withdrawn from Ordinances; he added, the Death of ſuch Men, as are chief means of continuing the Preſence of God unto a People; he therein gave unto us too true an Interpretation, of the ſad Providence, which was juſt going by Death to remove him, from this People unto a better World.

CHAP. XXI.

The LIFE of Mr. ZACHARIAH SYMMES.

§ 1. THE Emperour Probus having an Honour for the Memory of his Friend Aradion, honoured him with a Tomb Two Hundred Foot broad. But our Value for the Memory of the Divines that formerly ſerved our Churches, muſt not be meaſured by the Breadth of our Hiſtory concerning them. We cannot give much Breadth to the Room, which we dedicate in this our Hiſtory, unto the Memory of our Symmes, becauſe we have not received very large Informations concerning him. Nevertheleſs, according to the French Proverb, Un Miniſtre ne doit Scavoir que ſa Bible, A Miniſter ſhould know nothing but his Bible; here was one worthy the Name of a Miniſter; for he knew his Bible well, and he was a Preacher of what he knew, and a Sufferer for what he preach'd.

§ 2. Reader, We ſhall not confound our ſelves with Fables and Endleſs Genealogies, but we ſhall truly edify our ſelves. if we enquire ſo far into the Genealogy of Mr. Zechariah Symmes, as to recite a Paſſage written by Mr. William Symms, the Father of our Zechariah, in a Book which was made by a Godly Preacher, that was hid in the Houſe of Mr. William Symms, the Father of William, from the Rage of the Marian Perſecution. 'I note it as a ſpecial Mercy of God, (writes he, in a Leaf of that Book) that both my Father and Mother were Favourers of the Goſpel, and hated Idolatry, under Queen Mary's Perſecution. I came to this Book by this means: Going to Sandwich in Kent, to preach the Firſt or Second Year, after I was ordained Miniſter, Anno 1587. or 88. and Preaching in Saint Mary's, where Mr. Pawſon, an Ancient Godly Preacher, was Miniſter, who knew my Parents well and me too, at School; he, after I had finiſhed my Sermons, came and brought me this Book for a Preſent, acquainting me with the abovementioned Circumſtances. And then he adds, I charge my Sons Zechariah and William, before him, that ſhall judge the Quick and the Dead, that you never defile your ſelves with any Idolatry or Superſtition whatſoever, but learn your Religion out of God's Holy Word, and worſhip God as he himſelf hath preſcribed, and not after the Devices and Traditions of Men. Scripſi. Dec. 6. 1602.

§ 3. Deſcended from ſuch Anceſtors, our Zechariah, was Born April 5. 1599. at Canterbury, and the Savoury Expreſſions in the Letters yet extant, which he wrote while he was a Youth in the Univerſity of Cambridge, intimate, that he was New-Born, while yet a Child.

After his leaving the Univerſity, he was employed for a while in the Houſes of ſeveral Perſons of Quality, as a Tutor to their Children, but not without Moleſtation from the Prelates for his Conſcientious Non Conformity to certain Rites in the Worſhip of God, then impoſed on the Conſciences of the Faithful. When he had paſſed through theſe Changes, he was choſen in the Year 1621. to be a Lecturer at Atholines, in the City of London: And after many Troubles from the Biſhops-Courts, for his Diſſent from things, whereto his Conſent had never been required by the Great Shepherd and Biſhop of our Souls, he removed from thence in the Year 1625. to Dunſtable, where his Troubles from the Biſhops-Courts continuing, he at length tranſported himſelf, with his Family into an American Wilderneſs. New England, and Charles-Town in New-England, enjoy'd him all the reſt of his Days, even until Feb. 4. 1670; when he retired into a better World.

§ 4. His Epitaph at Charles-Town, where he was Honourably Interr'd, mentions his having lived Forty nine Years and Seven Months with his Vertuous Conſort; by whom he had Thirteen Children, Five Sons, and Eight Daughters, and annexes this Diſtich.

A Prophet lies under this Stone:
His Words ſhall live, tho' he be gone.

But as that eminent Perſon order'd this Clauſe for his own Epitaph, inſtead of other Glories and Memoirs, which uſe to adorn a Monument, Here lies the Friend of Sir Philip Sidney. Thus the Epitaph of this eminent Perſon, might have mentioned one thing more, which might have gone in the room of many other Teſtimonies, to the Ability, and Integrity, and Zeal, that ſignalized him; Here lies the Friend of Mr. Jeremiah Burroughs. For we have ſtill to ſhew the Letters, which that great Man ſent unto our Symmes, after his coming to New-England; Letters wherein he compares the Love between them, unto that between David and Jonathan; as having been a ſort of Sworn Brothers to each other, ever ſince their living together at the Univerſity.

CHAP. XXII.

The LIFE of Mr. JOHN ALLIN.

——Sequitur quem Vita perennis;
Vivus enim Semper, qui bene vixit, erit.

§ 1. WHY is the dead Relation of Father Abraham called, His Dead, no leſs than eight ſeveral times, in one ſhort Chapter? It ſeems, tho' Death has diſſolved our old Relation to our dead Friends, yet it has not releaſed us from all our Duty to them; they are ſtill ſo far ours, that we owe ſomething unto their Memory. Reader, We are entertaining our ſelves with Our Dead; but if we do nothing to keep alive their Memory with us, we may bluſh to call them ours.

Among theſe, one is Mr. John Allin. But if there were ſuch an Officer in uſe among us, as once was among the Greeks, to meaſure the Monuments of dead Perſons, according to their Vertues, he would greatly complain of it, that I have been able to recover no more Memoirs of a Perſon, whoſe Vertues and Merits were far from the ſmalleſt ſize, among thoſe who did worthily in Iſrael.

§ 2. He was born in the Year 1596.

Having paſſed his Curſus, in the Tongues and Arts, until he was, as Theodorit ſays of Innocent, 'Αγχινοία ϗ συνέσει κοσμέμενος, Ingenii & prudentiæ ornamentis egregiè Inſtructus: He became a faithful Preacher of Chriſt, chooſing rather to dig in that Rock of Zion, than in a Rock of Diamonds.

It is an ancient Obſervation, that there were three Things done by the Holy Spirit of God, on and for the Prophets, which were employ'd in Publick Service for him: One was to give them Courage againſt the Rage of Adverſaries. Another was, to give them Wiſdom, for to regulate their Conduct. A third was, to give them Vertue and Holineſs, that their own Conſciences might not ſting them, when they were to beſtow Aculeate Rebukes upon the Vices of other Men.

This Obſervation, which is as uſeful as ancient, was made by them that conſidered thoſe Words of the Prophet Micah: I am full of, (1.) Power, by the Spirit of the Lord. And of, (2.) Judgment. And of, (3.) Vertue. With all of theſe Excellencies, did the Holy Spirit of God, in a gracious Meaſure adorn our Allin. But when the Evil Spirit raiſed a Storm of Perſecution upon the Puritans, in the Engliſh Nation, theſe Excellencies could not ſhelter this worthy Man, from the Injuries of it; but rather expoſe him thereunto. Leaving of England, whereof he might have taken that Farewel;

Non careo Patriâ, me caret illa magis.

He choſe an American Wilderneſs, for his Country: And cheerfully conformed his Genteel Spirit, unto the Difficulties of ſuch a Wilderneſs: Being only of Auſtin's Mind, about the baniſh'd Chriſtians, Miſerrimum eſſet, ſi alicubi duci poterant, ubi Deum ſuum non inveniſſent.

§ 3. He was a ſufficient Scholar, and (which is the way to become ſo) a diligent Student; but yet his Experimental Acquaintance with Chriſtianity, taught him to be of the Mind, which the Learned Suarez expreſſed, when he did uſe to ſay, That he eſteemed more that little Pittance of Time, which he conſtantly ſet apart every Day, for the private Examination of his own Heart, than all the other part of the Day, which he ſpent in Voluminous Controverſies. His

Accompliſhments were conſiderable; and being a very humble Man, he found, that ſanctified Knowledge grows moſt luxuriant in the fat Valleys of Humility: Being a very patient Man, he found that the Dew of Heaven, which falls not in a ſtormy or cloudy Night, was always falling on a Soul ever ſerene, with the meekeſt Patience. He was none of thoſe low-built thatch'd Cottages, that are apt to catch Fire: But like an high-built Caſtle, or Palace, free from the Combuſtions of Paſſion. He was indeed one of ſo ſweet a Temper, that his Friends Anagrammatiſed, JOHN ALLIN, into this:

IN HONI ALL.

§ 4. His Polemical Abilities, were diſcovered, in a Treatiſe called, A Defence of the Nine Poſitions: Wherein (being of Calvin's Mind, Ink is too dear and coſtly with us, if we doubt to ſpend Ink in Writing, to teſtifie thoſe things, which Martyrs of old ſealed with their Blood:) He, with Mr. Shepherd of Cambridge, handle the Points of Church-Reformation; at what rate, not my Pen, but our famous old Mr. Cotton's, in his Preface to a Book of Mr. Norton's, may deſcribe unto us.

Shepardus, unà cum Allinio Fratre, (Fratrum dulce par) uti eximiâ pietate florent ambo, & Eruditione non mediocri, atque etiam Myſteriorum Pietatis prædicatione (per Chriſti Gratiam) efficaci admodum, itâ egregiam novarunt Operam in abſtruſiſſimis Diſciplinæ nodis fæliciter enodandis. Verba horum Fratrum, uti ſuaviter ſpirant Pietatem, Veritatem, Charitatem Chriſti; ita ſperamus fore (per Chriſti Gratiam) ut multi, qui à Diſciplinâ Chriſti alieniores erant, odore horum unguentorum Chriſti effuſorum delebati atque delincti, ad amorem ejus & pellecti & pertracti, eam avidius arripiunt atque amplexentur.

Moreover, another Judicious Diſcourſe of his, in Defence of the Synod held at Boſton, in the Year 1662, has declared his Principles about Church-Diſcipline, as well as his Abilities to maintain his Principles. The Perſon againſt whom he wrote this Defence, was that very Perſon, whoſe Life ſhall be the very next in our Hiſtory: For,

Hi Motus Animorum, atque hæc certamina tanta,
Pulveris exigui Jactu compreſſa quieſcunt.

§ 5. When the holy Church of Dedham was gathered, in the Year 1638, he became their Paſtor: And in the Paſtoral Care of that Church he continued, until Aug. 26. 1671; when after ten Days of eaſie Sickneſs, he died, as Myconius well expreſſes it, Vitaliter mori; in the Seventy fifth Year of his Age.

Now, according to that of Jerom, Lacrymæ Auditorum Tuæ ſiut Laudes; behold, Reader, the Praiſes of this excellent Man. His Flock publiſhed the two laſt Sermons that ever he preached; one whereof was on Cant. 8. 5. Who is this that comes up from the Wilderneſs, leaning on her Beloved? The other on John 14. 22. Peace I leave with you. But they write their Preface with Tears; and with fearful Praiſes they celebrate him, as one altogether above their Praiſes; and a conſtant, faithful, diligent Steward in the Houſe of God; a Man of Peace and Truth, and a burning and a ſhining Light. Adding, The Crown is fallen from our Heads: Oh! that it were with us as in times paſt! Which Deſire of theirs, has been happily anſwered, in two moſt worthy Succeſſors.

The Character once given to Philippus Gallus, may very juſtly be now made the Epitaph of our John Allin.

Epitaphium.

CHAP. XXIII.

Cadmus Americanus. The LIFE of Mr. CHARLES CHANCEY.

Suadet Lingua, Jubet Vita.

§ 1. There was a famous Perſon, in Times, by Chronological Computation, as ancient as the Days of Joſhua, known by the Name of Cadmus; who carried not only People, but Letters alſo, from Phænitia into Bœtia. The Grecian Fable of a Serpent, in the Story of Cadmus, was only derived from the Name of an Hivite, which by his Nation belonged unto him; for an Hivite ſignifies a Serpent, in the Language of Syria. This Renowned Cadmus, was indeed a Gibeonite, who having been well treated by Joſhua, and by Joſhua not only continued in the Comforts of Life, but alſo inſtructed and employed in the Service of the true God,

God, he retained ever after moſt honourable Sentiments of that Great Commander. Yea, when after Ages, in their Songs, praiſed Apollo for his Victory over the Dragon Pytho, they uttered but the Diſguiſed Songs of Canaan, wherein this Cadmus had celebrated the Praiſes of Joſhua, for his Victory over Og the King of Baſhan. Cadmus having been (as one of the Greek Poets writes of him) Educated in Hebron or Debir, the Univerſities of Paleſtine, was fitted thereby to be a Leader in a Great Undertaking; and when the Oppreſſion of Cuſhanriſhathaim, cauſed a Number of People to ſeek out New Seats, there were many who under the Conduct of Cadmus, tranſported themſelves into Greece, where the Notions and Cuſtoms of an Iſraelitiſh Original, were therefore a long while preſerved, until they were confounded with Pagan Degeneracies. There is Reaſon to think, that a Colony of Hebrews themſelves did now ſwarm out into Peloponneſus, where the Book of Maccabees will help us to find Lacedemonians (or Cadmonians, that is, the Followers of Cadmus, in their True Etymology) of the Stock of Moraham; and we know that Strabo tells us, That Cadmus had Arabians (and the Iſraclites, were by ſuch Heathen Writers accounted ſo) in his Company. Accordingly, when we read, that a College among the Old Grecians was called Academia, we may ſoon inform our ſelves, that it was at firſt called Cadmia or Cadmea, in Commemoration of Cadmus, the Phœnician; to whom thoſe Parts of the World were firſt beholden, for ſuch Nurſeries of good Literature and Religion.

Theſe Reſearches into Antiquity, had not, in this place been laid before my Reader, if they might not have ſerved as an Introduction unto this piece of New-Engliſh Hiſtory; that when ſome Eccleſiaſtical Oppreſſions drove a Colony of the Trueſt Iſraelites into the Remoter Parts of the World, there was an Academy quickly founded in that Colony: And our Chancey was the Cadmus of that Academy; by whoſe vaſt Labour and Learning, the Knowledge of the Lord Jeſus Chriſt, ſerved by all the Human Sciences, hath been conveyed unto Poſterity.

It is now fit, That a few Memoirs of that Reverend Man ſhould fill our Pages.

§ 2. Mr. Charles Chancey was an Hartfordſhire Man; born in the Year 1589. of Parents that were both Honourable and Religious. Being ſent from thence to Weſtminſter-School, his Hopeful Proficiency in Good Literature, within a ſhort while, ripened him for the Univerſity. And it was one thing which cauſed him to have the more feeling Reſentments of the Famous Powder-Plot, the Report whereof will make a Noiſe as long as the Fifth of November is in our Kalendar; that at the time when that Plot ſhould have taken its horrid Effect, he was at that School, which muſt alſo have been blown up, if the Parliament-Houſe had periſhed. The Univerſity of Cambridge, was that which afterward Inſtructed and Nouriſhed this Eminent Perſon, and fitted him for the Service wherein he had Opportunity afterwards to demonſtrate that he was indeed ſuch a Perſon. The particular College whereof he was here a Member, was Trinity College; by the ſame Token, that in the Lachrymæ Cantabrigienſes, publiſhed by the Cantabrigians, on the Death of Queen Ann, I find him in that Style compoſing and ſubſcribing one of the moſt Witty Latin Poems in that whole Collection. Here he proceeded Batchelour of Divinity: And having an Intimate Acquaintance with that Great Man Dr. Uſher, whom all Men have confeſſed Worthy of the Character, wherewith Voetius mentions him, Vaſtæ Lectionis & Eruditionis Theologus, inq; Antiquitate Eccleſiaſtica Verſatiſſimus, he had hereby an Opportunity farther to advantage himſelf with the Ancient Monuments in King James's Library.

§ 3. By the Head of the Houſes he was choſen Hebrew-Profeſſor; but the Vice-Chancellour Dr. Williams, preferring a Kinſman of his own to that Place, at the ſame time he put our Mr. Chancey into the Place of Greek-Profeſſor; And as one well known to be an Accurate Grecian, 'twas he that afterwards was the C. C. the Vir Doctiſſimus & Piiſſimus, whoſe ἐπίκειως, you have at the Beginning of Leigh's Critica Sacra upon the New-Teſtament: He was indeed a Perſon incomparably well skill'd in all the Learned Languages; eſpecially in the Oriental; and eminently in the Hebrew: In his obtaining whereof, his Converſation with a Jew for the ſpace of a Year, was no little Advantage to him. I know that the Hebrew Tongue, as an Exception to the General Rule, Difficilia quæ Pulchra, is more eaſily Attained, than any that I have yet obſerved; and hence we ſee even our Engliſh Women, ſometimes in a little while, and with a little pains, grown as expert at it as the Ladies Pauſa or Blaſilla, by Jerom therefore celebrated; and I have wiſhed that many in the World, were more moved by thoſe Words of a Worthy Author, Auſim ſpondere, illos qui Studiis Hebraicis, tantum Temporis Impenderent, quantum Tubulo Nicotianæ imbibendo, (quo nunc pars bona Studioſorum pro Hydragogo uti conſuevit) tum Mane, tum Veſperi, impendi ſolet, progreſſus in hujuſce Linguæ Cognitione, haud Vulgares, brevi eſſe facturos, adeo ut mirentur, ſe eſſe tum doctos, antequam Didicerint. Nevertheleſs, this Tongue is as eaſily forgotten. But being once attained, and therewithal preſerved and improved, good Men will find as our Mr. Chancey did, that the Conjunct Profit and Pleaſure of it were inexpreſſible; and that the Talents wherewith it would furniſh them to do ſo many Services for the Church of God, were ſuch as to make them join with Luther, in his Proteſtation, That he would not part with his Knowledge of the Hebrew, for many Thouſands of Pounds; or to approve the (uſual) modeſt Words of Melancthon, Scio me vix primis Labris deguſtaſſe Hebraicus Literas; ſed tamen, hoc Ipſum, quod didici quantulumcunq; eſt, propter Judicium de Religione, Omnibus

Mundi Regnis, omniumq; opibus Longe Antepono.

§ 4. When he left the Univerſity, he became a Diligent and Eminent Preacher of the Goſpel at Marſton; but after ſome time, he removed himſelf to Ware, where the Hand of the Lord was with him, and many believed, and turned unto the Lord. Here 'twas that the Succeſſes of his Faithful Miniſtry, in the Inſtruction of the Ignorant, and the Converſion of the Ungodly, became a Matter of much Obſervation.

But when Satan wanted a Shibboleth for the Diſcovering and Extinguiſhing ſuch an Holy Miniſtry, throughout the Nation, the Miſerable Arch-Biſhop Laud, ſerved him with a Licence for Sports on the Lord's Day; whereby the People were after an horrid manner invited unto the Profanation of that Sacred Reſt; and indeed of every thing Sacred with it. Then 'twas that our Mr. Chancey hearing the Drums beat for Dances and Frolicks on the Lord's Day, was, like other Good Men, afraid that God would break the Reſt of the Kingdom, and cauſe Drums to be beaten up for Marches and Battels on that very Day. But when he was inhibited from attending of other Exerciſes, on the Afternoons of the Lord's Day, he ſet himſelf to Catechiſe as many as he could, both old and young; which, as the Biſhop in Sheeps Cloathing ſaid, was As bad as Preaching. And by ſuch Methods, he ſtill continued ſerving the Intereſts of the Goſpel.

§ 5. But about this Time there aroſe a Storm of moſt Unreaſonable, but Irreſiſtible Perſecution, upon thoſe Miniſters, who were Wellwiſhers to the Progreſs of the Proteſtant Reformation in the Kingdom; and Mr. Chancey was one of thoſe who ſuffered in it. In Mr. Ruſhworth's Collections for the Year 1629. I find this Paſſage.

> 'Mr. Charles Chancey, Miniſter of Ware, uſing ſome Expreſſions in his Sermon, That Idolatry was admitted into the Church; That the Preaching of the Goſpel would be ſuppreſſed; that there is much Atheiſm, Popery, Arminianiſm and Hereſy, crept into the Church: And this being look'd upon to raiſe a Fear among the People, that ſome Alteration of Religion would enſue; he was queſtioned in the High Commiſſion; and by Order of that Court, the Cauſe was referred to the Biſhop of London, being his Ordinary; who ordered him to make a Submiſſion in Latin.

This Worthy Man, being by the Terrors and Cenſures of that Infamous Court, ſuddenly ſurpriſed unto a ſort of Submiſſion, which gave too good an Acknowledgment of the Conſtitution, whereinto the Laudian Faction was then precipitating the Church of England, he no ſooner got a little out of the Temptation, but he ſignalized his Repentance of that Submiſſion, with a Zeal not unlike that of the Bleſſed Cranmer againſt his own Right Hand, for ſubſcribing his Recantation. Although he was not long without the Faith of his having this his too ſudden Compliance with the Demands of his Perſecutors, Forgiven in Heaven, yet he never forgave himſelf as long as he liv'd on Earth; he would on all Occaſions expreſs himſelf extreamly diſſatisfied, as well at the Ill Things then advanced in the Church of England, as at himſelf alſo for ever in the leaſt, conſenting to thoſe things. Thoſe Memorable Puritans which were driven into America, all of them had a Diſlike of the Deformities, which they ſaw yet cleaving to the Church of England; but I queſtion, whether any diſliked them with ſuch fervent Expreſſions of Indignation, as our Mr. Chancey, who thus took the Revenges of a deep Repentance upon his own Conformity to them. And few ſuffered for Non-Conformity more than he by Fines, by Gaols, by Neceſſities to abſcond, and at laſt by an Exile from his Native Country. Yea, though he had lived a very exact Life, yet when he came to die, more than Forty Years after this, he left theſe Words in his laſt Will and Teſtament. In regard of Corrupt Nature, I do acknowledge my ſelf to be a Child of Wrath, and ſold under Sin, and one that hath been polluted with Innumerable Tranſgreſſions and Mighty Sins, which as far as I know and can call to Remembrance, I keep ſtill freſh before me, and deſire with Mourning, and ſelf abhorring ſtill to do, as long as Life ſhall laſt; and eſpecially my ſo many ſinful Compliances with and Conformity unto Vile Human Inventions, and Will-Worſhip and Hell-bred Superſtition, and Patcheries ſticht into the Service of the Lord, (which the Engliſh Maſs-Book, I mean, the Book of Common Prayer, and the Ordination of Prieſts, &c. are fully fraught withal.

§ 6. There was once a Parliament in England, whereto a Speech of no leſs a Man than the Lord Digby, made a Complaint, That Men of the beſt Conſcience were then ready to fly into the Wilderneſs for Religion: And it was complained in an Elegant Speech of Sir Benjamin Rudyard's, A great Multitude of the King's Subjects, ſtriving to hold Communion with us, but ſeeing how far we were gone, and fearing how much further we would go, were forced to fly the Land, very many into Salvage Wilderneſſes, becauſe the Land would not bear them: Do not they that cauſe theſe things, caſt a Reproach upon the Government. And in a Notatable Speech of Mr. Fiennes, A certain Number of Ceremonies in the Jugment of ſome Men, Unlawful, and to be rejected of all Churches, in the Judgment of all other Reformed Churches, and in the Judgment of our own Church, but Indifferent, yet what Difference, yea what Diſtraction have theſe Indifferent Ceremonies raiſed among us? What hath deprived us of ſo many Thouſands of Chriſtians, which deſired, and in all other Reſpects deſerved to hold Communion with us; I ſay, what hath deprived us of them, and ſcattered them into I know not what Places and Corners of the World, but theſe Indifferent Ceremonies? It was then that Mr. Pym, in the Name of the Houſe of Commons, Impeaching A. B. Laud, before the Houſe of Lords had theſe Expreſſions. You have the King's Loyal Subjects baniſhed out of the Kingdom, not as Elimelech, to ſeek for Bread in Foreign Countries, by reaſon of the great ſcarcity which was in Iſrael; but travelling abroad for the Bread of Life, becauſe they could not have it at home, by Reaſon of the Spiritual Famine of God's Word, cauſed by this Man, and his Partakers: And by this means you have the Induſtry of many Thouſands of his Majeſty's Subjects carried out of the Land. And at laſt the whole Houſe of Commons put this Article in the Remonſtrance, which they then made unto the King. The Biſhops and their Courts did impoveriſh many Thouſands; and ſo afflict and trouble others, that great Numbers, to avoid their Miſeries, departed out of the Kingdom, ſome into New-England, and other parts of America.

But it is now time to tell my Reader, That in the Tranſportations, thus Reaſonably and Parliamentarily complained of, one of the moſt Conſiderable Perſons removing into America, was Mr. Charles Chancey; who arrived at Plymouth in New England, a few Days before the Great Earthquake which happened Jan. 1. 1638.

§ 17. After he had ſpent ſome time in the Miniſtry of the Goſpel, with Mr. Reyner of Plymouth, he removed unto a Town a little Northward of it, called Scituate, where he remained for Three and Three times Three Years, cultivating the Vineyard of the Lord in that Place. Of this his Miniſtry at Scituate, let me preſerve at leaſt, this one Remembrance: Having his Ordination Renewed at his Entrance upon this New Relation, he did at that Solemnity Preach upon thoſe Words, in Prov. 9. 3. Wiſdom hath ſent forth her Maidens; and in his Diſcourſe, making a moſt affectionate Reflection upon his former Compliances with the Temptations of the High Commiſſion-Court, he ſaid with Tears, Alas, Chriſtians, I am no Maiden; my Soul hath been defiled with Falſe Worſhip; How wondrous is the Free-Grace of the Lord Jeſus Chriſt, that I ſhould ſtill be employ'd among the Maidens of Wiſdom!

Afterwards, upon an Invitation from his Old People at Ware, to return unto them, he purpoſed a Removal with his Family back to England; but when he came to Boſton in order thereunto, the Overſeers of Harvard-College at Cambridge, which now wanted a Preſident, by their vehement Importunity, prevailed with him to accept the Government of that Society; wherein worthily chuſing their Way, and ſitting chief, and dwelling as a King in the midſt of his Army, he continued unto the Day of his Death. From this time I behold him as another Elijah, ſhedding his Benign Influences on the School of the Prophets; and with Immenſe Labours Inſtructing, Directing, and Feeding the Hope of the Flock in the Wilderneſs. At his Inſtalment, he concluded his Excellent Oration, made unto a Venerable Aſſembly, then filling the Colledge-Hall with ſuch a Paſſage as this unto the Students there, Doctiorem, certe Præſidem, & huic Oneri ac Stationi multis Modis Aptiorem, vobis facile licet Invenire ſed Amantiorem, & veſtri Boni Studioſiorem, non Invenietis. And certainly he was as good as his Word. How Learnedly he now conveyed all the Liberal Arts unto thoſe that ſat at his Feet; how Wittily he moderated their Diſputations, and other Exerciſes; how Conſtantly he expounded the Scriptures to them in the Colledge-Hall; how Fluently he expreſſed himſelf unto them, with Latin of a Terentian Phraſe, in all his Diſcourſes; and how Carefully he Inſpected their Manners, and was above all things concerned for them, that they might anſwer a Note which he gave them [When you are your ſelves Intereſted in the Lord Jeſus Chriſt, and his Righteouſneſs, you will be fit to be Teachers of others: Iſaiah cries, Now ſend me! When his Sins were pardoned: But without this, you are fit for nothing:] will never be forgotten by Many of our moſt worthy Men, who were made ſuch Men, by their Education under him: For we ſhall find as many of his Diſciples in our Catalogue of Graduates, as there were in that Colledge of Believers, at Jeruſalem, whereof we read in the firſt Chapter, of the Acts of the Apoſtles. But if there were any Diſadvantages of an Haſty Temper, ſometimes in his Conduct, they ſtill were preſently ſo corrected with his Holy Temper, that this did but invite Perſons to think the more of that Elias, to whom we have compared him; and therefore, as they were forgotten by every one, in the very Day of them, they are, at this Day, much more to be ſo: Mr. Urian Oakes that preached his Funeral Sermon, well ſaid, The mention thereof was to be wrapped up in Elijah's Mantle. But if the whole Country were ſenſible of the Bleſſing which all New England enjoyed in our Chancey now at Cambridge; the Church of Cambridge, to whom he now joined, and Preached, had a very particular Cauſe to be ſo. And ſo indeed they were; by the ſame Token, that when he had been above a Year or two in the Town, the Church kept a whole Day of THANKSGIVING to God, for the Mercy, which they enjoy'd in his being there.

§ 8. He was a moſt Indefatigable Student, which with the Bleſſing of God, render'd him a moſt Incomparable Scholar. He roſe very early, about Four a Clock, both Winter and Summer; and he ſet the Scholars an Example of Diligence, hardly to be followed. But Bene Oraſſe, eſt Bene Studuiſſe: By interweaving of conſtant Prayers into his Holy Studies, he made them indeed Holy; and my Reader ſhall count, if he pleaſes, how oft in a Day he addreſſed Heaven with Solemn Devotions, and judge whether it might not be ſaid of our Charles, as it was of Charles the Great, (which is indeed the way to become Great) Carolus plus cum Deo, quam cum Hominibus loquitur; when

I have told, that at his firſt getting up in a Morning, he commonly ſpent near an Hour in ſecret Prayer, before his minding any other Matter; then viſiting the Colledge-Hall, he Expounded a Chapter, (which was firſt read from the Hebrew) of the Old Teſtament, with a ſhort Prayer before, and a long one after his Expoſition: He then did the like upon another Chapter, with a Prayer before, and after, in his Family: About Eleven a Clock in the Forenoon, he retired again about Three Quarters of an Hour for Secret Prayer. At Four a Clock in the Afternoon he again did the like. In the Evening he Expounded a Chapter, (which was firſt read into the Greek) of the New Teſtament, in the Colledge Hall, with a Prayer in like manner before and after; the like he did alſo in his Family: And when the Bell rang for Nine at Night, he retired for another Hour of Secret Prayer before the Lord. But on the Lord's Days Morning, inſtead of his accuſtomed Expoſition, he preached a Sermon upon a Text, for about Three Quarters of an Hour, in the Colledge Hall. Beſides all this, he often ſet apart whole Days for Prayer with Faſting alone by himſelf; yea, and ſometimes he ſpent whole Nights in Prayer, before the heavenly Father, who ſees in ſecret. Many Days of Prayer with Faſting, he alſo kept with his Religious Conſort: And many ſuch Days he alſo kept with his Family, calling in the Company and Aſſiſtance of three or four Godly Neighbours: Beſides what he did more publickly among the People of God. Behold, how near this good Man approached unto the ſtricteſt and higheſt Sence of Praying always.

Chryſoſtom tells us, That Chriſt and Paul commanded us to make our Prayers, Βραχείας ϗ πυκνὰς, ἐκ ἐξ' ὀλίγων διαλειμμάτων, Short and frequent, and with little Diſtances between them. And Caſſianus mentions it, as the univerſal Conſent of the Ancients, Utilius cenſent Breves Orationes, ſed creberrimas fieri. The Prayers of our Chancey were ſuch for their Frequency, whatever they might be ſometimes for their Brevity. Moreover, 'twas his conſtant Practice, not only on the Lord's Days in the Evenings, but every Day, Morning and Evening, after he had Expounded a Chapter, to examine his Children and Servants with ſome fit Queſtions thereupon. On the Lord's Days, once a Fortnight, he preached publickly in the Forenoons: But when he did not ſo, he had the Morning Sermon repeated at Noon, and the Afternoon Sermon repeated at Night, and both the Sermons repeated once more in the Evening, before the next Lord's Day: At which times he ſtill took occaſion to reinforce the more notable Truths, occurring in the Sermons, with pertinent Applications of his own.

At this rate this eminent Perſon ran the Race that was ſet before him: And tho' one would have thought, that ſo laborious a Race muſt have been quickly run, yet if that may be an Encouragement unto diligent Followers, let them know that Fourſcore Years of Age diſpatch'd it not; he continued a green Olive-Tree in the Houſe of God, long after he was Gray-headed for Age; and in his Old Age he did not leave off to bring forth Fruit, unto the Praiſe of God, I find that the Law of Redemption, in the laſt Chapter of Leviticus, (in Hoſ. 3. 2. alluded unto) valued a Man above Sixty, but at Fifteen Shekels; whereas a Man between Twenty and Sixty, was valued at (an Homer of Barly, or) no leſs than Fifty Shekels. But the worth of our Chancey at Eighty, continued much what as it was when he was under Sixty; and he was a Perſon of great Worth and Uſe unto the laſt. Indeed it was his laudable Ambition to be ſo. Whence, after Age had enfeebled him, the Fellows of the Colledge once leading this Venerable Old Man, to preach a Sermon in a Winter-Day, they, out of Affection unto him, to diſcourage him from ſo difficult an Undertaking, told him, Sir, You'll certainly die in the Pulpit. But he laying hold on what they ſaid, as if they had offered him the greateſt Encouragement in the World, preſs'd the more vigorouſly through the Snow-drift, and ſaid, How glad ſhould I be, if what you ſay might prove true!

§ 9. He kept a Diary, the loſs of which I can't but mention with regret; nevertheleſs I can report thus much of it, that it was methodized under the Heads of Sins and Mercies. Under the Head of Sins, he took Notice of his Failings, as if he had ſpoken a paſſionate Word, or been dull and cold in his Duties, and the like. Under the Head of Mercies, he took Notice of the ſpecial and more ſignal Favours, which Heaven beſtowed upon him. He was alſo very much in Meditation, and in that one important kind and part of it Self-examination; eſpecially in his Preparations for the Lord's Table. From his Diary we have recovered a little relating thereunto; and for a Specimen, the Reader ſhall here have a few of his Notes, which he entitled,

Trial of my Brotherly Love.

1. Not to ſuffer Sin upon any one.
2. To love all the Saints for Truth's ſake.
3. Love of the Godly Dead.

By reciting theſe Qualifications of a Chriſtian, by which this exemplary Chriſtian would Examine himſelf, I have deſcribed how exemplarily he himſelf was qualified.

§ 10. His Conduct of himſelf in his Miniſtry (wherein he preached over the whole Goſpel of John, the Acts of the Apoſtles, the Three Epiſtles of John, and largely handled the Doctrine of Self-denial, Faith, Juſtification, Adoption, Sanctification, and many other Occaſional Subjects) will be moſt exactly apprehended from the Council which I find him writing to another Miniſter, in a Letter dated Dec. 20. 1665.

‘ In your Miniſterial Work (ſaith he) let me give you a few Directions.

‘ 1. BE much in Prayer to God: Thereby
‘ you ſhall find more Succour and Succeſs, in your Miniſtry, than by all your ‘ Study.
‘ 2. Preach much about the Miſery of the ‘ State of Nature, the Preparatives to Converſion; the Nature of Converſion, or Effectual ‘ Calling; the Neceſſity of Union and Communion
‘ with Chriſt; the Nature of Saving and Juſtifying Faith, and the Fruits thereof Love and ‘ Good Works, and Sanctification.
‘ 3. Explain the Words of your Text clearly;
‘ bring clear Proof of parallel Scriptures; let ‘ your Reaſons be Scripture-Reaſons; but be ‘ moſt in Application; which is ſpent in Five ‘ Uſes, Refutation of Error, Information of the ‘ Truth, Correction of Manners, Exhortation
‘ and Inſtruction in Righteouſneſs. All which ‘ you find in 2 Tim. 3. 16, 17. And there is a ‘ Fifth Uſe, viz. of Comfort, 1 Cor. 14. 3.
‘ 4. Preach not high Notions. Read Ames's
‘ Medulla; and the Explication of 1 Cor. 2. 1, 2.
‘ Neither uſe any dark Latin Words, or any de‘ rived thence, which poor People can't under‘ ſtand, without explaining of them, ſo that the ‘ pooreſt and ſimpleſt People may underſtand
‘ all.
‘ 5. I adviſe you being once in Office to Ca-
‘ techiſe every Lord's Day in the Afternoon,
‘ ſo as to go through the Catechiſe once in a ‘ Year.
‘ Finally, Be very careful of Scriptural Rules
‘ to God's Miniſters, 'Ορθομεῖν τον λογὸν, ὀρθοπαδεῖν,
‘ ϗ ἐν προσσευχαῖς προσκαρτερεῖν.

Thus did he adviſe, without occaſion to make Confeſſion of the Poet, which of all is the moſt unhappy for the Preacher.

——— Monitis ſum, minor ipſe meis.

He was, indeed, an exceeding plain Preacher, frequently ſaying, Artis eſt Celare Artem: And yet a more Learned, and a more Lively Preacher has rarely been heard. He would therefore mention it, as a pious and prudent Complaint of Reverend Mr. Dod, That too many Miniſters deal like unskilful Archers; they ſhoot over the Heads, and much more over the Hearts of their Hearers, and miſs their Mark, while they ſoar ſo high by handling deep Points; or by uſing of obſcure and dark Expreſſions, or Phraſes, in their Preaching. But for the preaching of our Chancey, the ſame Account may be given of it, that Photius gives about the Preaching of Athanaſius: In Sermonibus ubique in Locutione Clarus eſt, & Brevis, & Simplex, Acutus tamen & Altus, & Argumentationibus, omnino vehemens, & in his Tanta Libertas, ut Admirablis ſit.

§ 11. In the Colledge whereof he was Preſident, he did the part, Τȣ̃ φιλανθρώπȣ ϗ φιλοθέȣ παιδευτȣ̃, An Inſtructer inſpired with the Love of God, and the Love of Souls. But if the Reader expect any further Account of this Reverend Man, what he was, what he thought, and what he preach'd, let him give himſelf the edifying Pleaſure of reading what he printed. But of his Printed Compoſures, the more conſiderable were his Twenty ſix Sermons upon Juſtification, publiſhed in the Year 1659. On the Motive which he mentioned in the Preface thereunto. My particular Employment (ſaith he) wherein I hope, that my deſire is to ſerve the Lord in Truth, and to ſeek the great Benefit of Youth and Students, who are to be trained up, 'Εν νȣθεσία τȣ̃ κυρίȣ, that is, in the Doctrine of the Lord, that may put a right Underſtanding into them, hath moved me to repreſent this Doctrine of Juſtification, as a Standard of Truth and Salvation to them; which they ſhould hold faſt, and as the Lord ſhall call them thereunto hold forth, in their Generations. It had been an uſual thing with him, ſolemnly to caution Scholars againſt thoſe Doctrines, which exalt Man, and debaſe Chriſt: And he thought particularly with Luther, Amiſſo Articulo Juſtificationis, & amiſſa eſt ſimul tota Doctrina Chriſtiana.

And agreeably to that Caution, we have him, in this his moſt Judicious Treatiſe, maintaining,

‘ That Juſtification is a Judicial Proceeding, wherein the Sentence of God abſolves, and acquits the Sinner from the Guilt of Sin, and accepts him as a juſt Perſon, unto Eternal Life.

‘ That the Juſtification of a Sinner before God, in the Decree of it, in the Purchaſe of it, and in the Application of it, is to be aſcribed unto the Free Grace of God, and yet there is alſo a glorious Concurrence of ſtrict Juſtice thereunto.

‘ That the Son of God condeſcending to be the Surety of his Choſen, took their Debt upon himſelf, and by ſuffering the full Puniſhment which was due for their Sins, made that Satisfaction unto the Juſtice of God, whereupon we receive the Remiſſion of Sins, which without ſuch a Satisfaction had been impoſſible.

‘ That none of the Afflictions which befal the Faithful, are proper Puniſhments for Sin, but the Corrective Diſpenſations of a careful Father, and the Sanative Diſpenſations of a prudent Healer.

‘ That yet many Godly Men ſmart for their Boldneſs in Sin: And when Paul writing to Saints, tells them, If you live after the Fleſh, you ſhall die: He ſpeaks not only of Temporal, but of Eternal Death: For tho’ ’tis not poſſible for Saints to die eternally, ’tis as poſſible for them to die Eternally, as to Sin Eternally.

‘ That we are not juſtified by Faith, as it is a Work in us, nor is our Act of Believing, any part of the Matter of that Righteouſneſs, wherein we ſtand righteous before God. But Faith does only juſtifie us relatively, or as it has reference to its Object the Lord Jeſus Chriſt, and his Righteouſneſs, or as it receives the Mercy of God in the Lord Jeſus Chriſt; or as the Beggar’s Hand receiving a Bag of Gold enricheth him: It is but a Paſſive Inſtrument; and the Words of James, That a Man is juſtified by Works, and not by Faith alone; do not oppoſe the other Words of Paul, but only aſſert, that a juſtifying Faith, is in this oppos’d unto a falſe and a dead Faith, it will certainly be effectual to produce Good Works in the Believer.

‘ That Believers, notwithſtanding the Forgiveneſs of their Sins, ought often to renew all the Expreſſions of Repentance for their Sins, and ſtill to be fervent and inſtant in Prayer for Pardon; inaſmuch as we have need of having Remiſſion afreſh applied unto us; and we alſo need the Joys and Fruits of our Pardon, and the Grace to make a right Uſe thereof.

‘ That the whole Obedience of the Lord Jeſus Chriſt, both Active and Paſſive, belongs to that perfect Righteouſneſs which is required in order to Juſtification; and this Righteouſneſs of God is conveyed unto Believers, by way of Imputation: It is reckoned and accounted theirs, upon their apprehending of it; which Imputation is a gracious Act of God the Father, whereby as a Judge, he accounts the Sins of the Believer unto the Surety, as if he had committed the ſame, and the Righteouſneſs of the Lord Jeſus Chriſt unto the Believer, as if he had performed that Obedience.

‘ That ſtill it follows not, that every Believer is a Redeemer, and Saviour of others, as the Lord Jeſus Chriſt himſelf is; it is the Righteouſneſs of the Surety, and not the Suretiſhip it ſelf, that is imputed unto the Believer: The Suretiſhip is proper unto our Lord, and becauſe the Vertue which is in the Head, is communicated unto the Members, ’tis frivolous thence to argue, that every Member is thereby made an Head, and has the Influence of our Head upon the reſt.

‘ That as Adam was the Common Root of all Mankind, and ſo his firſt Sin is imputed unto all his Poſterity; thus our Lord Jeſus Chriſt is the Common Root of all the Faithful, and his Obedience is imputed unto them all.

This was the Old Faith of New England, about that moſt important Article of Juſtification; an Article wherein all the Duties and Comforts of our Holy Religion are, more than a little concerned. And I thought I could not make a fitter Preſent unto the Sons of my Mother, than by thus laying before the Scholars of Harvard-Colledge, an Abſtract of what the Venerable Old Preſident of that Colledge left as a Legacy unto them.

All that I ſhall add upon it, is, That as ’tis the Obſervation of our Dr. Owen, in his moſt Judicious Book of Juſtification: I am not ſatiſfied that any of thoſe, who at preſent oppoſe this Doctrine, do in Holineſs and Righteouſneſs, and the Exerciſe of all Chriſtian Graces, ſurpaſs thoſe who in the laſt Ages, both in this and other Nations, firmly adhered unto it, and who conſtantly teſtified unto that effectual Influence, which it had into their Walking before God; nor do I know that any can be named amongſt us in the former Ages, who were eminent in Holineſs, and many ſuch there were, who did not cordially aſſent unto that, which we plead for. And it doth not yet appear in general, that an Attempt to introduce a Doctrine contrary unto it, has had any great Succeſs in the Reformation of the Lives of Men. So our holy Chancey was an eminent Inſtance to confirm ſomething of this Obſervation. Albeit he were ſo elaborately ſolicitous to exclude Good Works from any ſhare in the antecedent Condition of our Juſtification; yet there were few Men in the World, who more practically and accurately acknowledged the Neceſſity of Good Works in all the Juſtified: And ſo afraid was he of defiling his own Soul, and of diſturbing his own Peace, by the admiſſion of any known Sin, that tho’ he made ſo many ſtated Supplications every Day, yet if he had fallen into any miſbecoming Paſſion, or any ſenſible Diſtemper, or Diſorder of Heart in the Day, it occaſioned his immediate Retirement, for another Prayer extraordinary before the Lord.

§ 11. I remember, that upon the Article in the Praiſes of a Good Man, [Pſal. 1. 3. He brings forth his Fruit in his Seaſon, there is a notable Gloſs of Aben Ezra, to this purpoſe; Anima Rationalis plena Sapientiæ, in Tempore Senectutis opportuno, ſeparatur a Corpore, ſicut Fructus ab Arbore, & non moritur ante Diem. Such a Tree was our Chancey, and ſuch was his Fate. This Eminent Souldier of our Lord Jeſus Chriſt, after he was come to be Fourſcore Years of Age, continued ſtill to Endure Hardneſs, as a good Soldier of Jeſus Chriſt; and ſtill profeſſed, with the Aged Polycarp, That he was not willing to leave the Service of the Lord, that had more than Fourſcore Years been a Good Maſter to him. When his Friends preſſed him to remit and abate his vaſt Labours, he would reply, Oportet Imperatorem Stantem mori; according he ſtood beyond Expectation, directing in the Learned Camp, where he had been a Commander. At length on the Commencement in the Year 1671. he made a Farewel Oratien, wherein he took a Solemn Farewel of his Friends, and then ſent for his Children, upon whom he beſtowed a Solemn Bleſſing, with Fervent Prayers, commending them to the Grace of God. So like Aged R. Simeon, once ('tis by ſome thought) the Preſident of a College at Jeruſalem, he kept waiting and longing for his Call. To Depart in Peace! Accordingly the End of this Year proved the End of his Days: When Illneſs growing upon him, the Reverend Mr. Urian Oakes, after his Requeſted Supplications, asked him to give a Sign of his Hopeful and Joyful Aſſurances, if he yet had them, of his entring into Eternal Glory; whereat the Speechleſs Old Man lifted up his hands, as high towards Heaven, as he could lift them, and ſo his Renewed and Ripened Soul flew thither Feb. 19. 1671. in the Eighty Second Year of his Age, and the Seventeen Year of his Preſidentſhip, over Harvard-College. He left behind him no leſs than Six Sons; every of which had received the Laurels of Degrees, in the College; and ſome of them from the Hand of their Aged Father. Their Names were Iſaac, Ichabod, Barnabas, Nathanael and Elnathan, (which two were Twins) and Iſrael. All of theſe did, while they had opportunity, Preach the Goſpel; and moſt, if not all of them, like their Excellent Father before them, had an Eminent Skill in Phyſick added unto their other Accompliſhments; which like him, they uſed for the Good of many; as indeed it is well known, that until Two Hundred Years ago, Phyſick in England, was no Profeſſion diſtinct from Divinity; and accordingly Princes had the ſame Perſons to be their Phyſicians and their Confeſſors. But only Two of them are now living; the Firſt and the Laſt: The one in England, the other in New-England; Iſaac now a Paſtor of a Church in London, and an Author of ſeveral well known Treatiſes: Iſrael now a Paſtor of a Church in our Stratford, where he is, at this Day, a Rich Bleſſing to the Colony of Connecticut. The Happy Mother of theſe worthy Sons, was Catharine the Daughter of Robert Eyre, Eſq, who dying a little before her Conſort, had her Holy Life quickly after publiſhed; namely, by the Publication of the Directions for an Holy Life, which her Pious Father left as a Legacy for his Children: Directions, whereof I ſhall ſay but this, That as they expreſs the True Spirit of Puritaniſm, ſo they compriſe the Wiſeſt, the Fruitfulleſt, the Exacteſt, and the Holieſt Rules of Living, that ever I ſaw together in any ſhort Human Compoſure; and the Reprinting of them would not only give a Deſcription of the Heavenly Converſation endeavoured by our Great Charles Chancey, whom we have hitherto been conſidering, but alſo procure the Admiration, if not Imitation of them that read it.

§ 12. New England having enjoyed ſuch a Privilege, and ſuch a Preſident as our Chancey, governing a Colledge, I will conclude this Account thereof with certain Paſſages which this Reverend Man publiſhed in a Sermon, on Amos 2. 11. I raiſed up of your Sons for Prophets, and of your Young Men for Nazarites, Preached at Cambridge the Day after one of the Commencements.

'God hath wonderfully Erected Schools of Learning, and means of Education for our Children, that there might be continually ſome comfortable Supply and Succeſſion in the Miniſtry. Is it not ſo, O ye People of God in New England! But then let me teſtify againſt you in the Lord's Name, for great Unthankfulneſs to the Lord, for ſo great a Mercy. The Great Bleſſing of a Painful Miniſtry is not regarded by Covetous Earth Worms; neither do the Schools of Learning, that afford Oyl to the Lamps, come into their Thoughts, to praiſe the Lord for them. Or, ſome little Good they apprehend in it, to have a Miniſter to ſpend the Sabbath, and to Baptize their Children, and Schools to teach their Children, and keep them out of Harm's Way, or teach them to Write and Read, and caſt Accounts; but they deſpiſe the Angel's Bread, and count it Light Stuff, in Compariſon of other things, yea, there be many in the Country, that account it their Happineſs to live in the Waſt, Howling Wilderneſs, without any Miniſtry, or Schools, and Means of Education for their Poſterity; they have much Liberty, they think, by this Want. Surely their Practice about their Children, is little better than the Mercileſs and Unnatural Profaneneſs of the Iſraelites, That ſacrificed their Sons and their Daughters unto Devils! And many make wicked Returns of theſe Bleſſings, and fearfully abuſe them, and ſeek what they can, to weary out Miniſters, and pull down Schools of Learning; or which is all one, deny or withold Maintenance from them; as good, as to ſay, Raſe them, Raſe them to the Foundations! But how exceeding Hateful unto the Lord, is this Unthankfulneſs? Do you thus

‘ But then let Scholars mainly intend, labour, and ſtudy for this; to be Prophets and Nazarites: And therefore let Speaking to Edification, Exhortation, and Comfort be aimed at in all your Studies: And behave your ſelves as being ſet apart in peculiar manner for the Lord. To uſe the Veſſels of the Temple, to quaff and carouſe in, was a Babyloniſh Practice. You ſhould have leſs to do with the World, and Worldly Delights, and be leſs cumbred than others with the Affairs of this Life.

All that we will add of this Good Old Man, ſhall be the Epitaph, which is now to be read on his Tomb-ſtone in Cambridge.

CHAP. XXIV.

Lucas. The LIFE of Mr. JOHN FISK.

Ἰατρὸς γὰρ ἀνὴρ πολλῶν ἀντάξιος ἄλλων.

§ 1. AMong the moſt Famous Preachers and Writers of the Goſpel, with which the Primitive Church was Bleſſed, there was Luke, the Beloved Phyſician; of whom Jerom elegantly ſays, Quomodo Apoſtoli de Piſcatoribus piſcium, Piſcatores Hominum facti ſunt, ita de Medico Corporum in Medicum Verſis eſt Animarum; cujus Liber quotieſcunq; legitur in Eccleſiis, toties Medicina non ceſſat: That Bleſſed Scholar and Collegue, of the Apoſtle Paul, who (as Jerom alſo tells us) according to the Opinion of ſome, intends the Volume which had been Penned by this Luke, as often as he uſes that Expreſſion in his Epiſtles, according to my Goſpel.

And among the firſt Preachers and Writers, which rendered the Primitive Times of New-England happy, there was one who might likewiſe be called, A Beloved Phyſician; one to whom there might alſo be given the Eulogy, which the Ancients think was given to Luke, A Brother whoſe Praiſe was in the Goſpel, throughout all Churches.

This was Mr. John Fisk.

§ 2. Mr. John Fisk was Born in the Pariſh of St. James, (called for Diſtinction, One of the Nine Pariſhes) in the County of Suffolk, about the Year 1601. of Pious and Worthy Parents, yea, of Grand-Parents, and Great Grand-Parents, Eminent for Zeal in the True Religion. There were Six Brothers in the Infamous Reign of Queen Mary, whereof three were Papiſts, and three were Proteſtants, I may ſay, Puritans; and of the Latter (whereof none were owned by the Former) Two were very ſorely perſecuted. For one of theſe Brethren, the Purſevant, having a Kindneſs, gave him a Private and Previous Notice of his coming with an Order to ſeize him; whereupon the Good Man, firſt called his Family to Prayer, haſtned away to hide himſelf in a Ditch, with his Godly Wife, which had a Sucking Child at her Breaſt. The Purſevant being near at Hand, a Thorn in the Hedge gave ſuch a Mark to the Child's Face, as never went out; whereat the Child beginning to Roar, the Mother preſently clapt it to the Breaſt, whereby it was quieted at once, and there was no Diſcovery then, or after, made of theſe Confeſſors. Another of theſe Brethren, from whom our Fisk was deſcended, was then (to avoid Burning) hid many Months in a Wood-pile; and afterwards, for half a Year in a Cellar, where he diligently employ'd himſelf in profitable Manufactures, by Candle Light, after ſuch a manner as to remain likewiſe undiſcovered; but his many Hardſhips brought that Exceſſive

Bleeding upon him, that ſhortned his Days, and added unto the Cry of the Souls under the Altar.

§ 3. Our John was the Eldeſt of Four Children, all of whom afterwards came to New-England with him, and left a Poſterity, with whom God eſtabliſhed his Holy Covenant. His Parents having devoted him unto the Service of the Lord Jeſus Chriſt, they ſent him firſt unto a Grammar-School, Two Miles from the Place of their Abode, whither his Diligent Soul was inſtead of Wings, every Day to carry him. His Education at the School, having fitted him for the Univerſity, he went unto Cambridge, where he was admitted, into (as I think) Immanuel-College, in which he reſided, until he became a Graduate. Some time after this, being both by Art and by Heart, well prepared for it, he applied himſelf unto the Work to which he had been devoted; namely, the Preaching of the Goſpel: But the Silencers grew ſo hard upon him for his Non Conformity, that upon the Advice of his Friends, he ſet himſelf to ſtudy Phyſick, and upon a thorough Examination, he obtained a Licence for Publick Practice. When he was about Eight and Twenty Years of Age, he married a Vertuous Young Gentlewoman; ſeveral Hundreds of Pounds of whoſe Patrimony were denied her upon the Diſpleaſure of her Father, at her coming to New-England.

But upon the Death of his Father, who had committed unto him the Care of his Mother and his two Siſters, and his youngeſt Brother, he thought it his Duty to Remove into New-England, where he ſaw an Opportunity of returning unto the Quiet Exerciſe of his Miniſtry. He, and that Excellent Man Mr. John Allin, came aboard in a Diſguiſe, to avoid the Fury of their Perſecutors; but after they were paſt the Lands-End, they entertained the Paſſengers with Two Sermons every Day, beſides other Agreeable Devotions, which filled the Voyage with ſo much of Religion, that one of the Paſſengers being examined about his going to divert himſelf with an Hook and Line, on the Lord's Day, he proteſted, That he did not know when the Lord's Day was; he thought every Day was a Sabbath Day; for, he ſaid, they did nothing but pray and preach all the Week long.

§ 4. Mr. Fiſk arrived at New-England in the Year 1637. having had nothing to render the Voyage uncomfortable, but only that his Aged Mother died quickly after he came aboard, and his only Infant quickly after he came aſhore. He came well ſtock'd with Servants, and all ſorts of Tools for Husbandry and Carpentry, and with Proviſions to ſupport his Family in a Wilderneſs for Three Years together; out of which, he charitably lent a conſiderable Quantity to the Country, which he then found in the Diſtreſſes of a War with the Pequot-Indians. He now ſojourned about Three Years at Salem, where he was both a Preacher to the Church, and a Tutor unto divers young Scholars (whereof the well known Sir George Downing was one) as he was afterwards unto his own Children, when the want of Grammar-Schools at Hand made it neceſſary. From thence he removed unto a Place adjoining thereunto, which is now called Wenham: Where on Octob. 8. 1644. a Church was gathered, of which he continued the Paſtor, in that Place, for more than Twice Seven Years: Contented with a very mean Salary, and conſuming his own fair Eſtate for the Welfare of the New-Plantation.

§ 5. About the Year 1656. he Removed, with the major part of his Church, to another New Town, called Chelmſford; and there he ſpent the Remainder of his Days. Of the Afflictions which now Diſciplin'd him, one of the ſaddeſt was the Loſs of his Concordance; I mean, of his Godly and Worthy Conſort, who by her Incomparable Expertneſs in the Scriptures, had rendred any other Concordance of the Bible uſeleſs unto his Library. This Vertuous Woman loſt her Sight for ſome Years before ſhe died; under which Diſaſter a moſt Exemplary Patience was produced in her, by her View of, The things which are not ſeen, and are Eternal: And at length, after many Admonitions unto her Friends to Improve their Sight well whilſt they had it, ſhe had on Feb. 14. 1671. her Eyes opened, by their being cloſed; and was by Death carried from Faith unto Immediate and Everlaſting Sight: After which he married again.

§ 6. Twenty Years did he ſhine in the Golden Candleſtick of Chelmſford; a plain, but an Able, Painful, and Uſeful Preacher of the Goſpel; rarely, if ever, by Sickneſs hindred from the Exerciſe of his Miniſtry. As Marcilius Ficinus having written one Book, De Sanitate Tuenda, and another Book, De Valetudine Reſtituenda, concluded his Courſe with writing his Book, De Vita Cælitus Comparanda: Thus, our Mr. Fiſk, now ſuperſeded his Care and Skill of diſpenſing Medicines for the Body, by doing it for the Soul. But although he did in his Miniſtry, go through an Expoſition of almoſt all the Scripture in both Teſtaments, and unto his Lord's Day Sermons, added a Monthly Lecture on the Week-Day, beſides his Diſcourſes at the Private Meetings of the Faithful, and his exact and Faithful Cares to keep up Church-Diſcipline, yet none of his Labours were more Conſiderable than his Catechetical. It is by the Excellent Owen excellently well obſerved, That unleſs a Man has ſome Good Satisfaction concerning the Spiritual Condition of thoſe that are committed unto his Charge, he can never approve himſelf among them, a Workman that needeth not to be aſhamed, rightly dividing the Word of Truth: And the Work of the Miniſtry is not by any means more evacuated, and rendered Ineffectual, than when Men have not a certain Deſign to deal with their Hearers according to what they are perſwaded, that their Spiritual Eſtate doth require. Our Fiſk therefore, did by moſt laborious Catechiſing, endeavour to know the State of his Flock, and make it good: And hence, altho' he did himſelf compoſe and publiſh a moſt uſeful Catechiſm, which he entituled, The Olive-Plant watered; yet he choſe the Aſſembly's Catechiſm for his Publick Expoſitions, wherewith he twice went over it, in Diſcourſes before his Afternoon-Sermons on the Sabbath.

§ 7. Towards the end of his Life, he began to labour eſpecially under two Maladies, either of which were enough to try the moſt conſummate Patience of any Man living; theſe were, firſt the Stone, and then the Gout; which at laſt were followed with Convulſions, that brought his laborious Life unto an end: And gave him the Experience of Streitbergerus's Motto, Qui non eſt Crucianus non eſt Chriſtianus. Yea, for a Complication of Maladies, his Condition became not unlike the bleſſed Calvin's, of whom the Hiſtorian relates, That he was troubled with as many Infirmities, as indifferent Subjects might have ſupplied an Hoſpital.

On the Second Lord's Day of his Confinement by Illneſs, after he had been many Lord's Days carried unto the Church in a Chair, and preached, as in the Primitive Times they ſtill treated, ſitting, he was taken with Convulſions, which renewed ſo faſt upon him, that within a few Days he died, on January 14. 1676. ſee a Reſt from his Labours: Having firſt, after this manner bleſſed his Four Children, two Sons and two Daughters, who were by his Bed-ſide waiting for his Bleſſing: You are as a Shock of Corn bound up, or as Twins made beautiful by the Covenant of Grace. You have an Intereſt in the ſure Mercies of David; thoſe you have to live upon. Study to emulate one another; but in the beſt, in the beſt. Provoke one another to Love. The God of your Forefathers bleſs you all. And added unto his younger Son, the preſent worthy Paſtor of Braintree, concerning his Wife and his two Children, then abſent, The God of Abraham, Iſaac, and Jacob, bleſs you, and your Poſterity after you.

We will now leave him uttering the Words of Weinrichius, in his

EPITAPH.

Vixi, & quem dederas curſum mihi, Chriſte, peregi:
Pertæſus Vitæ, ſuaviter opto mori.

CHAP. XXV.

Scholaſticus. The LIFE of Mr. THOMAS PARKER.

§ 1. IT may without any ungrateful Compariſons be aſſerted, that one of the greateſt Scholars in the Engliſh Nation, was that Renowned Robert Parker, who was driven out of the Nation for his Non Conformity to its unhappy Ceremonies in the Worſhip of God. It was the Honour of that Great Man, to be the Father of ſuch Learned Books, as that of his De Politia Eccleſiaſtica, and that Of the Croſs; as well as Foſtor Father to that of Sandford's De Diſcenſu Chriſti ad Inferos; yea, to be in ſome ſort the Father of all the Non-Conformiſts in our Age, who yet would not call any Man their Father. But let it not be counted any Diſhonour unto him, that he was alſo the Natural Father of our Thomas Parker.

§ 2. This Mr. Thomas Parker was the only Son of his Father, who being very deſirous to have him a Scholar, committed him unto perhaps a godly, but a very ſevere Maſter. Under this hard Maſter, tho' he was well nigh diſcouraged by the Dulneſs, which he apprehended in his own Capacity, yet the Conſideration of his Father's Deſire, made him, with an Early Piety, to join his Prayers unto his Pains, that he might have his Education proſpered; and God ſo proſpered him, that he arrived unto a deſirable Degree of Knowledge, both in the Tongues, and in the Arts.

§ 3. He had been admitted into Magdalen Colledge, in Oxford; but after the Exile of his Father, he removed unto Dublin, in Ireland; where he found from Dr. Uſher the ſame favourable Aſpect, which that eminent Perſon did uſe to caſt upon young Students that were ingenious: And from thence he went after his Father into Holland, where Dr. Ames favoured him with his Encouragements and Aſſiſtances, in the Proſecution of his honeſt Studies now at Leyden.

§ 4. As his Diligence was indefatigable, ſo his Proficiency was proportionable: And he was particularly conſiderable there, for his Diſputations upon the Points then moſt conſiderably controverted. It was at the Age of Twenty two, that he drew up his moſt Judicious and Approved Theſes, De Traductione Peccatoris: Which are bound up with Dr. Ames, his Opuſcula, in ſome Editions of his Anſwer to Grevinchovius. Thoſe moſt accurate Theſes, being thus publiſhed, as the Compoſure of another, our humble Parker, tho' inſtigated thereunto, did yet refuſe to do himſelf the Juſtice, of publiſhing himſelf ſome other way, to be the Author of them. This neglect of his, he ſaid, was, to chaſtize the Vanity of his own young Mind, which had been too much pleaſed with the Accuracy of his own early Performance in thoſe Theſes. But the Author of the Theſes afterwards came to be well known, by the Providence of God, when whole Books came to be written by learned Men upon them; whereof one was entituled, Parkerus Illuſtratus.

But before this Age of Twenty two, he proceeded Maſter, with the general Applauſe of all, and the ſpecial Eſteem of Maccovius, a man Renowned in the Belgick Univerſities. In the Diploma then given him, they teſtifie, Illum non ſine magnâ Admiratione audiverimus,—And Se Philoſophiæ Artiumque liberalium peritiſſimum declaraverit.

§ 5. Maccovius would hereupon have had Sibrandus Lubbertus, the Moderator of the Claſſis there, to have ordained our Parker a Presbyter, as an Acknowledgment of his exceeding worth; but tho' Lubbertus could not but acknowledge it, yet out of a ſecret Grudge, he would not allow of the Ordination. Whereupon Maccovius rode unto the States at Leodin, with Complaints of Lubbertus for ſo ill a thing, as letting ſuch a Perſon as this Parker go away under any Cloud of Diſreſpect; and the States thereupon wrote unto Lubbertus to admit him: But the haſt of his return into England prevented it.

§ 6. Reſiding at Newberry in England, he applied himſelf with an invincible Induſtry unto the Study of School-Divinity: In which profound and knotty Study, he found ſuch enſnaring Temptations, that he afterwards laid it all aſide, for the Knowledge of Jeſus Chriſt crucified. The wiſe Bullinger would with too much Reaſon ſay, Unus Seneca plus ſinceriora Theologiæ poſteritate reliquit, quam omnes fere omnium Scholaſticorum Libri. The great Chamier would with a like Reaſon ſay, Solere ſe Scholaſticos conſulere, non aliter, quàm ſi quis aliquando palatium inviſens, poſt Aularum, cubiculorum & cænaculorum magnificentiam etiam Latrinas non dedignetur inſpicere, ſed paucis, ob fætorem. The learned Whitaker would ſay of the School-men, Plus habent Argutiarum quam Scientiæ plus Scientiæ quam Doctrinæ, plus Doctrinæ quam uſus, plus uſus quam ad ſalutem. Our Parker converſed indeed with the School-men, until he almoſt became one of them himſelf: But not ſuch an one as Luther meant, when he ſaid, Qui Theologum Scholaſticum videt, videt Septem peccata mortalia: For he grew ſick of all the Learning that he had got from the School-men; and would often ſay, All the uſe I now make of all my School-Learning is this: I have ſo much to deny for the ſake of my Lord Jeſus Chriſt. Nor was he inſenſible of what Sir Walter Rawleigh obſerved concerning the School-men, That they taught their Followers rather to ſhift, than to reſolve by their Diſtinctions.

§ 7. From thence removing with ſeveral devout Chriſtians out of Wiltſhire into New-England, he was Ordained their Paſtor, at a Town, on his, and their Account, called Newberry; where he lived many Years, by the Holineſs, the Humbleneſs, the Charity of his Life, giving his People a perpetual and moſt lively Commentary upon his Doctrine.

§ 8. The Strains which his immoderate Studies gave unto his Organs of Sight, brought a miſerable Defluxion of Rheum upon his Eyes; which proceeded ſo far, that one of them ſwelled until it came out of his Head, and the other grew altogether dim ſome Years before his Death. Under this extreme Loſs he would, after a Chriſtian and pleaſant manner, give himſelf that Conſolation: Well, they'll be reſtored ſhortly, at the Reſurrection.

The Jews, upon the dim ſight of Eli, have an Obſervation, That none are mentioned in the Scripture, as afflicted with Failure of Sight, but ſuch as were afflicted either in their Children, or in their Pupils. Our Parker had no Children to afflict him, and his Pupils were ſuch as to comfort him; yet Failure of Sight was his Calamity.

§ 9. In the latter part of his Life, he bent himſelf unto the Study of the Scripture-Prophecies; being, as has been ſaid by Dr. Uſher, inſtigated thereunto. 'Twas with an aſſiduous Conjunction of Meditations, and Supplications, that he followed this delightful Study, till he had written ſeveral Volumes, a great part of them in Latin; whereof no part was ever publiſh'd, but one upon Daniel, which he wrote in Engliſh. If ſome of his Expoſitions upon thoſe difficult parts of the Scripture, have been ſince confuted by ſome great Authors, who diſliked them, we may, on more Accounts than one, conſider him, as the Homer of New-England; and add, Aliquando Bonus Dormitat Homerus.

§ 10. He went unto the Immortals, in the Month of April 1677, about the Eighty ſecond Year of his Age: And after he had lived all his Days a ſingle Man, but a great part of his Days engaged in Apocalyptical Studies, he went unto the Apocalyptical Virgins, who follow the Lamb whitherſoever he goes.

He was a Perſon of a moſt extenſive Charity; which Grain of his Temper, might contribute unto that Largeneſs in his Principles, about Church-Government, which expoſed him unto many Temptations, amongſt his Neighbours, who were not ſo Principled. He would, indeed, expreſs himſelf diſſatisfied at the Edge, which there was in the Writings of his Father, againſt the Biſhops; and he did himſelf write a Preface unto a Book; whereupon Mr. Charles Chancey beſtow'd a ſhort Anſwer, which begins with this ſhorter Cenſure.

> ‘Let it not be an Offence to any Chriſtian, that there hath been found one like to Urijah the Prieſt, that would ſet up the Altar of Damaſcus among us, to thruſt out the Brazen Altar of the Lord's Inſtitution; viz. Mr. Thomas Parker, who has publiſhed a Book, pleading for Epiſcopacy; wherein is found, πῶλος λακτίζων, a Colt kicking againſt his Dam.

Such a Difference in Apprehenſion, and in Affection too, did on that occaſion diſcover it ſelf, be-between thoſe Good Men, who are now joyfully met, Ubi Luthi Luthero cum Zuinglio, optime jam Convenit.

Yet the Alienation between them, was not ſo great as that between Theoclus, and Pollinis, who being burnt in one Funeral Fire, after they had kill'd one another, the very Flame of that Fire divided it ſelf; the Flame of their Funeral Fire would not be united. Chancey and Parker are united in our Church-Hiſtory; the Funeral Reſpects which are here paid unto both of them, agree very well together. Now,

That which the Learned, Pious, and Sweet-ſpirited Bucholtzer, provided for himſelf, we will now aſſign unto this our Sweet-ſpirited Parker (who ſpent his Life much in Chronological Studies, like that Great Bucholtzer,) for an

EPITAPH.

An APPENDIX Containing MEMOIRS of Mr. James Noyes.

WHEN we had thus finiſhed our Memoirs of Mr. Parker, our Second Thoughts told us, that ſome of Mr. Noyes muſt accompany them. Sending therefore to my Excellent Friend, Mr. Nicolas Noyes, the preſent Miniſter of Salem, for ſome Account, concerning a Perſon ſo nearly related unto him, he favoured me with the following Relation. And tho' he were pleaſed in his Letters to tell me, 'That he had ſent me only a Rude Immethodical Jumble of things, intending that I 'ſhould ſerve my Occaſions out of them, for a 'Compoſition of my own. Yet I find, that I ſhall not give my Readers a better Satiſfaction, any way, than by tranſcribing the Words of my Friend. The Account in his own Words, is too Elegant, and Expreſſive, to need any Alteration.

'Mr. James Noyes was Born, 1608. at Choulderton in Wiltſhire, of Godly and Worthy 'Parents. His Father was Miniſter of the ſame 'Town, a very Learned Man, the Shool-Maſter of Mr. Thomas Parker. His Mother was 'Siſter to the Learned Mr. Robert Parker, and 'he had much of his Education and Tutorage 'under Mr. Thomas Parker. He was called 'by him, from Brazen Noſe College in Oxford, 'to help him in teaching the Free School at 'Newberry; where they taught School together, till the Time they came to New England. He was converted in his Youth, by the 'Miniſtry of Dr. Twiſs, and Mr. Thomas Parker, and was admired for his Piety and his 'Vertue in his younger Years. The Reaſon of 'his coming to New England, was, becauſe he 'could not comply with the Ceremonies of the 'Church of England. He was married in England to Mrs. Sarah Brown, the Eldeſt Daughter of Mr. Joſeph Brown of Southampton, not 'long before he came to New England, which 'was in the Year 1634. In the ſame Ship 'came Mr. Thomas Parker, Mr. James Noyes, 'and a Younger Brother of his, Mr. Nicolas Noyes, who then was a ſingle Man: Between 'which Three, was a more than ordinary Endearment of Affection, which was never ſhaken or broken, but by Death Mr. Parker and 'Mr. James Noyes, and others that came over 'with them, Faſted and Prayed together many 'times, before they undertook this Voyage; 'and on the Sea, Mr. Parker and Mr. Noyes 'preached or expounded, one in the Forenoon, 'other in the Afternoon, every Day during the 'Voyage, unleſs ſome extraordinary thing intervened, and were abundant in Prayer.

'When they arrived, Mr. Parker was at 'firſt called to preach at Ipſwich, and Mr. 'Noyes at Miſtick, at which Places they continued nigh a Year. He had a Motion made 'unto him to be Miniſter at Watertown; but 'Mr. Parker and others of his Brethren and 'Acquaintance, ſettling at Newberry, and gathering the Tenth of the Churches in the Colony, and calling Mr. Noyes to be the Teacher of it, he preferred that place; being 'lothe to be ſeparated from Mr. Parker, and 'Brethren that had ſo often Faſted and Prayed 'together, both in England and on the Atlantic Sea. So he became the Teacher of that 'Church, and continued painful and ſucceſsful 'in that Station ſomething above Twenty 'Years, without any conſiderable Trouble in 'the Church. Notwithſtanding his Principles 'as to Diſcipline, were ſomething differing 'from many of the Brethren, there was ſuch 'Condeſcenſion on both Parts, that Peace and 'Order was not Interrupted. He was very 'much loved and Honoured in Newberry; his 'Memory is precious there to this Day, and 'and his Catechiſm (which is a publick and 'ſtanding Teſtimony of his Underſtanding and Orthodoxy in the Principles of Religion) is publickly and privately uſed in that Church and Town hitherto. He was very well Learned in the Tongues, and in Greek excelled moſt. He was much Read in the Fathers and the Schoolmen. And he was much eſteemed by his Brethren in the Miniſtry. 'Twice he was called by Mr. Wilſon and others, to preach, in the Time when the Antinomian Principles were in danger of prevailing; which he did with good Succeſs, and to the Satisfaction of thoſe that invited him. Mr. Wilſon dearly loved him; and it ſo happened once at Newbury, that he preached in the Forenoon about Holineſs ſo Holily and Ably, that Mr. Wilſon was ſo affected with it, as to change his own Text, and pitch upon Mr. Noyes's, for the Afternoon; prefacing his Diſcourſe, with telling the Auditory, that his Brother Noyes's Diſcourſe about Holineſs in the Forenoon had ſo much Impreſſion upon his mind, he knew not how in the Afternoon to purſue any other Argument. His Converſation was ſo unqueſtionably Godly, that they who differed from him in ſmaller Matters as to Diſcipline, held a moſt amicable Correſpondence with him, and had an high Eſtimation of him. Altho' he was very averſe to the Ceremonies of the Church of England, accounting them needleſs, many Ways offenſive and hurtful at the beſt, and the Rigorous Impoſition of them Abominable and Intolerable, ſo that he left England for their ſake; yet he was not equally averſe to Epiſcopacy, but was in Opinion for Epiſcopus Præſes, tho' not for Epiſcopus Princeps. His own Words teſtify this, for ſo he wrote; It ſeemeth he that was called, Antiſtes Præpoſitus, the Biſhop, in a Presbytery, by Proceſs of Time was only called Biſhop, tho' all Elders are alſo according to their Office Eſſentially Biſhops, and differing only in Gradual Juriſdiction. He no ways approved of a Governing Vote, in the Fraternity, but took their Conſent in a Silential way. He held Eccleſiaſtical Councils ſo far Authoritative and Binding, that no particular Elder, or Society, might ſeem to have Independency and Soveraignty, or the Major Part of them have Liberty to ſin with Impunity. He was equally afraid of Ceremonies and of Schiſm; and when he fled from Ceremonies he was afraid of being guilty of Schiſm. For that Reaſon he was jealous (if not too jealous) of particular Church-Covenants; yet he accounted them Adjuncts of the Covenant of Grace. He held Profeſſion of Faith, and Repentance, and Subjection to the Ordinances, to be the Rule of Admiſſion into Church-Fellowſhip; and that ſuch as ſhow a Willingneſs to Repent, and be Baptiſed in the Name of the Lord Jeſus, without known Diſſimulation, are to be admitted thereto; and that it depended more on God's Providence, than his Ordinances, to render Church-Members ſound in the Faith; and that God took into Covenant ſome that were Veſſels of Wrath, as for other Ends, ſo to facilitate the Converſion of their Elect Children. He was as Religious at Home as Abroad, in his Family and in ſecret, as he was publickly; and they that beſt knew him, moſt loved and eſteemed him. Mr. Parker and he kept a Private Faſt once a Month, ſo long as they lived together, and Mr. Parker after his own Death, till his own Departure. Mr. Noyes bitterly lamented the Death of K. Charles I. and both he and Mr. Parker too had too great Expectations of K. Charles II. but Mr. Parker lived to ſee his Expectations of Charles the Second fruſtrated. He had a long and tedious Sickneſs, which he bore patiently and chearfully; and he died joyfully in the Forty Eighth Year of his Age, Oct. 22. 1656. He left Six Sons and Two Daughters, all of which lived to be married, and have Children, tho' ſince one Son and one Daughter be dead. He hath now living Fifty Six Children, Grand-Children, and Great Grand-Children. And his Brother that came over with him a ſingle Man, is thro' the Mercy of God, yet living; and hath of Children, Grand-Children, and Great Grand-Children, above an Hundred: Which is an Inſtance of Divine Favour, in making the Families of his Servants in the Wilderneſs like a Flock. There was the greateſt Amity, Intimacy, Unanimity, yea, Unity imaginable between Mr. Parker, and Mr. Noyes. So unſhaken was their Friendſhip, nothing but Death was able to part them. They taught in one School; came over in one Ship; were Paſtor and Teacher of one Church; and Mr. Parker continuing always in Celibacy, they lived in one Houſe, till Death ſeparated them for a Time; but they are both now together in one Heaven, as they that beſt knew them have all poſſible Reaſon to be perſwaded. Mr. Parker continued in his Houſe, as long as he lived; and as he received a great deal of Kindneſs and Reſpect there, ſo he ſhow'd a great deal of Kindneſs in the Educating of his Children, and was very Liberal to that Family during his Life, and at his Death. He never forgot the Old Friendſhip, but ſhewed Kindneſs to the Dead, in ſhewing Kindneſs to the Living.

'Being got into ſome Paſſages of Mr. Parker's Life before I am aware, I will inſert a few more: And you may make what uſe of them you pleaſe. He kept a School, as well as preached, at Newbury in New England. He ordinarily had about Twelve or Fourteen Scholars. He took no pay for his pains, unleſs any preſent were freely ſent him. He uſed to ſay, He lived for the Churches ſake, and begrutch'd no pains that were for its Benefit; and by his Good Will he was not free to teach any but ſuch as were deſigned for the Miniſtry by their Parents; for he would ſay, He could not beſtow his Time and Pains unleſs it were for the Benefit of the Church. Tho' he were blind, yet ſuch was his Memory, that he could in his Old Age, teach Latin, Greek, and Hebrew, very Artificially. He ſeldom corrected a Scholar, unleſs for Lying and Fighting, which were unpardonable Crimes in our School. He promoted Learning in his Scholars, by ſomething an unuſual way; encouraging them to learn Leſſons, and make Verſes, beſides and above their ſtinted Taſks, for which they had Pardons in Store, that were kept on Record in the School, and were for leſſer School-Faults, ſuch as were not Immoralities, and Sins againſt God, croſs'd out; but he always told them, they muſt not think to eſcape unpuniſhed for Sin againſt God, by reaſon of them; tho' for ſome leſſer Defects about their Leſſons, they were accepted. I heard him tell Mr. Millar the Miniſter, that the great Changes of his Life had been ſignified to him before-hand by Dreams. And I heard him ſay, That before a Fiery Temptation of the Devil befel him, he had a very Terrible Repreſentation in a Dream, of the Devil aſſaulting of him, and he wreſtled with him, and had more than once like to have prevailed againſt him; but that when he was moſt likely and moſt near to be overcome, he was afreſh animated and ſtrengthened to reſiſt him; till at length the Devil ſeemed to break abroad like a Flaſh of Lightning, and then diſappeared; and that not long after, the moſt Diſmal Temptation of Satan befel him that ever he was ſenſible of, and that all the Paſſages of that Temptation anſwered the forementioned Repreſentarion; and that the Hazards of it, and his freſh Supplies when almoſt vanquiſhed, and his Deliverance was ſo remarkable, that every Day he had lived ſince that Time, he had given Thanks to God particularly for his Aſſiſtance of him in that Temptation, and his Deliverance out of it: Tho' it were Twenty Years before the time of his now telling me concerning it. Mr Parker excell'd in Liberty of Speech, in Praying, Preaching and Singing, having a moſt delicate ſweet Voice; yet he had all along an Impulſe upon his Spirit, that he ſhould have the Palſey in his Tongue, before he died. His Voice held extraordinarily, until very Old Age; and I think the more, becauſe his Teeth held ſound and good until then; his Cuſtom being to waſh his Mouth, and rub his Teeth every Morning. Some few Years before his Death, he began to complain of the Tooth-ach, and then he quickly began to loſe his Teeth; and now he ſaid, The Daughters of his Muſick began to fail him. And about a Year and half before he Died, That which he had long feared befel him, viz. The Palſy in his Tongue; and ſo he became Speechleſs, and thus continued until Death; having this only help left him, that he could pronounce Letters, but not Syllables or Words. He ſignified his Mind, by ſpelling his Words, which was indeed a tedious way, but yet a Mercy ſo far to him and others. During that Time, which was in our firſt Indian War, when the Indians broke in upon many Towns, and committed horrible Outrages, and tormented ſuch as they took Captives, one Night he fell into a dreadful Tentation, leſt the Indians ſhould break in upon Newbury, and the Inhabitants might generally eſcape by fighting or flying, but he being Old and Blind, and grown Decrepit, he muſt of Neceſſity fall into their hands; and that being a Miniſter, they would urge him by Torture to Blaſpheme Chriſt, and that he ſhould not have Grace to hold out againſt the Tentation of Indian Torture; and with the very fear of this, he was for the moſt part of the Night in ſuch Agonies of Soul, that he was on the very Brink of Deſparation; but at length, God helpt him, by bringing to his Mind, Two Places of Scripture: That in Iſa. 51. 12, 13. I, even I, am he that comforts thee; who art thou, that thou ſhouldeſt be afraid of a Man that ſhall die, and forgeteſt the Lord thy Maker! And that in Rom. 8. 35, 36. Who ſhall ſeparate us from the Love of Chriſt? Shall Tribulation or Diſtreſs, or Perſecution, or Famine, or Nakedneſs, or Peril, or Sword! —— For thy Sake we are killed all the Day long; —— Nay in all theſe things, we are more than Conquerors thro' him that hath loved us. Sleep departed from him that Night, by reaſon of the Horrour of that Tentation; and the Joy that came towards Morning he was wonderfully affected with; and in the Morning early, he pronounced all this to me Letter by Letter, and glorified God. Once hearing ſome of us laughing very freely, while, I ſuppoſe, he was better buſied in his Chamber above us, he came down, and gravely ſaid to us, Couſins, I wonder you can be ſo merry, unleſs you are ſure of your Salvation! He was a very Holy and Heavenly minded Man, and as much mortified to the World, as almoſt any in it. He ſcarce called any thing his own, but his Books and his Cloaths. When he was urged, to vindicate himſelf to be the Author of the Theſes de Traductione Peccatoris ad Vitam, he utterly refuſed it; ſaying, being young at 'the Time when he made them, he was afraid he had not ſo fully aimed at the Glory of God, as he ought to have done. But a while after, one unbeknown to him in Holland, Reprinted them, with the Name of the Author, and ſet him forth with more advantage, than would have been modeſt or proper for himſelf to have done; giving him his Parental as well as Perſonal Honour; and ſaying, That his Father was, Pater dignus tali Filio; and that he was, Filius dignus tali Patre. Thus he that humbleth himſelf ſhall be exalted.

'Mr. Wilſon once, on occaſion of his Cælibacy, ſaid to him, That if there could be Anger in Heaven, his Father would chide him, when he came there, becauſe he had not, like him, a Son to follow him. But he had many Spiritual Children, that were the Seals of his Miniſtry: He was alſo a Father to the Fatherleſs; and many Scholars were little leſs beholden to him for their Education, than they were to their Parents for their Generation.

'The Occaſion of his Cælibacy was this: At the time that he meditated Marriage, he was aſſaulted with violent Temptations to Infidelity, which made him regardleſs of every thing, in compariſon of confirming his Faith, about the Truth of the Scriptures. This occaſion'd his falling into the Study of the Prophecies, which proved a means of Confirming his Faith; but he fell ſo in Love with that Study, that he never got out of it, until his Death: And the Church had doubtleſs had much Benefit by his profound Studies in that kind, could the Biſhops have been perſwaded to Licenſe his Books; which they refuſed, becauſe he found the Pope to be propheſied of, where they could not underſtood it. His whole Life, beſides what was neceſſary for the Support of it, by Food, and Sleep, was Prayer, Study, Preaching, and teaching School. I once heard him ſay, He felt the whole Frame of his Nature giving way, which threatned his Diſſolution to be at hand: But he thank'd God, he was not amaz'd at it.

'To conclude, all I intend concerning Mr. Parker, or Mr. Noyes, I ſhall give you Mr. Parker's Character of Mr. Noyes, who beſt knew him, and whoſe Teſtimony of him is very credible.

'Mr. James Noyes, my worthy Collegue in the Miniſtry of the Goſpel, was a Man of ſingular Qualifications, in Piety excelling, an implacable Enemy to all Hereſie and Schiſm, and a moſt able Warriour againſt the ſame. He was of a reaching and ready Apprehenſion, a large Invention, a moſt profound Judgment, a rare and tenacious and comprehenſive Memory, fixed and unmovable in his grounded Conceptions; ſure in Words and Speech, without Raſhneſs; gentle and mild in all Expreſſions, without all Paſſion, or provoking Language. And as he was a notable Diſputant, ſo he never would provoke his Adverſary, ſaving by the ſhort Knocks, and heavy Weight of Argument. He was of ſo loving, and compaſſionate, and humble Carriage, that I believe never any were acquainted with him, but did deſire the Continuance of his Society and Acquaintance. He was reſolute for Truth, and in defence thereof, had no reſpect to any Perſons. He was a moſt excellent Counſellor in Doubts, and could ſtrike at an Hair's-breadth, like the Benjamites, and expedite the Entangled, out of the Briars. He was Courageous in Dangers, and ſtill was apt to believe the beſt, and made fair Weather in a Storm. He was much honoured and eſteemed in the Country, and his Death was much bewailed. I think he may be reckoned among the greateſt Worthies of this Age.

CHAP. XXVI.

The LIFE of Mr. THOMAS THACHER.

Virtutem Virtus pariat; De lumine Lumen prodeat.

§ 1. Athanaſius writing the Life of his Antonius, deſcribes him as propounding to his own Obſervation and Imitation, the various Excellencies of the Good Men whom he converſed withal: The τὸ χαρίεν, or Good Carriage of One; the τὸ πρὸς τὰς εὐχὰς σύντονον, or Prayerfulneſs, of Another; the τὸ ἀόργητον, or Lenity, of a Third; the τὸ φιλάνθρωπον, or Humanity, of a Fourth; attending to one τῶ ἀγρυπνοῦντι, or keeping of his Watchfulneſs; to another τῶ φιλολογοῦντι, or loving of Learning: Remarking of One, τὸν ἐν καρτερία, in his Patience; of Another, τὸν ἐν νηστείαις καὶ χαμευνίαις, in his Faſtings and Hardſhips: Regarding the τὴν πρᾳότητα, or Manſuetude, of One; the τὴν μακροθυμίαν, or Longanimity of Another: But, πάντων ὁμοῦ τὴν εἰς τὸν Χριστὸν εὐσέβειαν καὶ τὴν πρὸς ἀλλήλους ἀγάπην, the Piety of them All, toward the Lord Jeſus Chriſt, and the Charity of them All, towards One another.

Such Excellencies of Good Men have been ſet before my Reader, in the Lives that we have written of ſeveral ſuch Good Men, who were the Excellent on the Earth. But if my Reader would ſee a many of thoſe Excellencies meeting together in one Man, there are not many, in whom I could more hopefully promiſe him ſuch a Sight, than in our Excellent Mr. Thomas Thacher:

Thacher : Who is now, therefore, to be conſidered.

§ 2. Mr. Thomas Thacher was born May 1. 1620. the Son of Mr. Peter Thacher, a Reverend Miniſter at Salisbury, in England : One, whom, in a Letter of Dr. Twiſs to Mr. Mede, at the end of his Works, we find joined with famous Mr. White of Dorcheſter, in a Converſation, wherein the Learned Exerciſes of that Great Man, made a grateful Entertainment. And becauſe it may be ſome Satisfaction unto Good Men, to ſee Inſtances multiplied, for the Confirmation of a Matter mentioned by Mr. Baxter, in his Proof of Infant Baptiſm, where he ſays, As large Experience as I have had in my Miniſtry, of the State of Souls, and the Way of Converſion, I dare ſay, I have met not with one of very many, that would ſay, That they knew the time when they were converted : And of thoſe that would ſay ſo, by reaſon that they then found ſome more remarkable Change, yet they diſcovered ſuch Stirrings and Workings before, that many, I had cauſe to think, were themſelves miſtaken. I was once in a Meeting of very many Chriſtians, the moſt eminent for Zeal and Holineſs of moſt in the Land, of whom divers were Miniſters, and ſome at this Day as famous, and as much followed as any I know in England ; and it was there deſired, that every one ſhould give in the Manner of their Converſion, that it might be obſerved, what was God's ordinary way ; and there was but one, that I remember, of them all, that could conjecture at the Time of their firſt Converſion. It ſhall here be noted, That this was the Experience of our Thatcher. The Regenerating and Verticordious Grace of Heaven, took advantage from his Religious Education, inſenſibly, as it were, to ſteal into the Heart of this young Diſciple.

He afterwards affirmed, That he was never able to determine the Time, when the Spirit of God firſt began to convince him, and renew him ; only he could ſay with the Reverend Blind Man, I was blind, but now I ſee. When Thacher was a Child, the Lord loved him, and this Child alſo loved the Lord : He was an Abijah, that while he was a Child, had many Good Things in him towards the Lord God of his Father : He was a Timothy, that while he was a Child, knew the Holy Scriptures. He was a Samuel, that in his Childhood was viſited by the Holy Spirit : He was a Joſiah, that while he was yet young, ſought after the Lord ; and ſo much remarked was his Early Piety, that while he was in his Earlieſt Minority, they would ſay of him, There goes a Puritan. It might indeed be ſaid of him, as they report of St. Nicholas, That he led a Life, Sanctiſſimè ab ipſis Incunabulis Inchoatam. And it might be ſaid by him, as it was by the Bleſſed Ancient in his Confeſſions, Domine, puer cæpi rogare te Auxilium & Refugium meum, & rogavi parvus, non parvo affectu.

§ 3. Having been well Educated at the Grammar School, he had the Offer of his Father to perfect his Education at the Univerſity, either of Cambridge or Oxford. But conſidering the Impoſitions of Things, to him appearing unwarrantable, whereto he then muſt have expoſed himſelf, he Conſcientiouſly declined his Father's Offer, and choſe rather to venture over the Atlantic Ocean, and content himſelf with the Meanneſſes of America, than to wound his own Conſcience for the Academical Priviledges of England

When his Parents diſcerned his Inclination, they permitted his Removal to New-England : Intending themſelves, within a Year or two, with their Family, to have removed thither after him : Which Intention was prevented by the Death of his Mother, before it could be effected.

He arrived at Boſton, June 4. 1635. In which Year he was wonderfully preſerved from a Shipwreck, with his Uncle, wherein a worthy Miniſter, one Mr. Avery, loſt his Life, as elſewhere we have related. A Day or two before that fatal Voyage from Newberry to Marblehead, our young Thacher had ſuch a ſtrong, and ſad Impreſſion upon his Mind, about the Iſſue of the Voyage, that he, with another, would needs go the Journey by Land, and ſo he eſcaped periſhing with ſome of his pious and precious Friends by Sea.

§ 4. 'Tis well known, that in the early Days of Chriſtianity, there were no Colledges, (except we'll ſay the Catechetick Lecture at Alexandria was one) for the breeding of young Miniſters ; but the Biſhop of every Church took the Care to educate and elevate ſome young Men, who might be prepared thereby to ſucceed in their place, when they ſhould be dead and gone. And in the early Days of New-England, they were for a little while obliged unto ſuch a Method of providing young Men for the Service of the Churches. Thus our Thacher, by the good Providence of God, was now caſt into the Family, and under the Tuition of that Reverend Man, Mr. Charles Chancey ; who was afterwards the Preſident of Harvard Colledge, in our Cambridge. Under the Conduct of that eminent Scholar, he became ſuch an one himſelf ; and his indefatigable Studies were ſo proſpered, that he became Aliquis in Omnibus, without the Blemiſh uſually, but ſometimes unjuſtly annexed unto it, Nullus in Singulis. He was not unskill'd in the Tongues, eſpecially in the Hebrew, whereof he did compoſe a Lexicon ; but ſo comprize it, that within One Sheet of Paper, he had every conſiderable Word of the Language. And he was as well skill'd in the Arts, eſpecially in Logic, whereof he gave Demonſtration, in his being a moſt irrefragable Diſputant, on ſome great Occaſions.

Moreover, it was his Cuſtom, once in three or four Years time, at ſubceſive Hours, to go over the Tongues, and Arts, at ſuch a Rate, that his good Skill in them continued freſh unto the laſt. And to all his other Accompliſhments, there was this added, that he was a moſt incomparable Scribe : He not only wrote all the ſorts of Hands in the beſt Copy-Books then extant, tant, with a ſingular Exactneſs and Acuteneſs, but there are yet extant Monuments of Syriac, and other Oriental Characters of his Writing, which are hardly to be imitated. He had likewiſe a certain Mechanic Genius, which diſpoſed him in his Recreations unto a Thouſand Curioſities, eſpecially the Ingenuity of Clock-work, wherein at his Leiſure, he did things to Admiration.

§ 5. On May 11. 1643. he was married unto the Daughter of that Venerable Man Mr. Ralph Partridge, the Miniſter of Duxbury, The Conſort, whom the Favour of Heaven, thus beſtowed upon him, was a Perſon of a moſt amiable Temper; one Pious, and Prudent, and every way worthy of the Man to whom ſhe became a Glory. By her he received Three Sons and One Daughter; and when ſhe had continued Three Sevens of Years with him, ſhe went after a very Triumphant manner to be for ever with the Lord, June 2. 1664. uttering thoſe for her Dying Words, Come, Lord Jeſus, Come quickly: Why are thy Chariot-Wheels ſo long a coming?

§ 6. Having, as a Candidate of the Miniſtry, by his moſt commendable Preaching and Living, abundantly Recommended himſelf unto the Service of the Churches, he was invited by the Church of Weymouth to take the Paſtoral Charge of them; whereto he was Ordained, Jan. 2. 1644. And here he did for many Years fulfil his Miniſtry, not only with Elaborate and Affectionate Sermons, twice every Lord's Day, and in a Lecture once a Fortnight; but alſo in Catechiſing the Lambs of his Flock, for which he likewiſe made a Catechiſm. Theſe, alſo, he would at fit Seaſons call to an Account, concerning their Proficiency under the means of Grace; and ſuch as he found Ripe for an Admiſſion unto the Higheſt Myſteries, at the Table of the Lord, he would encourage to put themſelves upon the Publick and Uſual Probation, in order thereunto, but ſuch as he found ſhort, he would ſuitably, faithfully, and fervently adviſe unto the Preparations, wherein they appeared hitherto defective. And God crowned theſe Methods and Labours of his Holy Servant, with obſervable Succeſſes; which were ſeen in the great Growth of the Church, whereof he had the Overſight. But one Excellency that ſhined above the other Glories of his Miniſtry, was that Excellent Spirit of Prayer, which continually breathed in him. It has been uſed among the Arguments for Men to be much in Prayer, That the Dignity of the Perſon praying is thereby much augmented; and Chryſoſtom, in his Book, De Deo Orando, ſays, The very Angels cannot but honour him, whom they ſee familiarly, and frequently to be admitted unto the Audience, and as it were, diſcourſe with the Divine Majeſty. Now, though this Honour have all the Saints, yet our Thacher had more than ordinary ſhare of this Honour; he was a Perſon much in Prayer, and as he was much in Prayer, ſo he had an Eminency above moſt Men living for his Copious, his Fluent, his Fervent manner of performing that Sacred Exerciſe.

It was an Heaven upon Earth, to be preſent at the Notable Salleys of a Raiſed Soul, a Livecy Faith, and a Tongue toucht with a Coal from the Altar, with which, in his Prayers, he did Cælum Tundere, & Miſericordiam Extorquere.

§ 7. After the Death of his Firſt Wife, he married a Second in Boſton, which, with a Concurrence of many obliging Circumſtances, occaſioned his Removal thither. And it was afterwards found, that He who holds the Stars in his Right Hand, had a Purpoſe of Service to be done for his Name, in that Populous Town, by the Talents of this his Good and Faithful Servant. For in the Month of May, 1669. A Third Church ſwarming out from the Firſt in Boſton, which afterwards made one of the moſt conſiderable Congregations in the Colony, this Worthy Perſon was choſen the Paſtor of that Church: And Enſtalled in the Paſtoral Charge thereof, Feb. 16. 1669. wherein he continued until he died. From this Time, I behold him in the Metropolis of the Engliſh America, not only diſpenſing both Light and Warmth, unto his own particular Flock, but alſo as he had Opportunity, expreſſing a Care of all the Churches. And for the Comfort of thoſe Worthy Miniſters, who commonly have their Spirits Buffeted with ſtrong Temptations and ſore Dejections, before their performing any ſpecial Service of their Miniſtry, I'll mention one Paſſage, that may a little deſcribe how this Worthy Man became ſo uſeful: He would ſay to his Son; Son, I never preach a Sermon, till I cannot preach at all!

§ 8. As he was in his whole Behaviour a Serious, Holy, and Uſeful Man, ſo in his Government of his Family, he ſo well Rul'd his own Houſe, as to give particular Demonſtrations of his Abilities to Take Care of the Church of God. His Domeſticks both lov'd him, and fear'd him; and he was moſt Conſcientiouſly and Exemplarily Careful, about their Interiour as well as Temporal Welfare. This appeared eſpecially in the Management of his Family Worſhip; wherein he uſually read a Portion of the Scriptures, both Morning and Evening, and he would Raiſe Doctrines from every Verſe with Brief Confirmations, and cloſe Applications thereof as he went along. Yea, ſometimes one might hear from him thus, in One Family Expoſition, as entertaining a Variety of Truth, notably and pungently expreſſed, as in ſeveral publick Sermons: And he has told his Worthy Son, for his Encouragement unto ſuch Exerciſes, that he had found as much Advantage by them, as by moſt of his other Studies of Divinity; adding that he looked upon it as the Lord's Gracious Accompliſhment of that Word, Shall I hide any thing from Abraham? I know Abraham, that he will Teach his Houſe!

§ 9. He was one very Watchful over the Souls of his People, and Careful to preſerve them from Errors as well as Vices: But of all Errors, he diſcovered an Antipathy unto none more, than that Sink of all Errors, QUAKERISM. It was in his Time, namely, about the Year 1652. that there appeared a New Sect of People in the World, which from the odd Motions of their Bodies, that attended eſpecially their Firſt Perverſion, were called QUAKERS; and it was not long after their firſt Appearance, that New-England began to be troubled with them. Their Spirit of the Hat, and their Fopperies of Thou and Thee, in their Language to a Single Perſon, were the leaſt of thoſe things which gave our Thacher a Diſſatisfaction at them; that which cauſed him to employ a moſt fervent Zeal againſt thoſe Hereticks, was the Horrible End of their Hereſies, to lead Men into a Pit of Darkneſs, under a Pretence of the Light, and Annihilate all the Senſible Objects of our Holy Religion, under a Pretence of advancing the Spiritual; ſo that we muſt have no Bible, no Jeſus, no Baptiſm, no Euchariſt, no Ordinances, but what ſhall be Evaporated into Diſpenſations, Allegories, and meer Myſtical Notions: When he ſaw that quite contrary to the Tendency and Character of every Truth, which is to Abuſe the Creature, the Main Deſign of Quakeriſm is to Exalt Man, and find that in Man himſelf, which may be inſtead of Saviour, Scripture, Heaven, Righteouſneſs and all Inſtitutions unto him, he could not but adore the Juſtice and Vengeance of God, in permitting ſuch a Spiritual Plague to be inflicted on Places, where the Goſpel had been more eminently ſinned againſt; but he ſet himſelf with the more of a Paſtoral Diligence to defend his own Flock from the Contagion: And hence, when he heard of any Books left by the Quakers in any Houſes of his Neighbourhood, he would preſently repair to the Houſes, and obtain thoſe Venomous Pamphlets from them: For which, that the Wolves barked more at him than at many other Men, and would ſometimes come with their Faces hideouſly Black'd, and their Garments fearfully Torn, into his Congregation, whereby the Neighbours were frighted unto the Danger of their Lives, is not at all to be wondred at. In this his Paſtoral Care, he met with ſome Experiments, that were extraordinary; whereof one ſhall here be related. It has here ſometimes been Remarked, That a very ſenſible Poſſeſſion of the Devil has attended the Firſt Arreſt of Quakeriſm, on the Minds of Men, and the Seducers, have with a Real and Proper Witchcraft, by certain Ceremonies conveyed it unto them. Agreeably hereunto, an Inhabitant of Weymouth having bought certain Bibles at Boſton, lodg'd the Night following at a Tavern, where two Quakers lodged with him. The Quakers fell to diſgracing and degrading the Bibles, wherewith he had furniſhed himſelf, as a Dead Letter, and adviſed him to hearken to the Light within, which would ſufficiently direct him to Heaven; and the Effect of their Enchantments was, that before Morning, the poor Man was as very a Quaker as the beſt of them. In the Morning he was carrying back his Bibles to the Bookſellers, as Books now become altogether uſeleſs; and reſolving to keep no Dead Letter any longer in his hands; but in the way, he was met by Mr. Thacher, who ſeeing the Man look Wild and Strange, and of an Energumen-Countenance, over-perſwaded him to go aſide with him, that he might enquire a little further to his Condition. He carried the poor Man into a Neighbour's Houſe, and privately there Talked with him, and prayed with him, and by the Wonderful Bleſſing of Heaven, immediately recovered him from the Error of his Way: The Man was never any more a Quaker, but ever after this, wonderfully thankful unto God, and unto this his Servant, for his Recovery.

§ 10. The laſt that I ſhall mention of the Excellencies that ſignalized this Worthy Man ſhall be his Claim to the Accompliſhments of an Excellent Phyſician. He that for his Lively Miniſtry was juſtly reckoned among The Angels of the Churches, might for his Medical Acquaintances, Experiences, and Performances, be truly called a Raphael. Ever ſince the Days of Luke the Evangeliſt, Skill in Phyſick has been frequently profeſſed and practiſed, by Perſons whoſe more declared Buſineſs was the Study of Divinity. To ſay nothing of ſuch Monks as Ægidius Athenienſis, or Conſtantinus Afer, or Johannes Damaſcenus, or Truſianus Florentinus, and to ſay nothing of Henry Bochelt, a Biſhop, or of Albicus, an Arch Biſhop, or of Ludovicus Patavinus, a Cardinal, or of John 22. a Pope, all of whom were Notable Phyſicians, our Engliſh Nation has commonly afforded Eminent Phyſicians, who were alſo Miniſters of the Goſpel.

But I ſuppoſe the Greateſt Frequency of the Angelical Conjunction, has been ſeen in theſe Parts of America, where they are moſtly the Poor to whom the Goſpel is preached, by Paſtors whoſe Compaſſion to them in their Poverty, invites them to ſupply the Want of Able Phyſicians among them, and ſuch an Univerſally Serviceable Paſtor was our Thacher. They were the Prieſts of Egypt, of Greece, and of Rome, who reſerved in the Archives of their Temples the Stories and Methods of the Cures, wrought on the Recovered Perſons, who brought thither their Thankful Sacrifices; and by the Prieſts were Directions hence communicated unto ſuch as wanted Cures for the like Diſtempers. As the Art of Healing was firſt brought into ſome Order by the Hands of Officers that have been ſet apart for the Care of Souls; thus, that Art has been happily exerciſed by the Hands of Church-Officers in all Ages, who have adminiſtred unto the Souls of People the more effectually, for being Able to Adminiſter unto their Bodies. And a Singular Artiſt herein was our Thacher; who, knowing that every Rank of Generous Men had at ſome time or other afforded Perſons Eminent for Skill in Phyſick; yea, that it had been ſtudied by no leſs than ſuch Crowned Head as Mithridates and Hadrianus, and Conſtantinus Pogonatus, he thought it no ways miſbecoming him, to follow the Example. How many Hundreds in this way fared the better for him, I cannot ſay; but this I can ſay, That as King Zamolxes of Thracia, who was of Old a Renowned Phyſician, would give this as the Reaſon why the Greeks had the Diſeaſes among them, ſo much uncured, Becauſe they neglected their Souls, the Chief thing of all: So our Thacher was Bleſſed of God in his Faithful Endeavours to make Natural and Spiritual Health accompany each other in thoſe that were about him.

§ 11. But, Contra Vim Mortis —— Nothing will exempt from the Arreſt of Death. It happened that this Excellent Man preached for my Father, a Sermon on the 1 Pet. 4. 18. The Righteous ſcarcely ſaved; the laſt Words of which Sermon were, When a Saint comes to die, then often it is the Hour and Power of Darkneſs with him; then is the laſt Opportunity that the Devil has to vex the People of God; and hence they then ſometimes have the greateſt of their Diſtreſſes. Don't think him no Godly Man, that then meets with Doubts and Fears; our Lord Jeſus Chriſt then cries out, My God, my God, why haſt thou forſaken me? God help us, that as we live by Faith, ſo we may Walk in it. And theſe proved the Laſt Words that ever he uttered in any Sermon whatſoever. For viſiting a Sick Perſon, after his going out of the Aſſembly, he got ſome Harm, which turned into a Fever, whereof he did, without any Hour and Power of Darkneſs upon his own Holy Mind, expire on October 15. 1678. He left behind him Two Worthy Sons, Mr. Peter Thacher, who is at this time the Paſtor of the Church at Milton, and one from whoſe pious Labours, not the Engliſh only, but even the Indians alſo receive the Glad Tydings of Salvation; and Mr. Ralph Thacher, Miniſter of the Word at Martha's Vineyard. And he likewiſe left one Printed Off-ſpring of his Mind; for as the Reverend Prefacer thereto obſerves, When the Lord knew that Boſton, yea that New-England would have cauſe for many Days of Humiliation, he therefore ſtirred up the Heart of his Servant aforehand to give Inſtructions and Directions, concerning the Acceptable Performance of ſo great a Duty, he did in the Year 1674. preach on the Nature of a Sacred Faſt; and ſome of his Hearers, who wrote after him, when he preached, afterwards publiſhed it under the Title of, A Faſt of God's Chuſing.

§ 12. The Church of this Worthy Man at Weymouth, has been entertained with one Curioſity, which by way of Appendix to his Life, is not unworthy to be related.

One Matthew Prat, whoſe Religious Parents had well inſtructed him in his Minority, when he was Twelve Years of Age, became totally Deaf thro' Sickneſs, and ſo hath ever ſince continued. He was taught after this to Write, as he had been before to Read; and both his Reading and his Writing he retaineth perfectly, but he has almoſt forgotten to ſpeak; ſpeaking but Imperfectly, and ſcarce Intelligibly, and very ſeldom. He is yet a very Judicious Chriſtian, and being admitted into the Communion of the Church, he has therein for many Years behaved himſelf, unto the extream Satisfaction of Good People, in the Neighbourhood. Sarah Prat, the Wife of this Man, is one alſo who was altogether deprived of her Hearing, by Sickneſs, when ſhe was about the Third Year of her Age; but having utterly loſt her Hearing, ſhe has utterly loſt her Speech alſo, and no doubt, all Remembrance of every thing that refers to Language. Mr. Thacher made an Eſſay to teach her the Uſe of Letters, but it ſucceeded not: However, ſhe has a moſt quick Apprehenſion of things, by her Eye, and ſhe diſcourſes by Signs, whereat ſome of her Friends are ſo expert, as to maintain a Converſation with her upon any point whatever, with as much Freedom and Fulneſs, as if ſhe wanted neither Tongue, nor Ear, for Conference. Her Children do learn her Signs from the Breaſt: And ſpeak ſooner by her Eyes and Hands, than by their Lips. From her Infancy, ſhe was very ſober and modeſt; but ſhe had no Knowledge of a Deity, nor of any thing that concerns another Life, and World. Nevertheleſs, God of his Infinite Mercy has Revealed the Lord Jeſus Chriſt, and the Great Myſteries of Salvation by him, unto her, by a more Extraordinary and Immediate Operation of his own Spirit upon her. An Account of her Experiences was written from her, by her Husband; and the Elders of the Church employing her Husband, with two of her Siſters, who are notably skilled in her Way of Communication, examined her ſtrictly hereabout; and and they found that ſhe underſtood the Unity of the Divine Eſſence, the Trinity of Perſons in the Godhead, the Perſonal Union in our Lord, the Myſtical Union between our Lord and his Church; and that ſhe was acquainted with the Impreſſions of Grace upon a Regenerate Soul. She was under great Exerciſe of Mind, about her Internal and Eternal State; ſhe expreſſed unto her Friends deſire of Help; and ſhe made uſe of the Bible, and other Good Books, and with Tears, remark'd ſuch Paſſages as were ſuitable to her own Condition. Yea, ſhe once, in her Exerciſe, wrote with a Pin upon a Trencher, three times over, Ah, Poor Soul! and therewith before divers Perſons, burſt into Tears. At a Sermon ſhe would enquire after the Text, which being ſhewn her, ſhe would look and muſe upon it: And ſhe ſtrangely knows the Names of thoſe with whom ſhe is acquainted; inſomuch that if they be Names found in the Scripture, ſhe will turn and find, and point them there. It ſeems that Written Words are a ſort of Hieroglyphicks unto her.

She was admitted into the Church with the General Approbation of the Faithful, nor would the moſt Judicious Caſuiſts in the World, a Luther, a Melancthon, a Gerhard, an Alting, a Baldwin, have ſcrupled her Admiſſion to the Sacred Myſteries: And her Carriage is that of a Grave, Gracious, Holy Woman.

The wonderful Circumſtances of this Couple, may juſtly be added unto the Entertainments for the Curious, which we have in the young Man and Maid, mentioned by Camerarius, who tho' Deaf and Dumb, could Read and Write, and Cypher, and know a Man's Meaning by the Motion of his Lips. And the Perſon mentioned by Platerus, who tho' born Deaf as well as Dumb, yet could expreſs his Thoughts in a Table-Book, and comprehend what was written by others in it, and with Edification attend upon the Miniſtry of Oecolampadius: And both Mr. Criſp of London, and Gennet Lowes of Edinburgh, who tho' naturally Deaf, and by conſequence Dumb, could yet ſee what People ſpoke, by ſeeing them when they ſpoke: And in a word, the exquiſite Sence of the Mutes in the Ottoman Court, related by Rycaut, in his Hiſtory of that Empire.

An Epitaph muſt now be ſought for this Worthy Man: And becauſe the Nation and Quality of the Author, will make the Compoſure to become a Curioſity, I will here, for an Epitaph, inſert an Elegy, which was compoſed upon this Occaſion, by an Indian Youth, who was then a Student of Harvard-Colledge. (His Name was, Eleazar.)

CHAP. XXVII.

The LIFE of Mr. PETER HOBART.

§ 1. IT was a Saying of Alphonſus (whom they Sir-named, The Wiſe, King of Arragon) That among ſo many Things as are by Men poſſeſſed or purſued, in the Courſe of their Lives, all the reſt are Baubles, beſides, Old Wood to burn, Old Wine to drink, Old Friends to converſe with, and Old Books to read. Now there having been Proteſtant and Reformed Colonies here formed, in a New World, and thoſe Colonies now growing Old, it will certainly be no unwiſe thing for them to converſe with ſome of their Old Friends, among which one was Mr. Peter Hobart, whom therefore a New Book ſhall now preſent unto my Readers.

§ 2. Mr. Peter Hobart was born at, or near Hingham, a Market-Town, in the County of Norfolk, about the latter end of the Year 1604. His Parents were eminent for Piety, and even from their Youth feared God above many; wherein their Zeal was more conſpicuous, by the Impiety of the Neighbourhood, among whom there were but three or four in the whole Town, that minded ſerious Religion, and theſe were ſufficiently maligned by the Irreligious for their Puritaniſm. Theſe Parents of our Hobart, were ſuch as had obtained each other from the God of Heaven, by Iſaac-like Prayers unto him, and ſuch as afterwards beſieged Heaven with a continual Importunity for a Bleſſing upon their Children; whereof the Second was this our Peter. This their Son was like another Samuel, from his Infancy dedicated by them unto the Miniſtry, and in order thereunto, ſent betimes unto a Grammer School; whereto, ſuch was his deſire of Learning, that he went ſeveral Miles on foot, every Morning, and by his early Appearance there, ſtill ſhamed the Sloth of others. He went afterwards unto the Free-School at Lyn, from whence when he was by his Maſter judged fit for it, he was admitted into a Colledge in the Univerſity of Cambridge; where he remained, ſtudied, profited, until he proceeded Batchellor of Arts: Giving all along an Example of Sobriety, Gravity, Averſation from all Vice, and Inclination to the Service of God.

§ 3. Retiring then from the Univerſity, he taught a Grammar School; but he lodg'd in the Houſe of a Conformiſt Miniſter, who tho' he were no Friend unto Puritans, yet he employed this our young Hobart ſometimes to preach for him, and when ask'd, What his Opinion of this young Man was? He ſaid, I do highly approve his Abilities; he will make an able Preacher: But I fear he will be too preciſe. When the time for it came, he returned unto the Univerſity, and proceeded Maſter of Arts: But the reſt of his time in England was attended with much Unſettlement of his Condition. He was employed here and there, as Godly People could obtain Permiſſion from the Parſon of the Pariſh, who upon any little Diſguſt would recal that Permiſſion: And yet all this while, by the Bleſſing of God upon his own Diligence and Diſcretion, and the Frugality of his Vertuous Conſort, he lived comfortably. The laſt place of his Reſidence in England, was the Town of Haverhil, where he was a Lecturer, laborious and ſucceſsful in the Vineyard of our Lord.

§ 4. His Parents, his Brethren, his Siſters, had not without a great Affliction to him, embarked for New-England; but ſome time after this, the Cloud of Prelatical Impoſitions and Perſecutions grew ſo black upon him, that the Solicitations of his Friends, obtained from him a Reſolution for New-England alſo, where he hoped for a more ſettled Abode, which was moſt agreeable to his Inclination. Accordingly in the Summer of the Year 1635, he took Ship, with his Wife and four Children, and after a Voyage by conſtant Sickneſs rendred very tedious to him, he arrived at Charles-Town, where he found his deſired Relations got ſafe before him. Several Towns now addreſſed him to become their Miniſter; but he choſe with his Father's Family, and ſome other Chriſtians, to form a new Plantation, which they called Hingham; and there gathering a Church, he continued a faithful Paſtor, and an able Preacher, for many Years. And his old People at Haverbil indeed, in ſome time after, ſent moſt importunate Letters unto him, to invite his Return for England: And he had certainly returned, if the Letters had not ſo miſcarried, that before his Advice to them, there fell out ſome Remarkable, and Invincible Hindrances of his Removal.

§ 6. Not long after this, he had (as his own Expreſſion for it was) his Hart rent out of his Breaſt, by the Death of his Conſort; but his Chriſtian, Patient, and Submiſſive Reſignation, was rewarded by his Marriage to a Second, that proved a rich Bleſſing unto him. His Houſe was alſo edified and beautified with many Children, on whom, when he look'd, he would ſay ſometimes with much Thankfulneſs; Behold, thus ſhall the Man be bleſſed, that feareth the Lord! And for whom he employ'd many Tears in his Prayers to God, that they might be happy, and like another Job, offered up his daily Supplications.

His Love to Learning, made him ſtrive hard that his hopeful Sons might not go without a Learned Education; and accordingly we find four or five of them wearing Laurels in the Catalogue of our Graduates; and ſeveral of them are, at this Day, worthy Preachers of the Goſpel in our Churches.

§ 7. He was moſtly a Morning Student, not meriting the Name of Homo Lectiſſimus, as he in the witty Epigrammatiſt, from his long lying a Bed; and yet he would improve the Darkneſs of the Evening alſo, for ſolemn, fixed, and illuminating Meditations. He was much admired for well-ſtudied Sermons; and even in the midſt of Secular Diverſions and Diſtractions, his active Mind would be buſie at providing Materials for the Compoſure of them. He much valued that Rule, Study Standing; and until Old Age, and Weakneſs compelled him, he rarely would Study ſitting: Which Practice of his he would recommend unto other Students, as an excellent Preventive of that Flagellum Studioſorum, the Stone. And when he had an opportunity to hear a Sermon from any other Miniſter, he did it with ſuch a diligent and reverent Attention, as made it manifeſt that he worſhipped God in doing of it: And he was very careful to be preſent ſtill, at the beginning of the Exerciſes, counting it a Recreation, to ſit and wait for the Worſhip of God.

Moreover, his Heart was knit in a moſt ſincere and hearty Love towards pious Men, tho' they were not in all things of his own Perſwaſion. He would admire the Grace of God in Good Men, tho' they were of Sentiments contrary unto his; and he would ſay, I can carry them in my Boſome: Nor was he by them otherwiſe reſpected.

§ 8. There was deeply rooted in him a ſtrong Antipathy to all Profanities, whereof he was a faithful Reprover, both in publick and in private; and when his Reproofs prevailed not, he would weep in ſecret Places.

Drinking to Exceſs, and Miſpence of precious Time, in Tipling or Talking with vain Perſons, which he ſaw grown too common, was an Evil ſo extremely offenſive to him, that he would call it, Sitting at Meat in an Idol's Temple; and when he ſaw that Vanity grow upon the more high Profeſſors of Religion, it was yet more diſtaſtful to him, who in his own Behaviour was a great Example of Temperance.

Pride, expreſſed in a Gaiety, and Bravery of Apparel, would alſo cauſe him with much Compaſſion to addreſs the young Perſons with whom he ſaw it Budding, and adviſe them to correct it, with more Care to adorn their Souls with ſuch things as were of great Price before God: And here likewiſe his own Example, joined Handſomneſs with Gravity, and a Moderation that could not endure a ſhow. But there was no ſort of Men from whom he more turned away than thoſe, who under a Pretence of Zeal for Church-Diſcipline, were very pragmatical in Controverſies, and furiouſly ſet upon having all things carried their Way, which they would call, The Rule; but at the ſame time, were moſt inſipid Creatures, deſtitute of the Life and Power of Godlineſs, and perhaps Immoral in their Converſations. To theſe he would apply a Saying of Mr. Cotton's, That ſome Men are all Church, and no Chriſt.

§ 9. He was a Perſon that met with many Temptations and Afflictions, which are better forgotten than remembred; but he was internally, and is now eternally a Gainer by them. It is remark'd of the Patriarch Jacob, that when he was a very Old Man, and much older than the moſt that lived after him, he complained, Few and evil have been the Days of the Years of my Life: In which Complaint, the few is explained by the evil; his Days were Winter-days, and ſpent in the Darkneſs of ſore Calamity. Winter-days are Twenty four Hours long as well as other Days; yea, longer, if the Equation of Time ſhould be Mathematically conſidered; yet we count them the ſhorter Days. Thus altho' our Hobart lived unto Old Age, he might call his Days few, becauſe they had been Evil. But mark this perfect Man, and behold this upright one; for the end of this Man was Peace. In the Spring of the Year 1670, he was viſited with a Sickneſs that ſeemed the Meſſenger of Death; but it was his humble Deſire, that by having his Life prolonged a little further, he might ſee the Education of his own younger Children perfected, and beſtow more Labour alſo upon the Converſion of the young People in his Congregation: I have travelled in the Miniſtry in this place, Thirty five Years, and might it pleaſe God ſo far to lengthen out my Days, as to make it up Forty, I ſhould not, I think, deſire any more. Now the Lord heard this Deſire of his praying Servant, and added no leſs than Eight Years more unto his Days. The moſt part of which time, except the laſt Three Quarters of a Year, he was employed in the Publick Services of his Miniſtry.

Being recovered from his Illneſs, he proved that he did not flatter with his Lips, in the Vows that he had made for his Recovery; for he now ſet himſelf with great Fervour to gather the Children of his Church, under the ſaving Wings of the Lord Jeſus Chriſt; and in order thereunto he preached many pungent Sermons, on Eccleſ. 11. 9, 10. and Eccl. 12. 1. and uſed many other ſucceſsful Endeavours.

§ 10. Tho' his Labours were not without Succeſs, yet the Succeſs was not ſo general, and notable, but that he would complain, Alas, for the Barrenneſs of my Miniſtry! And when he found his Lungs decay by Old Age, and Fever, he would clap his Hands on his Breaſt and ſay, The Bellows are burnt, the Founder has melted in vain! At length Infirmities grew ſo faſt upon this painful Servant of our Lord, that in the Summer of the Year 1678, he ſeemed apace drawing on to his End; but after ſome Revivals he again got abroad; however, he ſeldom, if ever preached after it, but only adminiſtred the Sacraments. In this time his Humility, and conſequently all the other Graces which God gives unto the Humble, grow exceedingly, and obſervably; and hence he took delight in hearing the Commendations of other Men, tho' ſometimes they were ſo unwiſely uttered, as to carry ſome Diminutions unto himſelf; and he ſet himſelf particularly to put all Reſpect and Honour upon the Miniſters that came in the time of his Weakneſſes to ſupply his place. After and under his Confinement, the ſinging of Pſalms was an Exerciſe wherein he took a particular delight; ſaying, That it was the Work of Heaven, which he was willing to anticipate. But about Eight Weeks before his Expiration, he did with his Aged Hand Ordain a Succeſſor; which when he had performed with much Solemnity, he did afterwards with an Aſſembly of Miniſters, and other Chriſtians, at his own Houſe, joyfully ſing the Song of Aged Simeon, Thy Servant now letteſt thou depart in Peace. He had now nothing to do, but to die; and he ſpent his Hours accordingly, in aſſiduous Preparations; not without ſome dark Intervals of Temptation; but at laſt with Light ariſing in Darkneſs unto him. While his Exteriour was decaying, his Interiour was renewing, every Day, until the Twentieth Day of January, 1678. When he quietly and ſilently reſigned his holy Soul, unto its faithful Creator.

CHAP. XXVIII.

A Man of God, and an Honourable Man. The LIFE of Mr. SAMUEL WHITING.

Hi mihi Doctores ſemper placuere, docenda
Qui faciunt, plus, quam qui facienda docent.

§ 1. WHEN the miſerable Saul applied himſelf to the Witch of Endor, for the Invoking of, and Conſulting with, ſome Spirit in the Inviſible World, he choſe that the Spirit ſhould rather appear in the Shape of the Venerable Samuel, than in any other. A Diſpute is raiſed among Learned Men, on the Occaſion of the Spirit thus raiſed; Who it ſhould be? For while ſome think, that beyond the Expectation, and unto the Aſtoniſhment of the Witch, it was the True Samuel, which now appeared; in as much as the Apparition is five times over called by the Name of Samuel, and the Apocryphal Eccleſiaſticus affirms of Samuel, that after his Death he propheſied: And ſeveral of the Fathers and of the School-men, herein followed by Mendoza, Delrio, Dr. More, Mr. Glanvil, and others, are of this Opinion: They imagine with Lyra, that God then ſent in the Real Samuel, unlook'd for, as he came upon Balaam, when employed about his Magical Impoſtures: There are more, who judge that it was a Spirit of the ſame kind with that, which is deſcribed by Porphyrius, παντόμορφόν τε ϗ πολύτροπον changing themſelves into multifarious Forms, one while acting the Parts of Dæmons, another while of Angels, and another while the Souls of the Deceaſed: Of which Opinion was Tertullian, and the Author of the Queſt. & Reſp. aſcribed unto Juſtin Martyr, and the Generality of Proteſtants: Who cannot perſwade themſelves, that the Lord would have ſo far countenanced Necromancy, or Pſycomancy, as to have let the Real Samuel come, upon the Sollicitations of an Enchantreſs; and that the Real Samuel would not have diſcourſed at the Rate of the Spectre now exhibited.

Let the Diſputants, upon this Queſtion, wrangle on; while we by a very Lawful and Laudable Art, will fetch another Samuel from the Dead: And by the Happy Magick of our Pen, Reader, we will bring into the View of the World, a Venerable Old Man, a Samuel who ſhall entertain us with none but Comfortable and Profitable Tidings.

§ 2. Mr. Samuel Whiting drew his firſt Breath at Boſton, in Lincolnſhire, Nov. 20. A.D. 1597. His Father a Perſon of good Repute there, the Eldeſt Son among many Brethren, an Alderman, and ſometimes a Mayor of the Town, had three Sons; the Second of theſe was our Samuel, who had a Learned Education by his Father beſtowed upon him, firſt at Boſton School, and then at the Univerſity of Cambridge. He had for his Companion in his Education, his Coſen-German, the very Renowned Anthony Tuckney, afterwards Doctor, and Maſter of St. John's College: They were School-Fellows at Boſton, and Chamber Mates, at Cambridge; they both belonged unto Immanuel-Colledge, and they continued an Intimate Friendſhip, when they left the Seats of the Muſes, which indeed was not quenched by the many Waters of the Atlantick, when they were a Thouſand Leagues aſunder. It was while he was thus at the Univerſity, that the good Spirit of God made early Impreſſions of Grace upon his young Soul; and the Cares of his pious Tutor, (I think Mr. Yates) to inſtruct him in Matters of Religion, as well as of Literature, were bleſſed for the Imbuing of his Mind, with a Tincture of Early Piety; which was further advanced by the Miniſtry of ſuch Preachers as Dr. Sibs and Dr. Preſton: So that in his Age he would give Thanks to God for the Divine Favours which he thus received in his Youth, and when he was entring into his Reſt, where he expected the moſt Intimate Communion with our Glorious Immanuel, and with the Spirits of Juſt Men made perfect, he could with Joy reflect upon the Anticipations of it, which he enjoyed in the Retired Walk of Immanuel-College.

§ 3. Having proceeded Maſter of Arts, he removed from Cambridge, and became a Chaplain to Sir Nathanael Bacon, and Sir Roger Townſend, where he did for Three Years together, with Prayers, with Sermons, with Catechiſing, and with a Grave and Wiſe Deportment, ſerve the Intereſt of Religion, in a Family, which had no leſs than Two Knights and Five Ladies in it. He next removed unto Lyn, in the County of Norfolk, and ſpent another Three Years, as a Collegue in the Miniſtry of the Goſpel, with a Reverend and Excellent Man, Mr. Price. But the Great Content which he took in his preſent Scituation, and Society, and Service, was interrupted at length by Complaints made unto the Biſhop of Norwich, for his Non Conformity unto thoſe Rites, which never were of any Uſe in the Church of God, but only to be Tools, by which the Worſt of Men might thruſt out the Beſt from ſerving it. Being Cited unto the High Commiſſion Court, he expected that he ſhould loſe the moſt of his Eſtate, for his being a Non Conformiſt; but before the Time for his Appearance, according to the Citation, came, King James died; and ſo his Trouble at this Time was diverted. The Earl of Lincoln afterwards interceding for him, the Biſhop was willing to promiſe, that he would no farther Worry him, in caſe he would be gone out of his Dioceſs, where he could not reach him; and therefore leaving Lyn, he exerciſed his Miniſtry at Skirbick, near Boſton in Lincolnſhire, for a conſiderable while, with no Inconſiderable Fruit; refreſhed with the Delightful Neighbourhood of his Old Friends and eſpecially thoſe Eminent Perſons Mr. Cotton and Mr Tuckney, to both of whom he had ſome Affinity, as from both of them, no little Affection.

§ 4. Having buried his Firſt Wife, by whom he had Three Children, Two Sons, who died in England, and one Daughter afterwards matched with one Mr. Thomas Weld, in another Land; he married the Daughter of Mr. Oliver St. John, a Bedfordſhire Gentleman, of an Honourable Family, nearly related unto the Lord St. John of Bletſo. This Mr. St. John, was a Perſon of Incomparable Breeding, Vertue and Piety; ſuch, that Mr. Cotton, who was well acquainted with him, ſaid of him, He was one of the Compleateſt Gentlemen, without Affectation, that ever he knew. And this his Daughter was a Perſon of ſingular Piety and Gravity; one who by her Diſcretion freed her Husband from all Secular Avocations; one who upheld a daily and conſtant Communion with God, in the Devotions of her Cloſet; one, who not only Wrote the Sermons that ſhe heard on the Lord's Days with much Dexterity, but Liv'd them, and Liv'd on them all the Week. The uſual Phraſe for an Excellent Woman, among the Ancient Jews was, One who deſerves to marry a Prieſt: Even ſuch an Excellent Woman was now married unto Mr. Whiting. This Gentlewoman having ſtay'd with her worthy Conſort Forty Seven Years, went in the Seventy Third Year of his Age, unto him to whom her Soul had been ſome Scores of Years eſpouſed. Mr. Whiting had by her four Sons and two Daughters. Three of the Sons lived unto the Eſtate and Stature of Men; and had a Learned Education. Samuel is at this Day a Reverend, Holy and Faithful Miniſter of the Goſpel, in the New-Engliſh Town of Billerica: John was intended for a Phyſician, but became a Preacher, firſt at Butterwich, then at Leverton in Lincolnſhire, where he died a Godly Conformiſt: Joſeph is, at this Day, a Worthy and Painful Miniſter of the Goſpel, at Southampton upon Long-Iſland.

§ 5. After he had abode ſeveral Years at Skirbick, ſoon after Mr. Cotton's Removal, he fell into ſuch Trouble, for his Non-Conformity to the Vanities, which Men had received by Tradition from their Popiſh Fathers, and this through the Complaint of the ſame unhappy Man, 'tis ſaid, who procured the Trouble of Mr. Cotton, that he found he muſt be gone: But New-England offered it ſelf as the moſt Hopeful and Quiet, and indeed the only Place that he could be gone unto. The Eccleſiaſtical Sharks then drove this Whiting over the Atlantic Sea, unto the American Strand. Let it not be a matter of Wonder, That Perſons of a Conſcience rightly informed and inclined, choſe rather to undergo an uncomfortable Exile from the beſt Iſland under Heaven, to as hard a Deſart as any upon Earth, rather than to Conform to the Ceremonies of the Engliſh Liturgy. If the things had been as Lawful in the Judgment of the Sufferers, as they were in the Pretences of the Impoſers, they were not ſo fond of Miſeries as to have refuſed Conformity. But it was of old obſerved, that when Sinful Things were commanded, Nihil obſtinacius Chriſtiano, nothing is more Obſtinate than a Chriſtian Diſſenter: And it is a Commendable Obſtinacy! The Faithful in Tertullian's Time, would undergo any thing rather than uſe the Ceremonies of Idolaters, though they might have us'd them to another End, and with another Mind than they. The Firſt Planters of New England knew, that the Ceremonies retained in the Church of England, had been firſt Invented and Practis'd by Idolaters: And knowing that all the Abominations of the Popiſh Maſs, originally ſprang from an Impoſed Liturgy, they thought it no Nicety to have declined all Compliance with ſuch a thing, though they ſhould not have had as they had, numberleſs Objections againſt it. The very Words uſed in the Rites then required, were fear'd by thoſe good Men, as Dangerous; after they read thoſe Words of the Rhemiſts, While they ſay, Miniſters, let us ſay, Prieſts; When they call it, A Communion Table, Let us call it, An Altar. Let us keep our Old Words, and we ſhall keep our Old Things, our Religion. But much more did theſe good Men fear the Rites of Things themſelves; eſpecially when they ſaw them to be not only Unſcriptural and Uninſtituted, but alſo of Pernicious Conſequence to the very Vitals of Religion. For this they had the Example of Peter Martyr, who wiſhed, that the Reformed Churches, keeping up theſe things would be ſenſible, Evangelium iis manentibus, non ſatis eſſe firmum; That the Goſpel can't be ſecure, while the Ceremonies continue: They had the Example of Martin Bucer, who complained, That the Ceremonies and the Preaching of the Word, mutually expel one another. Where Knowledge through the Preaching of the Goſpel prevails, there the Love of theſe withers, and where the Love of theſe prevails, there Knowledge decays: They had the Example of the Divines of Hamburgh, who looked upon ſuch Ceremonies to be the Cuniculi, the Secret Mines by which the Papiſts would convey themſelves under our Foundations, and overthrow our Churches. And if they did then entertain Auſtin's Fear, In Multitudine Ceremoniarum periclitatur Fides; I wiſh the Event had leſs confirmed it. It is very certain, in the Engliſh Nation, they ſerv'd only as Gileadites, to keep the Paſſages of the Church, ſo that no Miniſter, how able or worthy ſoever could paſs, unleſs he could pronounce that Shibboleth. And if the Man of Bern, mentioned by Melancthon, who would rather be Martyred than obſerve one Faſt in the Popiſh manner, were to be commended for his Fidelity to Chriſt, tho' it ſeemed ſuch a little matter, theſe good Men muſt not be reproached for this, that they would rather be Exiled than conform to thoſe things, which were like the pretended indifferent Things, impoſed in the Old German Inſtrument called the Interim, namely Semina Corruptelæ, the Seeds of Romiſh Corruption. 'Tis time for me now, without any further Obſervation, to add concerning our Whiting. His Vertuous Conſort was far from diſcouraging him, through any unwillingneſs in her to forſake her Native Country, or expoſe her own Perſon firſt unto the Hazards of the Ocean, and then unto the Sorrows of a Wilderneſs: But tho' ſome of her Friends were much againſt it, yet ſhe rather forwarded than hindred her Huſband's Inclination for America. When he ſhip'd himſelf, he took with him all that he had; and whereas he might have reſerved his Lands in England, which would have yielded him a conſiderable Annual Revenue, and notable Acceſſion to the ſmall Salary, which he was afterwards put off withal; yet judging that he never ſhould return to England any more, he ſold all, ſaying, I am going into the Wilderneſs to a Sacrifice unto the Lord, and I will not leave an Hoof behind me.

He took Shipping about the beginning of April, 1636. and arrived May 26. after he had been ſo very ſick all the way, that he could preach but one Sermon all the while; and he would ſay, That he had much rather have undergone ſix Weeks Impriſonment for a good Cauſe, than to undergo ſix Weeks of ſuch terrible Sea-ſickneſs as he had now been tried withal.

But in a Sermon after his Arrival, he thus expreſſed his Apprehenſions and Conſolations:

‘ We in this Country have left our near and
‘ our dear Friends: But if we can get nearer to ‘ God here, he will be inſtead of all, and more ‘ than all unto us: He hath all the Fulneſs of
‘ all the ſweeteſt Relations bound up in him.
‘ We may take out of God, which we forſook
‘ in Father, Mother, Brother, Siſter, Friends
‘ that hath been as near, and as dear as our own ‘ Soul.

§ 6. When he came aſhore, his Friends at the New Engliſh Boſton, with many of whom he had been acquainted in Lincoln-ſhire, let him know how glad they were to ſee him; and having lodged about a Month with his Kinſman, Mr. Adderton Haugh, he removed unto Lyn, the Church there inviting him to be their Paſtor; and in the Paſtoral Care of that Flock, he ſpent all the reſt of his Days. The Year following Mr. Thomas Cobbet followed him: And ſoon after his Arrival at New-England, became his Collegue, in the Service of the Church at Lyn. Great was the Love that ſweetned the Labours, and whole Converſation and Vicinity of theſe Fellow-Labourers; the Rays with which they illuminated the Houſe of God, ſweetly united; they were almoſt every Day together, and thought it a long Day if they were not ſo; one rarely travelling abroad without the other: And theſe two Angelick Men ſeem'd willing to give one another as little Joſtle, as the Angels upon Jacob's Ladder did unto one another, while one was deſcending, and another aſcending there. How little Stipends theſe great great Servants of the Church, were oppreſſed, but yet contented withal, may be gathered from this one Story.

The ungrateful Inhabitants of Lyn, one Year paſs'd a Town-Vote, That they could not allow their Miniſters above Thirty Pounds apiece, that Year, for their Salary: And behold, the God who will not be mocked, immediately cauſed the Town to loſe Three hundred Pounds, in that one Specie of their Cattel, by one Diſaſter.

However, Mr. Whiting found ſuch a Bleſſing of God upon his Little, that he would cheerfully ſay, He queſtion'd whether, if he had abode in England, where his Means were much more conſiderable, he could have brought up three Sons at the Univerſity there, as he did at Harvard-Colledge here. But after they had lived about a Score of Years together, Mr. Cobbet was, upon the Death of Mr. Rogers, tranſlated unto Ipſwich; from this time was Mr. Whiting moſtly alone in his Miniſtry; and yet not alone, becauſe the Heavenly Father was with him. And as he drew near his End, he had his youngeſt Son for his Aſſiſtant.

In the Sixty Third Year of his Age, A.D.1659. he began to be viſited with the grinding and painful Diſeaſe of the Stone in the Bladder, with which he was much exerciſed, [and the Reader that knows any thing of it, will ſay it was Exerciſe enough] until he came to be, where the Weary are at reſt. He bore his Affliction with incomparable Patience; and he had one Favour which he much ask'd of God, that tho' ſmall Stones, with great Pains, often proceeded from him, and he ſcarce enjoy'd one Day of perfect Eaſe, after this, until he died; yet it is not remembred, that he was ever hindred thereby one Day from his Publick Services. And whereas it was expected, both by himſelf and others, that as he grew in Years, the Torments of his Malady would grow upon him, it proved much otherwiſe; the Torments and Complaints of his Diſtemper abated, as his Age increaſed. At length a Senile Atrophy came upon him, with a waſting Diarrhæa, which brought Lyn into Darkneſs, Decemb. 11. 1679. in the Eighty third Year of his Peregrination.

§ 7. For his Learning he was many ways well accompliſhed: Eſpecially he was accurate in Hebrew, in which Primitive and Expreſſive Language, he took much delight: And he was elegant in Latin, whereof among other Demonſtrations he gave one, in an Oration at one of our Commencements: And much of his vacant Hours he employ'd in Hiſtory: Hiſtory, which made good unto him her ancient Character:

Omnis nunc noſtro pendet Prudentia Senſu,
Riteque nil, noſtrâ, qui caret Arte, ſapit.

He

Hiſtory, whoſe great Votary Polybius, truly aſſerts, Nulla hominibus facilior ad Vitæ Inſtitutionem via eſt, quam Rerum antè geſtarum Cognitio. And he was no leſs a Man of Temper, than of Learning: The peculiar Sweetneſs and Goodneſs of his Temper, muſt be an eſſential Stroke in his Character: He was wonderfully happy in his meek, his compoſed, his peaceable Diſpoſition: And his Meekneſs of Wiſdom out-ſhone all his other Attainments in Learning; for there is no Humane Literature ſo hardly attained, as the Diſcretion of a Man to regulate his Anger. His very Countenance had an amiable Smile continually ſweetning of it: And his Face herein was but the true Image of his Mind, which like the upper Regions was marvellouſly free from the Storms of Paſſions.

In Proſperity he was not much elated, in Adverſity he was not much dejected; under Provocations he would ſcorn to be provoked. When the Lord would not expreſs himſelf unto Elijah in the Wind, nor in the Earthquake, nor in the Fire, but in the ſtill Voice, I ſuſpect, leſt one thing intended among others, might be an Admonition unto the Prophet himſelf, to beware of the boiſterous, uneven, inflamed Efforts, whereto his Natural Conſtitution might be ready to betray him.

This worthy Man, as taking that Admonition, was for doing every thing with a ſtill Voice. He knew himſelf to be born, as all Men are, with at leaſt a Dozen Paſſions; but being alſo new born, he did not allow himſelf to be Hag-ridden with the Enchantments thereof. The Philoſopher of old, call'd our Paſſions, by the juſt Name of unnurtured Dogs; but theſe Dogs do often worry the Children of God themſelves; even a Great Luther, who removed the fouleſt Abominations out of the Houſe of God, could not hinder theſe Dogs from infecting of his own Heart: However, this excellent (becauſe cool, therefore excellent) Spirited Perſon, kept theſe Dogs with a ſtrong Chain upon them; and ſince Man was created with a Dominion over the Beaſts of the Field, he would not let the θηρία τῆς ψυχῆς, hold him in any Slavery. He liv'd as under the Eye and Awe of the Great God; and as Baſil noted, Poteſt Miles coram Rege ſuo non iraſci, ob ſolum Regiæ majeſtatis Eminentiam: Thus the Fear of God ſtill reſtrained him from thoſe Ebullitions of Wrath which other Men are too fearleſs of. As virulent a Pen as ever blotted Paper in the Engliſh Nation, pretends to obſerve, That ſome Men will pray with the Ardours of an Angel, love God with Raptures of Joy and Delight, be tranſported with deep and pathetick Devotions, talk of nothing but the unſpeakable Pleaſures of Communion with the Lord Jeſus, be raviſh'd with devout and ſeraphick Meditations of Heaven, and like the bleſſed Spirits there, ſeem to reliſh nothing but Spiritual Delights and Entertainments: Who when they return from their Transfiguration, to their ordinary Converſe with Men, are churliſh as a Cynick, paſſionate as an angry Waſp, envious as a ſtudious Dunce, and inſolent as a Female Tyrant; proud and haughty in their Deportment; peeviſh, petulant, and ſelf-willed, impatient of Contradiction, implacable in their Anger, rude and imperious in all their Converſation, and made up of nothing but Pride, Malice, and Peeviſhneſs. But if any have ever given occaſion for this Obſervation, there was none given by our Whiting, who would have thought himſelf a Fiſh out of his Element, if he had ever been at any time any where but in the Pacifick Sea. And from this Account of his Temper, I may now venture to proceed unto his Vertue; by which I intend the Holineſs of his renewed Heart and Life, and the Change made by the ſupernatural Grace of Chriſt upon him, without which all Vertue is but a Name, a Sham, a Fiction. He was a very Holy Man: As the Ancients hath aſſured us, Ama Scientiam Scripturarum & Vitia Carnis non Amabis: Thus by reading daily ſeveral Chapters in both Teſtaments of the Scriptures, with ſerious and gracious Reflections thereupon, which he ſtill followed with ſecret Prayers he grew more holy continually, until in a flouriſhing Old Age, he was found fit for Tranſplantation.

His Worſhip in his Family, was that which argued him a true Child of Abraham; and his Counſel to his Children, was grave, watchful, uſeful, ſavoury, and very memorable. And if Meditation (which was one of Luther's Great Things to make a Divine) be a thing of no little conſequence to make a Chriſtian, this muſt be numbred among the Exerciſes whereby our Whiting became very much improved in Chriſtianity. Meditation (which is Mentis-Ditatio) daily enriched his Mind with the Diſpoſitions of Heaven; and having a Walk for that purpoſe in his Orchard, ſome of his Flock that ſaw him conſtantly taking his Turns in that Walk, with Hand, and Eye, and Soul, often directed Heavenward, would ſay, There does our dear Paſtor walk with God every Day.

In fine, As the Apoſtle Peter ſays, They that obey not the Word, yet with Fear behold the chaſt Converſation of them who do. And as Ignatius deſcribes the Paſtor of the Trallians, for one of ſuch a Sanctity of Life, that the greateſt Atheiſt would have been afraid to have look'd upon him: Even ſo the Natural Conſcience in the worſt of Men, paid an Homage of Reverence to this Holy Man, where-ever he came.

§ 8. Tho' he ſpent his Time chiefly in his beloved Study, yet he would ſometimes Viſit his Flock; but in his Viſit, he made Conſcience of entertaining his Neighbours with no Diſcourſe but what ſhould be grave, and wiſe, and profitable; as knowing that, Quæ ſunt in Ore Populi Nugie, ſunt in Ore Paſtoris Blaſphemiæ. And ſometimes an Occaſional Word let fall by him, hath had a notable Effect: Once particularly, in a Journey being at an Inn upon the Road, he over-heard certain People in the next Room, ſo merry, as to be too loud and rude in their Mirth; wherefore, as he paſſed by the Door, he look'd in upon them, and with a ſweet Majeſty, only dropt thoſe Words: Friends, If you are ſure that your Sins are pardoned, you may be wiſely merry. And theſe Words not only ſtill'd all their Noiſe for the preſent, but alſo had a great Effect afterwards upon ſome of the Company. Indeed, his Converſation preached where-ever he was; as being ſenſible of the Jewiſh Proverb, Propheta qui tranſgreditur Prophetiam ſuam propriam, Mors ejus eſt in Manibus Dei: But in the Pulpit he laboured eſpecially to approve himſelf a Preacher. In his Preaching his Deſign was, Prodeſſe magis quam placere: And his Practice was, Non alta ſed apta proferre. But what a proper and uſeful Speaker he was, we may gather from what we find him, when a Writer.

There are eſpecially two Books, wherein we have him yet living among us. In the Fate and Fire of Sodom, there was a notable Type of the Conflagration, that will arreſt this polluted World at the Day of Judgment: And the famous Prayer of Abraham, (who as R. Bechai imagines, had ſome hope, when he deprecated that Ruine for the ſake of Ten Righteous Ones, that Lot, and his Wife, and the Four Daughters, which Tradition hath aſſigned him, and his four Sons-in-Law, would have made up the Number) on that occaſion, is indeed a very rich Portion of Scripture. Now our Whiting publiſhed a Volume of Sermons upon that Prayer of Abraham; wherein he does raiſe, confirm, and apply Thirty two Doctrines, which he offered unto the Publick (as he ſays in his Preface) as the Words of a dying Man; hoping, that as Conſtantine the Great would ſtoop ſo low, as to kiſs Paphnutius's maimed Eye, ſo the Lord Jeſus Chriſt would condeſcend to put Marks of his Favour, on (that which he humbly calls), A Maimed Work. But that which encouraged him unto this Publication, was the Acceptance which it had, before this, been found by another Treatiſe of his upon The Day of Judgment it ſelf. In the Fifty eighth Chapter of Iſaiah, the Lord promiſes a Time of wondrous Light and Joy, unto his reſtored People, and the Conſolations of a laſting Sabbatiſm: Things to be accompliſhed at the Second Coming of our Lord. Now to prepare for that Bleſſedneſs, thoſe very things be required which our Lord Jeſus Chriſt afterwards mentioned, in the Twenty fifth Chapter of Matthew, as the Qualifications of thoſe whom he will admit into his bleſſed Kingdom. There ſeems, at leaſt, a little Reaſon for it, that at the Second Coming of our Lord Jeſus Chriſt, one of the firſt things will be a glorious Tranſlation, wherein the Members of Chriſtian Churches will be call'd before him, and be Examined, in order to the Determination of their State under the New Jeruſalem, that is to follow: Either to take their part in the Glories of that City, and Kingdom, for the Thouſand Years to come, and by conſequence what enſues thereupon; or to be exiled into the Confuſions of them that are to be without. Now tho' 'tis poſſible, that whole Diſcourſe of our Lord, may nextly refer to no no more than this Tranſaction, yet inaſmuch as the generality of Interpreters have carried it unto the more general and ultimate Proceedings of the laſt Judgment, our Whiting did ſo too; and he has giuen us Forty two Doctrines thereupon, ſo handled as to ſuit the Edification of all Readers. The Notes are ſhort, and but the conciſe Heads of what the Author prepared for his Weekly Exerciſes; nevertheleſs Mr. Wilſon, and Mr. Mitchel, obſerve in their Preface thereunto: That the Reader by having much in a little Room, is the better furniſhed with variety of Matter, worthy of Meditation, for want of which many a Man does digeſt little of what he reads. They ſay, ‘It is a good Saying of one, That the Reading of many diverſe Heads, without ſome interlaced Meditation, is like eating of Marrow without Bread. But he that ſhall take time to pauſe upon what he reads (where great Truths are but in few Words hinted at) with intermixed Meditations and Ejaculations, ſuitable to the Matter in hand, will find ſuch Truths conciſely delivered, to be like Marrow and Fatneſs, whereof a little does go far, and feed much.

But a little Poetry muſt now wait upon the Memory of this Worthy Man.

MOunt Fame, the glorious Chariot of the Sun;
Through the World's Cirque, all you, her Herald's, run:
And let this Great Saint's Merits be reveal'd,
Which, during Life, he ſtudiouſly conceal'd.
Cite all the Levites, fetch the Sons of Art,
In theſe our Dolours to ſuſtain a part.

One, who for Learning, Wiſdom, Grace, and Years,
Among the Levites hath not many Peers:
One, yet with God a Kind of Heavenly Band,
Who did whole Regiments of Woes withſtand:
One, that prevail'd with Heaven; One greatly miſt

One of a World; who was both born and bred
At Wiſdom's Feet, hard by the Fountain's Head.
The Loſs of ſuch an One, would fetch a Tear,
From Niobe her ſelf if ſhe were here.

What qualifies our Grief, centers in This;
Be our Loſs near ſo Great, the Gain is his.

CHAP. XXIX.

The LIFE of Mr. JOHN SHERMAN.

Vetuſtas judicavit Honeſtum, ut Mortui Laudarentur. Thucid.

§ 1. THAT Great Athanaſius, whom ſome of the Ancients juſtly called, Propugnaculum Veritatis, others Lumen Eccleſiæ, others Orbis Oraculum, is in the Funeral Oration of Gregory Nazianzen, on him ſo ſet forth: To Commend Athanaſius, is to praiſe Vertue it ſelf. My Pen is now falling upon the Memory of a Perſon, whom, if I ſhould not commend unto the Church of God, I ſhould refuſe to praiſe Vertue it ſelf, with Learning, Wiſdom, and all the Qualities that would render any Perſon Amiable. I ſhall proceed then with the Endeavour of my Pen, to Immortalize his Memory, that the Signification of the Name Athanaſius, may belong unto him, as much as the Grace for which that great Man was Exemplary.

§ 2. Mr. John Sherman was born of Godly and Worthy Parents, Decemb. 26. 1613. in the Town of Dedham, in the County of Eſſex. While he was yet a Child, the Inſtruction of his Parents, joined with the Miniſtry of the Famous Rogers, produced in him, that Early Remembrance of his Creator, which more than a little encourag'd them to purſue and expect the Good Effects of the Dedication, which they had made of him, unto the Service of the Lord Jeſus Chriſt, in the Work of the Goſpel. His Education at School was under a Learned Maſter, who ſo much admired his Youthful Piety, Induſtry and Ingenuity, that he never beſtowed any Chaſtiſement upon; except once for his giving the Heads of Sermons to his Idle School-Mates, when an Account thereof was demanded from them. So ſtudious was he, that next unto Communion with his God, he delighted in Communion with his Book, and he ſtudied nothing more, than to be an Exception unto that Ancient and General Complaint, Quem mihi dabis, qui Diem æſtimet?

§ 3. Early Ripe for it, he went into the Univerſity of Cambridge, where being admitted into Immanuel-College, and inſtructed ſucceſſively by two very Conſiderable Tutors, his Proficiency ſtill bore Proportion to his Means, but out-went the Proportion of his Years. When his Turn came to be a Graduate, he ſeriouſly conſidered the Subſcription required of him: And upon Invincible Arguments, became ſo diſſatisfied therewithal, that adviſing with Mr. Rogers, Dr. Preſton, and other eminent Perſons, who commending his Conſcientious Conſideration, counſelled his Remove, he went away under the Perſecuted Character of a Colledge-Puritan. The ſame that occaſioned his Removal from the Colledge, in a little time occaſioned alſo his Removal from the Kingdom; for upon Mature Deliberation, after extraordinary Addreſſes to Heaven for Direction, he embark'd himſelf, with ſeveral Famous Divines, who came over in the Year 1634. hoping that by going over the Water, they ſhould in this be like Men going under the Earth, lodg'd where the Wicked would ceaſe from Troubling and the Weary be at Reſt.

§ 4. So much was Religion the Firſt ſought, of the Firſt come, into this Country, that they ſolemnly offer'd up their Praiſes unto him that Inhabits the Praiſes of Iſrael, before they had provided Habitations, wherein to offer thoſe Praiſes. A Day of Thankſgiving was now kept by the Chriſtians of a New Hive, here called Water-Town, under a Tree; on which Thankſgiving, Mr. Sherman preached his Firſt Sermon, as an Aſſiſtant unto Mr. Philips: There being preſent many other Divines, who wondred exceedingly to hear a Subject ſo accurately and excellently handled by one that had never before performed any ſuch publick Exerciſe.

§ 5. He continued not many Weeks at Watertown, before he removed, upon Mature Advice, unto New-Haven; where he preached occaſionally in moſt of the Towns then belonging to that Colony: But with ſuch deſerved Acceptance, that Mr. Hooker and Mr. Stone being in an Aſſembly of Miniſters, that met after a Sermon of our Young Sherman, pleaſantly ſaid, Brethren, we muſt look to our ſelves, and our Miniſtry; for this Young Divine will out-do us all.

Here, though he had an Importunate Invitation unto a Settlement in Milford, yet he not only declined it out of an Ingenuous Jealouſy, leſt the Worthy Perſon, who muſt have been his Collegue, ſhould have thereby ſuffered ſome Inconveniencies, but alſo for a little while, upon that, and ſome other ſuch Accounts, he wholly ſuſpended the Exerciſe of his Miniſtry. Hereupon the Zealous Affection of the People to him appeared, in their chuſing him a Magiſtrate of the Colony; in which Capacity, he ſerved the Publick, with an Exemplary Diſcretion and Fidelity, until a freſh Opportunity for the Exerciſe of his Miniſtry, within Two or Three Years, offered it ſelf; and then all the Importunity uſed by the Governour and Aſſiſtents, to faſten him among themſelves, could not prevail with him to Look back from that Plow.

Our Land has enjoyed the Influences of many accompliſhed Men, who from Candidates of the Miniſtry, have become our Magiſtrates; but this Excellent Man, is the only Example among us, who left a Bench of our Magiſtrates, to become a painful Servant of the Lord Jeſus Chriſt in the Work of the Miniſtry. Nevertheleſs, he that beholds Joſeph of Arimathæa, a Counſellour of State, Ambroſe the Conſul of Millain, George the Prince of Anhalt, Chryſoſtom, a Noble Antiochean, John a Laſco, a Noble Polonian, all becoming the plain Preachers of the Goſpel, will not think that Mr. Sherman herein either ſuffered a Degradation, or was without a Pattern.

§ 6. Upon the Death of Mr. Philips at Watertown, Mr. Sherman was addreſſed by the Church there, to ſucceed him; and he accepted the Charge of that Church, although at the ſame time, one of the Churches at Boſton, uſed their Endeavours to become the Owner of ſo well Talented a Perſon, and ſeveral Churches in London alſo, by Letters much urged him to Come over and help them. And now, being in the Neighbourhood of Cambridge, he was likewiſe choſen a Fellow of Harvard College there; in which place he continued unto his Death, doing many Good Offices for that Society. Nor was it only as a Fellow of the College, that he was a Bleſſing, but alſo as he was in ſome ſort a Preacher to it: For his Lectures being held for the moſt part once a Fortnight, in the Vicinage, for more than Thirty Years together, many of the Scholars attending thereon, did juſtly acknowledge the Durable and Abundant Advantage which they had from thoſe Lectures.

§ 7. His Intellectual Abilities, whether Natural or Acquired, were ſuch as to render him a Firſt-Rate Scholar; the Skill of Tongues and Arts, beyond the common rate adorned him. He was a Great Reader, and as Athanaſius reports of his Antonius, προσεῖχεν οὕτω τῇ ἀναγνώσει, ὡς μηδὲν τῶν γεγραμμένων ἀπ' αὐτοῦ πίπτειν χαμαὶ, πάντα δὲ κατέχειν, καὶ λοιπὸν αὐτῷ τὴν γνώμην ἀυτὶ βιβλίων γίνεσθαι: He read with ſuch Intention, as to loſe nothing, but keep every thing, of all that he read, and his Mind became his Library: Even ſuch was the Felicity of our Sherman; he read with an unuſual Diſpatch, and whatever he Read became his own. From ſuch a Strength of Invention and Memory it was, that albeit he was a curious Preacher; nevertheleſs, he could preach without any Preparatory Notes, of what he was to utter. He ordinarily wrote but about half a Page in Octavo, of what he was to preach; and he would as ordinarily preach, without writing of one Word at all. And he made himſelf wonderfully acceptable and ſerviceable unto his Friends, by the Homeliſtical Accompliſhments, which were produced by his Abilities, in his Converſation. For though he were not a Man of much Diſcourſe, but ever thought, ἐν πολυλογίᾳ ἐςι πολυμωρία: And when ſome have told him, That he had Learned the Art of Silence, he hath, with a very becoming Ingenuity, given them to underſtand, That it was an Art, which it would hurt none of them to learn, yet his Diſcourſe had a rare Conjunction of Profit and Pleaſure in it.

He was Witty and yet Wiſe, and Grave, carrying a Majeſty in his very Countenance; and much viſited for Council, in weighty Caſes; and when he delivered his Judgment in any Matter, there was little or nothing to be ſpoken by others after him.

§ 8. It is a Remark, which Melchior Adam has in the Life of his Excellent Pitiſcus; Illud mirandum, quod Homo Theologus, in Mathematum ſtudiis, nullo niſi ſe Magiſtro, eo uſq; progreſſus eſt, ut Editis Scriptis, Diſciplinæ illius Gloriam, magnis Matheſeos Profeſſoribus præripuerit: And it might be well applied unto our Eminent Sherman, who though he were a Conſummate Divine, and a Continual Preacher, yet making the Mathematicks his Diverſion, did attain unto ſuch an Incomparable Skill therein, that he was undoubtedly one of the beſt Mathematicians that ever lived in this Hemiſphere of the World, and it is great Pity that the World ſhould be deprived of the Aſtronomical Calculations, which he has left in Manuſcript behind him. It ſeems, that Men of great Parts may, as it is obſerved by that great Inſtance thereof, Mr. Boyle, ſucceſſively apply themſelves to more than one Study. Thus Copernicus the Aſtronomer, eternized like the very Stars, by his New Syſtem of them, was a Church-man; and his Learned Champion Lansbergius, was a Miniſter. Gaſſendus was a Doctor of Divinity; Clavius too was a Doctor of Divinity; nor will the Names of thoſe Engliſh Doctors, Wallis, Wilkins, and Barrow, be forgotten ſo long as that Learning which is to be called Real, has any Friends in the Engliſh Nation: And Ricciolus himſelf, the Compiler of that Voluminous and Judicious Work, the Almageſtum Novum, was a Profeſſor of Theology.

Into the Number of theſe Heroes, is our Sherman to be admitted; who, if any one had enquired, how he could find the Leiſure for his Mathematical Speculations? Would have given the Excuſe of the Famous Pitiſcus for his Anſwer, —— Alii Schacchia Ludunt, & Talis: Ego Regnala & Circino, ſi quando Ludere datur.

And from the View of the Effects, which the Mathematical Contemplations of our Sherman, produced in his Temper, I cannot but utter the Wiſh of the Noble Tycho Brache upon that Bleſſed Pitiſcus, Optarem plures ejuſmodi Concionatores reperiri, qui Geometrica gnavitur callerent: forte plus eſſet in iis Circumſpecti & ſolidi Judicii, Rixarum inanium & Logomachiarum minus: For among other things very valuable to me, in the Temper of this Great Man, one was a certain Largeneſs of Soul, which particularly diſpoſed him to embrace the Congregational Way of Church-Government, without thoſe Rigid and Narrow Principles of Uncharitable Separation, where with ſome Good Men have been Leavened.

§ 9. But as our mentioned Pitiſcus, when his Friends congratulated unto him the Glory of his Mathematical Excellencies, with an humble and holy Ingenuity replied, Let us rejoice rather that our Names be written in Heaven. Thus our Sherman was more concerned for, and more employed in an Acquaintance with the Heavenly Seats of the Bleſſed, than with the Motions of the Heavenly Bodies. He did not ſo much uſe a Jacob's Staff in Obſervations, as he was in Supplications a true Jacob himſelf. He was a Perſon of a moſt Heavenly Diſpoſition and Converſation; Heavenly in his Words, Heavenly in his Thoughts, Heavenly in his Deſigns and Deſires; few in the World had ſo much of Heaven upon Earth. He was a moſt Practical Commentary upon thoſe Words of the Pſalmiſt, Mine Eyes are ever towards the Lord: And thoſe of the Apoſtle, Keep your ſelves in the Love of God.

As the Scriptures are the Firmament, which God hath expanded over the Spiritual World, ſo this good Man uſually ſpent an Hour every Morning, in entertaining himſelf with the Lights that are ſhining there. Beſides this, with Meditations on God, Chriſt, and Heaven, he fell aſleep at Night; and with the like Meditations he woke and roſe in the Morning; and Prayer was therefore the firſt and laſt of his Daily Works. Yea, had any one caſt a Look upon him, not only abroad in Company, but alſo in his cloſeſt Retirement, they would have ſeen ſcarce a Minute paſs him, without a Turn of his Eye towards Heaven, whereto his Heaven-touch'd Heart was carrying of him, with its continual Vergencies. And as the Stars, they ſay, may be ſeen from the bottom of a Well, when the Day-light in higher places hinders the ſight thereof; ſo this worthy Man, who ſaw more not only of the Stars in Heaven, but alſo of the Heaven beyond the Stars, than moſt other Men, was one, who, in his Humility, laid himſelf low, even to a Fault; and he had buried himſelf in the Obſcurity of his Receſſes and Retirements, if others that knew his worth, had not ſometimes fetch'd him forth to more publick Action.

The Name Deſcentius, which I found worn by an eminent Perſon, among the Primitive Chriſtians, I thought proper for this eminent Perſon; when I have conſidered the Condeſcenſion of his whole Deportment. And, methought it was an Inſtance of this Condeſcenſion, that this Great Man would ſometimes give the Country an Almanack; which yet he made an Opportunity to do good, by adding at the end of the Compoſures thoſe Holy Reflections, which taught good Men how to recover that little, but ſpreading thing, the Almanack, from that common Abuſe, of being an Engine to convey only ſilly Impertinencies, or ſinful Superſtitions, into almoſt every Cottage of the Wilderneſs. One of thoſe Reflections I will recite, becauſe it lively expreſſed the holy Sence of Death, in which the Author daily lived:

Let me intreat one thing of thee, and I will adventure to promiſe thee a good Year; the Requeſt is in it ſelf reaſonable, and may to thee be eternally profitable. It's only this: Duly to prize, and diligently to improve Time, for obtaining the bleſſed End it was given for, and is yet graciouſly continued unto thee, by the Eternal God. Of Three hundred ſixty five Days, allowed by the making up of this Year, which ſhall be thy laſt, thou knoweſt not; but that any of them may be it, thou oughteſt to know, and ſo conſider, that thou mayeſt paſs the Time of thy Sojourning here with Fear.

§ 10. Behold him either in the Lord's Houſe, or in his own, of both which a Well Government is joined in the Demands of the Apoſtle, and we may behold both of them after an exemplary manner ordered. In his Miniſtry he was Judicious, Induſtrious, Faithful; a moſt curious Expoſitor of Scripture, and one that fed us with the fatteſt Marrow of Divinity. And there was one thing in his Preaching, which procured it a ſingular admiration; this was a natural, and not affected Loftineſs of Stile; which with an eaſie Fluency beſpangled his Diſcourſes with ſuch glittering Figures of Oratory, as cauſed his ableſt Hearers, to call him a Second Iſaiah, the Honey-dropping, and Golden-mouthed Preacher. But among the Succeſſes of his Conduct in his Miniſtry, there was none more notable than the Peace, which by God's Bleſſing upon his Wiſdom and Meekneſs, more than any other things was preſerved in his populous Town, as long as he lived, notwithſtanding many Temptations unto Differences, among the good People there. From thence let us follow him to his Family, and there we ſaw him with much Diſcretion, maintaining both Fear and Love, in thoſe that belong'd unto him, and a zealous Care to uphold Religion among them. The Duties of Reading, Praying, Singing, and Catechiſing, were conſtantly obſerved, and Sermons repeated. And he was, above all, a great Lover, and ſtrict Keeper of the Chriſtian Sabbath; in the very Evening of which approaching, he would not allow any Worldly Matter to diſturb, or divert the Exerciſes of Piety within his Gates.

§ 11. He was twice married. By his Firſt Wife, the Vertuous Daughter of Parents therein reſembled by her, he had Six Children. But his next Wife was a young Gentlewoman whom he choſe from under the Guardianſhip, and with the Countenance of Edward Hopkins, Eſq; the excellent Governour of Connecticut. She was a Perſon of good Education, and Reputation, and honourably deſcended; being the Daughter of a Puritan Gentleman, whoſe Name was Launce, and whoſe Lands in Cornwal yielded him Fourteen hundred Pounds a Year. He was a Parliament-man, a Man learned and pious, and a notable Diſputant; but once diſputing againſt the Engliſh Epiſcopacy (as not being ignorant of what is affirmed by Contzen the Jeſuite, in his Politicks, That were all England brought once to approve of Biſhops, it were eaſie to reduce it unto the Church of Rome,) he was worſted by ſuch a way of maintaining the Argument, as was thought agreeable; that is, by a Wound in the Side, from his furious Antagoniſt; of which Wound at laſt he died. The Wife of that Gentleman was Daughter to the Lord Darcy, who was Earl of Rivers; a Perſon of a Proteſtant, and Puritan Religion, tho' of a Popiſh Family, and one that after the Murder of her former Husband, Mr. Launce, had for her Second Huſband the famous Mr. Sympſon. But by the Daughter of that Mr. Launce, who is yet living among us, Mr. Sherman had no leſs than twenty Children added unto the Number of ſix, which he had before.

I remember John Helwigius of late, beſides what has been related formerly by other Authors, brings undeniable Atteſtations of a Married Couple, who in one Wedlock were Parents to Fifty three Children, at Thirty five Births brought into the World: Somewhat ſhort of that, but not ſhort of Wonder, is a late Inſtance of one Mother, that has brought forth no leſs than Thirty nine Children, the Thirty fifth of whom, was lately diſcourſed by Perſons of Honour and Credit, from whom I had it. Altho' New-England has no Inſtances of ſuch a Polytokie, yet it has had Inſtances of what has been remarkable: One Woman has had not leſs than Twenty two Children; whereof ſhe buried Fourteen Sons, and Six Daughters. Another Woman has had no leſs than Twenty three Children, by one Husband; whereof Nineteen lived unto Mens and Womens Eſtate. A third was Mother to Seven and twenty Children: And ſhe that was Mother to Sir William Phips, the late Governour of New-England, had no leſs than Twenty five Children beſides him; ſhe had One and twenty Sons, and Five Daughters. Now into the Catalogue of ſuch fruitful Vines by the ſides of the Houſe, is this Gentlewoman, Mrs. Sherman, to be enumerated. Behold, thus was our Sherman, that Eminent Fearer of the Lord, Bleſſed of him.

§ 12. He had the rare Felicity to grow like the Lilly, as long as he lived; and enjoy a flouriſhing, and perhaps increaſing Livelineſs of his Faculties, until he died. Such Keenneſs of Wit, ſuch Soundneſs of Judgment, ſuch Fulneſs of Matter, and ſuch Vigour of Language, is rarely ſeen in Old Age, as was to be ſeen in him, when he was old.

The laſt Sermon which he ever preached, was at Sudbury, from Eph. 2. 8. By Grace ye are ſaved: Wherein he ſo diſplayed the Riches of the Free Grace expreſſed in our Salvation, as to fill his Hearers with admiration. Being thus at Sudbury, he was taken ſick of an Intermitting, but malignant Fever; which yet abated, that he found opportunity to return unto his own Houſe at Water-Town. But his Fever then renewing upon him, it prevailed ſo far, that he ſoon expired his holy Soul; which he did with Expreſſions of abundant Faith, Joy, and Reſignation, on a Saturday-Evening, entring on his Eternal Sabbath, Auguſt 8. 1685. Aged Seventy two.

Euſebius The LIFE of Mr. THOMAS COBBET.

Et Eruditis Pietate, & Piis Eruditione Laude entecellens, ità Secundas Doctrinæ ferens, ut Pietatis primas obtineret.

Nazianz. de Baſilio.

§ 1. IN the Old Church of Iſrael we find a conſiderable Sort and Sett of Men, that were called, The Scribes of the People: Whoſe Office it was, not only to Copy out the Bible, for ſuch as deſired a Copy thereof, with ſuch Exactneſs, that the Myſteries occurring, even in the leaſt Vowels and Accents of it, might not be loſt, but alſo to be the more Publick Preachers of the Law, and common and conſtant Pulpit-Men; taking upon them to be the Expounders, as well as the Preſervers of the Scripture. But one of the principle Scribes enjoy'd by the People of New-England, was Mr. Thomas Cobbet, who wrote more Books than the moſt of the Divines, which did their parts to make a Kirjath-Sepher of this Wilderneſs; in every one of which he approv'd himſelf one of the Scribes mention'd by our Saviour, from his rich Treaſure bringing forth Inſtructions, both out of the New Teſtament, and out of the Old.

§ 2. Our Mr. Thomas Cobbet was born at Newbury, long enough before our New England had a Town of that Name, or indeed had any ſuch thing as a Town at all; namely, in the Year 1608. And altho his Parents, who afterwards came alſo to New-England, were ſo deſtitute of Worldly Grandure, that he might ſay, as divers of the Jewiſh Rabbi's tell us, the Words of Gideon may be Read, Behold, my Father is Poor, yet this their Son was Greatneſs enough to render one Family memorable. Reader, we are to deſcribe,

Ingenua de plebe Virum, ſed Vita Fideſq;
Inculpata fuit.

And remember the Words of Seneca, ex caſa etiam Virum magnum prodire poſſe.

When Cicero was jeer'd, for the mean Signification of his Name, he ſaid, However he would not change it, but by his Actions render the Name of Cicero more Illuſtrious than that of Cato: And our Cobbet has done enough to make the Name of Cobbet Venerable, in theſe American Parts of the World, whether there were the Actions of any Anceſtors or no, to ſignalize it. A Good Education having prepared him for it, he became an Oxford Scholar, and removing from Oxford in the Time of a Plague raging there, he did, with other young Men, become a Pupil to Famous Dr. Twiſs at Newbury. He was, after this, a Preacher at a ſmall Place in Lincolnſhire; from whence, being driven by a Storm of Perſecution upon the Reforming and Puritan Part of the Nation, he came over unto New-England, in the ſame Veſſel with Mr. Davenport coming to New-England, his Old Friend Mr. Whiting of Lyn expreſſed his Friendſhip, with Endeavours to obtain and to enjoy his Aſſiſtance, as a Collegue, in the Paſtoral Charge of the Church there; where they continued Fratrum Dulce Par, until upon the Removal of Mr. Norton to Boſton, and of Mr. Rogers to Heaven, he was Tranſlated unto the Church of Ipſwich; with which he continued in the Faithful Diſcharge of his Miniſtry, until his Reception of the Crown of Life at his Death, about the Beginning of the Year 1686. Then 'twas, that he was (to ſpeak Jewiſhly) Treaſur'd up.

§ 3. The Witty Epigrammatiſt hath told us.

Qui dignos Ipſi Vita ſcripſère Libellos,
Illorum Vitam ſcribere non Opus eſt.

And we might therefore make the Story of this Worthy Man's Life, to be but an Account of the Immortal Books, wherein he lives after he is Dead. What Mr. Cobbet was, the Reader may gather by Reading a very Savoury Treatiſe of his, upon the Fifth Commandment. But that he might ſerve both Tables of the Law, he was willing to write ſomething upon the Firſt Commandment, as well as the Fifth; and this he did in a Large, Nervous, Golden Diſcourſe Of Prayer. But that the Second Commandment, as well as the Firſt might not be unſerved by him, there were divers Diſciplinary Tracts, which he publickly offered unto the Church of God. He Printed upon the Duty of the Civil Magiſtrate, in the Point of Toleration; a Point then much Debated, and not yet every where Decided; whereto he annexed a Vindication of the Government of New-England, from the Aſperſions of ſome, who thought themſelves perſecuted under it.

He was likewiſe a Learned and a Lively Defender of Infant-Baptiſm, and he gave the World an Elaborate Compoſure, on that Subject, on the Occaſion whereof, Mr. Cotton, in his Incomparable Preface to a Book of Mr. Norton's, has theſe Paſſages. COVETUS cum perſentiſceret aliquot ex Ovibus Chriſti ſibi commiſſis, Antipædobaptiſmi Laqueis atq; Dumetis irretitas, Zelo Dei accenſus (& Zelo quidem ſecundum Scientiam) imo, & Miſerecordia etiam Chriſti Commotus, erga Errantes Oviculas; Libros quos potuit, ex Anabaptiſtarum penu, congeſſit; Rationum Momenta (Qualia fuerant) in Lance Sanctuarii trutinavit; Teſtimoniorum Plauſtra, quæ ab aliis congeſta fuerant, ſedulo perquiſivit; & pro eo, quo floret, Diſputandi Acumine, Dijudicandi ſolertia, ſolida multa, paucis Complectendi Dexteritate atq; Indefeſſo Labore, nihil pene Intentatum reliquit, quod vel ad Veritatem, in hac Cauſa Illuſtrandam, vel ad Errorum Nebulas Diſcutiendas, atq; Diſpellendas, conduceret.

Reader, To receive ſo much Commemoration from ſo Reverend and Renowned a Pen, is to have One's Life, ſufficiently written: It is needleſs for me to proceed any further, in ſerving the Memory of Mr. Cobbet.

§ 4. And yet there is one thing, which my poor Pen may not leave unmentioned. Of all the Books written by Mr. Cobbet, none deſerves more to be Read by the World, or to Live till the General Burning of the World, than that Of Prayer: And indeed Prayer, the Subject ſo Experimentally, and therefore Judiciouſly, therefore Profitably, therein handled, was not the leaſt of thoſe things, for which Mr. Cobbet was Remarkable. He was a very Praying Man, and his Prayers were not more obſervable throughout New-England for the Argumentative, the Importunate, and I had almoſt ſaid, Filially Familiar, Strains of them, than for the wonderful Succeſſes that attended them. It was a Good Saying of the Ancient, Homine probo Orante nihil potentius; and it was a Great Saying of the Reformer, Eſt quædam Precum Omnipotentia. Our Cobbet might certainly make a conſiderable Figure in the Catalogue of thoſe Eminent Saints, whoſe Experiences having notably Exemplified, The Power of Prayer, unto the World. That Golden Chain, one End whereof is tied unto the Tongue of Man, the other End unto the Ear of God (which is as Juſt, as Old, a Reſembling of Prayer) our Cobbet was always pulling at, and he often pull'd unto ſuch Marvellous purpoſe, that the Neighbours were almoſt ready to ſing of him, as Claudian did upon the proſperous Prayers of Theodoſius.

—— O Nimium Dilecte Deo.

A Son of this Man of Prayer was taken into Captivity by the Barbarous, Treacherous Indian Salvages, and a Captivity from whence there could be little Expectation of Redemption: Whereupon Mr. Cobbet called about Thirty, as many as could ſuddenly convene, of the Chriſtians in the Neighbourhood unto his Houſe; and there, they together pray'd for the Young Man's Deliverance. The Old Man's Heart was now no more ſad; he believed that the God of Heaven had accepted of their Supplications, and becauſe he Believed, therefore he ſpake as much, to thoſe that were about him, who when they heard him ſpeak did Believe ſo too. Now within a few Days after this, the Prayers were all anſwered, in the Return of the Young Man unto his Father, with Circumſtances little ſhort of Miracle! But indeed the Inſtances of ſurprizing Effects following upon the Prayers of this Gracious Man, were ſo many, that I muſt ſuperſede all Relation of them, with only noting thus much, That it was generally ſuppoſed among the pious People in the Land, that the Enemies of New-England owed the wondrous Diſaſters and Confuſions that ſtill followed them, as much to the Prayers of this True Iſraelite, as perhaps to any one Occaſion. Mr. Knox's Prayers were ſometimes more feared, than an Army of Ten Thouſand Men; and Mr. Cobbet's Prayers were eſteemed of no little Significancy to the Welfare of the Country, which is now therefore Bereaved of its Chariots and its Horſemen. If New-England had its Noah, Daniel and Job, to pray wonderfully for it, Cobbet was one of them!

CHAP. XXXI.

The LIFE of Mr. JOHN WARD.

§ 1. SOme famous Perſons of old, thought it a Greater Glory, to have it enquired; Why ſuch a one had not a Statue erected for him? Than to have it enquired, Why he had? Mr. Nathanael Ward, born at Haverhil, in Eſſex, about 1570. was bred a Scholar, and was firſt Intended and Employed for the Study of the Law. But afterwards travelling with certain Merchants into Pruſſia and Denmark, and having Diſcourſe with David Paræus, at Heidelberg, from whom he received much Direction; at his return into England, he became a Miniſter of the Goſpel, and had a Living at Stondon. In the Year 1634. he was driven out of England, for his Non-Conformity; and coming to New-England, he continued ſerving the Church of Ipſwich, till the Year 1645. When returning back to England, he ſettled at Sherfield, near Brentwood; and there he ended his Days, when he was about Eighty Three Years of Age. He was the Author of many Compoſures full of Wit, and Senſe; among which, that Entituled, The Simple Cobler (which demonſtrated him to be a Subtil Stateſman) was moſt conſidered. If it be enquired, Why this our St. Hilary hath among our Lives no Statue erected for him? Let that Enquiry go for part of one. And we will pay our Debt unto his Worthy Son.

§ 2. Mr. John Ward was Born, I think, at Haverhil, — on Nov. 5. — 1606. His Grandfather was that John Ward, the Worthy Miniſter of Haverhil, whom we find among The Worthies of England, and his Father was the Celebrated Nathanael Ward, whoſe Wit made him known to more Englands than one. Where his Education was, I have not been informed; the firſt Notice of him that occurs to me, being in the Year 1639. When he came over into theſe Parts of America; and ſettled there in the Year 1641. in a Town alſo called Haverhil. But What it was, every Body that ſaw him, ſaw it in the Effects of it, that it was Learned, Ingenuous, and Religious. He was a Perſon of a Quick Apprehenſion, a clear Underſtanding, a ſtrong Memory, a facetious Converſation; he was an exact Grammarian, an expert Phyſician, and which was the Top of all, a thorough Divine: But, which rarely happens, theſe Endowments of his Mind, were accompanied with a moſt Healthy, Hardy, and Agile Conſtitution of Body, which enabled him to make nothing of walking on foot, a Journey as long as Thirty Miles together.

§ 3. Such was the Bleſſing of God upon his Religious Education, that he was not only Reſtrained from the Vices of Immorality in all his younger Years, but alſo Inclined unto all Vertuous Actions. Of young Perſons, he would himſelf give this Advice; Whatever you do, be ſure to maintain Shame in them; for if that be once gone, there is no Hope that they'll ever come to good. Accordingly, our Ward was always aſhamed of doing any ill thing. He was of a Modeſt and Baſhful Diſpoſition, and very ſparing of Speaking, eſpecially before Strangers, or ſuch as he thought his Betters. He was wonderfully Temperate, in Meat, in Drink, in Sleep, and he was always Expreſſed, I had almoſt ſaid, Affected, a peculiar Sobriety of Apparel. He was a Son moſt Exemplarily Dutiful unto his Parents; and having paid ſome conſiderable Debts for his Father, he would afterwards humbly obſerve and confeſs, that God had abundantly Recompenced this his Dutifulneſs.

§ 4. Tho' he had great Offers of Rich Matches, in England, yet he choſe to marry a meaner Perſon, whom Exemplary Piety had recommended. He lived with her for more than Forty Years, in ſuch an Happy Harmony, that when ſhe died, he profeſſed, that in all this Time, he never had received one Diſpleaſing Word or Look from her. Altho' ſhe would ſo faithfully tell him of every thing that might ſeem Amendable in him, that he would pleaſantly compare her to an Accuſing Conſcience, yet ſhe ever pleaſed him wonderfully: And ſhe would often put him upon the Duties of ſecret Faſts, and when ſhe met with any thing in Reading that ſhe counted ſingularly agreeable, ſhe would ſtill impart it unto him. For which Cauſes, when he loſt this his Mate, he cauſed thoſe Words to be fairly written on his Table-Board,

In Lugenda Compare, Vitæ Spacium Compleat Orbus.

And there is this memorable Paſſage to be added. While ſhe was a Maid, there was enſured unto her, the Revenue of a Parſonage worth two Hundred Pounds per Annum, in caſe that ſhe married a Miniſter. And all this had been given to our Ward, in Caſe he had conformed, unto the Doubtful Matters in the Church of England: But he left all the Allurements and Enjoyments of England, chuſing rather to ſuffer Affliction with the People of God in a Wilderneſs.

§ 5. Altho' he would ſay, There is no place for Fiſhing like the Sea, and the more Hearers a Miniſter has, the more Hope there is that ſome of them will be catch'd in the Nets of the Goſpel; nevertheleſs, thro' his Humility and Reſervation, it came to paſs, that as he choſe to begin his Miniſtry in Old England, at a very ſmall Place, thus when he came to New-England he choſe to ſettle with a New Plantation, where he could expect none but ſmall Circumſtances all his Days. He did not love to appear upon the Publick Stage himſelf, and there appeared few there, whom he did not prefer above himſelf: But when he was there, every one might ſee how conſcientiouſly he ſought the Edification of the Souls of the plaineſt Auditors, before the Oſtentation of his own Abilities. And from the like Self-Diffidence it was, that he would never manage any Eccleſiaſtical Affairs in his Church, without previous and prudent Conſultations with the beſt Adviſers that he knew: He would ſay, He had rather always follow Advice, tho' ſometimes the Advice might miſlead him, than ever act without Advice, tho' he might happen to do well by no Advice but his own.

§ 6. This Diligent Servant of the Lord Jeſus Chriſt, continued under and againſt many Temptations, watching over his Flock at Haverhil, more than twice as long as Jacob continued with his Uncle; yea, for as many Years as there are Sabbaths in the Year. On Nov. 19. 1693. he preached an Excellent Sermon, entring the Eighty Eighth Year of his Age; the only Sermon that ever was, or perhaps ever will be preached in this Country at ſuch an Age. He was then ſmitten with a Paralytic Indiſpoſition upon the Organs of his Speech, which continuing about a Month upon him, not without Evident Proofs of his Underſtanding, and his Heavenlineſs, continuing firm with him to the laſt; at laſt, on Dec. 27. he went off, bringing up the Rear of our Firſt Generation.

The Church of God is wrong'd, in that the Life of the Great John Owen is not written. He was by his Intention, ſo much a New England Man, that a New-Engliſh Book affords no Improper Station for him. Let him that once would have choſe to die among the Worthies of New-England, be counted worthy to live among them. The moſt Expreſſive Memorials of his Life, that we at Boſton can yet procure, are Inſcribed on his Grave at London. Theſe muſt be then Tranſcribed; Behold, the Language of his

Some Account concerning the late and ſtrange Succeſs of the Goſpel in thoſe Parts of the World, which for many Ages have lain buried in Pagan Ignorance.

Eſſay'd by COTTON MATHER.

Οὐ γὰρ ᾤμην ὅσιον, λαμπροτάτων ἔργων καὶ ὀνησιφόρων διηγημάτων τὸ κλέος περιιδεῖν ὑπὸ τῆς λήθης συλώμενον: i. e. Exiſtimavi, haud ſine ſcelere fieri potuiſſe, ut factorum ſplendidiſſimorum, & utilium Narrationum gloria, Oblivioni traderetur. Theodorit.

Bleſſed is that Servant, whom his Lord, when he cometh, ſhall find ſo doing.

The Third Part.

To the Right Honourable PHILIP Lord Wharton; a no leſs Noble, than Aged Patron of Learning and Vertue.

May it pleaſe your Lordſhip,

IF it be conſidered that ſome Evangelical and Apoſtolical Hiſtories of the New Teſtament, were by the Direction of the Holy Spirit himſelf, Dedicated unto a Perſon of Quality, and that the Noble Perſon addreſſed with One ſuch Dedication, entertained it with Reſentments that encouraged his dear Lucilius to make a Second, the World will be ſatisfy'd that I do a thing but reaſonable and agreeable, when unto a Narrative of many Evangelical and Apoſtolical Affairs, I preſume to prefix the Name of one ſo excellent for Love to God, as your Lordſhip is known to be: And one upon this Account only, an unmeet Subject for the Praiſes of the obſcure Pen which now writes, that Quis Vituperat? I do not, I dare not, ſo far intrude upon your Honour, as to ask your Patronage unto all the New Engliſh Principles and Practices, which are found in the Character of our Celebrated Eliot; for as the diſtance of a thouſand Leagues, has made it impoſſible for me to attend the (uſual) Orders and Manners of asking firſt your Allowance for what I have openly entitled you unto; ſo the Renowned Eliot is gone beyond any Occaſions for the greateſt Humane Patronage.

But that which has procured unto your Lordſhip, the Trouble of this Dedication, is, my Deſire to give you the Picture of one Aged Saint, lately gone to that General Aſſembly, which the Eternal King of Heaven, by the Advances of your own Age in the way of Righteouſneſs, does quickly Summon your ſelf unto the profound Reſpect which our Eliot had for your Honour, will doubtleſs be anſwered and requited with your own Value for the Memory of ſuch a memorable Chriſtian, Miniſter, and Evangeliſt; inaſmuch as your Affections, like his, take not their Meaſures from theſe or thoſe Matters of doubtful Diſputation, but from ſuch an univerſal Piety and Charity, and Holineſs, as he was an Inſtance of.

No Man ever complained of it, that in the Works of Chryſoſtom, we find ſeven Orations not far aſunder, in Commendation of Paul: Nor is it any Fault that I have now written One, in Commendation of a Man whom a Pauline Spirit had made Illuſtrious. In deſcribing him, I have made but little Touches upon his Parentage and Family, becauſe as the truly Great Baſil excuſes his Omiſſion of thoſe Things, in his Oration upon Gordius the Martyr, Eccleſia hæc tanquam ſupervacua dimittit. But I have related thoſe Things of him, which cannot but create a good Eſteem for him, in the Breaſt of your Lordſhip, who are a faithful and Ancient Witneſs againſt thoſe Diſtempers of the World, whereby (as the bleſſed Salvian lamented it) Cogimur eſſe Viles, ut Nobiles habeamur: And raiſe the Sweetneſs of your Thoughts upon your Approaches; which may our God make both ſlow and ſure, unto that State which cannot be moved. But if I may more ingenuouſly confeſs the whole Ground and Cauſe of this Dedication, I muſt own, 'Tis to pay a part of a Debt: A Debt under which you have laid my Country, when you did with your own Honourable Hand, preſent unto His Majeſty, the ſame Account, which I have here again publiſhed, Concerning the Succeſs of the Goſpel among the Indians in New-England.

My Lord,

In one Eliot you ſee what a People 'tis, that you have counted worthy of your Notice, and what a People 'tis, that with ardent Prayers beſpeak the Mercies of Heaven for your Noble Family. Indeed it is impoſſible that a Country ſo full as New-England is, of what is truly Primitive, ſhould not be expoſed unto the bittereſt Enmity and Calumny of thoſe, that will ſtrive to entangle the Church in a Sardian Unreformedneſs, until our Lord Jeſus do ſhortly make them know, that he has loved, what they have hated, maligned, perſecuted. But if the God of New-England have inclined any Great Perſonage, to intercede, or interpoſe, for the prevention of the Ruines which ill Men have deſigned for ſuch a Country; or to procure for a People of an Eliot's Complexion in Religion, the undiſturbed Enjoyment and Exerciſe of that Religion: It is a thing that calls for our moſt ſenſible Acknowledgments.

It is an odd Superſtition which the Indians of this Country have among them, that they count it (on the Penalty of otherwiſe never proſpering more) neceſſary for them, never to paſs by the Graves of certain famous Perſons among them, without laying and leaving ſome Token of Regard thereupon. But we hope, that all true Proteſtants, will count it no more than what is equal and proper, that the Land which has in it, the Grave of ſuch a remarkable Preacher to the Indians, as our ELIOT, ſhould be Treated with ſuch a Love, as a Jeruſalem uſes to find from them that are to proſper.

Upon that Score then, let my Lord accept a Preſent, from, and for a remote Corner in the New World, where God is praiſed on your behalf; a ſmall Preſent made by the Hand of a rude American, who has nothing to recommend him unto your Lordſhip, except this, That he is the Son of one whom you have admitted unto your Favours; and that he is ambitious to wear the Title of,

My LORD,

Iour Lordſhip's moſt Humble, and moſt Obedient Servant,

COTTON MATHER.

THE INTRODUCTION.

'T*Was a very ſurpriſing as well as an undoubted Accident which happen'd within the Memory of Millions yet alive, when (as the Learned* Hornius has given us the Relation), certain Shepherds upon Mount Nebo, following part of their ſtraggling Flock, at length came to a Valley, the prodigious Depths and Rocks whereof, rendred it almoſt inacceſſible; in which there was a Cave of inexpreſſible Sweetneſs, and in that Cave was a Sepulchre, that had very difficult Characters upon it. The Patriarchs of the Maronites thereabouts inhabiting, procured ſome Learned Perſons to take Notice, and make Report of this Curioſity, who found the Inſcription of the Grave-ſtone to be in the Hebrew Language and Letter; Moſes, the Servant of the Lord.

The Jews, the Greeks, and the Roman Catholics thereabouts, were all together by the Ears, for the Poſſeſſion of this Rarity, but the Turks as quickly laid Claim unto it, and ſtrongly guarded it Nevertheleſs, the Jeſuites found a way by Tricks and Bribes, to engage the Turkiſh Guards into a Conſpiracy with them, for the tranſporting of the incloſed and renowned Aſhes into Europe; but when they opened the Grave, there was no Body, nor ſo much as a Relick there. While they were under the Confuſion of this Diſappointment, a Turkiſh General came upon them, and cut them all to pieces; therewithal taking a Courſe never to have that place viſited any more. But the Scholars of the Orient preſently made this a Theme which they talk'd and wrote much upon: And whether this were the true Sepulchre of Moſes, was a Queſtion upon which many Books were publiſhed.

The World would now count me very abſurd, if after this I ſhould ſay, that I had found the Sepulchre of Moſes, in America: But I have certainly here found Moſes himſelf; we have had among us, one appearing in the Spirit of a Moſes; and it is not the Grave, but the Life of ſuch a Moſes, that we value our ſelves upon being the Owners of.

Having implored the Aſſiſtance and Acceptance of that God, whoſe Bleſſed Word has told us, The Righteous ſhall be had in everlaſting Remembrance: I am attempting to write the Life of a Righteous Perſon, concerning whom all things, but the meanneſs of the Writer, invite the Reader to expect nothing ſave what is truly extraordinary. 'Tis the Life of One who has better and greater Things to be affirmed of him, than could ever be reported concerning any of thoſe famous Men, which have been celebrated by the Pens of a Plutarch, a Pliny, a Laertius, an Eunapius, or in any Pagan Hiſtories. 'Tis the Life of one whoſe Character might very agreeably be look'd for, among the Collections of a Dorotheus, or the Orations of a Nazianzen; or is worthy at leaſt of nothing leſs than the exquiſite Stile of a Melchior Adam, to eternize it.

If it be, as it is, a true Aſſertion, That the leaſt Exerciſe of true Faith, or Love, towards God, in Chriſt, is a more glorious thing than all the Triumphs of a Cæſar, there muſt be ſomething very conſiderable, in the Life of one who ſpent ſeveral Scores of Years in ſuch Exerciſes; and of one, in the mention of whoſe Atchievements, we may alſo recount, that he fought the Devil in (once) his American Territories, till he had recovered no ſmall Party of his old Subiects and Vaſſals out of his cruel Hands; it would be as unreaſonable, as unprofitable, for Poſterity to bury the Memory of ſuch a Perſon in the Duſt of that Obſcurity and Oblivion, which has covered the Names of the Hero's, who dy'd before the Days of Agamemnon.

PRELIMINARY I.

The Birth, Age, and Family of Mr. ELIOT.

THE Inſpired Moſes, relating the Lives of thoſe Anti Diluvian Patriarchs, in whom the Church of God, and Line of Chriſt was continued, through the firſt Sixteen hundred Years of Time, recites little but their Birth, and their Age, and their Death, and their Sons and Daughters. If thoſe Articles would ſatisfie the Appetites and Enquiries of ſuch as come to read the Life of our Eliot, we ſhall ſoon have diſpatch'd the Work now upon our Hands.

The Age, with the Death of this Worthy Man, has been already terminated, in the Ninetieth Year of the preſent Century, and the Eighty ſixth Year of his own Pilgrimage. And for his Birth, it was at a Town in England; the Name whereof I cannot preſently recover; nor is it neceſſary for me to look back ſo far as the place of his Nativity; any more than 'tis for me to recite the Vertues of his Parentage, of which he ſaid, Vix ea noſtra voco: Tho' indeed the pious Education which they gave him, cauſed him in his Age, to write theſe Words: I do ſee that it was a great Favour of God unto me, to ſeaſon my firſt Times with the Fear of God, the Word, and Prayer.

The Atlantick Ocean, like a River of Lethe, may eaſily cauſe us to forget many of the things that happened on the other ſide. Indeed the Nativity of ſuch a Man, were an Honour worthy the Contention of as many Places, as laid their Claims unto the famous Homer's: But whatever Places may challenge a ſhare in the Reputation of having enjoy'd the firſt Breath of our Eliot, it is New-England that with moſt Right can call him Hers; his beſt Breath, and afterwards his laſt Breath was here; and here 'twas, that God beſtow'd upon him Sons and Daughters.

He came to New-England in the Month of November, A. D. 1631. among thoſe bleſſed old Planters, which laid the Foundations of a remarkable Country, devoted unto the Exerciſe of the Proteſtant Religion, in its pureſt and higheſt Reformation. He left behind him in England, a Vertuous young Gentlewoman, whom he had purſued and purpoſed a Marriage unto; and ſhe coming hither the Year following, that Marriage was conſummated in the Month of October, A. D. 1632.

This Wife of his Youth lived with him until ſhe became to him alſo the Staff of his Age; and ſhe left him not until about three or four Years before his own Departure to thoſe Heavenly Regions, where they now together ſee Light. She was a Woman very eminent, both for Holineſs and Uſefulneſs, and ſhe excelled moſt of the Daughters that have done vertuouſly. Her Name was Anne, and Gracious was her Nature. God made her a rich Bleſſing, not only to her Family, but alſo to her Neighbourhood; and when at laſt ſhe died, I heard and ſaw her Aged Husband, who elſe very rarely wept, yet now with Tears over the Coffin, before the Good People, a vaſt Confluence of which were come to her Funeral, ſay, Here lies my dear, faithful, pious, prudent, prayerful Wife; I ſhall go to her, and ſhe not return to me. My Reader will of his own accord excuſe me, from beſtowing any further Epitaphs upon that gracious Woman.

By her did God give him ſix worthy Children, Children of a Character which may forever ſtop the Mouths of thoſe Antichriſtian Blaſphemers, who have ſet a falſe Brand of Diſaſter and Infamy, on the Off-ſpring of a Married Clergy. His Firſt born was a Daughter, born Sept. 17. A. C. 1633. This Gentlewoman is yet alive, and one well approven for her Piety and Gravity. His next was a Son; born Aug. 31. A. C. 1636. He bore his Father's Name, and had his Father's Grace. He was a Perſon of notable Accompliſhments, and a lively, zealous, acute, Preacher, not only to the Engliſh at New Cambridge, but alſo to the Indians thereabout. He grew ſo faſt, that he was found ripe for Heaven, many Years ago; and upon his Death-bed uttered ſuch penetrating things as could proceed from none, but one upon the Borders and Confines of Eternal Glory. 'Tis pity that ſo many of them are forgotten; but one of them, I think, we have cauſe to remember: Well, (ſaid he) my dear Friends; There is a dark Day coming upon New-England; and in ſo dark a Day, I pray how will you provide for your own Security! My Counſel to you is, get an Intereſt in the bleſſed Lord Jeſus Chriſt; and that will carry you to the World's end. His Third was alſo a Son, born Decemb. 20. A. C. 1638. him he call'd Joſeph. This Perſon hath been a Paſtor to the Church at Guilford. His Fourth was a Samuel, born June 22. A. C. 1641. who dy'd a moſt lovely young Man, eminent for Learning and Goodneſs, a Fellow of the Colledge, and a Candidate of the Miniſtry. His Fifth was an Aaron, born Feb. 19. A. C. 1643. who tho' he dy'd very young, yet firſt manifeſted many good things towards the Lord God of Iſrael. His Laſt was a Benjamin, born Jan. 29. A. C. 1646. Of all theſe three, it may be ſaid, as it was of Haran, They dy'd before their Father; but it may alſo be written over their Graves, All theſe died in Faith. By the pious Deſign of their Father, they were all Conſecrated unto the Service of God, in the Miniſtry of the Goſpel; but God ſaw meet rather to fetch them away, by a Death, which (therefore) I dare not call Præmature, to glorify him in another and a better World. They all gave ſuch Demonſtrations of their Converſion to God, that the good old Man would ſometimes comfortably ſay, I have had ſix Children, and I bleſs God for his Free Grace, they are all either with Chriſt, or in Chriſt; and my Mind is now at reſt concerning them. And when ſome asked him, how he could bear the Death of ſuch excellent Children, his humble Reply thereto was this, My Deſire was that they ſhould have ſerved God on Earth; but if God will chuſe to have them rather ſerve him in Heaven, I have nothing to object againſt it, but his Will be done! His Benjamin was made the Son of his Right-Hand; for the Invitation of the good People at Roxbury, placed him in the ſame Pulpit with his Father, where he was his Aſſiſtant for many Years; there they had a Proof of him, that as a Son with his Father, he ſerved with him in the Goſpel. But his Fate was like that which the great Gregory Nazianzen deſcribes in his Diſcourſe upon the Death of his honourable Brother, his Aged Father being now alive and preſent; My Father having laid up in a better World, a Rich Inheritance for his Children, ſent a Son of his before, to take Poſſeſſion of it.

PRELIMINARY II.

Mr. Eliot's Early Converſion, Sacred Employment, and Juſt Removal into America.

BUT all that I have hitherto ſaid, is no more than an entrance into the Hiſtory of our Eliot. Such an Enoch as he, muſt have ſomething more than theſe things recorded of him; his Walk with God, muſt be more largely laid before the World, as a thing that would beſpeak us all to be Followers no leſs than we ſhall be Admirers of it.

He had not paſſed many Turns in the World, before he knew the meaning of a ſaving Turn from the Vanities of an Unregenerate State, unto God in Chriſt, by a true Repentance; he had the ſingular Happineſs and Privilege of an early Converſion from the Ways, which Original Sin diſpoſes all Men unto. One of the principal Inſtruments which the God of Heaven uſed in tingeing, and filling the Mind of this choſen Veſſel, with good Principles, was that Venerable Thomas Hooker, whoſe Name in the Churches of the Lord Jeſus, is, As an Ointment poured forth; even that Hooker, who having Angled many Scores of Souls into the Kingdom of Heaven, at laſt laid his Bones in our New-England; it was an Acquaintance with him, that contributed more than a little to the Accompliſhment of our Eliſha, for that Work unto which the moſt High deſigned him. His liberal Education, having now the Addition of Religion to direct it, and improve it, it gave ſuch a Biaſs to his young Soul, as quickly diſcovered it ſelf in very ſignal Inſtances. His firſt Appearance in the World after his Education in the Univerſity, was in the too difficult and unthankful but very neceſſary Employment of a School-Maſter, which Employment he diſcharged with a good Fidelity. And as this firſt Eſſay of his Improvement was no more Diſgrace unto him, than it was unto the famous Hieron, Whitaker, Vines, and others, that they thus began to be ſerviceable; ſo it rather prepared him, for the further Service, which his Mind was now ſet upon. He was of worthy Mr. Thomas Wilſon's Mind, that the calling of a Miniſter was the only one wherein a Man might be more ſerviceable to the Church of God, than in that of a School-Maſter: And with Melchior Adam, he reckoned, the Calling of a School-Maſter, Pulverulentam, ac Moleſtiſſimam quidem, ſed Deo longe gratiſſimam Functionem. Wherefore having dedicated himſelf unto God betimes, he could not reconcile himſelf to any leſſer way of ſerving his Creator and Redeemer, than the Sacred Miniſtry of the Goſpel; but alas, where ſhould he have Opportunities for the Exerciſing of it? The Laudian, Grotian, and Arminian Faction in the Church of England, in the Proſecution of their Grand Plot, for the reducing of England unto a moderate ſort of Popery, had pitched upon this as one of their Methods for it; namely, to creeple as faſt as they could, all the Learned, Godly, Painful Miniſters of the Nation; and invent certain Shibboleths for the detecting and the deſtroying of ſuch Men as were cordial Friends to the Reformation. 'Twas now a time when there were every day multiplied and impoſed thoſe unwarrantable Ceremonies in the Worſhip of God, by which the Conſcience of our Conſiderate Eliot counted the ſecond Commandment notoriouſly violated; 'twas now alſo a time, when ſome Hundreds of thoſe Good People which had the Nick-name of Puritans put upon them, tranſported themſelves, with their whole Families and Intereſts, into the Deſarts of America, that they might here peaceably erect Congregational Churches, and therein attend and maintain all the pure Inſtitutions of the Lord Jeſus Chriſt; having the Encouragement of Royal Charters, that they ſhould never have any Interruption in the Enjoyment of thoſe precious and pleaſant things. Here was a Proſpect which quickly determined the devout Soul of our young Eliot, unto a Remove into New England, while it was yet a Land not ſown; he quickly liſted himſelf among thoſe valiant Souldiers of the Lord Jeſus Chriſt, who cheerfully encountred firſt the Perils of the Atlantick Ocean, and then the Fatigues of the New-Engliſh Wilderneſs, that they might have an undiſturbed Communion with him in his Appointments here. And thus did he betimes procure himſelf the Conſolation of having afterwards and for ever a Room in that Remembrance of God, I remember thee, the Kindneſs of thy Youth, and the Love of thine Eſpouſals, when thou wenteſt after me into the Wilderneſs.

On his firſt Arrival to New-England, he ſoon joined himſelf unto the Church at Boſton; 'twas Church-work that was his Errand hither, Mr. Wilſon, the Paſtor of that Church, was gone back into England, that he might perfect the Settlement of his Affairs; and in his Abſence, young Mr. Eliot was he that ſupplied his place. Upon the Return of Mr. Wilſon, that Church was intending to have made Mr. Eliot his Collegue, and their Teacher; but it was diverted. Mr. Eliot had engaged unto a ſelect Number of his Pious and Chriſtian Friends in England, that if they ſhould come into theſe Parts before he ſhould be in the Paſtoral Care of any other People, he would give himſelf to Them, and be for Their Service. It happened, that theſe Friends tranſported themſelves hither, the Year after him; and choſe their Habitation at the Town which they called Roxbury. A Church being now gathered at this place, he was in a little while Ordained unto the Teaching and Ruling of that Holy Society. So, 'twas in the Orb of that Church that we had him as a Star fixed for very near Threeſcore Years; it only remains that we now obſerve what was his Magnitude all this while, and how he performed his Revolution.

PART I.

Or, ELIOT as a CHRISTIAN.

ARTICLE I.

His Eminent PIETY.

SUch was the Piety of our Eliot, that like another Moſes, he had upon his Face a continual ſhine, ariſing from his uninterrupted Communion with the Father of Spirits. He was indeed a Man of Prayer, and might ſay after the Pſalmiſt, I Prayer, as being in a manner made up of it. Could the Walls of his Old Study ſpeak, they would even Raviſh us with a Relation of the many Hundred and Thouſand fervent Prayers which he there poured out before the Lord. He not only made it his daily Practice to enter into that Cloſet, and ſhut his Door, and pray to his Father in Secret, but he would not rarely ſet apart whole Days for Prayer with Faſting, in ſecret Places before the God of Heaven. Prayer ſolemnized with Faſting was indeed ſo agreeable unto him, that I have ſometimes thought he might juſtly inherit the Name of Johannes Jejunator, or John the Faſter, which for the like Reaſon was put upon one of the Renowned Ancients. Eſpecially, when there was any remarkable Difficulty before him, he took this way to encounter and overcome it; being of Dr. Preſton's Mind, That when we would have any great things to be accompliſhed, the beſt Policy is to work by an Engine which the World ſees nothing of. He could ſay as the pious Robertſon did upon his Death-bed, I thank God, I have loved Faſting and Prayer, with all my heart! If one would have known what that Sacred thing, The Spirit of Prayer, intends, in him there might have been ſeen a moſt luculent and Practical Expoſition of it. He kept his Heart in a Frame for Prayer, with a marvellous Conſtancy; and was continually provoking all that were about him thereunto. When he heard any conſiderable News, his uſual and ſpeedy Reflection thereupon would be, Brethren, let us turn all this into Prayer! And he was perpetually jogging the Wheel of Prayer, both more privately in the Meetings, and more publickly in the Churches of his Neighbourhood. When he came to an Houſe that he was intimately acquainted with, he would often ſay, Come, let us not have a Viſit without a Prayer; let us pray down the Bleſſing of Heaven on your Family before we go. Eſpecially when he came into a Society of Miniſters, before he had ſat long with them, they would look to hear him urging, Brethren, the Lord

Jeſus takes much notice of what is done and ſaid among his Miniſters when they are together; come, let us pray before we part! And hence alſo, his whole Breath ſeemed in a ſort made up of Ejaculatory Prayers, many ſcores of which winged Meſſengers he diſpatched away to Heaven, upon pious Errands every Day. By them he beſpoke Bleſſings upon almoſt every Perſon or Affair that he was concerned with; and he carried every thing to God with ſome pertinent Hoſannah's or Hallelujah's over it. He was a mighty and an happy Man, that had his Quiver full of theſe Heavenly Arrows! And when he was never ſo ſtraitly beſieged by Humane Occurrences, yet he faſtned the Wiſhes of his devout Soul unto them, and very dexterouſly ſhot them up to Heaven over the head of all.

As he took thus delight in ſpeaking to the Almighty God, no leſs did he in ſpeaking of him; but in ſerious and ſavoury Diſcourſes, he ſtill had his Tongue like the Pen of a ready Writer. The Jeſuits once at Nola made a no leſs profane than ſevere Order, That no Man ſhould ſpeak of God at all; but this Excellent Perſon almoſt made it an Order wherever he came, to ſpeak of nothing but God. He was indeed ſufficiently pleaſant and witty in Company, and he was affable and facetious rather than moroſe in Converſation; but he had a Remarkable Gravity mixed with it, and a ſingular Skill of raiſing ſome Holy Obſervation out of whatever matter of Diſcourſe lay before him; nor would he ordinarily diſmiſs any Theme without ſome Gracious, Divine, pithy Sentence thereupon. Doubtleſs, he impoſed it as a Law upon himſelf, that he would leave ſomething of God and Heaven, and Religion, with all that ſhould come a near him; ſo that in all places, his Company was attended with Majeſty and Reverence; and it was no ſooner proper for him to ſpeak, but like Mary's open ed Box of Ointment, he fill'd the whole Room with the Perfumes of the Graces in his Lips, and the Chriſtian Hearers taſted a greater ſweetneſs in his well-ſeaſoned Speeches, than the Illuſtrious Homer aſcrib'd unto the Orations of his Neſtor, ſweeter abundance.

Whoſe Lip drop'd Language than ſweet Honey,

His Conferences were like thoſe which Tertullian affirms to have been common among the Saints in his Days, Ut qui ſciret Dominum audire, as knowing that the Ear of God was open to them all; and he managed his Rudder ſo as to manifeſt that he was bound Heaven-ward, in his whole Communication. He had a particular Art at Spiritualizing of Earthly Objects, and raiſing of high Thoughts from very mean things. As, once going with ſome Feebleneſs and Wearineſs up the Hill on which his Meeting-Houſe now ſtands, he ſaid unto the Perſon that led him, This is very like the way to Heaven, 'tis up Hill! The Lord by his Grace fetch us up! And inſtantly ſpying a Buſh near him, he as nimbly added, And truly there are Thorns and Briars in the way too! Which Inſtance I would not have ſingled out from the many Thouſands of his Occaſional Reflections, but only that I might ſuggeſt unto the good People of Roxbury, ſomething for them to think upon, when they are going up to the Houſe of the Lord. It is enough, that as the Friend of the famous Urſin could profeſs that he never went unto him without coming away, aut doctior aut melior, either the wiſer or the better from him; ſo, 'tis an acknowledgment which more than one Friend of our Eliot's has made concerning him, I was never with him but I got, or might have got ſome good from him.

And hearing from the great God, was an Exerciſe of like Satisfaction unto the Soul of this good Man, with ſpeaking either to him, or of him. He was a mighty Student of the Sacred Bible; and it was unto him as his neceſſary food. He made the Bible his Companion, and his Counſellor, and the Holy Lines of Scripture more Enamoured him than the profane ones of Tully, ever did the famous Italian Cardinal. He would not upon eaſy Terms, have gone one Day together, without uſing a Portion of the Bible as an Antidote againſt the Infection of Temptation. And he would preſcribe it unto others, with his probatum eſt upon it; as once particularly a pious Woman, vexed with a wicked Husband, complaining to him, That bad Company was all the day ſtill infeſting of her Houſe, and what ſhould ſhe do? He adviſed her, Take the Holy Bible into your Hand, when the bad Company comes, and you'll ſoon drive them out of the Houſe; the Woman made the Experiment, and thereby cleared her Houſe from the Haunts that had moleſted it. By the like way 'twas that he cleared his Heart of what he was loth to have Neſting there. Moreover, if ever any Man could, he might pretend unto that Evidence of Uprightneſs, Lord, I have loved the Habitation of thine Houſe; for he not only gave ſomething more than his Preſence there twice on the Lord's Days, and once a Fortnight beſides on the Lectures, in his own Congregation, but he made his weekly Viſits unto the Lectures in the Neighbouring Towns; how often was he ſeen at Boſton, Charlſtown, Cambridge, Dorcheſter, waiting upon the Word of God, in Recurring Opportunities, and counting a Day in the Courts of the Lord better than a Thouſand? It is hardly conceivable, how in the midſt of ſo many Studies and Labours as he was at home engaged in, he could poſſibly repair to ſo many Lectures abroad; and herein he aimed, not only at his own Edification, but at the Countenancing and Encouraging of the Lectures which he went unto.

Thus he took heed, that he might Hear, and he took as much heed how he Heard; he ſet himſelf as in the Preſence of the Eternal God, as the great Conſtantine uſed of old, in the Aſſemblies where he came, and ſaid, I will hear what God the Lord will ſpeak; he expreſſed a diligent Attention, by a watchful and wakeful Poſture, and by turning to the Texts quoted by the Preacher; he expreſſed a ſuitable Affection by feeding on what was delivered, and accompanying it with Hands and Eyes devoutly elevated; and they whoſe good hap 'twas to go home with him, were ſure of having another Sermon by the way, until their very Hearts burned in them. Lactantius truly ſaid, Non eſt vera Religio, quæ cum Templo relinquitur; but our Eliot always carried much of Religion with him, from the Houſe of God.

In a word, he was one who Liv'd in Heaven while he was on Earth; and there is no more than pure Juſtice in our Endeavours that he ſhould Live on Earth after he is in Heaven. We cannot ſay that we ever ſaw him walking any whither but he was therein walking with God; whereever he ſat, he had God by him, and it was in the Everlaſting Arms of God that he Slept at Night. Methoughts he a little diſcovered his Heavenly way of living, when walking one day in his Garden, he pluck'd up a Weed that he ſaw now and then growing there, at which a Friend pleaſantly ſaid unto him, Sir, you tell us, we muſt be Heavenly-minded; but he immediately reply'd, It is true; and this is no Impediment unto that, for were I ſure to go to Heaven to morrow, I would do what I do to Day. From ſuch a Frame of Spirit it was that once in a Viſit, finding a Merchant in his Counting Houſe, where he ſaw Books of Buſineſs only on his Table, but all his Books of Devotion on the Shelf, he gave this Advice unto him, Sir, Here's Earth on the Table, and Heaven on the Shelf; pray don't ſit ſo much at the Table as altogether to forget the Shelf; let not Earth by any means thruſt Heaven out of your mind.

Indeed I cannot give a fuller Deſcription of him, than what was in a Paraphraſe that I have heard himſelf to make upon that Scripture, our Converſation is in Heaven! I writ from him as he uttered it.

‘Behold, ſaid he, the Ancient and Excellent Character of a true Chriſtian; 'tis that which Peter calls Holineſs in all manner of Converſation; you ſhall not find a Chriſtian out of the way of Godly Converſation. For, firſt, a Seventh part of our time is all ſpent in Heaven, when we are duly zealous for, and zealous on the Sabbath of God. Beſides, God has written on the Head of the Sabbath Remember; which looks both forwards and backwards; and thus a good part of the Week will be ſpent in Sabbatizing. Well, but for the reſt of our Time! Why, we ſhall have that ſpent in Heaven, e'er we have done. For, Secondly, we have many Days for both Faſting and Thankſgiving, in our Pilgrimage; and here are ſo many Sabbaths more. Moreover, Thirdly, we have our Lectures every Week; and pious People won't miſs them, if they can help it. Furthermore, Fourthly, We have our private Meetings wherein we pray, and ſing, and repeat Sermons, and confer together about the things of God; and being now come thus far, we are in Heaven almoſt every Day. But a little farther, Fifthly, We perform Family-Duties every Day; we have our Morning and Evening Sacrifices, wherein having read the Scriptures to our Families, we call upon the Name of God, and ever now and then carefully Catechize thoſe that are under our Charge. Sixthly, We ſhall alſo have our daily Devotions in our Cloſets; wherein unto Supplication before the Lord, we ſhall add ſome ſerious Meditation upon his Word; a David will be at this Work no leſs than thrice a Day. Seventhly, We have likewiſe many ſcores of Ejaculations in a day; and theſe we have, like Nehemiah, in whatever place we come into. Eighthly, We have our Occaſional Thoughts, and our Occaſional Talks, upon Spiritual Matters; and we have our Occaſional Acts of Charity, wherein we do like the Inhabitants of Heaven every day. Ninthly, In our Callings, in our Civil Callings, we keep up Heavenly Frames; we buy and ſell, and toil; yea, we eat and drink, with ſome Eye both to the Command and the Honour of God in all. Behold, I have not now left an Inch of Time to be Carnal; it is all Engroſſed for Heaven. And yet, leſt here ſhould not be enough, Laſtly, We have our Spiritual Warfare. We are always encountring the Enemies of our Souls, which continually raiſes our Hearts unto our Helper and Leader in the Heavens. Let no Man ſay, 'Tis impoſſible to live at this rate; for we have known ſome live thus; and others that have written of ſuch a Life, have but ſpun a Web out of their own bleſſed Experiences. New-England has Example of this Life; tho' alas, 'tis to be lamented, that the Diſtractions of the World, in too many Profeſſors, do becloud the Beauty of an Heavenly Converſation. In fine, our Employment lies in Heaven. In the Morning, if we ask, Where am I to be to Day? Our Souls muſt anſwer, In Heaven. In the Evening, if we ask, Where have I been to Day? Our Souls may anſwer, In Heaven. If thou art a Believer, thou art no Stranger to Heaven while thou liveſt; and when thou dieſt, Heaven will be no ſtrange Place to thee; no, thou haſt been there a Thouſand times before.

In this Language have I heard him expreſs himſelf; and he did what he ſaid; he was a Boniface as well as Benedict; and he was one of thoſe.

Qui faciendo docent, quæ facienda docent.

It might be ſaid of him, as that Writer characteriſes Origen, Quemadmodum docuit, ſic vixit, & quemadmodum vixit ſic docuit.

ARTICLE II.

His Particular Care and Zeal about the Lord's Day.

THIS was the Piety, this the Holineſs of our Eliot; but among the many Inſtances in which his Holineſs was remarkable, I muſt not omit his exact Remembrance of the Sabbath Day, to keep it holy.

It has been truly and juſtly obſerved, That our whole Religion fares according to our Sabbaths, that poor Sabbaths make poor Chriſtians, and that a Strictneſs in our Sabbaths inſpires a Vigour into all our other Duties. Our Eliot knew this, and it was a moſt Exemplary Zeal that he acknowledged the Sabbath of our Lord Jeſus Chriſt withal. Had he been asked, Servaſti Dominicum? He could have made a right Chriſtian primitive Anſwer thereunto. The Sun did not ſet, the Evening before the Sabbath, till he had begun his Preparation for it; and when the Lord's Day came, you might have ſeen John in the Spirit, every Week. Every Day was a ſort of Sabbath to him, but the Sabbath-day was a Kind, a Type, a Taſt of Heaven with him. He laboured, that he might on this High Day, have no Words or Thoughts but ſuch as were agreeable thereunto; he then allow'd in himſelf no Actions, but thoſe of a Raiſed Soul. One ſhould hear nothing dropping from his Lips on this Day, but the Milk and Honey of the Countrey, in which there yet remains a Reſt for the People of God; and if he beheld in any Perſon whatſoever, whether old or young, any Profanation of this Day, he would be ſure to beſtow lively Rebukes upon it. And hence alſo unto the general Engagements of a Covenant with God, which 'twas his Deſire to bring the Indians into, he added a particular Article, wherein they bind themſelves, mehquontamunat Sabbath, pahketeaunat tohſohke pomantamog; i.e. To Remember the Sabbath day, to keep it holy, as long as we live.

The mention of this, gives me an Opportunity, not only to Recommend our Departed Eliot, but alſo to Vindicate another great Man, unto the Churches of our Lord Jeſus Chriſt. The Reverend and Renowned Owen in his Elaborate Exercitations on the Lord's Day, had let fall ſuch a Paſſage as this:

I judge, That the Obſervation of the Lord's Day is to be Commenſurate unto the uſe of our natural Strength, on any other Day; from Morning to Night. The Lord's Day is to be ſet apart unto the ends of an holy Reſt unto God, by every one according as his natural Strength will enable him to employ himſelf in his lawful Occaſions any other Day of the Week.

This Paſſage gave ſome ſcandal unto ſeveral very Learned and Pious Men; among whom, our Eliot was one; whereupon with his uſual Zeal, Gravity and Sanctity, he wrote unto the Doctor, his Opinion thereabout; who returned unto him an Anſwer full of Reſpect, ſome part whereof I ſhall here tranſcribe.

‘ As to what concerns the Natural Strength of Man (ſaith he) Either I was under ſome Miſtake in my Expreſſion, or you ſeem to be ſo, in your Apprehenſion. I never thought, and I hope, I have not ſaid, for I cannot find it, that the Continuance of the Sabbath is to be commenſurate unto the Natural Strength of Man, but only that it is an Allowable Mean of Mens Continuance in Sabbath Duties; which I ſuppoſe you will not deny, leſt you ſhould caſt the Conſciences of Profeſſors into inextricable Difficulties.

‘ When firſt I engaged in that Work, I intended not to have ſpoken one word about the Practical Obſervation of the Day; but only to have endeavoured the Revival of a Truth, which at preſent is deſpiſed and contemned among us, and ſtrenuouſly oppoſed by ſundry Divines of the United Provinces, who call the Doctrine of the Sabbath, Figmentum Anglicanum. Upon the Deſire of ſome Learned Men in theſe Parts, it was, that I undertook the Vindication of it. Having now diſcharged the Debt, which in this matter I owed unto the Truth and Church of God, tho' not as I ought, yet with ſuch a Compoſition as I hope, thro' the Interpoſition of our Lord Jeſus Chriſt might find Acceptance with God and his Saints, I ſuppoſe I ſhall not again engage on that Subject.

‘ I ſuppoſe there is ſcarce any one alive in the World, who hath more Reproaches caſt upon him than I have; tho' hitherto God has been pleaſed in ſome meaſure to ſupport my ſpirit under them. I ſtill relieved my ſelf by this, That my poor Endeavours have found Acceptance with the Churches of Chriſt: But my holy, wiſe, and gracious Father, ſees it needful to try me in this matter alſo; and what I have received from you (which it may be contains not your ſenſe alone) hath printed deeper, and left a greater Impreſſion upon my Mind, than all the virulent Revilings, and falſe Accuſations I have met withal, from my profeſſed Adverſaries. I do acknowledge unto you, that I have a dry and barren Spirit, and I do heartily beg your Prayers, that the Holy One would, notwithſtanding all my ſinful Provocations, water me from above; but that I ſhould now be apprehended to have given a Wound unto Holineſs in the Churches, 'tis one of the ſaddeſt frowns in the cloudy Brows of Divine Providence.

‘ The Doctrine of the Sabbath, I have aſſerted, tho' not as it ſhould be done, yet as well as I could; the Obſervation of it in Holy Duties unto the utmoſt of the ſtrength for them, which God ſhall be pleaſed to give us, I have pleaded for; the neceſſity alſo of a ſerious Preparation for it in ſundry previous Duties, I have declared. But now to meet with ſevere Expreſſions—It may be 'tis the Will of God, that Vigour ſhould hereby be given to my former Diſcouragements, and that there is a Call in it, to ſurceaſe from theſe kinds of Labours.

I have tranſcribed the more of this Letter, becauſe it not only diſcovers the concern which our Eliot had for the Sabbath of God, but alſo it may contribute unto the Worlds good Reception and Peruſal of a Golden Book on that Subject, written by one of the moſt Eminent Perſons which the Engliſh Nation has been adorned with.

ARTICLE III.

His Exemplary Mortification.

THUS did Eliot endeavour to live unto God; but how much at the ſame time did he die unto all the World?

'Twere impoſſible to finiſh the lively Picture of this Pious and Holy Eliot, without ſome Touches upon that Mortification, which accompanied him all his Days; for never did I ſee a Perſon more mortify'd unto all the Pleaſures of this Life, or more unwilling to moult the Wings of an Heaven-born Soul, in the dirty Puddles of carnal and ſenſual Delights. We are all of us compounded of thoſe two things, the Man, and the Beaſt; but ſo powerful was the Man, in this Holy Perſon, that it kept the Beaſt ever ty'd with a ſhort Tedder, and ſuppreſſed the irregular Calcitrations of it. He became ſo nailed unto the Croſs of the Lord Jeſus Chriſt, that the Grandeurs of this World were unto him juſt what they would be to a dying Man; and he maintained an almoſt unparallel'd Indifferency towards all the Pomps, which Mankind is too generally flattered and enchanted with.

The Luſt of the Fleſh he could not reconcile himſelf to the leaſt pampering or indulging of: But he perſecuted it with a continual Antipathy, being upon higher Principles than Tully was acquainted withal, of his Mind, Non eſt dignus nomine hominis, qui unum diem totum velit eſſe in iſto genere voluptatis. The Sleep that he allow'd himſelf, cheated him not of his Morning Hours; but he reckoned the Morning no leſs a Friend unto the Graces, than the Muſes. He would call upon Students, I pray look to it that you be Morning Birds? And for many more than a ſcore of Years before he died, he removed his Lodging into his Study, on purpoſe that being there alone, he might enjoy his early Mornings, without giving the Diſturbance of the leaſt noiſe to any of his Friends, whoſe Affections to him elſe might have been ready to have called, Maſter, ſpare thy ſelf. The Meat upon which he lived was a Cibus Simplex, an homely but an wholeſome Diet. Rich Varieties, coſtly Viands, and poinant Sauces, came not upon his own Table, and when he found them on other Mens, he rarely taſted of them. One Diſh, and a plain one, was his Dinner; and when invited unto a Feaſt, I have ſeen him ſit Magnifying of God, for the Plenty which his People in this Wilderneſs were within a few Years ariſen to; but not more than a Bit or two of all the Dainties taken into his own Mouth all the while. And for a Supper, he had learn'd of his loved and bleſſed Patron, old Mr. Cotton, either wholly to omit it, or to make a ſmall ſup or two the utmoſt of it. The Drink which he ſtill uſed was very ſmall; he cared not for Wines or Drams, and I believe he never once in all his Life, knew what it was to feel ſo much as a noxious Fume in his Head, from any of them; good, clear Water was more precious, as well as more uſual with him, than any of thoſe Liquors with which Men do ſo frequently ſpoil their own Healths, while perhaps they drink thoſe of other Men. When at a Strangers Houſe in the Summer time, he has been entertained with a Glaſs, which they told him was, Of Water and Wine, he has with a complaiſant Gravity reply'd unto this purpoſe, Wine, 'tis a noble generous Liquor, and we ſhould be humbly thankful for it; but as I remember, Water was made before it! So abſtemious was he; and he found, that Carere ſuavitatibus iſtis, his Abſtinence had more Sweetneſs in it, than any of the Sweets which he abſtained from; and ſo willing he was to have others partake with him in that Sweetneſs, that when he has thought the Countenance of a Miniſter has look'd, as if he had made much of himſelf, he has gone to him with that Speech, Study Mortification Brother, Study Mortification! And he made all his Addreſſes with a becoming Majeſty.

The Luſt of the Eye, he was put out by him in ſuch a manner, that it was in a manner all one with him to be Rich or Poor. It could not be ſaid of him, That he ſought great things for himſelf; but what Eſtate he became Owner of, was from the Bleſſing of God upon the Husbandry and Induſtry of ſome in his Family, rather than from any Endeavours of his own. Once when there ſtood ſeveral Kine of his own before his Door, his Wife, to try him, asked him, Whoſe they were? And ſhe found that he knew nothing of them. He could not endure to plunge himſelf into ſecular Deſigns and Affairs, but accounted Sacerdos in foro as worthy of Caſtigation as Mercator in Templo; he thought that Miniſter and Market man, were not Uniſons, and that the Earth was no Place for Aaron's Holy Mitre to be laid upon. It was the Uſage of moſt Pariſhes in the Country, to have an annual Rate for the Maintenance of the Miniſtry, adjuſted commonly by the Select Men of the Towns; which tho' it raiſed not any exuberant Salaries for the Miniſters, who alſo ſeldom received all that the People had contracted for, nevertheleſs in many places it prevented ſore Temptations from befalling thoſe that were labouring in the Word and Doctrine; who muſt elſe often have experienced the Truth of Luther's Obſervation, Duriter profecto & miſere viverent Evangelii Miniſtri, ſi ex Libera populi contributione eſſent ſuſtentandi. However, for his part, he propounded that what Stipend he had, ſhould be raiſed by Contribution; and from the ſame Temper it was, that a few Years before his Diſſolution, being left without an Aſſiſtant in his Miniſtry, he preſſed his Congregation to furniſh themſelves with another Paſtor; and in his Application to them, he told them, 'Tis poſſible, you may think the burden of maintaining two Miniſters may be too heavy for you; but I deliver you from that fear; I do here give back my Salary to the Lord Jeſus Chriſt, and now, Brethren, you may fix that upon any Man that God ſhall make a Paſtor for you. But his Church with an handſome Reply, aſſured him, That they would count his very Preſence worth a Salary, when he ſhould be ſo ſuperannuated as to do no further Service for them.

And as for the Pride of Life, the Life of it was moſt exemplarily extinguiſh'd in him. The Humility of his Heart made him Higher by the Head than the reſt of the People. His Habit and Spirit were both ſuch as declared him to be among the Lowly, whom God has moſt Reſpect unto. His Apparel was without any Ornament, except that of Humility, which the Apoſtle Elegantly compares to a Knot of Comely Ribbons, in the Text where he bids us to be cloathed with it; any other flanting Ribbons on thoſe that came in his way he would ingeniouſly animadvert upon; and ſeeing ſome Scholars once, he thought a little too gaudy in their Cloaths, Humiliamini, Juvenes, Humiliamini, was his immediate Complement unto them. Had you ſeen him with his Leathern Girdle (for ſuch an one he wore) about his Loins, you would almoſt have thought what Herod fear'd, That John Baptiſt was come to Life again. In ſhort, he was in all Regards A Nazarite indeed; unleſs in this one, that long Hair was always very loathſome to him; he was an acute Ramiſt; but yet he profeſſed himſelf a Lover of a Trichotomy. Doubtleſs, it may be lawful for us to accommodate the length of our Hair unto the modeſt Cuſtoms which vary in the Churches of God; and it may be lawful for them that have not enough of their own Hair for their own Health, to ſupply themſelves according to the ſober Modes of the Places they live. But the Apoſtle tells us, Nature teaches us, that if a Man have long Hair, 'tis a Shame to him; where, by Nature can be meant, no other than The difference of Sex; as the Word elſewhere is uſed.

Thus Mr. Eliot thought that for Men to wear their Hair with a Luxurious, Delicate, Fæminine Prolixity; or for them to preſerve no plain Diſtinction of their Sex, by the Hair of their Head and Face; and much more for Men thus to diſguiſe themſelves with Hair that is None of their own; and moſt of all, for Miniſters of the Goſpel to ruffle it in Exceſſes of this kind; may prove more than we are well aware, diſpleaſing to the Holy Spirit of God. The Hair of them that profeſſed Religion, long before his Death, grew too long for him to ſwallow; and he would expreſs himſelf continually with a boiling Zeal concerning it, until at laſt he gave over, with ſome Regret complaining, The Luſt is become Inſuperable! I know not whether that horrible Diſtemper prevailing in ſome European Countries known by the Name of Plica Polonica, wherein the Hair of People matted into ugly and filthy Forms, like Snakes upon their Heads, which whoſoever cut off, preſently fell blind or mad; I ſay, I know not whether this Diſeaſe was more odious in it ſelf, than the ſweeter, neater, but prolix Locks of many People were to our Eliot. He was indeed one priſcis moribus, as well as Antiqua fide; and he might be allow'd ſomewhat even of Severity in this matter, on that account.

ARTICLE IV.

His Exquiſite Charity.

HE that will write of Eliot, muſt write of Charity, or ſay nothing. His Charity was a Star of the Firſt Magnitude in the bright Conſtellation of his Vertues; and the Rays of it were wonderfully various and extenſive.

His Liberality to pious Uſes whether publick or private, went much beyond the Proportions of his little Eſtate in the World. Many Hundreds of Pounds did he freely beſtow upon the Poor; and he would, with a very forcible importunity, preſs his Neighbours to join with him in ſuch Beneficences. 'Twas a marvellous Alacrity with which he imbraced all Opportunities of relieving any that were miſerable; and the good People of Roxbury doubtleſs, cannot remember (but the Righteous God will!) how often, and with what Ardors, with what Arguments, he became a Beggar to them for Collections in their Aſſemblies, to ſupport ſuch needy Objects, as had fallen under his Obſervation. The poor counted him their Father, and repaired ſtill unto him, with a filial Confidence in their Neceſſities; and they were more than ſeven or eight, or indeed than ſo many ſcores, who received their Portions of his Bounty. Like that worthy and famous Engliſh General, he could not perſwade himſelf, That he had any thing but what he gave away; but he drove a mighty Trade at ſuch Exerciſes as he thought would furniſh him with Bills of Exchange, which he hoped after many days to find the Comfort of; and yet after all, he would ſay like one of the moſt charitable Souls that ever lived in the World, That looking over his Accounts, he could no where find the God of Heaven charged a Debtor there. He did not put off his Charity, to be put in his laſt Will, as many who therein ſhew that their Charity is againſt their Will; but he was his own Adminiſtrator; he made his own Hands his Executors, and his own Eyes his Overſeers. It has been remark'd, That liberal Men are often long-liv'd Men; ſo do they after many days find the Bread with which they have been willing to keep other Men alive. The great Age of our Eliot was but agreeable to this Remark; and when his Age had unfitted him for almoſt all Employments, and bereaved him of thoſe Gifts and Parts which once he had been accompliſhed with, being asked, How he did? He would ſometimes anſwer, Alas, I have loſt every thing; my Underſtanding leaves me, my Memory fails me, my Utterance fails me; but I thank God, my Charity holds out ſtill; I find that rather grows than fails! And I make no queſtion, That at his Death, his happy Soul was received, and welcomed into the everlaſting Habitations, by many ſcores got thither before him, of ſuch as his Charity had been liberal unto.

But beſides theſe more Subſtantial Expreſſions of his Charity, he made the Odours of that Grace yet more fragrant unto all that were about him, by that Pittifulneſs and that Peaceableneſs, which render'd him yet further Amiable. If any of his Neighbourhood were in diſtreſs, he was like a Brother born for their Adverſity; he would viſit them, and comfort them with a moſt Fraternal Sympathy; yea, 'tis not eaſy to recount how many whole Days of Prayer and Faſting he has got his Neighbours to keep with him, on the Behalf of thoſe whoſe Calamities he found himſelf touched withal. It was an extreme Satisfaction to him, that his Wife had attained unto a conſiderable Skill in Phyſick and Chyrurgery, which enabled her to diſpenſe many ſafe, good, and uſeful Medicines unto the Poor that had occaſion for them; and ſome Hundreds of Sick and Weak and Maimed People owed Praiſes to God, for the Benefit, which therein they freely received of her. The good Gentleman her Husband, would ſtill be caſting Oyl into the Flame of that Charity, wherein ſhe was of her own accord abundantly forward thus to be doing of good unto all; and he would urge her to be ſerviceable unto the worſt Enemies that he had in the World. Never had any Man fewer Enemies than he! But once having delivered ſomething in his Miniſtry, which diſpleaſed one of his Hearers, the Man did paſſionately abuſe him for it, and this both with Speeches and with Writings, that reviled him. Yet it happening not long after, that this Man gave himſelf a very dangerous Wound, Mr. Eliot immediately ſends his Wife to cure him; who did accordingly. When the Man was well he came to thank her; but ſhe took no Rewards; and this good Man made him ſtay and eat with him, taking no notice of all the Calumnies with which he had loaded him; but by this Carriage he mollified and conquered the Stomach of his Reviler.

He was alſo a great Enemy to all Contention, and would ring aloud Courfeu-Bell, wherever he ſaw the Fires of Animoſity. When he heard any Miniſters complain, that ſuch and ſuch in their Flocks were too difficult for them, the ſtrain of his Anſwer ſtill was, Brother, Compaſs them! And Brother, Learn the meaning of thoſe three little Words, Bear, Forbear, Forgive. Yea, his Inclinations for Peace, indeed ſometimes almoſt made him to ſacrifice Right it ſelf. When there was laid before an Aſſembly of Miniſters a bundle of Papers, which contained certain Matters of Difference and Contention, between ſome People which our Eliot thought ſhould rather unite, with an Amneſty upon all their former Quarrels, he (with ſome Imitation of what Conſtantine did upon the like occaſion) haſtily threw the Papers into the Fire before them all, and with a Zeal for Peace as hot as that Fire, ſaid immediately, Brethren, wonder not at what I have done, I did it on my knees this Morning, before I came among you. Such an Exceſs (if it were one) flowed from his Charitable Inclinations to be found among thoſe Peace-makers, which by following the Example of that Man who is our Peace, come to be called, The Children of God. Very worthily might he be called an Irenæus, as being all for Peace; and the Commendation which Epiphanius gives unto the Ancient of that Name, did belong unto our Eliot, he was a moſt Bleſſed and a moſt Holy Man. He diſliked all ſorts of Bravery; but yet with an ingenious Note upon the Greek Word in Col. 3. 15. he propounded, That Peace might brave it among us. In ſhort, wherever he came, it was like another old John, with ſolemn and earneſt Perſwaſives to love, and when he could ſay little elſe, he would give that Charge, My Children, love one another!

Finally, 'Twas his Charity which diſpoſed him to continual Apprecations for, and Benedictions on thoſe that he met withal; he had an Heart full of good Wiſhes, and a Mouth full of kind Bleſſings for them. And he often made his Expreſſions very wittily agreeable to the Circumſtances which he ſaw the Perſons in. Sometimes when he came into a Family, he would call for all the Young People in it, that ſo he might very Diſtinctly lay his Holy Hands upon every one of them, and beſpeak the Mercies of Heaven for them all.

ARTICLE V.

Some Special Attainments, that were the Effects of his Piety and Charity.

BUT what was the Effect of this Exemplary Piety and Charity in our Eliot? It will be no wonder to my Reader, if I tell him, That this good Man walked in the Light of God's Countenance all the day long. I believe he had a continual Aſſurance of the Divine Love, marvellouſly Sealing, Strengthening, and Refreſhing of him, for many Luſtres of Years before he died; and for this Cauſe, the Fear of Death was extirpated out of his Heavenly Soul, more than out of moſt Men alive. Had our Bleſſed Jeſus at any time ſent his Waggons to fetch this old Jacob away, he would have gone without the leaſt Reluctancies. Labouring once under a Fever and Ague, a Viſitant asked him, How he did? And he reply'd, Very well, but anon I expect a Paroxiſm. Said the Viſitant, Sir, fear not; but unto that he anſwered, Fear! No, no; I been't afraid, I thank God, I been't afraid to die! Dying would not have been any more to him, than Sleeping to a weary Man.

And another Excellency, which accompained this Courage and Comfort in him was, A wonderful Reſignation to the Will of God in all events. There were ſore Afflictions that ſometimes befel him; eſpecially when he follow'd ſome of his hopeful and worthy Sons two or three deſirable Preachers of the Goſpel, to their Graves. But he ſacrificed them, (like another Abraham; with ſuch a ſacred Indifferency, as made all the Spectators to ſay, This could not be done without the Fear of God. Yea, he bore all his Trials with an admirable Patience, and ſeemed loth to have any Will of his own, that ſhould not be wholly melted and moulded into the Will of his Heavenly Father. Once being in a Boat at Sea, a larger Veſſel unhappily over run, and overſet that little one which had no ſmall Concerns, becauſe Eliot's in the Bottom of it; he immediately ſunk without any Expectation of ever going to Heaven any other way; and when he imagined that he had but one Breath more to draw in the World, it was this, The Will of the Lord be done! But it was the Will of the Lord, that he ſhould ſurvive the danger; for he was reſcued by the help that was then at hand, and he that had long been like Moſes in every thing elſe, was now drawn out of the Waters. Which gives me opportunity to mention one Remarkable that had ſome Relation hereunto. This Accident happened in the time of our Indian Wars, when ſome furious Engliſh People that clamoured for the Extirpation of the Praying Indians, which were in Subjection unto us, as well as the Pagan Indians that were in Hoſtility againſt us, vented a very wicked Rage at our Holy Eliot, becauſe of his Concernment for the Indians, and one profane Monſter hearing how narrowly Mr. Eliot eſcap'd from Drowning, 'tis ſaid, he wiſh'd this Man of God had then been Drowned. But withing a few Days, that woful Man by a ſtrange Diſaſter, was Drowned in that very place where Mr. Eliot had received his Deliverance.

There was indeed a certain Health of Soul which he arriv'd unto; and he kept in a bleſſed meaſure clear of thoſe Diſtempers which too often diſorder the moſt of Men. But the God of Heaven favoured him with ſomething that was yet more Extraordinery! By getting and keeping near to God, and by dwelling under the Shadow of the Almighty, be contracted a more exquiſite ſenſe of Mind, than what is uſual among other Profeſſors of Chriſtianity; he ſometimes felt a lively touch of God upon his refined and exalted Spirit, which were not in any paper of ours lawful or eaſy to be uttered; and he was admitted unto a ſingular Familiarity with the Holy One of Iſrael. Hence 'twas, that as Bodies of a rare and fine Conſtitution, will forebode the Changes of the Weather, ſo the ſublimed Soul of our Eliot often had ſtrange Forebodings of things that were to come. I have been aſtoniſhed at ſome of his Predictions, that were both of a more Perſonal, and of a more general Application, and were follow'd with exact Accompliſhments. If he ſaid of any Affair, I cannot bleſs it! it was a worſe Omen to it, than the moſt inauſpicious Preſages in the World; but ſometimes after he had been with God in Prayer about a thing, he was able ſucceſsfully to foretel, I have ſet a mark upon it, it will do well? I ſhall never forget, That when England and Holland were plunged into the unhappy War, which the more ſenſible Proteſtants every where had but ſorrowful Apprehenſions of, our Eliot being in the height and heat of the War, privately asked, What News we might look for next? Anſwered unto the Suprize of the Enquirer, Our next News will be, a Peace between the two Proteſtant Nations; God knows, I pray for it every Day; and I am verily perſwaded, we ſhall hear of it ſpeedily! And it came to paſs accordingly.

It is to be confeſſed, That the written Word of God, is to be regarded as the perfect and only Rule of our Lives; that in all Articles of Religion, if Men ſpeak not according to this Word, there is no light in them; and that it is no warrantable or convenient thing for Chriſtians ordinarily to look for ſuch Inſpirations as directed the Prophets that were the Pen-men of the Scriptures. Nevertheleſs, there are ſome uncommon Inſtances of Communion and Fruition, which in our Days the Soveraign God here and there favours a good Man withal; and they are very Heavenly Perſons, Perſons well purify'd from the Fæculencies of Senſuality, and Perſons better purged from the Leaven of Envy and Malice, and intolerable Pride, than uſually thoſe vain Pretenders to Revelations, the Quakers are, that are made Partakers of theſe Divine Dainties. Now ſuch an one was our Eliot; and for this, worthy to be had in Everlaſting Remembrance.

It would not be improper, under this File to lodge the ſingular and ſurprizing Succeſſes of his Prayers! For they were ſuch, that in our Diſtreſſes we ſtill repair'd unto him, under that Encouragement, He is a Prophet, and he ſhall pray for thee, and thou ſhalt live. I ſhall ſingle out but one, from the many that might be mentioned.

There was a Godly Gentleman of Charlſtown, one Mr. Foſter, who with his Son, was taken Captive by Turkiſh Enemies. Much Prayer was employed, both privately and publickly, by the good People here, for the Redemption of that Gentleman; but we were at laſt informed, that the Bloody Prince, in whoſe Dominions he was now a Slave, was reſolved that in his Life-time no Priſoner ſhould be relaſed; and ſo the Diſtreſſed Friends of this Priſoner now concluded, Our Hope is loſt! Well, upon this, Mr. Eliot, in ſome of his next Prayers, before a very ſolemn Congregation, very broadly beg'd, Heavenly Father, work for the Redemption of thy poor Servant Foſter; and if the Prince which detains him will not, as they ſay, diſmiſs him as long himſelf lives, Lord, we pray thee to kill that Cruel Prince; kill him, and glorify thy ſelf upon him. And now behold the Anſwer: The poor Captiv'd Gentleman quickly returns to us that had been mourning for him as a loſt Man, and brings us News, that the Prince which had hitherto held him, was come to an Untimely Death, by which means he was now ſet at Liberty.

PART II.

Or, ELIOT as a MINISTER.

ARTICLE I.

His Miniſterial Accompliſhments.

THE Grace of God, which we have ſeen ſo Illuſtriouſly Endowing and Adorning of our Eliot, as well qualify'd him for, as diſpos'd him to the Employment wherein he ſpent about Six Decads of his Years; which was, The Service of the Lord Jeſus Chriſt, in the Miniſtry of the Goſpel. This was the Work to which he apply'd himſelf; and he undertook it, I believe, with as Right Thoughts of it, and as Good Ends in it, as ever any Man in our Days was acted with. He look'd upon the Conduct of a Church, as a thing no leſs Dangerous than Im- portant, and attended with ſo many Difficulties, Temptations, and Humiliations, as that nothing but a Call from the Son of God, could have encouraged him unto the Suſception of it. He ſaw that Fleſh and Blood would find it no very pleaſant thing, to be oblig'd unto the Overſight of a Number, that by a ſolemn Covenant ſhould be liſted among the Voluntiers of the Lord Jeſus Chriſt; that it was no eaſy thing to feed the Souls of ſuch a People, and of the Children and the Neighbours, which were to be brought into the ſame Sheepſold with them; to bear their manners with all Patience, not being by any of their Infirmities diſcouraged from Teaching of them, and from Watching and Praying over them; to value them highly as the Flock which God has purchaſed with his own Blood, notwithſtanding all their Miſcarriages; and in all to examine the Rule of Scripture for the Warrant of whatever ſhall be done; and to remember the Day of Judgment, wherein an account muſt be given of all that has been done; having in the mean time no Expectation of the Riches and Grandeurs which accompany a worldly Domination. It was herewithal his Opinion, That (as the great Owen expreſſes it) notwithſtanding all the countenance that is given to any Church by the publick Magiſtracy, yet whilſt we are in this World, thoſe who will faithfully diſcharge their Duty, as Miniſters of the Goſpel, ſhall have need to be prepared for Sufferings; and it was in a ſenſe of theſe things that he gave himſelf up to the ſacred Miniſtry. A Stranger to Regeneration can be but poorly accompliſhed, for ſuch a Miniſtry; very truly ſays the Incomparable Alſted, Impii quidam Homines egregie videntur callere τὰ θεολογȣμενα, revera tamen illa Cognitio Rerum Theologicarum eſt ἀθεόλογος, quia fieri non poteſt ut Cognitio vere Theologica, habitet in Corde non Theologo: And however God may proſper the Sermons of ſuch a Man for the Advantage of his Church: However the Building of the Ark may be help'd on by ſuch Carpenters as periſh in the Flood; and the Tyrians may do ſome Work about the Temple, who arrive to no Worſhip in the Inner-Courts thereof, and as Auſtin expreſſed it, a Stone-Cutter may convey Water into a Garden, without having himſelf any advantage of it; Nevertheleſs, the Unſanctify'd Miniſter, how Gifted, how Able ſoever he may be, muſt have it ſtill ſaid unto him, Thou lackeſt one thing! And that One Thing our Eliot had. But the One Thing was not All! As indeed, it would not have been enough. God furniſhed him with a good meaſure of Learning too, which made him capable to divide the Word aright. He was a moſt Acute Grammarian; and underſtood very well, the Languages which God firſt wrote his Holy Bible in. He had a good Inſight into all the other Liberal Arts, and made little Syſtems of them, for the uſe of certain Indians, whoſe exacter Education he was deſirous of. But, above all, he had a moſt eminent Skill in Theology; and that which profane Scoffers reproached, as the Diſgrace of the Bleſſed Alting, all of whoſe Works always weigh down the pureſt Gold, was the Honour of our Eliot, namely to be Scripturarius Theologus, or One mighty in the Word; which enabled him to convince Gainſayers, and on many occaſions to ſhow himſelf, A Workman that needed not be aſhamed.

In ſhort, He came in ſome Degree, like another Bezaleel, or Aholiab, unto the Service of the Tabernacle. And from one Particularity in that part of his Learning, which lay in the Affairs of the Tabernacle, it was, that in a little Book of his we have thoſe Lines, which for a certain Cauſe I now tranſcribe; Oh that the Lord would put it (ſays he) into the Heart of ſome of his Religious and Learned Servants, to take ſuch pains about the Hebrew Language, as to fit it for univerſal Uſe! Conſidering, that above all Languages ſpoken by the Lip of Man it is moſt capable to be enlarged, and fitted to expreſs all things, and Motions, and Notions, that our Humane Intellect is capable of in this mortal Life; conſidering alſo, that it is the Invention of God himſelf; and what one is fitter to be the univerſal Language, than that which it pleaſed our Lord Jeſus to make uſe of, when he ſpake from Heaven unto Paul!

In fine, Tho' we have had Greater Scholars than he, yet he hath often made me think of Mr. Samuel Ward's Obſervation. In obſerving I have obſerved and found, that divers Great Clerks have had but little Fruit of their Miniſtry, but hardly any truly zealous Man of God (tho' of Leſſer Gifts) but have had much Comfort of their Labours in their own, and bordering Pariſhes; being in this likened by Gregory, to the Iron on the Smiths Anvil, ſparkling round about.

ARTICLE II.

His Family-Government.

THE Apoſtle Paul, reciting and requiring Qualifications of a Goſpel Miniſter, gives Order, that he be The Huſband of one Wife, and one that ruleth well his own Houſe, having his Children in ſubjection with all gravity. It ſeems, that a Man's Carriage in his own Houſe is a part, or at leaſt a ſign, of his due Deportment in the Houſe of God; and then, I am ſure, our Eliot's was very Exemplary. That one Wife which was given to him truly from the Lord, he loved, prized, cheriſhed, with a Kindneſs that notably repreſented the Compaſſion which he (thereby) taught his Church to expect from the Lord Jeſus Chriſt; and after he had lived with her for more than half an Hundred Years, he followed her to the Grave with Lamentations beyond thoſe, which the Jews from the figure of a Letter in the Text, affirm, that Abraham deplored his aged Sarah with; her Departure made a deeper Impreſſion upon him than what any common Affliction could. His whole Converſation with her, had that Sweetneſs, and that Gravity and Modeſty beautifying of it, that every one called them Zachary and Elizabeth. His Family was a little Bethel, for the Worſhip of God conſtantly and exactly maintained in it; and unto the daily Prayers of the Family, his manner was to prefix the Reading of the Scripture; which being done, 'twas alſo his manner to make his young People to chuſe a certain Paſſage in the Chapter, and give him ſome Obſervation of their own upon it. By this Method he did mightily ſharpen and improve, as well as try, their Underſtandings, and endeavour to make them wiſe unto Salvation. He was likewiſe very ſtrict in the Education of his Children, and more careful to mend any error in their Hearts and Lives, than he could have been to cure a Blemiſh in their Bodies. No Exorbitancies or Extravagancies could find a Room under his Roof, nor was his Houſe any other than a School of Piety; one might have there ſeen a perpetual mixture of a Spartan and a Chriſtian Diſciple. Whatever Decay there might be upon Family-Religion among us, as for our Eliot, we knew him, that he would command his Children, and his Houſhold after him, that they ſhould keep the Way of the Lord.

ARTICLE III.

His Way of Preaching.

SUch was he in his leſſer Family! And in his greater Family, he manifeſted ſtill more of his Regards to the Rule of a Goſpel-Miniſtry. To his Congregation, he was a Preacher that made it his Care, to give every one their Meat in due Seaſon. It was Food and not Froth; which in his publick Sermons, he entertained the Souls of his People with, he did not ſtarve them with empty and windy Speculations, or with ſuch things as Animum non dant, quia non habent; much leſs did he kill them with ſuch Poyſon as is too commonly expoſed by the Arminian and Socinian Doctors that have too often ſat in Moſes's Chair. His way of Preaching was very plain; ſo that the very Lambs might wade, into his Diſcourſes on thoſe Texts and Themes, wherein Elephants might ſwim; and herewithal, it was very powerful, his Delivery was always very graceful and grateful; but when he was to uſe reproofs and warnings againſt any Sin, his Voice would riſe into a Warmth which had in it very much of Energy as well as Decency; he would ſound the Trumpets of God againſt all Vice, with a moſt penetrating Livelineſs, and make his Pulpit another Mount Sinai, for the Flaſhes of Lightning therein diſplay'd againſt the Breaches of the Law given upon that Burning Mountain. And I obſerved, that there was uſually a ſpecial Fervour in the Rebukes which he beſtow'd upon Carnality, a carnal Frame and Life in Profeſſors of Religion; when he was to brand the Earthly-mindedneſs of Church-Members, and the Allowance and the Indulgence which they often gave unto themſelves in ſenſual Delights, here he was a right Boanerges; he then ſpoke, as 'twas ſaid one of the Ancients did, Quot verba tot Fulmina, as many Thunderbolts as Words.

It was another Property of his Preaching, that there was evermore much of CHRIST in it; and with Paul, he could ſay, I determined to know nothing but Jeſus Chriſt; having that Bleſſed Name in his Diſcourſes, with a Frequency like that, with which Paul mentions it in his Epiſtles. As 'twas noted of Dr. Bodly, that whatever Subject he were upon, in the Application ſtill his Uſe of it would be, to drive Men unto the Lord Jeſus Chriſt; in like manner, the Lord Jeſus Chriſt was the Loadſtone which gave a touch to all the Sermons of our Eliot; a Glorious, Precious, Lovely Chriſt was the Point of Heaven which they ſtill verged unto. From this Inclination it was, that altho' he Printed ſeveral Engliſh Books before he dy'd, yet his Heart ſeemed not ſo much in any of them, as in that ſerious and ſavoury Book of his, Entituled, The Harmony of the Goſpels, in the Holy Hiſtory of Jeſus Chriſt. From hence alſo 'twas, that he would give that Advice to young Preachers, Pray let there be much of Chriſt in your Miniſtry; and when he had heard a Sermon, which had any ſpecial Reliſh of a Bleſſed Jeſus in it, he would ſay thereupon, O bleſſed be God, that we have Chriſt ſo much and ſo well preached in poor New-England!

Moreover, he lik'd no Preaching, but what had been well ſtudied for; and he would very much commend a Sermon which he could perceive had required ſome good Thinking and Reading in the Author of it. I have been preſent, when he has unto a Preacher then juſt come home from the Aſſembly with him, thus expreſſed himſelf, Brother, there was Oyl required for the Service of the Sanctuary; but it muſt be beaten Oyl; I praiſe God, that I ſaw your Oyl ſo well beaten to day; the Lord help us always by good Study to beat our Oyl, that there may be no knots in our Sermons left undiſſolved, and that there may a clear light be thereby given in the Houſe of God! And yet he likewiſe look'd for ſomething in a Sermon beſide and beyond the meer Study of Man; he was for having the Spirit of God, breathing in it and with it; and he was for ſpeaking thoſe things, from thoſe Impreſſions and with thoſe Affections, which might compel the Hearer to ſay, The Spirit of God was here! I have heard him complain, It is a ſad thing, when a Sermon ſhall have that one thing, The Spirit of God wanting in it.

ARTICLE IV.

His Cares about the Children of his People.

BUT he remembred, that he had Lambs in his Flock, and like another David he could not endure to ſee the Lion ſeize upon any of them. He always had a mighty concern upon his Mind for little Children; 'twas an Affectionate Stroke in of the little Papers which he publiſhed for them, Sure Chriſt is not willing to loſe his Lambs; and I have cauſe to remember with what an hearty, fervent, zealous Application, he addreſs'd himſelf, when in the Name of the Neighbour Paſtors and Churches he gave me, The Right Hand of their Fellowſhip, at my Ordination, and ſaid, Brother, Art thou a Lover of the Lord Jeſus Chriſt? Then, I pray Feed his Lambs.

One thing whereof he was very deſirous for poor Children, was the Covenanting of them; he was very ſollicitous that the Lambs might paſs under the Lord's Tything Rod, and be brought under the Bond of the Covenant. He very openly and earneſtly maintained the cauſe of Infant-Baptiſm, againſt a ſort of Perſons riſen ſince the Reformation, (among which indeed there are many godly Men, that were dear to the Soul of our Eliot) who forget that in the Goſpel Church-ſtate as well as in the Jewiſh, The Promiſe is to Believers and their Children: And are unwilling to reckon Children among the Diſciples of Jeſus Chriſt: Or to grant, That of ſuch is the Kingdom of Heaven: Or to know, That the moſt undoubted Records of Antiquity affirm Infant-Baptiſm to have been an Uſage in all the Primitive Churches; That even before the early Days of Nazianzen, Chryſoſtom, Baſil, Athanaſius, Epiphanius, in the Greek, and Ambroſe, Jerom, Auſtin, in the Latin Church, all of which give Glorious Teſtimonies for Infant Baptiſm, even Cyprian, before theſe aſſures us, that in his Days there was no doubt of it; and Origen before him could ſay, 'Twas from the Apoſtles that the Church took up the Baptiſm of Infants; and Clemens Romanus before him could ſay, That Children ſhould be Recipients of the Diſcipline of Chriſt; beſides what plain Evidence we have in Irenæus and Juſtin Martyr; and that the very Arguments with which ſome of the Ancients did ſuperſtitiouſly adviſe the Delay of Baptiſm, do at the ſame time confeſs the Divine Right of Infants in it. Our Eliot could by no means look upon the Infants of Godly Men, as Unholy, and Unbelievers, and unfit Subjects to have upon them a Mark of Dedication to the Lord.

Wherefore, when there was brought among us a Book of Pious Mr. Norcot's, whereby ſome became diſpoſed to, or confirmed in, a Prejudice againſt Pædo Baptiſm, it was not long before Mr. Eliot publiſhed a little Anſwer thereunto; the firſt Lines whereof preſently diſcover what a Temper he writ it with; ſays he, The Book ſpeaks with the Voice of a Lamb, and I think the Author is a Godly, though Erring Brother; but he acts the Cauſe of a Roaring Lion, who by all crafty ways, ſeeketh to devour the poor Lambs of the Flock of Chriſt. And ſo he goes on to plead the Cauſe of them that cannot ſpeak for themſelves. No Man could entertain a Perſon of a different Perſwaſion from himſelf, with more Sweetneſs and Kindneſs than he, when he ſaw, Aliquid Chriſti, or the Fear of God prevailing in them; he could uphold a moſt intimate Correſpondence with ſuch a Man, as Mr. Jeſſey, as long as he lived; and yet he knew how to be an Hammer upon their unhappy Errors.

But having once Baptized the Children of his Neighbours, he did not as too many Miniſters do, think, that he had now done with them. No, another thing wherein he was very laborious for poor Children was, the Catechiſing of them; he kept up the great Ordinance of Catechiſing, both publickly and privately, and ſpent in it a World of time. About the end of the Second Century, before there had in the leaſt begun to ſtart up New Officers in the Church of God, we find there were Perſons called unto the Office of Publick Teaching, who were not Paſtors, not Rulers, not called unto the Adminiſtration of other Ordinances; thoſe in the Church of Alexandria, were of a ſpecial Remark and Renown for their Abilities this way; and their Employment was to Explain and Defend the Principles of the Chriſtian Religion, unto all with whom they could be concerned, Here was the Catechiſt, with reference unto whom the Apoſtle ſays, Let the Catechiſed communicate unto him in all good things, Now tho' ſome think, a Teacher purely as ſuch, hath no Right unto further Church Adminiſtrations, any more than the Rabbi's or Doctors among the Jews, had to Offer Sacrifices in the Temple; yet he who is called to be a Teacher, may at the ſame time alſo be called to be an Elder, and being now a Teaching Elder, he becomes intereſted in the whole Government of the Church, he has the Power of all Sacred Adminiſtrations. 'Tis the latter and more compleat and perfect Character, which the Churches of New-England have ſtill acknowledged in their Teachers; and ſuch a Teaching Elder did our Eliot remember himſelf to be. He thought himſelf under a particular Obligation to be that Officer, which the Apoſtle calls in 1 Cor. 4. 15. An Inſtructor of the Young; nor was he aſhamed, any more than ſome of the Worthieſt Men among the Ancients were, to be called, A Catechiſt. He would obſerve upon Joh. 21. 15. That the care of the Lambs, is one third part of the charge over the Church of God. It would be incredible if I ſhould relate what pains he took to keep up the Bleſſed Echo's of Truth, between himſelf and the young People of his Congregation; and what Prudence he uſed, in ſuiting of his Catechiſms to the Age and Strength of his little Catechumens. But one thing I muſt obſerve, which is, That altho' there may be (as one has computed) no leſs than five Hundred Catechiſms extant, yet Mr. Eliot gave himſelf the Travail of adding to their Number, by compoſing of ſome further Catechiſms, which were more particularly deſigned as an Antidote for his own People, againſt the Contagion of ſuch Errors as might threaten any peculiar Danger to them. And the Effect and Succeſs of this Catechiſing, bore Proportion to the indefatigable Induſtry with which he proſecuted it; it is a well principled People that he has left behind him. As when certain Jeſuits were ſent among the Waldenſes to corrupt their Children, they returned with much Diſappointment and Confuſion, becauſe the Children of ſeven Years old were well-principled enough to encounter the moſt Learned of them all; ſo, if any Seducers were let looſe to wolve it among the good People of Roxbury, I am confident, they would find as little Prey in that well inſtructed Place, as in any part of all the Country; no Civil Penalties would ſignify ſo much to ſave any People from the Snares of buſy Hereticks, as the unwearied Catechiſing of one Eliot has done to preſerve his People from the Gangren of ill Opinions.

There is a Third Inſtance of his Regards to the Welfare of the poor Children under his Charge; and that is, his perpetual Reſolution and Activity to ſupport a good School in the Town that belong'd unto him. A Grammar-School he would always have, upon the Place, whatever it coſt him; and he importun'd all other Places to have the like. I can't forget the Ardour with which I once heard him pray, in a Synod of theſe Churches, which met at Boſton to conſider, How the Miſcarriages which were among us might be prevented; I ſay, with what Fervour he uttered an Expreſſion to this purpoſe, Lord, for Schools every where among us! That our Schools may flouriſh! That every Member of this Aſſembly may go home and procure a good School to be encouraged in the Town where he lives! That before we die, we may be ſo happy as to ſee a good School encouraged in every Plantation of the Country. God ſo bleſſed his Endeavours, that Roxbury could not live quietly without a Free School in the Town; and the Iſſue of it has been one thing, which has made me almoſt put the Title of Schola Illuſtris upon that little Nurſery; that is, that Roxbury has afforded more Scholars, firſt for the College, and then for the Publick, than any Town of its Bigneſs, or if I miſtake not, of twice its Bigneſs in all New-England. From the Spring of the School at Roxbury, there have run a large Number of the Streams, which have made glad this whole City of God. I perſwade my ſelf, that the good People of Roxbury, will for ever ſcorn to begrutch the Coſt, or to permit the Death of a School which God has made ſuch an Honour to them; and this the rather, becauſe their Deceaſed Eliot has left them a fair part of his own Eſtate, for the maintaining of the School in Roxbury; and I hope, or at leaſt, I wiſh, that the Miniſters of New-England may be as ungainſayably importunate with their People, as Mr. Eliot was with his, for Schools which may ſeaſonably tinge the Young Souls of the Riſing Generation. A Want of Education for them, is the blackeſt and ſaddeſt of all the bad Omens that are upon us.

ARTICLE V.

His Church-Diſcipline.

IT yet more endears unto us the Memory of our Eliot, that he was not only an Evangelical Miniſter, but alſo a true New-Engliſh one; he was a Proteſtant, and a Puritan, and one very full of that Spirit which acted the firſt Planters of this Country, in their peaceable Succeſſion from the unwarrantable things elſewhere impos'd upon their Conſciences. The Judgment and Practice of one that readily underwent all the Miſery attending the Infancy of this Plantation, for the ſake of a true Church Order, is a thing which we young People ſhould count worthy to be enquired after; and ſince we ſaw him ſo well behaving himſelf in the Houſe of God, it cannot but be worth while to know what he thought about the Frame and Form, and Conſtitution of that Bleſſed Houſe.

He was a modeſt, humble, but very reaſonable Nonconformiſt unto the Ceremonies, which have been ſuch unhappy Apples of Strife in the Church of England; otherwiſe the diſmal Thickets of America, had never ſeen ſuch a Perſon in them.

It afflicted him to ſee theſe, and more ſuch as theſe, things continued in the Church of England, by the Artifice of certain Perſons who were loth to have the Reformation carried on unto thoſe further Degrees which the moſt Eminent of the firſt Reformers had in their Holy Deſigns.

We ſee what was not his Opinion! But let us hear what it was. It was his as well as his Maſter, the great Ramus's Principle, that in the Reformation of Churches, to be now endeavoured, things ought to be reduced unto the Order wherein we find them at their Primitive, Original, Apoſtolical Inſtitution. And in purſuance of this Principle, he juſtly eſpouſed that way of Church-Government, which we call the Congregational; he was fully perſwaded, that the Church-ſtate which our Lord Chriſt hath inſtituted in the New-Teſtament, is, In a Congregation or Society of Profeſſed Believers, Agreeing and Aſſembling together among themſelves, with Officers, of Divine Appointment, for the Celebration of Evangelical Ordinances, and their own mutual Edification; for he ſaw it muſt be a cruel Hardſhip uſed upon the Scriptures, to make them ſo much as liſp the leaſt Intimation of any other Church-ſtate preſcribed unto us; and he could aſſert, That no Approved Writers, for the Space of two Hundred Years after Chriſt, make any mention of any other Organical, Viſible, Profeſſing Church, but that onely which is Congregational. He look'd upon the Congregational way as a Largeſs of Divine Bounty beſtow'd by the Lord Jeſus Chriſt on his People, that followed him into this Wilderneſs, with a peculiar Zeal for Communion with him, in his pure Worſhip here. He perceived in it, a ſweet ſort of Temperament, between Rigid Presbyterianiſm, and Levelling Browniſm; ſo that on the one ſide, the Liberties of the People are not oppreſſed and overlaid; on the other ſide, the Authority of the Elders is not rendred inſignificant, but a due Ballance is herein kept upon them both; and hence he cloſed with our Platform of Church-Diſcipline, as being the neareſt of what he had yet ſeen, to the Directions of Heaven.

He could not comprehend, that this Church-ſtate can ariſe from any other Formal Cauſe, but the Conſent, Concurrence, Confederation of thoſe concerned in it; he looked upon a Relation unto a Church, as not a Natural, or a Violent, but a Voluntary thing, and ſo that it is to be entred no otherwiſe than by an Holy Covenant, or as the Scripture ſpeaks, by giving our ſelves firſt unto the Lord, and then one unto another. He could not think, that Baptiſm alone was to be accounted the Cauſe, but rather the Effect, of Church Member-ſhip; inaſmuch as upon the Diſſolution of the Church to which a Man belongs, his Baptiſm would not become a Nullity: Nor that meer Profeſſion would render Men Members of this or that Church; for then it would be impoſſible to cut off a corrupt Member from that Body Politic: Nor that meer Cohabitation would make Church-Members; for then the vileſt Infidels would be actually incorporated with us. And a Covenant, was all that he now ſaw remaining in the Inventory.

But for the Subjects to be admitted by Churches unto all the Privileges of this Fellowſhip with them he thought, they ought to be ſuch as a trying Charity, or a charitable Tryal, ſhould pronounce Regenerate. He found the firſt Churches of the Goſpel mentioned in the Scripture, to be Churches of Saints; and that the Apoſtles writing to them, ſtill acknowledge them to be Holy Brethren, and ſuch as were made meet for to be partakers of the Inheritance of the Saints in Light; and that a main end of Church fel- lowſhip, is to repreſent unto the World, the Qualifications of thoſe that ſhall Aſcend into the Hill of the Lord, and ſtand in his Holy Place for ever. He would therefore have Bona Mens, and Purum pectus, and Vita Innocens, required, as Lactantius tells us, they were in his Days, of all Communicants at the Table of the Lord: And with Holy Chryſoſtom, he would ſooner have given his Heart-blood, than the Cup of the Lord, unto ſuch as had not the hopeful Marks of our Lord's Diſciples on them. The Churches of New England ſtill retain a Cuſtom which the Great Juſtin Martyr, in the Second Century, aſſures us to have been in the Primitive Churches of his Time; namely, To Examine thoſe they Receive, not only about their Perſwaſion, but alſo whether they have attained unto a Work of Grace upon their Souls. In the Proſecution hereof, beſides the Enquiries of the Elders into the Knowledge, and Belief, and Converſation of them that offer themſelves unto Church-fellowſhip, it is expected, tho' I hope not with any Severity of Impoſition, that in the Addreſſes which they make to the Churches, they give Written, if not Oral Account, of what Impreſſions the Regenerating Word of God has had upon their Souls. This was a Cuſtom which this Holy Man had a marvellous Eſteem and Value for; and I have taken from his Mouth ſuch as theſe Expreſſions very publickly delivered thereabouts.

‘It is matter (ſaid he) of great Thankfulneſs, that we have Chriſt Confeſſed in our Churches, by ſuch as we receive to full Communion there. They open the Works of Chriſt in their Hearts, and the Relation thereof is an eminent Confeſſion of our Lord; experienced Saints can gather more than a little from it. It is indeed an Ordinance of wonderful Benefit; the Lord planted many Vineyards in the firſt Settlement of this Country, and there were many Noble Vines in them; it was their Heavenly mindedneſs which diſpos'd them to this Exerciſe, and by the upholding of it, the Churches are ſtill filled with Noble Vines; it mightily maintains Purity of Churches. 'Tis the Duty of every Chriſtian, With the Mouth Confeſſion is made unto Salvation. As among the Jews, uſually moſt Men did once in their Life, celebrate a Jubilee; thus, this Confeſſion of Chriſt, is methinks, a ſort of Jubilee; and every good Man among us, is at leaſt once in his Life call'd unto it. It is a thing that gives great Glory to the Lord Jeſus Chriſt; and younger Converts are thereby exceedingly edify'd; and the Souls of Devout Chriſtians are hereby very much ingratiated one unto another. The Devil knows what he does, when he thruſt ſo hard to get this Cuſtom out of our Churches. For my part, I would ſay in this Caſe, Get thee behind me Satan; thou giveſt an horrible Offence unto the Lord Jeſus Chriſt. Let us keep up this Ordinance with all Gentleneſs; and where we ſee the leaſt ſpark of Grace held forth, let us prize it more than all the Wit in the World.

There were eſpecially two things, which he was loth to ſee, and yet fear'd he ſaw, falling in the Churches of New-England. One was, A thorough Eſtabliſhment of Ruling Elders in our Churches; which he thought ſufficiently warranted by the Apoſtles mention of, Elders that rule well, who yet labour not in Word and Doctrine. He was very deſirous to have prudent and gracious Men ſet over our Churches, for the Aſſiſtance of their Paſtors, in the Church acts that concern the Admiſſion and Excluſion of Members, and the Inſpectien of the Converſation led by the Communicant, and the Inſtruction of their ſeveral Families, and the Viſitation of the Afflicted in their Flock, over which they ſhould preſide. Such Helps in Governments had he himſelf been bleſſed withal; the laſt of which was the well-deſerving Elder Bowles; and of him, did this good Man, in a Speech to a Synod of all the Churches in this Colony, take occaſion to ſay, There is my Brother Bowles, the godly Elder of our Church at Roxbury, God helps him to do great things among us! Had all our Paſtors been ſo well accommodated, it is poſſible there would be more Encouragement given to ſuch an Office as that of Ruling Elders.

But the mention of a Synod brings to mind another thing, which he was concerned, that we might never want; and that is, a frequent Repetition of Needful Synods in our Churches. For tho' he had a deep and a due Care to preſerve the Rights of particular Churches, yet he thought all the Churches of the Lord Jeſus by their Union in what they profeſs, in what they intend, and in what they enjoy, ſo compacted into one Body Myſtical, as that all the ſeveral particular Churches every where ſhould act with a regard unto the good of the whole, and unto the common Advice and Council of the Neighbourhood; which cannot be done always by Letters miſſive, like thoſe that paſſed between Corinth and Rome in the early days of Chriſtianity; but it requires a Convention of the Churches in Synods, by their Delegates and Meſſengers. He did not count Churches to be ſo Independent, as that they can always diſcharge their whole Duty, and yet not act in a Conjunction with Neighbour Churches; nor would he be of any Church that will not acknowledge it ſelf accountable to rightly compoſed Synods, which may have occaſion to enquire into the Circumſtances of it; he ſaw the main Intereſt and Buſineſs of Churches might quickly come to be utterly loſt, if Synods were not often called for the Repairing of Inconveniences, and he was much in contriving for the regular and repeated meeting of ſuch Aſſemblies.

He wiſh'd for Councils to ſuppreſs all damnable Hereſies, or pernicious Opinions, that might ever ariſe among us; for Councils to extinguiſh all dangerous Diviſions, and ſcandalous Contentions which might ever begin to flame in our Borders; for Councils to rectify all Male-Adminiſtrations in the midſt of us, or to Recover any particular Churches out of any Diſorders which they may be plung'd into:

For Councils to enquire into the Love, the Peace, the Holineſs maintained by the ſeveral Churches; in fine, for Councils to ſend forth fit Labourers into thoſe Parts of our Lord's Harveſt, which are without the Goſpel of God. He beheld an Apoſtolical Precept and Pattern for ſuch Councils; and when ſuch Councils convened in the Name of the Lord Jeſus Chriſt, by the conſent of ſeveral Chutches concerned in mutual Communion, have Declared, Explained, Recommended the Mind of God from his word unto us, he reckoned a Truth ſo delivered, challenged an Obſervation from the particular Churches, with a very great Authority.

He therefore Printed a little Book wearing this Title, The Divine Management of Goſpel-Churches by the Ordinance of Councils, conſtituted in order according to the Scriptures, which may be a means of uniting thoſe two holy and eminent Parties, the Presbyterians and the Congregational. It is a Remarkable Conceſſion made by the Incomparable Jurieu who is not reckoned a Congregational Man, in his Traite de L'Unite de L'Egliſe, That the Apoſtolical Churches lived not in any Confederation for mutual Dependence. The grand Equipage of Metropolitans, of Primates, of Exarchs, of Patriarchs, was yet unknown; nor does it any more appear to us, that the Churches then had their Provincial, National, and Oecumenical Synods; every Church was its own Miſtreſs, and independent on any other. But on the other ſide, our Eliot, who was no Presbyterian, conceived Synods to be the Inſtitutions of our Lord Jeſus Chriſt, the Apoſtolical Churches themſelves acknowledging a Stamp of Divine Right upon them.

Such as theſe were the Sentiments of our Eliot; and his deſerved Reputation in the Churches of New-England, is that which has cauſed me to foreſee ſome Advantage and Benefit ariſing unto the Concerns of the Goſpel, by ſo large a Recitation as I have now made thereof.

The Reader has now ſeen, An Able Miniſter of the New-Teſtament.

PART III.

Or, ELIOT as an EVANGELIST.

THE Titles of a Chriſtian and of a Miniſter, have rendred our Eliot conſiderable; but there is one memorable Title more, by which he has been ſignalized unto us. An Honourable Perſon did once in Print put the Name of an Evangeliſt upon him; whereupon in a Letter of his to that Perſon afterwards Printed, his Expreſſions were, 'There is a Redundancy, 'where you put the Title of Evangeliſt upon 'me; I beſeech you to ſuppreſs all ſuch things; 'let us do and ſpeak and carry all things with 'Humility; it is the Lord who hath done what 'is done; and it is moſt becoming the Spirit 'of Jeſus Chriſt to lift up him, and lay our 'ſelves low; I wiſh that Word could be obli'terated. My Reader ſees what a Caution Mr. Eliot long ſince entred againſt our giving him the Title of an Evangeliſt; but his Death has now made it ſafe, and his Life had long made it juſt, for us to acknowledge him with ſuch a Title. I know not whether that of an Evangeliſt, or one ſeparated for the Employment of Preaching the Goſpel in ſuch Places whereunto Churches have hitherto been gathered, be not an Office that ſhould be continued in our Days; but this I know, that our Eliot very notably did the Service and Buſineſs of ſuch an Officer.

Cambden could not reach the Heighth of his Conceit, who bore in his Shield a Salvage of America, with his Hand pointing to the Sun, and this Motto, Mihi Acceſſu, Tibi Receſſu. Reader, Prepare to behold this Device Illuſtrated!

¶ The Natives of the Country now Poſſeſſed by the New-Englanders, had been forlorn and wretched Heathen ever ſince their firſt herding here; and tho' we know not When or How thoſe Indians firſt became Inhabitants of this mighty Continent, yet we may gueſs that probably the Devil decoy'd thoſe miſerable Salvages hither, in hopes that the Goſpel of the Lord Jeſus Chriſt would never come here to deſtroy or diſturb his Abſolute Empire over them. But our Eliot was in ſuch ill Terms with the Devil, as to alarm him with ſounding the Silver Trumpets of Heaven in his Territories, and make ſome Noble and Zealous Attempts towards outing him of his Ancient Poſſeſſions here. There were, I think, Twenty ſeveral Nations (if I may call them ſo) of Indians upon that ſpot of Ground, which fell under the Influence of our Three United Colonies; and our Eliot was willing to reſcue as many of them as he could, from that old uſurping Landlord of America, who is by the Wrath of God, the Prince of this World.

I cannot find that any beſides the Holy Spirit of God, firſt moved him to the bleſſed Work of Evangelizing theſe periſhing Indians; 'twas that Holy Spirit which laid before his Mind the Idea of that which was on the Seal of the Maſſachuſet Colony; A poor Indian having a Label going from his Mouth, with a, COME OVER AND HELP US. It was the Spirit of our Lord Jeſus Chriſt, which enkindled in him a Pitty for the dark Souls of theſe Natives, whom the God of this World had blinded, through all the By-paſt Ages. He was none of thoſe that make, The Salvation of the Heathen, an Article of their Creed; but (ſetting aſide the unrevealed and extraordinary Steps which the Holy one of Iſrael may take out of his uſual Paths) he thought men to be loſt if our Goſpel be hidden from them; and he was of the ſame Opinion with one of the Ancients, who ſaid, Some have endeavoured to prove Plato a Chriſtian, till they prove themſelves little better than Heathens. It is indeed a Principle in the Turkiſh Alcoran, That Let a Man's Religion be what it will, he ſhall be ſaved, if he conſcientiouſly live up to the Rules of it: But our Eliot was no Mahometan. He could moſt heartily ſubſcribe to that Paſſage in the Articles of the Church of England. ‘They are to be held accurſed, who preſume to ſay, that every Man ſhall be ſaved by the Law or Sect which he profeſſeth, ſo that he be diligent to frame his Life according to that Law, and Light of Nature; for Holy Scripture doth ſet out unto us, only the Name of Jeſus Chriſt, whereby Men muſt be ſaved. And it aſtoniſhed him to ſee many diſſembling Subſcribers of thoſe Articles, while they have grown up to ſuch a Phrenſy, as to deny peremptorily all Church-ſtate, and all Salvation to all that are not under Dioceſan Biſhops, yet at the ſame time to grant that the Heathen might be ſaved without the Knowledge of the Lord Jeſus Chriſt.

But when this Charitable Pitty had once begun to flame, there was a Concurrence of many things to caſt Oyl into it. All the good Men in the Country were glad of his Engagement in ſuch an Undertaking; the Miniſters eſpecially encouraged him, and thoſe in the Neighbourhood kindly ſupply'd his place, and perform'd his Work in part, for him at Roxbury, while he was Abroad labouring among them that were without. Hereunto, he was further awakened by thoſe Expreſſions in the Royal Charter, in the Aſſurance and Protection whereof this Wilderneſs was firſt Peopled; namely, To win and incite the Natives of that Country to the Knowledge and Obedience of the only true God and Saviour of Mankind, and the Chriſtian Faith, in our Royal Intention, and the Adventurers free Profeſſion is the principal end of the Plantation. And the Remarkable Zeal of the Romiſh Miſſionaries compaſſing Sea and Land, that they might make Proſelytes, made his Devout Soul think of it with a further Diſdain, that we ſhould come any whit behind in our Care to Evangelize the Indians, whom we dwelt among. Laſtly, when he had well begun this Evangelical Buſineſs, the good God, in an Anſwer to his Prayers, mercifully ſtirred up a liberal Contribution among the Godly People in England for the promoting of it; by means whereof, a conſiderable Eſtate and Income was at length entruſted in the hands of an Honourable Corporation, by whom 'tis to this Day very carefully employ'd in the Chriſtian Service, which it was deſigned for. And then, in ſhort, inaſmuch as our Lord Jeſus had beſtow'd on us, our Eliot was gratefully and generouſly deſirous to obtain for him, The Heathen for an Inheritance, and the utmoſt parts of the Earth for a Poſſeſſion.

The exemplary Charity of this excellent Perſon in this important Affair, will not be ſeen in its due Luſtres, unleſs we make ſome Reflections upon ſeveral Circumſtances which he beheld theſe forlorn Indians in. Know then, that theſe doleful Creatures are the varieſt Ruines of Mankind, which are to be found any where upon the Face of the Earth. No ſuch Eſtates are to be expected among them, as have been the Baits which the pretended Converters in other Countries have ſnapped at. One might ſee among them, what an hard Maſter the Devil is, to the moſt devoted of his Vaſſals! Theſe abject Creatures, live in a Country full of Mines; we have already made entrance upon our Iron; and in the very Surface of the Ground among us, 'tis thought there lies Copper enough to ſupply all this World; beſides other Mines hereafter to be expoſed; but our ſhiftleſs Indians were never Owners of ſo much as a Knife, till we come among them; their Name for an Engliſh-man was a Knife-man; Stone was inſtead of Metal for their Tools; and for their Coins, they have only little Beads with Holes in them to ſtring them upon a Bracelet, whereof ſome are white; and of theſe there go ſix for a Penny; ſome are black or blew; and of theſe, go three for a Penny; this Wampam, as they call it, is made of the Shell-fiſh, which lies upon the Sea Coaſt continually.

The live in a Country, where we now have all the Conveniencies of human Life: But as for them, their houſing is nothing but a few Mats ty'd about Poles faſtened in the Earth, where a good Fire is their Bed Clothes in the coldeſt Seaſons; their Clothing is but a Skin of a Beaſt, covering their Hind-parts, their Fore-parts having but a little Apron, where Nature calls for Secrecy; their Diet has not a greater Dainty than their Nokehick, that is a ſpoonful of their parch'd meal, with a ſpoonful of Water, which will ſtrengthen them to travel a Day together; except we ſhould mention the Fleſh of Deers, Bears, Moſe, Rackoons, and the like, which they have when they can catch them; as alſo a little Fiſh, which if they would preſerve, 'twas by drying, not by ſalting; for they had not a grain of Salt in the World, I think, till we beſtow'd it on them. Their Phyſick is, excepting a few odd Specificks, which ſome of them Encounter certain Caſes with, nothing hardly, but an Hot-Houſe, or a Powaw; their Hot-Houſe is a little Cave about eight foot over, where after they have terribly heated it, a Crew of them go ſit and ſweat and ſmoke for an Hour together, and then immediately run into ſome very cold adjacent Brook, without the leaſt Miſchief to them; 'tis this way they recover themſelves from ſome Diſeaſes, particularly from the French; but in moſt of their dangerous Diſtempers, 'tis a Powaw that muſt be ſent for; that is, a Prieſt, who has more Familiarity with Satan than his Neighbours; this Conjurer comes and Roars, and Howls, and uſes Magical Ceremonies over the Sick Man, and will be well paid for it, when he has done; if this don't effect the Cure, the Man's Time is come, and there's an end.

They live in a Country full of the beſt Ship-Timber under Heaven: But never ſaw a Ship, till ſome came from Europe hither; and then they were ſcar'd out of their Wits, to ſee the Monſter come ſailing in, and ſpitting Fire with a mighty noiſe, out of her floating ſide; they croſs the Water in Canoo's, made ſometimes of Trees, which they burn and hew, till they have hollow'd them; and ſometimes of Barks, which they ſtitch into a light ſort of a Veſſel, to be eaſily carried over Land; if they over-ſet, it is but a little paddling like a Dog, and they are ſoon where they were.

Their way of living, is infinitely Barbarous: The Men are moſt abominably ſlothful; making their poor Squaws, or Wives, to plant and dreſs, and barn, and beat their Corn, and build their Wigwams for them; which perhaps may be the reaſon of their extraordinary Eaſe in Childbirth. In the mean time, their chief Employment, when they'll condeſcend unto any, is that of Hunting; wherein they'll go out ſome ſcores, if not Hundreds of them in a Company, driving all before them.

They continue in a Place, till they have burnt up all the Wood thereabouts, and then they pluck up Stakes; to follow the Wood, which they cannot fetch home unto themſelves; hence when they enquire about the Engliſh, Why come they hither! They have themſelves very Learnedly determined the Caſe, 'Twas becauſe we wanted Firing. No Arts are underſtood among them, unleſs juſt ſo far as to maintain their Brutiſh Converſation, which is little more than is to be found among the very Bevers upon our Streams.

Their Diviſion of Time is by Sleeps, and Moons, and Winters; and by lodging abroad, they have ſomewhat obſerved the Motions of the Stars; among which it has been ſurpriſing unto me to find, that they have always call'd Charles's Wain by the Name of Paukunnawaw, or The Bear, which is the Name whereby Europeans alſo have diſtinguiſhed it. Moreover, they have little, if any Traditions among them worthy of our Notice; and Reading and Writing is altogether unknown to them, tho' there is a Rock or two in the Country that has unaccountable Characters Engrav'd upon it. All the Religion they have amounts unto thus much; they believe, that there are many Gods, who made and own the ſeveral Nations of the World; of which a certain Great God in the South-Weſt Regions of Heaven bears the greateſt Figure. They believe, that every remarkable Creature has a peculiar God within it, or about it: There is with them, a Sun God, a Moon God, and the like; and they cannot conceive but that the Fire muſt be a kind of a God, inaſmuch as a Spark of it will ſoon produce very ſtrange effects. They believe that when any Good or Ill happens to them, there is the Favour or the Anger of a God expreſſed in it; and hence as in a Time of Calamity, they keep a Dance, or a Day of extravagant ridiculous Devotions to their God, ſo in a Time of Proſperity they likewiſe have a Feaſt, wherein they alſo make Preſents one unto another. Finally, they believe, that their chief God Kautantowit, made a Man and Woman of a Stone; which, upon Diſlike, he broke to pieces, and made another Man and Woman of a Tree, which were the Fountains of all Mankind; and that we all have in us Immortal Souls, which if we were godly, ſhall go to a ſplendid Entertainment with Kautantowit, but otherwiſe muſt wander about in a reſtleſs Horror for ever. But if you ſay to them any thing of a Reſurrection, they will reply upon you, I ſhall never believe it! And when they have any weighty Undertaking before them, 'tis an uſual thing for them to have their Aſſemblies, wherein after the uſage of ſome Diabolical Rites, a Devil appears unto them, to inform them and adviſe them about their Circumſtances; and ſometimes there are odd Events of their making theſe Applications to the Devil. For inſtance, 'tis particularly affirmed, That the Indians in their Wars with us, finding a ſore Inconvenience by our Dogs, which would make a ſad yelling if in the Night they ſcented the Approaches of them, they ſacrificed a Dog to the Devil; after which no Engliſh Dog would bark at an Indian for divers Months enſuing. This was the miſerable People, which our Eliot propounded unto himſelf, to teach and ſave! And he had a double Work incumbent on him; he was to make Men of them, e'er he could hope to ſee them Saints; they muſt be civilized e'er they could be Chriſtianized; he could not, as Gregory once of our Nation, ſee any thing Angelical to beſpeak his Labours for their Eternal Welfare, all among them was Diabolical. To think on raiſing a Number of theſe hideous Creatures, unto the Elevations of our Holy Religion, muſt argue more than common or little Sentiments in the Undertaker; but the Faith of an Eliot could encounter it!

I confeſs, that was one, I cannot call it ſo much gueſs as wiſh, wherein he was willing a little to indulge himſelf; and that was, That our Indians are the Poſterity of the diſperſed and rejected Iſraelites, concerning whom our God has promiſed that they ſhall yet be ſaved, by the Deliverer coming to turn away Ungodlineſs from them. He ſaw the Indians uſing many Parables in their Diſcourſes; much given to anointing of their Heads; much delighted in Dancing, eſpecially after Victories, computing their Times by Nights and Months; giving Dowries for Wives, and cauſing their Women to dwell by themſelves, at certain Seaſons, for ſecret Cauſes; and accuſtoming themſelves to grievous Mournings and Yellings for the Dead; all which were uſual things among the Iſraelites. They have too a great unkindneſs for our Swine; but I ſuppoſe that is becauſe our Hogs devour the Clams which are a Dainty with them. He alſo ſaw ſome learned Men, looking for the loſt Iſraelites among the Indians in America, and counting that they had thorow good Reaſons for doing ſo. And a few ſmall Arguments, or indeed but Conjectures, meeting with a favourable Diſpoſition in the Hearer, will carry ſome Conviction with them; eſpecially, if a Report of a Menaſſeh ben Iſrael be to back them. He ſaw likewiſe the Judgments threatned unto the Iſraelites of old, ſtrangely fulfilled upon our Indians; particularly that Ye ſhall eat the fleſh of your ſons, which is done with exquite Cruelties upon the Priſoners that they take from one another in their Battels. Moreover, 'tis a Propheſy in Deut. 28. 68. The Lord ſhall bring thee into Egypt again with Ships, by the way whereof I ſpake unto thee, Thou ſhalt ſee it no more again; and there ſhall ye be ſold unto your Enemies, and no Man ſhall buy you. This did our Eliot imagine accompliſhed, when the Captives taken by us in our late Wars upon them, were ſent to be ſold, in the Coaſts lying not very remote from Egypt on the Mediterranean Sea, and ſcarce any Chapmen would offer to take them off. Being upon ſuch as theſe accounts not unwilling, if it were poſſible, to have the Indians found Iſraelites, they were, you may be ſure, not a whit the leſs Beloved for their (ſuppoſed) Fathers ſake; and the Fatigues of his Travails went on the more chearfully, or at leaſt, the more hopefully, becauſe of ſuch Poſſibilities.

The Firſt Step which he judg'd neceſſary now to be taken by him, was to learn the Indian Language; for he ſaw them ſo ſtupid and ſenſeleſs, that they would never do ſo much as enquire after the Religion of the Strangers now come into their Country, much leſs would they ſo far imitate us, as to leave off their beaſtly way of living, that they might be Partakers of any Spiritual Advantage by us: Unleſs we could firſt addreſs them in a Language of their own. Behold, new Difficulties to be ſurmounted by our indefatigable Eliot! He hires a Native to teach him this exotick Language, and with a laborious Care and Skill, reduces it into a Grammar which afterwards he publiſhed. There is a Letter or two of our Alphabet, which the Indians never had in theirs; tho' there were enough of the Dog in their Temper, there can ſcarce be found an R in their Language; (any more than in the Language of the Chineſe, or of the Greenlanders) ſave that the Indians to the Northward, who have a peculiar Dialect, pronounce an R where an N is pronounced by our Indians; but if their Alphabat be ſhort, I am ſure the Words compoſed of it are long enough to tire the Patience of any Scholar in the World; they are Seſquipedalia Verba, of which their Linguo is compoſed; one would think, they had been growing ever ſince Babel, unto the Dimenſions to which they are now extended. For inſtance, if my Reader will count how many Letters there are in this one Word, Nummatchekodtantamooonganunnonaſh, when he has done, for his Reward I'll tell him, it ſignifies no more in Engliſh, than our Luſts, and if I were to tranſlate, our Loves; it muſt be nothing ſhorter than Noowomantammooonkanunonnaſh. Or, to give my Reader a longer Word than either of theſe, Kummogkodonattoottummooetiteaongannunnonaſh, is in Engliſh, Our Queſtion: But I pray, Sir, count the Letters! Nor do we find in all this Language the leaſt Affinity to, or Derivation from any European Speech that we are acquainted with. I know not what Thoughts it will produce in my Reader, when I inform him, that once finding that the Dæmons in a poſſeſſed young Woman, underſtood the Latin and Greek and Hebrew Languages, my Curioſity led me to make Trial of this Indian Language, and the Dæmons did ſeem as if they did not underſtand it. This tedious Language our Eliot (the Anagram of whoſe Name was TOILE) quickly became a Maſter of; he employ'd a pregnant and witty Indian, who alſo ſpoke Engliſh well, for his Aſſiſtance in it; and compiling ſome Diſcourſes by his Help, he would ſingle out a Word, a Noun, a Verb, and purſue it through all its Variations: Having finiſhed his Grammar, at the cloſe he writes, Prayers and Pains thro' Faith in Chriſt Jeſus will do any thing! And being by his Prayers and Pains thus furniſhed, he ſet himſelf in the Year 1646. to preach the Goſpel of our Lord Jeſus Chriſt, among theſe Deſolate Outcaſts.

¶ It remains, That I lay before the World, the Remarkable Conduct and Succeſs of this Famous Man, in his great Affair; and I ſhall endeavour to do it, by Engliſhing and Reprinting a Letter, ſent a while ſince by my Father, unto his Learned and Renowned correſpondent, the Venerable Dr. Leuſden at Utrecht: Which Letter has already been publiſhed, if I miſtake not, in Four or Five divers Languages. I find it particularly publiſhed by the moſt Excellent Jurieu, at the end of a Paſtoral Letter; and this Reflection then worthily made upon it, Cette Lettre doit opporter une tres grande Conſolation, a toutes les bonnes ames, qui ſont alterees de Juſtice, & qui ſont enflammees du zele de la gloire de Dieu. I therefore perſwade my ſelf that the Republication of it will not be ungrateful unto many good Souls in our Nation, who have a due Thirſt and Zeal for ſuch things as are mention'd in it; and when that is done, I ſhall preſume to make ſome Annotations for the Illuſtration of ſundry memorable things therein Pointed at.

Written by Mr. Increaſe Mather, Miniſter of the Word of God at Boſton, and Rector of the College at Cambridge in New-England, to Dr. John Leuſden, Hebrew Profeſſor in the Univerſity of Utrecht.

Tranſlated out of Latin into Engliſh.

Worthy and much Honoured Sir,

Y*OUR Letters were very Grateful to me,* (a) by which I underſtand that you and others in your Famous Univerſity of Utrecht deſire to be informed concerning the converted Indians in America: Take therefore a true Account of them in a few Words.

It is above Forty Years ſince that truly Godly Man, Mr. John Eliot, Paſtor of the Church at Rocksborough, (about a Mile from Boſton in New-England*) being warmed with a Holy Zeal of Converting the* Americans, ſet himſelf to learn the Indian Tongue, that he might more eaſily and ſucceſsfully (b) open to them the Myſteries of the Goſpel, upon account of which he has been (and not undeſervedly) called, The Apoſtle of the American Indians. This Reverend Perſon, not without very great Labour, Tranſlated the whole Bible into the Indian Tongue; (c) he Tranſlated alſo ſeveral Engliſh Treatiſes of Practical Divinity and Catechiſms into their Language. Above 26 Years ago he gathered a Church of Converted Indians in a Town called (d) Natick; theſe Indians confeſſed their Sins with Tears, and profeſſed their Faith in Chriſt, and afterwards they and their Children were Baptized, and they were ſolemnly joined together in a Church-Covenant; the ſaid Mr. Eliot was the firſt that Adminiſtred the Lord's Supper to them. The Paſtor of that Church now is an Indian, his Name is Daniel. Beſides this Church at Natick, among our Inhabitants in the Maſſachuſets Colony there are Four Indian Aſſemblies, (e) where the Name of the true God and Jeſus Chriſt is ſolemnly called upon; theſe Aſſemblies have ſome American Preachers, Mr. Eliot formerly uſed to Preach to them once every Fortnight, but now he is weakned with Labours and Old-Age, being in the Eighty Fourth Year of his Age, and Preacheth not to the Indians oftner than once in two Months.

There is another Church, conſiſting only of Converted Indians, about fifty Miles from hence in an Indian Town called Maſhippaug: The firſt Paſtor of that Church was an Engliſh Man, who being ſkilful in the American Language, Preached the Goſpel to them in their own Tongue. (f) This Engliſh Paſtor is Dead, and inſtead of him, that Church has an Indian Preacher.

There are beſides that, five Aſſemblies of Indians profeſſing the Name of Chriſt, not far diſtant from Maſhippaug, which have Indian Preachers: (g) John Cotton, Paſtor of the Church at Plymouth (Son of my Venerable Father-in-Law John Cotton, formerly the Famous Teacher of the Church at Boſton*) both made very great Progreſs in Learning the* Indian Tongue, and is very skilful in it; he Preaches in their own Language to the laſt five mentioned Congregations every Week. Moreover of the Inhabitants of Saconet in Plymouth Colony, there is a great Congregation of thoſe who for Diſtinction ſake are called Praying-Indians, becauſe they pray to God in Chriſt.

Not far from a Promontory called Cape Cod, there are ſix Aſſemblies of Heathens who are to be reckoned as Catechumens, amongſt whom there are ſix Indian Preachers: Samuel Treat, Paſtor of a Church at Eaſtham, Preacheth to thoſe Congregations in their own Language. There are likewiſe amongſt the Iſlanders of Nantacket a Church, with a Paſtor who was lately a Heathen, and ſeveral Meetings of Catechumens, who are inſtructed by the Converted Indians. There is alſo another Iſland about ſeven Leagues long (called Martha's Vineyard*) where are two* American Churches planted, which are more Famous than the reſt, over one of which there preſides an ancient Indian as Paſtor, called Hiacooms: John Hiacooms, Son of the Indian Paſtor, alſo Preacheth the Goſpel to his Countrymen. In another Church in that Place, John Tockinoſh, a Converted Indian, teaches. In theſe Churches Ruling Elders of the Indians are joined to the Paſtors: The Paſtors were choſen by the People, and when they had faſted and prayed, Mr. Eliot and Mr. Cotton laid their Hands on them, ſo that they were ſolemnly ordained. All the Congregations (h) of the Converted Indians (both the Catechumens and thoſe in Church Order) every Lord's Day meet together; the Paſtor or Preacher always begins with Prayer, and without a Form, becauſe from the Heart; when the Ruler of the Aſſembly has ended Prayer,

Prayer, the whole Congragation of Indians praiſe God with ſinging; ſome of them are excellent Singers: Aſter the Pſalm, he that preaches reads a Place of Scripture (one or more Verſes as he will) and expounds it, gathers Doctrines from it, proves them by Scriptures and Reaſons, and infers Uſes from them after the manner of the Engliſh, of whom they have been taught; then another Prayer to God in the Name of Chriſt concludes the whole Service. Thus do they meet together twice every Lord's Day. They obſerve no Holy-days but the Lord's Day, except upon ſome extraordinary Occaſion; and then they ſolemnly ſet apart whole Days, either in giving Thanks or Faſting and Praying with great Fervour of Mind.

Before the Engliſh came into theſe Coaſts theſe Barbarous Nations were altogether ignorant of the true God; hence it is that in their Prayers and Sermons they uſe Engliſh Words and Terms; he that calls upon the moſt Holy Name of God, ſays, Jehovah, or God, or Lord, and alſo they have learned and borrowed many other Theological Phraſes from us.

In ſhort, 'There are ſix Churches of Baptized Indians in New-England, and Eighteen Aſſemblies of Catechumens, profeſſing the Name of Chriſt: Of the Indians there are four and Twenty who are Preachers of the Word of God, and beſides theſe there are four Engliſh Miniſters, who preach the Goſpel in the Indian Tongue. (i) I am now my ſelf weary with writing, and I fear leſt if I ſhould add more, I ſhould alſo be tedious to you; yet one thing I muſt add (which I had almoſt forgot) that there are many of the Indians Children, who have learned by Heart the Catechiſm, either of that Famous Divine William Perkins, or that put forth by the Aſſembly of Divines at Weſtminſter, and in their own Mother Tongue can anſwer to all the Queſtions in it.

But I muſt end, I ſalute the Famous Profeſſors in your Univerſity, to whom I deſire you to communicate this Letter, as written to them alſo.

Farewel, Worthy Sir; the Lord preſerve your Health for the Benefit of your Country, his Church, and of Learning.

Yours ever,

INCREASE MATHER.

(a) The Succeſs of the Goſpel in the Eaſt-Indies.

AFter the Writing of this Letter, there came one to my Hands from the Famous Dr. Leuſden, together with a New and Fair Edidition of his Hebrew Pſalter, Dedicated unto the Name of my Abſent Parent. He therein informs me, That our Example had awakened the Dutch to make ſome Noble Attempts for the Furtherance of the Goſpel in the Eaſt-Indies; beſides what memorable things were done by the Excellent Robert Junius, in Formoſa fifty Years ago.

He alſo informs me, That in and near the Iſland of Ceylon, the Dutch Paſtors have Baptized about Three Hundred Thouſand of the Eaſtern Indians; for altho' the Miniſters are utterly ignorant of their Language, yet there are School-Maſters who teach them, The Lord's Prayer, the Creed, the Ten Commandments, a Morning Prayer, an Evening Prayer, a Bleſſing before Meat, and another after; and the Miniſter in his Viſits being aſſured by the Maſter, who of them has learned all of them ſeven things, he thereupon counts they have ſuch a perfect Number of Attainments that he preſently Baptizes them.

The Pious Reader will doubtleſs, bleſs God for this; but he will eaſily ſee that one of our Converted Indians has coſt more Pains than many of thoſe; more thorough Work has been made with them.

(b) Mr. Eliot's Way of Opening the Myſteries of the Goſpel, to our Indians.

'TWas in the Year 1646, that Mr. Eliot, accompany'd by three more, gave a Viſit unto an Aſſembly of Indians, of whom he deſired a Meeting at ſuch a Time and Place, that he might lay before them the Things of their Eternal Peace. After a ſerious Prayer, he gave them a Sermon which continued about a Quarter above an Hour, and contained the principal Articles of the Chriſtian Religion, applying all to the Condition of the Indians preſent. Having done, he asked of them, Whether they underſtood? And with a General Reply they anſwered, They underſtood all. He then began what was his uſual Method afterwards in treating with them; that is, he cauſed them to propound ſuch Queſtions as they pleas'd unto himſelf; and he gave wiſe and good Anſwers to them all. Their Queſtions would often, tho' not always, refer to what he had newly preached; and he this way not only made a Proof of their profiting by his Miniſtry, but alſo gave an Edge to what he delivered unto them. Some of their Queſtions would be a little Philoſophical, and required a good Meaſure of Learning in the Miniſter concerned with them; but for this our Eliot wanted not. He would alſo put proper Queſtions unto them, and at one of his firſt Exerciſes with them, he made the Young Ones capable of regarding thoſe three Queſtions,

Q. 1. Who made you and all the World?

Q. 2. Who do you look ſhould ſave you from Sin and Hell?

Q. 3. How many Commandments has the Lord given you to keep?

It was his Wiſdom that he began with them upon ſuch Principles as they themſelves had already ſome Notions of; ſuch as that of an Heaven for good, and Hell for bad People, when they dy'd. It broke his gracious Heart within him to ſee, what Floods of Tears fell from the Eyes of ſeveral among thoſe degenerate Salvages, at the firſt Addreſſes which he made unto them; yea, from the very worſt of them all. He was very inquiſitive to learn who were the Powawes, that is, the Sorcerers, and Seducers, that maintained the Worſhip of the Devil in any of their Societies; and having in one of his firſt Journeys to them, found out one of thoſe Wretches, he made the Indian come unto him, and ſaid, Whether do you ſuppoſe God, or Chepian (i. e. the Devil) to be the Author of all Good? The Conjurer anſwered, God. Upon this he added with a ſtern Countenance, Why do you pray to Chepian then? And the poor Man was not able to ſtand or ſpeak before him; but at laſt made Promiſes of Reformation.

The Text which he firſt preach'd upon, was that in Ezek. 37. 9, 10. That by Propheſying to the Wind, the Wind came, and the dry Bones lived: And it was an Obſervation made by one, who then juſtly confeſſed, there was not much weight in it; that the Word which the Indians uſe for Wind is Wauban, and an Indian of that Name was one of the firſt that here zealouſly promoted the Converſion of his Neighbours. But having thus entred upon the Teaching of theſe poor Creatures, 'tis incredible how much Time, Toil, and Hardſhip, he underwent in the Proſecution of this Undertaking; how many weary Days and Nights rolled over him; how many tireſome Journeys he endured; and how many terrible Dangers he had experience of. If you briefly would know what he felt, and what carried him through all, take it in his own words in a Letter to the Honourable Mr. Winſlow, ſays he, I have not been dry Night nor Day, from the third Day of the Week unto the ſixth, but ſo travelled, and at Night pull off my Boots, wring my Stockings, and on with them again, and ſo continue. But God ſteps in and helps. I have conſidered the Word of God in 2 Tim. 2. 3. Endure Hardſhip as a good Soldier of Chriſt.

(c) His Tranſlating the Bible, and other Books of Piety, into the Indian Tongue.

ONE of his remarkable Cares for theſe illiterate Indians, was to bring them into the uſe of Schools and Books. He quickly procured the benefit of Schools for them; wherein they profited ſo much, that not only very many of them quickly came to Read and Write; but alſo ſeveral arrived unto a Liberal Education in our Colledge, and one or two of them took their Degree with the reſt of our Graduates. And for Books, 'twas his chief Deſire that the Sacred Scriptures might not in an unknown Tongue be locked or hidden from them; very hateful and helliſh did the Policy of Popery appear to him on this Account: Our Eliot was very unlike to that Franciſcan, who writing into Europe, gloried much how many Thouſands of Indians he had converted; but added, That he deſired his Friends would ſend him the Book called the Bible; for he had heard of there being ſuch a Book in Europe, which might be of ſome uſe to him. No, our Eliot found he could not live without a Bible himſelf; he would have parted with all his Eſtate, ſooner than have loſt a Leaf of it; and he knew it would be of more than ſome uſe unto the Indians too; he therefore with a vaſt Labour tranſlated the Holy Bible into the Indian Language. Behold, ye Americans, the greateſt Honour that ever you were Partakers of! This Bible was Printed here at our Cambridge; and it is the only Bible that ever was Printed in all America, from the very Foundation of the World. The whole Tranſlation he writ with but one Pen; which Pen, had it not been loſt, would have certainly deſerved a richer Caſe than was beſtow'd upon that Pen, with which Holland writ his Tranſlation of Plutarch. The Bible being juſtly made the Leader of all the reſt, a little Indian Library quickly followed: For beſides Primers, and Grammars, and ſome other ſuch Compoſures, we quickly had The Practice of Piety in the Indian Tongue, and the Reverend Richard Baxter's Call to the Unconverted. He alſo tranſlated ſome of Mr. Shepherd's Compoſures; and ſuch Catechiſms likewiſe as there was occaſion for. It cannot but be hoped that ſome Fiſh were to be made alive, ſince the Waters of the Sanctuary thus came unto them.

(d) His Gathering of a Church at Natick.

THE Indians that had felt the Impreſſions of his Miniſtry, were quickly diſtinguiſhed by the Name of Praying Indians; and theſe Praying Indians as quickly were for a more Decent and Engliſh-way of Living, and they deſired a more fixed Cohabitation. At ſeveral Places did they now combine and ſettle; but the Place of greateſt Name among their Towns, is that of Natick.

Here 'twas, that in the Year 1651. thoſe that had heretofore lived like the wild Beaſts in the Wilderneſs, now compacted themſelves into a Town; and they firſt apply'd themſelves to the forming of their Civil Government. Our General Court, notwithſtanding their exact Study to keep theſe Indians very ſenſible of their being ſubject unto the Engliſh Empire, yet had allowed them their ſmaller Courts, wherein they might govern their own ſmaller Caſes and Concerns, after their own particular Modes, and might have their Town-Orders, if I may call them ſo, peculiar to themſelves. With reſpect hereunto, Mr. Eliot on a Solemn Faſt, made a Publick Vow, That ſeeing theſe Indians were not prepoſſeſſed with any Formr of Government, he would inſtruct them into ſuch a Form, as we had written in the Word of God, that ſo they might be a People in all things ruled by the Lord. Accordingly he Expounded unto them the Eighteenth Chapter of Exodus; and then they choſe Rulers of Hundreds, of Fifties, of Tens; and therewithal entred into this Covenant.

> 'We are the Sons of Adam; We and our Forefathers have a long time been loſt in our Sins; but now the Mercy of the Lord beginneth to find us out again; therefore the Grace of Chriſt helping us, we do give our ſelves, and our Children unto God, to be his People. He ſhall Rule us in all our Affairs; the Lord is our Judge, the Lord is our Law-giver, the Lord is our King; he will ſave us; and the Wiſdom which God has taught us in his Book ſhall guide us. Oh Jehovah, teach us Wiſdom; ſend thy Spirit into our Hearts; take us to be thy People, and let us take thee to be our God.

Such an Opinion about the Perfection of the Scripture had he, that he thus expreſſed himſelf upon this occaſion, God will bring Nations into Diſtreſs and Perplexity, that ſo they may be forced unto the Scriptures; all Governments will be ſhaken, that Men may be forced at length to pitch upon that firm Foundation, The Word of God.

The little Towns of theſe Indians being pitched upon this Foundation, they utterly abandon'd that Poligamy which had heretofore been common among them; they made ſevere Laws againſt Fornication, Drunkenneſs, and Sabbath-breaking, and other Immoralities; and they next began to Lament after the Eſtabliſhment of a Church-Order among them, and after the ſeveral Ordinances and Priviledges of a Church-Communion. The Churches of New-England have uſually been very ſtrict in their Admiſſions to Church-Fellowſhip, and required very ſignal Demonſtrations of a Repenting and a Believing Soul, before they thought Men fit Subjects to be entruſted with the Rights of the Kingdom of Heaven. But they ſeem'd rather to augment than abate their uſual Strictneſs, when the Examination of the Indians was to be performed. A Day was therefore ſet apart, which they called, Natootomuhteackeſuk, or a Day of Aſking Queſtions, when the Miniſters of the adjacent Churches, aſſiſted with all the beſt Interpreters that could be had, publickly examined a good Number of theſe Indians, about their Attainments both in Knowledge and in Vertue. And notwithſtanding the great Satisfaction then received, our Churches being willing to proceed ſurely, and therefore ſlowly, in raiſing them up to a Church-State, which might be comprehended in our Conſociations, the Indians were afterwards called in conſiderable Aſſemblies convened for that purpoſe, to make open Confeſſions of their Faith in God and Chriſt, and of the Efficacy which his Word had upon them for their Converſion to him; which Confeſſions being taken in writing from their Mouths by able Interpreters, were ſcanned by the People of God, and found much Acceptance with them.

I need paſs no further Cenſure upon them, than what is given by my Grand-father, the well-known Richard Mather, in an Epiſtle of his Publiſhed on this occaſion; ſays he, 'There is ſo much of God's Work among them, as that I cannot but count it a great Evil, yea a great Injury to God and his Goodneſs, for any to make light of it. To ſee and hear Indians opening their Mouths, and lifting up their hands and eyes, in Prayer to the Living God, calling on him by his Name Jehovah, in the Mediation of Jeſus Chriſt, and this for a good while together; to ſee and hear them Exhorting one another from the Word of God; to ſee and hear them confeſſing the Name of Chriſt Jeſus, and their own ſinfulneſs; ſure this is more than uſual! And tho' they ſpoke in a Language, of which many of us underſtood but little, yet we that were preſent that Day, we ſaw and heard them perform the Duties mentioned with ſuch grave and ſober Countenances, with ſuch comely Reverence in their Geſture, and their whole Carriage, and with ſuch plenty of tears trickling down the Cheeks of ſome of them, as did argue to us that they ſpake with the Holy Fear of God, and it much affected our Hearts.

At length was a Church-ſtate ſettled among them: They entred, as our Churches do, into an holy Covenant, wherein they gave themſelves, firſt unto the Lord, and then unto one another, to attend the Rules, and Helps, and expect the Bleſſing of the Everlaſting Goſpel; and Mr. Eliot, having a Miſſion from the Church of Roxbury, unto the Work of the Lord Chriſt among the Indians, conceived himſelf ſufficiently Authorized unto the performing of all Church-work about them; grounding it on Act. 13. 1, 2, 3, 4. and he accordingly Adminiſtred, firſt the Baptiſm, and then the Supper of the Lord unto them.

(e) The Hindrances and Obſtructions that the Devil gave unto him.

WE find four Aſſemblies of Praying Indians beſides that of Natick, in our Neighbourhood. But why no more? Truly, not becauſe our Eliot was wanting in his Offers and Labours for their good; but becauſe many of the obdurate Infidels would not receive the Goſpel of Salvation. In one of his Letters, I find him giving this ill Report, with ſuch a good Reaſon for it; Lyn-Indians are all naught, ſave one, who ſometimes comes to hear the Word; and the Reaſon why they are bad, is principally becauſe their Sachim is naught, and careth not to pray unto God. Indeed the Sachims, or the Princes, of the Indians generally did all they could that their Subjects might not entertain the Goſpel; the Devils having the Sachims on their ſide, thereby kept their Poſſeſſion of the People too. Their Pauwaws or Clergy-men, did much to maintain the Intereſt of the Devils in this Wilderneſs; thoſe Children of the Devil, and Enemies of all Righteouſneſs, did not ceaſe to pervert the Right ways of the Lord, but their Sachims or Magiſtrates did more towards it; for they would preſently raiſe a Storm of Perſecution upon any of their Vaſſals that ſhould Pray unto the Eternal God.

The ground of this Conduct in them, was an odd Fear, that Religion would abridge them of the Tyranny which they had been uſed unto; they always like the Devil held their People in a moſt abſolute Servitude, and rul'd by no Law but their Will, which left the poor Slaves nothing that they could call their own. They now ſuſpected that Religion would put a Bridle upon ſuch Uſurpations, and oblige them to a more Equal and Humane Way of Government; they therefore ſome of them, had the Impudence to Addreſs the Engliſh, that no Motions about the Chriſtian Religion might ever be made unto them; and Mr. Eliot ſometimes in the Wilderneſs, without the Company or Aſſiſtance of any other Engliſh-man, has been treated in a very Threatening and Barbarous manner by ſome of theſe Tyrants; but God inſpir'd him with ſo much Reſolution as to tell them, I am about the Work of the Great God, and my God is with me; ſo that I fear neither you, nor all the Sachims in the Country; I'll go on, and do you touch me, if you dare! Upon which the ſtouteſt of them have ſhrunk and fell before him. And one of them, he at length conquered by Preaching unto him a Sermon upon the Temptations of our Lord; particularly, the Temptation fetch'd from the Kingdoms and Glories of the World.

The little Kingdoms and Glories of the Great Men among the Indians, was a Powerful Obſtacle to the Succeſs of Mr. Eliot's Miniſtry; and it is obſervable, that ſeveral of thoſe Nations which thus refuſed the Goſpel, quickly afterwards were ſo Devil driven as to begin an unjuſt and bloody War upon the Engliſh, which iſſued in their ſpeedy and utter Extirpation from the Face of God's Earth. It was particularly Remark'd in Philip the Ring-Leader of the moſt Calamitous War that ever they made upon us; our Eliot made a Tender of the Everlaſting Salvation to that King; but the Monſter entertain'd it with Contempt and Anger, and after the Indian Mode of joining Signs with Words, he took a Button upon the Coat of the Reverend Man, adding, That he cared for his Goſpel, juſt as much as he cared for that Button. The World has heard what a Terrible Ruine ſoon came upon that Monarch, and upon all his People. It was not long before the Hand which now writes, upon a certain occaſion took off the Jaw from the expoſed Skull of that Blaſpemous Leviathan; and the Renowned Samuel Lee hath ſince been a Paſtor to an Engliſh Congregation, ſounding and ſhowing the Praiſes of Heaven, upon that very ſpot of Ground, where Philip and his Indians were lately worſhipping of the Devil.

Sometimes the more immediate Hand of God, by cutting off the Principal Oppoſers of the Goſpel among the Indians made way for Mr. Eliot's Miniſtry. As I remember, he relates that an Aſſociation of profane Indians near our Weymouth, ſet themſelves to deter and ſeduce the Neighbour Indians from the Right Ways of the Lord. But God quickly ſent the Small-Pox among them, which like a great Plague ſoon ſwept them away, and thereby engaged the reſt unto himſelf. I need only to add, That one Attempt made by the Devil, to prejudice the Pagans againſt the Goſpel, had ſomething in it extraordinary. While Mr. Eliot was Preaching of Chriſt unto the other Indians, a Dæmon appeared unto a Prince of the Eaſtern-Indians, in a ſhape that had ſome Reſemblance of Mr. Eliot or of an Engliſh Miniſter, pretending to be, The Engliſh-man's God. The Spectre commanded him, To forbear the drinking of Rum, and To obſerve the Sabbath Day, and To deal juſtly with his Neighbours, all which things had been inculcated in Mr. Eliot's Miniſtry; promiſing therewithal unto him, That if he did ſo, at his Death his Soul ſhould Aſcend unto an happy place; otherwiſe Deſcend unto miſeries; but the Apparition all the while, never ſaid one word about Chriſt, which was the main ſubject of Mr. Eliot's Miniſtry. The Sachim received ſuch an Impreſſion from the Apparition, that he dealt juſtly with all Men, except in the Bloody Tragedies and Cruelties he afterwards committed on the Engliſh in our Wars; he kept the Sabbath-Day like a Faſt, frequently attending in our Congregations; he would not meddle with any Rum, tho' uſually his Country-men, had rather die than undergo ſuch a piece of Self-denial; that Liquor has meerly Enchanted them. At laſt, and not long ſince this Dæmon appear'd again unto this Pagan, requiring him to kill himſelf, and aſſuring him that he ſhould revive in a Day or two, never to die any more. He thereupon divers times attempted it, but his Friends very carefully prevented it; however at length he found a fair Opportunity, for this foul Buſineſs, and hanged himſelf; you may be ſure, without he expected Reſurrection. But it is eaſy to ſee what a ſtumbling Block was here laid before the miſerable Indians.

(f) The Indian-Churches at Maſhippaug, and elſewhere.

THE ſame Spirit which acted Mr. Eliot, quickly inſpired others elſewhere to proſecute the Work of reſcuing the poor Indians out of their worſe than Egyptian-Darkneſs, in which Evil Angels had been ſo long preying upon them. One of theſe was the Godly and Gracious Richard Bourn, who ſoon ſaw a great effect of his holy Labours. In the Year 1666. Mr. Eliot accompany'd by the Honourable Governour, and ſeveral Magiſtrates and Miniſters of Plymouth Colony, procured a vaſt Aſſembly at Maſhippaug; and there a good Number of Indians, made Confeſſions touching the Knowledge and Belief, and Regeneration of their Souls, with ſuch Underſtanding and Affection as was extreamly grateful to the Pious Auditory. Yet ſuch was the Strictneſs of the good People in this Affair, that before they would countenance the Advancement of theſe Indians unto Church-Fellowſhip, they ordered their Confeſſions to be written and ſent unto all the Churches in the Colony, for their Approbation; but ſo approv'd they were, that afterwards the Meſſengers of all the Churches giving their Preſence and Conſent, they became a Church, and choſe Mr. Bourn to be their Paſtor; who was then by Mr. Eliot and Mr. Cotton ordain'd unto that Office over them. From hence Mr. Eliot and Mr. Cotton went over to an Iſland called Martha's Vineyard, where God had ſo ſucceeded the honeſt Labours of ſome, and particularly of the Mayhew's as that a Church was gathered.

This Church, after Faſting and Prayer, choſe one Hiacoomes to be their Paſtor, John Tockinoſh, an able and a diſcreet Chriſtian to be their Teacher; Joſhua Mummeecheegs and John Nanaſo to be Ruling Elders; and theſe were then ordained by Mr. Eliot and Mr. Cotton thereunto. Diſtance of Habitation, cauſed this one Church by mutual Agreement afterwards to become two; the Paſtor and one Ruling Elder taking one part, and the Teacher and one Ruling Elder, another; and at Nantucket another adjacent Iſland, was another Church of Indians quickly gathered, who choſe an Indian, John Gibs, to be their Miniſter. Theſe Churches are ſo exact in their Admiſſion, and ſo ſolemn in their Diſcipline, and ſo ſerious in their Communion, that ſome of the Chriſtian Engliſh in the Neighbourhood, which would have been loth to have mixed with them in a civil Relation, yet have gladly done it in a Sacred one.

'Tis needleſs for me to repeat what my Father has written about the other Indian Congregations; only there having been made mention of one Hiacooms, I am willing to annex a Paſſage or two concerning that memorable Indian. That Indian was a very great Inſtrument of bringing his Pagan and wretched Neighbours, to a ſaving Acquaintance with our Lord Jeſus Chriſt; and God gave him the Honour, not only of ſo doing much for ſome, but alſo of ſuffering much from others, of thoſe unhappy Salvages. Once particularly, this Hiacoomes received a cruel blow from an Indian Prince, which if ſome Engliſh had not been there, might have killed him, for his Praying unto God. And afterwards he gave this account of his Trial in it; ſaid he, I have two Hands; I had one Hand for Injuries, and the other for God; while I did receive Wrong with the one, the other laid the greater hold on God.

Moreover, the Powawes did uſe to hector and abuſe the Praying Indians at ſuch a rate, as terrify'd others from joining with them; but once when thoſe Witches were bragging, that they could kill all the Praying Indians, if they would; Hiacoomes reply'd, Let all the Powawes in the Iſland come together, I'll venture my ſelf in the midſt of them; let them uſe all their Witchrafts; with the help of God, I'll tread upon them all. By this Courage, he ſilenced the Powawes: But at the ſame time alſo he hearted the People at ſuch a rate as was truly wonderful; nor could any of them ever harm this Eminent Confeſſor afterward; nor indeed any Proſelyte which had been by his means brought home to God; yea, 'twas obſerved after this, that they rather kill'd than cur'd all ſuch of the Heathen, as would yet make uſe of their Enchantments for help againſt their Sickneſſes.

(g) Of Mr. Eliot's Fellow-Labourers in the Indian-Work.

SO little was the Soul of our Eliot infected with any Envy, as that he long'd for nothing more than Fellow-Labourers, that might move and ſhine in the ſame Orb with himſelf; he made his Cries both to God and Man, for more Labourers to be thruſt forth into the Indian Harveſt; and indeed it was an Harveſt of ſo few ſecular Advantages and Encouragements, that it muſt be nothing leſs than a Divine Thruſt, which could make any to Labour in it. He ſaw the Anſwer of his Prayers, in the Generous and Vigorous Attempts made by ſeveral other moſt worthy Preachers of the Goſpel, to Goſpelize our periſhing Indians. At the Writing of my Father's Letter there were Four; but the Number of them increaſes apace among us. At Martha's Vineyard, the old Mr. Mayhew, and ſeveral of his Sons, or Grandſons have done very worthily for the Souls of the Indians; there were fifteen Years ago, by Computation, about fifteen Hundred Seals of their Miniſtry upon that one Iſland. In Connecticut, the holy and acute Mr. Fitch, has made noble Eſſays towards the Converſion of the Indians; but, I think, the Prince he has to deal withal, being an obſtinate Infidel, gives unhappy Remora's to the Succeſſes of his Miniſtry. And godly Mr. Pierſon, has in that Colony deſerved well, if I miſtake not, upon the ſame account. In Maſſachuſets we ſee at this Day, the Pious Mr. Daniel Gookin, the Gracious Mr. Peter Thatcher, the well accompliſhed and induſtrious Mr. Grindal Rawſon, all of them hard at Work, to turn theſe Poor Creatures from Darkneſs unto Light, and from Satan unto God. In Plymouth we have the moſt Active Mr. Samuel Treat laying out himſelf to ſave this Generation; and there is one Mr. Tupper, who uſes his laudable Endeavours for the Inſtruction of them.

'Tis my Relation to him, that cauſes me to defer unto the laſt place, the mention of Mr. John Cotton, who hath addreſſed the Indians in their own Language with ſome Dexterity. He hired an Indian, after the rate of Twelvepence per Day for Fifty Days, to teach him the Indian Tongue; but his Knaviſh Tutor having received his whole Pay too ſoon, ran away before Twenty Days were out; however, in this time he had profited ſo far, that he could quickly Preach unto the Natives.

Having told my Reader, that the Second Edition of the Indian Bible was wholly of his Correction and Amendment; becauſe it is not proper for me to ſay much of him, I ſhall only add this Remarkable Story. An Engliſh Miniſter accompany'd by the Governour and Major-General, and ſundry Perſons of Quality, belonging to Plymouth, made a Journey to a Nation of Indians in the Neighbourhood, with a free Offer of the Words whereby they might be ſaved. The Prince took time to conſider of it, and according to the true Engliſh of Taking Time in ſuch caſes, at length he told them, He did not accept the Tender which they made him. They then took their Leaves of him, not without firſt giving him this plain and ſhort Admonition, If God have any Mercy for your miſerable People, He will quickly find a way to take you out of the way. 'Twas preſently after this, that this Prince going forth to a Battel againſt another Nation of Indians, was killed in the Fight; and the young Prince being in his Minority, the Government fell into the Hands of Protectors, which favoured the Intereſt of the Goſpel. The Engliſh being adviſed of it, ſpeedily and proſperouſly renewed the Tidings of an Eternal Saviour to the Salvages, who have ever ſince attended upon the Goſpel: And the young Sachim, after he came to Age, expreſſed his Approbation of the Chriſtian Religion; eſpecially when a while ſince, he lay a Dying of a tedious Diſtemper, and would keep Reading of Mr. Baxter's Call to the Unconverted, with Floods of Tears in his Eyes, while he had any Strength to do it.

Such as theſe are the Perſons, whom our Eliot left engag'd in the Indian-Work, when he departed from his Employment unto his Recompence. And theſe Gentlemen are ſo indefatigable in their Labours among the Indians, as that the moſt equal Judges muſt acknowledge them worthy of much greater Salaries than they are generouſly contented with. But one may ſee then, who inſpired that clamorous (tho' contemptible) Perſecutor of this Country, who very zealouſly addreſſed the A. B. of Canterbury, that theſe Miniſters might be deprived of their little Stipends, and that the ſaid Stipends might go to maintain that Worſhip among us, which the Plantation was Erected on purpoſe for the peaceable Avoiding of.

(h) The Sacred and Solemn Exerciſes performed in the Indian Congregations.

MY Father's Account of the Exerciſes performed in the Indian Congregations, will tell us what a Bleſſed Fruit our Eliot ſaw of his Labours, before he went unto thoſe Rewards which God had reſerv'd in the Heavens for him. Some of the Indians quickly built for themſelves good and large Meeting Houſes after the Engliſh Mode, in which alſo after the Engliſh Mode, they attended the Things of the Kingdom of Heaven. And ſome of the Engliſh were helpful to them upon this account; among whom I ought particularly to mention that Learned, Pious and Charitable Gentleman, the Worſhipful Samuel Sewal, Eſq; who at his own Charge built a Meeting Houſe for one of the Indian Congregations, and gave thoſe Indians cauſe to pray for him under that Character, He loveth our Nation, for he hath built us a Synagogue.

It only remains that I give a touch or two upon the Worſhip which is attended in the Synagogues of the Indians. And firſt, the very Name of Praying Indians will aſſure us that Prayer is one of their Devotions; be ſure, they could not be our Eliot's Diſciples if it were not ſo. But how do they Pray? We are told, it is Without a Form, becauſe from the Heart; which is as I remember, Tertullian's Expreſſion concerning the Prayers in the Aſſemblies of the Primitive Chriſtians; namely, ſine monitore quia de pectore. It is evident, that the Primitive Chriſtians had no ſtated Liturgies among them; that no Forms of Prayers were in their time impoſed upon the Miniſters of the Goſpel; that even about the Platform of Prayer given us by our Lord, it was the Opinion of Auſtin himſelf, notwithſtanding the Advances made in his Age towards what we count Superſtitious, that our Lord therein Taught not what Words we ſhould uſe in Prayer, but what things we ſhould pray for. And whatever Scoffs the Profanity of our Days, has abuſed that Phraſe and Thing withal, Gregory Nazianzen in his Days, counted it the Honour of his Fathers publick Prayers, That he had them from, and made them by the Holy Spirit. Our Indians accordingly find, that if they ſtudy the Words of God, and their own Sins and Wants, they ſhall ſoon come to that Attainment, Behold they pray! They can pray with much Pertinence and Enlargement; and would much wonder at it, if they ſhould heat of an Engliſh Clergy, that ſhould Read their Prayers out of a Book, when they ſhould pour out their Souls before the God of Heaven.

Their Preaching has much of Eliot, and therefore you may be ſure much of Scripture, but perhaps more of the Chriſtian than of the Scholar in it. I know not how to deſcribe it better than by reciting the Heads of a Sermon, uttered by an Indian on a Day of Humiliation kept by them, at a time when great Rains had given much Damage to their Fruits and Fields; 'twas on this wiſe.

A little I ſhall ſay, according to that little I know.

Gen. 8. 20, 21.

And Noah built an Altar unto Jehovah; and he took of every clean Beaſt, and of every clean Fowl, and offered Burnt-Offerings on the Altar. And the Lord ſmelled a ſweet ſavour, and the Lord ſaid in his Heart, I will not again Curſe the Ground.

'In that Noah ſacrificed, he ſhow'd himſelf 'Thankful; in that Noah worſhipped, he ſhew'ed himſelf Godly. In that he offered Clean 'Beaſts, he ſhow'd that God is an Holy God. 'And all that come to God, muſt be pure and 'clean. Know, that we muſt by Repentance, ‘purge our ſelves; which is the Work we are to do this Day.

‘Noah ſacrificed and ſo worſhipped. This was the manner of old time. But what Sacrifices have we now to offer? I ſhall anſwer by that in Pſal. 4. 5. Offer to God the Sacrifice of Righteouſneſs, and put your Truſt in the Lord. Theſe are the true Spiritual Sacrifices which God requireth at our hands, the Sacrifices of Righteouſneſs; that is, we muſt look to our Hearts and Ways that they be Righteous; and then we ſhall be acceptable to God when we Worſhip him. But if we be unrighteous, unholy, ungodly, we ſhall not be accepted, our Sacrifices will be ſtark naught. Again, We are to put our Truſt in the Lord. Who elſe is there for us to truſt in? We muſt believe in the Word of God; if we doubt of God, or doubt of his Word, our Sacrifices are little worth; but if we truſt ſtedfaſtly in God, our Sacrifices will be good.

‘Once more, What Sacrifices muſt we offer? My Anſwer is, we muſt offer ſuch as Abraham offered. And what a Sacrifice was that? We are told in Gen. 22. 12. Now I know that thou feareſt me, ſeeing thou haſt not witheld thy Son, thy only Son from me. It ſeems he had but one dearly Beloved Son, and he offered that Son to God; and ſo God ſaid, I know thou feareſt me! Behold, a Sacrifice in Deed and in Truth! ſuch an one muſt we offer. Only, God requires not us to Sacrifice our Sons, but our Sins, our deareſt Sins. God calls us this Day to part with all our Sins, tho' never ſo beloved; and we muſt not withold any of them from him. If we will not part with all, the Sacrifice is not right. Let us part with ſuch Sins as we love beſt, and it will be a good Sacrifice!

‘God ſmelt a ſweet ſavour in Noah's Sacrifice; and ſo will God receive our Sacrifices, when we worſhip him aright. But how did God manifeſt his Acceptance of Noah's Offering: 'twas by promiſing to Drown the World no more, but give us Fruitful Seaſons. God has chaſtiſed us of late, as if he would utterly Drown us; and he has Drowned and Spoiled and Ruin'd a great deal of our Hay, and threatens to kill our Cattel. 'Tis for this that we Faſt and Pray this Day. Let us then offer a clean and pure Sacrifice, as Noah did; ſo God will ſmell a ſavour of Reſt, and he will withold the Rain; and bleſs us with ſuch Fruitful Seaſons as we are deſiring of him.

Thus preached an Indian called Niſhokon, above Thirty Years ago; and ſince that I ſuppoſe, they have grown a little further into the New-Engliſh way of Preaching: You may have in their Sermons, a Kukkootomwehteaonk, that is, a Doctrine, Nahtootomwehteaonk, or Queſtion, a Sampooaonk, or an Anſwer, Witcheayeuonk, or a Reaſon, with an Ouwoteank, or an Uſe for the Cloſe of all.

As for Holy-days, you may take it for granted, our Eliot would not perſwade his Indians to any Stated ones. Even the Chriſtian-Feſtival it ſelf, he knew to be a Stranger unto the Apoſtolical Times; that the exquiſite Voſſius himſelf acknowledges, 'twas not celebrated in the firſt or ſecond Century: And that there is a Truth in the Words of the Great Chemnitius, Anniverſarium Diem Natalis Chriſti, celebratum fuiſſe, apud vetuſtiſſimos nunquam legitur. He knew that if the Day of our Lord's Nativity were to be obſerved, it ſhould not be in December: That many Churches for divers Ages kept it not in December, but in January; that Chryſoſtom himſelf, about four Hundred Years after our Saviour, excuſes the Novelty of the December Seaſon for it, and confeſſes it had not been kept above Ten Years at Conſtantinople: No, that it ſhould be rather in September, in which Month the Jews kept the Feaſt that was a Type of our Lord's Incarnation; and Solomon alſo brought the Ark into the Temple; for our Lord was Thirty Years old when he entred upon his Publick Miniſtry; and he continued in it Three Years and an half: Now his Death was in March, and it is eaſy then to calculate when his Birth ought to be. He knew, that indeed God had hid this Day as he did the Body of Moſes, to prevent Idolatry; but that Antichriſt had choſe this Day, to accommodate the Pagans in their Licentious and their Debauched Saturnalia; and that a Tertullian would not ſtick to ſay, Shall we Chriſtians who have nothing to do with the Feſtivals of the Jews, which were once of Divine Inſtitution, embrace the Saturnalia, of the Heathen? How do the Gentiles ſhame us, who are more true to their Religion, than we are to ours? None of them will obſerve the Lord's-day, for fear leſt they ſhould be Chriſtians; and ſhall not we then by obſerving their Feſtivals, fear leſt we be made Ethnicks? In fine, it was his Opinion, That for us to have ſtated Holy Days which are not appointed by the Lord Jeſus Chriſt, is a deep Reflection upon the Wiſdom of that glorious Lord; and he brought up his Indians in the Principles which the old Waldenſes had about ſuch unwarrantable Holy Days.

Nevertheleſs, he taught them to ſet apart their Days for both Faſting and Prayer, and for Feaſting and Prayer, when there ſhould be Extraordinary Occaſions for them; and they perform the Duties of theſe Days with a very laborious Piety. One Party of the Indians long ſince of their own accord, kept a Day of Supplication together, wherein one of them diſcourſed upon Pſal. 66. 7. He rules by his Power for ever, his Eyes behold the Nations, let not the Rebellious exalt themſelves. And when one asked them afterwards, what was the Reaſon of their keeping of ſuch a Day, they reply'd, It was to obtain five Mercies of God.

‘Firſt, That God would ſlay the Rebellion of their Hearts. Next, That they might love God and one another. Thirdly, That they ‘ might withſtand the Temptations of wicked ‘ Men, ſo that they might not be drawn back ‘ from God. Fourthly, That they might be ‘ Obedient unto the Councils and Commands ‘ of their Rulers. Fifthly, That they might ‘ have their Sins done away by the Redemption ‘ of Jeſus Chriſt: And laſtly, That they might ‘ walk in the good Ways of the Lord. I muſt here embrace my Opportunity to tell the World, that our Cautious Eliot was far from the Opinion of thoſe who have thought' it not only warrantable, but alſo commendable to Adopt ſome Heatheniſh Uſages into the Worſhip of God, for the more eaſy and ſpeedy gaining of the Heathen to that Worſhip. The Policy of treating the Pagan Rites as the Jews were to do Captives, before they married them, to ſhave their Hair, and pare their Nails, our Eliot counted as ridiculous as pernicious. He knew that the Idolatries and Abominations of Popery, were founded in this way of Proſelyting the barbarous Nations, which made their Deſcent upon the Roman Empire; and he look'd upon the like Methods which the Proteſtants have uſed, that they might ingratiate themſelves with the Papiſts, and that our Separation from them ſhould become the leſs dangerous and ſenſible, to be the moſt ſenſible and dangerous Wound of the Reformation. Wherefore as no leſs a Man than Dr. Henry Moor ſays about our Compliances with the Papiſts, which are a ſort of Pagans, Their Converſion and Salvation being not to be compaſſed by needleſs Symbolizing with them in any thing, I conceive our beſt Policy is ſtudiouſly to imitate them in nothing; but for all indifferent things, to think rather the worſe of them for their uſing of them. As no Perſon of Honour would willingly go in the known Garb of infamous Perſons. Whatſoever we court them in, they do but turn it to our Scorn and Contempt, and are the more hardened in their own Wickedneſs. To act upon this Principle, is the Deſign and Glory of New England! And our Eliot was of this Perſwaſion, when he brought his Indians to a pure, plain Scripture Worſhip. He would not gratify them with a Samaritan ſort of blended, mixed Worſhip; and he imagined, as well he might, that the Apoſtle Paul's firſt Epiſtle to the Corinthians had enough in it, for ever to deter us all from ſuch Unchriſtian and unhappy Temporizing.

(i) A Compariſon between what the New-Englanders have done for the Converſion of the Indians, and what has been done elſewhere by the Roman Catholicks.

IT is to be confeſſed, That the Roman Catholicks have a Clergy ſo very numerous, and ſo little encumbred, and are Maſters of ſuch prodigious Eccleſiaſtial Revenues, as renders it very eaſy for them to exceed the Proteſtants in their Endeavours to Chriſtianize the Pagan Salvages. Nor would I Reproach, but rather Applaud their Induſtry in this matter, wiſhing that we were all touched with an Emulation of it. Nevertheleſs, while I commend their Induſtry, they do by their Clamours againſt the Reformed Churches upon this account, oblige me to tax divers very ſcandalous things in the Miſſions which they make pro propaganda fide throughout the World; and therewithal to compare what has been done by that little Handful of Reformed Churches in this Country, which has in divers Regards out done the furtheſt Efforts of Popery.

The Attainments which with God's help we have carried up our Indians unto, are the chief Honour and Glory of our Labours with them. The Reader will ſmile perhaps, when I tell him, that by an odd Accident there are lately fallen into my hands, the Manuſcripts of a Jeſuite, whom the French employ'd as a Miſſionary among the Weſtern Indians; in which Papers there are, both a Catechiſm, containing the Principles which thoſe Heathens are to be inſtructed in; and Caſes of Conſcience, referring to their Converſations. The Catechiſm which is in the Iroquoiſe Language (a Language remarkable for this, that there is not ſo much as one Labial in it) with a Tranſlation annexed, has one Chapter about Heaven, and another about Hell, wherein are ſuch Thick ſkull'd Paſſages as theſe.

‘ Q. How is the Soyl made in Heaven?
‘ A. 'Tis a very fair Soyl, they want neither ‘ for Meats nor Cloths: 'Tis but Wiſhing and
‘ we have them.
‘ Q. Are they employ'd in Heaven?
‘ A. No, they do nothing; the Fields yield
‘ Corn, Beans, Pumpkins, and the like, without ‘ any Tillage.
‘ Q. What ſort of Trees are there?
‘ A. Always Green, Full, and Floriſhing.
‘ Q. Have they in Heaven the ſame Sun, the ‘ ſame Wind, the ſame Thunder that we have ‘ here?
‘ A. No, the Sun ever ſhines; 'tis always ‘ fair Weather.
‘ Q. But how their Fruits?
‘ A. In this one Quality they exceed ours;
‘ that they are never waſted; you have no ſoo-

'ner pluckt one, but you ſee another preſently hanging in its Room. And after this rate goes on the Catechiſm concerning Heaven. Concerning Hell, it thus diſcourſes.

'Q. What ſort of a Soyl is that of Hell?

'A. A very wretched Soyl; 'tis a Fiery Pit, in the Center of the Earth.

'Q. Have they any Light in Hell?

'A. No. 'Tis always dark; there's always Smoke there; their Eyes are always in Pain with it; they can ſee nothing but the Devils.

'Q. What ſhap'd things are the Devils?

'A. Very ill ſhap'd things; they go about with Vizards on, and they terrify Men.

'Q. What do they Eat in Hell?

'A. They are always Hungry, but the Damned feed on hot Aſhes and Serpents there.

'Q. What Water have they to drink?

'A. Horrid Water, nothing but melted Lead.

'Q. Don't they die in Hell?

'A. No: Yet they eat one another, every Day; but anon, God reſtores and renews the Man that was eaten, as a cropt Plant in a little time repullulates.

It ſeems, they have not thought this Divinity too Groſs for the Barbarians. But I ſhall make no Reflections on it; only add one or two Caſes of Conſcience, from their Directory.

''Tis one of their weighty Caſes, 'Whether a Chriſtian be bound to pay his Whore her Hire or no? To this Father Brutas anſwers, Tho' he be bound in Juſtice to do it, yet inaſmuch as the Barbarians [and you muſt ſuppoſe their Whores to be ſuch] Uſe to keep no Faith in ſuch matters, the Chriſtians may chuſe whether they will keep any too. But Father Pierron, with a moſt profound Learning anſwers, He is not bound unto it all; inaſmuch as no Man thinks himſelf bound to pay a Witch, that has Enchanted him; and this buſineſs is pretty much a kin to that. Another of their difficult Caſes is, 'Whether an Indian ſtealing an Hatchet from a Dutch-man, be bound to make Reſtitution? And it is very conſcientiouſly determined, That if the Dutch-man be one that has uſed any Trade with other Indians, the Thief is not bound unto any Reſtitution; for 'tis certain, he gains more by ſuch a Trade than the Value of many Hatchets in a Year.

I'll tire my Reader with no more of this wretched ſtuff. But let him underſtand that the proſelyted Indians of New-England have been inſtructed at a more Noble Rate; we have helped them to the ſincere Milk of the Word; we have given them the whole Bible in their own Language; we have laid before them ſuch a Creed as the Primitive Believers had, with ſuch Explications as we embark our own Souls upon the Aſſurance of. And God has bleſſed our Education of theſe poor Creatures in ſuch a meaſure, that they can Pray and Preach to better Edification (give me leave to ſay it) than Multitudes of the Romiſh Clergymen. We could have Baptiſed many Troops of Indians, if we would have uſed no other meaſures with them, than the Roman Catholicks did upon theirs at Maryland, where they Baptiſed a great Crew of Indians, in ſome New Shirts, beſtow'd upon them to encourage them thereunto; but the Indians in a Week or two, not knowing how to waſh their Shirts when they were grown foul, came and made a Motion, that the Roman Catholicks would give more Shirts to them, or elſe they would renounce their Baptiſm. No, 'tis a Thorough-paced Chriſtianity, without which we have not imagined our Indians Chriſtianized.

Nor have we been acted with a Roman Catholick Avarice, and Falſity, and Cruelty in proſecuting of our Converſions; 'tis the Spirit of an ELIOT, that has all along directed us. 'Tis a Specimen of the Popiſh Avarice that their Miſſionaries are very rarely employ'd but where Bever and Silver and vaſt Riches are to be thereby gained; their Miniſtry is but a ſort of Engine, to enrich Europeans with the Treaſures of the Indies; thus one eſcaped from Captivity among the Spaniards told me, that the Spaniſh Friars had carried their Goſpel into the ſpacious Country of California, but finding the Indians there to be extremely poor, they quickly gave over the Work, becauſe forſooth ſuch a poor Nation was not worth Converting. Whereas the New-Englanders could expect nothing from their Indians. We are to Feed them and Cloath them, rather than receive any thing from them, when we bring them home to God. Again, the Popiſh Falſity diſpoſes them to ſo much Legerdemain in their Applications, as is very diſagreeable to the Spirit and Progreſs of the Goſpel. My Worthy Friend, Mynheer Dellius, who has been ſedulous and ſucceſsful in his Miniſtry among the Maqua's, aſſures me, that a French Predicator, having been attempting to bring over thoſe Indians unto the Intereſt (not of our Saviour ſo much as) of Canada, at laſt, for a Cure of their Infidelity, told them, he would give them a ſign of God's Diſpleaſure at them for it; The Sun ſhould ſuch a Day be put out. This terrify'd them at a ſad rate, and with great Admiration and Expectation they told the Dutch of what was to come to paſs; the Dutch reply'd, This was no more than every Child among them could foretel; they all knew there would then be an Eclipſe of the Sun; but (ſaid they) ſpeak to Monſieur, that he would get the Sun extinguiſh'd a day before, or a day after what he ſpoke of, and if he can do that, believe him. When the Indians thus underſtood what a Trick the French-man would have put upon them, they became irreconcileably prejudiced againſt all his Offers; nor have the French been ſince able to gain much upon that conſiderable People. The New-Englanders have uſed no ſuch Stratagems and Knaveries; 'tis the pure Light of Truth, which is all that has been uſed for the affecting of the rude People, whom 'twas eaſy to have cheated into our Profeſſion. Much leſs have we uſed that Popiſh piſh Cruelty, which the Natives of America, have by ſome other People been treated with. Even a Biſhop of their own, hath publiſhed very Tragical Hiſtories of the Spaniſh Cruelties upon the Indians of this Weſtern World. Such were thoſe Cruelties, that the Indians at length declared, They had rather go to Hell with their Anceſtors, than to the ſame Heaven which the Spaniards pretended unto; 'tis indeed impoſſible to reckon up the various and exquiſite Barbarities, with which theſe execrable Spaniards murdered in leſs than fifty Years no leſs than fifty Millions of the Indians; it ſeems this was their way of bringing them into the Sheepfold of our Merciful Jeſus! But on the other ſide, the good People of New-England have carried it with ſo much Tenderneſs towards the tawny Creatures among whom we live, that they would not own ſo much as one Foot of Land in the Country, without a fair Purchaſe and Conſent from the Natives that laid claim unto it; albeit, we had a Royal Charter from the King of Great Britain, to Protect us in our Settlement upon this Continent. I ſuppoſe 'twas in revenge upon us for this Conſcientiouſneſs, that the late Oppreſſors of New-England acknowledged no Man to have any Title at all unto one Foot of Land in all our Colony. But we did and we do, think, notwithſtanding the Banters of thoſe Tories, that the Indians had not by their Paganiſm ſo forfeited all Right unto any of their Poſſeſſions, that the firſt pretended Chriſtians that could, might Violently and yet Honeſtly ſeize upon them. Inſtead of this, the People of New-England, knowing that ſome of the Engliſh were ſufficiently covetous and encroaching, and that the Indians in ſtreights are eaſily prevailed upon, to ſell their Lands, made a Law, That none ſhould purchaſe, or ſo much as receive any Land of the Indians, without the Allowance of the Court. Yea, and ſome Lands which were peculiarly convenient for the Indians, our People who were more careful of them than they were of themſelves, made a Law, That they ſhould never be bought out of their hands. I ſuppoſe after this it would ſuprize Mankind, if they ſhould hear ſuch wonderful Creatures as our late Secretary Randolph affirming, This Barbarous People were never civilly treated by the late Government, who made it their Buſineſs to encroach upon their Lands, and by degrees to drive them out of all. But, how many other Laws we made in Favour of the Indians, 'tis not eaſy to reckon up.

'Twas one of our Laws, 'That for the further Encouragement of the hopeful Work among them, for the Civilizing and Chriſtianizing of them, any Indian that ſhould be brought unto Civility, and come to live orderly in any Engliſh Plantation, ſhould have ſuch Allotments among the Engliſh, as the Engliſh had themſelves. And that if a competent number of them, ſhould ſo come on to Civility, as to be capable of a Townſhip, the General Court ſhould grant them Lands for a Plantation as they do unto the Engliſh. Altho' we had already brought up their Claims unto our Lands. We likewiſe had our Laws, That if any of our Cattle did any damage to their Corn, we ſhould make them ample Satiſfaction; and that we ſhould give them all manner of Aſſiſtance, in Fencing of their Fields. And becauſe the Indians are exceſſively given unto the Vice of Drunkenneſs, which was a Vice unknown to them, until the Engliſh brought Strong-drink in their way, we have had a ſevere Law againſt all ſelling or giving any Intoxicating Liquors to them. It were well, if this Law were more ſeverely Executed.

By this time I hope, I have ſtop'd the Calumnious Exclamations of the Roman Catholicks againſt the Churches of the Reformation, for neglecting to Evangelize the Natives of the Indies. But let me take this occaſion to addreſs the Chriſtian Indians of my own Country, into ſome of whoſe Hands, 'tis likely, this little Book may come.

¶ 'Behold, ye Indians, what Love, what Care, what Coſt, has been uſed by the Engliſh here, for the Salvation of your precious and immortals Souls. It is not becauſe we have expected any Temporal Advantage from you, that we have been thus concerned for your good; No, 'tis God that has cauſed us to deſire his Glory in your Salvation; and our Hearts have bled with Pity over you, when we have ſeen how horribly the Devil oppreſs'd you in this, and deſtroy'd you in another World. It is much that has been done for you; we have put you into a way to be happy both on Earth while you live, and in Heaven when you die. What can you think will become of you, if you ſlight all theſe Glorious Offers! Methinks you ſhould ſay to your ſelves, Vttoh weh kittinne peh quoh humunan miſhanantamog ne mohſag wadchanittuonk! You all believe that your Teacher Eliot, was a Good and a Brave Man, and you would count it your Bleſſedneſs to be for ever with him. Nevertheleſs, I am to tell you, that if you don't become Real, and Thorough, and Holy Chriſtians, you ſhall never have a comfortable Sight of him any more. You know how he has Fed you, and Cloath'd you, as well as Taught you; you know how his Bowels yerned over you, even as tho' had you had been his Children, when he ſaw any Afflictions come upon you; but if he find you among the wicked, in the Day of Judgment, which he ſo often warn'd you of, he will then be a Dreadful Witneſs againſt you, and when the Lord Jeſus paſſes that Sentence on you, Depart ye Curſed into Everlaſting Fire with the Devil and his Angels, even your own Eliot will then ſay Amen, unto it all. Now to deal plainly with you, there are two Vices, which many of you are too prone unto, and which are utterly inconſiſtent with a True Chriſtianity. One of thoſe Vices, is that of Idleneſs. If you had a Diſpoſition to follow an Honeſt Calling, what ſhould hinder you from growing as Confide-

‘rable in your Eſtates, as many of your Engliſh Neighbours: Whereas, you are now poor, mean, ragged, ſtarved, contemptible and miſerable; and inſtead of being able, as your Engliſh Neighbours do, to ſupport the Ordinances of God, you are beholden to them, not only for maintaining of thoſe Bleſſed Ordinances among you, but for many other Kindneſſes. And have you indeed forgot the Commandment of God, which has been ſo often laid before you, Six Days ſhalt thou labour! For ſhame, apply your ſelves to ſuch Labour as may bring you into more Handſome Circumſtances. But the other of theſe Vices, is that of Drunkenneſs. There are godly Engliſh Neighbours, of whom you ſhould learn to Pray; but there are ſome of you that learn to Drink, of other profane, debauch'd Engliſh Neighbours. Poor Creatures, 'tis by this Iniquity that Satan ſtill keeps Poſſeſſion of many Souls among you, as much as if you were ſtill in all your woful Heatheniſm; and how often have you been told, Drunkards ſhall not inherit the Kingdom of God? I beſeech you to be ſenſible of the Miſchiefs to which this thing expoſes you, and never dream of eſcaping the Vengeance of Eternal Fire, if you indulge your ſelves in this Accurſed thing.

‘I have done, when I have wiſh'd, That the Goſpel of the Lord Jeſus may always Run and be Glorify'd among you!

The Conclusion: Or, Eliot Expiring.

BY this time, I have doubtleſs made my Readers loth to have me tell what now remains of this little Hiſtory; doubtleſs they are wiſhing that this John might have Tarried unto the Second Coming of our Lord. But, alas, All-devouring Death at laſt ſnatch'd him from us, and ſlighted all thoſe Lamentations of ours, My Father, My Father, the Chariots of Iſrael, and the Horſemen thereof!

When he was become a ſort of Miles Emeritus, and began to draw near his End, he grew ſtill more Heavenly, more Savoury, more Divine, and ſcented more of the Spicy Country at which he was ready to put aſhore. As the Hiſtorian obſerves of Tiberius, That when his Life and Strength were going from him, his Vice yet remained with him; on the contrary, the Grace of this Excellent Man rather increaſed than abated, when every thing elſe was dying with him. 'Tis too uſual with Old Men, that when they are paſt Work, they are leaſt ſenſible of their Inabilities and Incapacities, and can ſcarce endure to ſee another ſucceeding them in any part of their Office. But our Eliot was of a Temper quite contrary thereunto; for finding many Months before his Expiration, That he had not Strength enough to Edify his Congregation with Publick Prayers, and Sermons, he importun'd his People with ſome Impatience to call another Miniſter; profeſſing himſelf unable to die with Comfort, until he could ſee a good Succeſſor ordained, ſettled, fixed among them. For this Cauſe, he alſo cry'd mightily unto the Lord Jeſus Chriſt our Aſcended Lord, that he would give ſuch a Gift unto Roxbury, and he ſometimes call'd his whole Town together to join with him in a Faſt for ſuch a Bleſſing. As the Return of their Supplications, our Lord quickly beſtow'd upon them, a Perſon young in Years, but old in Diſcretion, Gravity, and Experience; and one whom the Church of Roxbury hopes to find, A Paſtor after God's own Heart.

It was Mr. Nehemiah Walter, who being by the Unanimous Vote and Choice of the Church there, become the Paſtor of Roxbury, immediately found the Venerable Eliot Embracing and Cheriſhing of him, with the tender Affections of a Father. The good Old Man like Old Aaron, as it were diſrobed himſelf, with an unſpeakable Satisfaction, when he beheld his Garments put upon a Son ſo dear unto him. After this, he for a Year or two before his Tranſlation, could ſcarce be perſwaded unto any Publick Service, but humbly pleaded, what none but he would ever have ſaid, It would be a Wrong to the Souls of the People, for him to do any thing among them, when they were ſupply'd ſo much to their Advantage otherwiſe. If I miſtake not, the laſt that ever he Preached was on a Publick Faſt; when he fed his People with a very diſtinct and uſeful Expoſition upon the Eighty Third Pſalm; and he conluded with an Apology, begging his Hearers to pardon the Poorneſs, and Meanneſs, and Brokenneſs, (as he called it) of his Meditations; but added he, My dear Brother here, will by'nd by mend all.

But altho' he thus diſmiſſed himſelf as one ſo near to the Age of Ninety, might well have done, from his Publick Labours; yet he would not give over his Endeavours, in a more private Sphere, to Do good unto all. He had always been an Enemy to Idleneſs; any one that ſhould look into the little Diary that he kept in his Almanacks, would ſee that there was with him, No Day without a Line; and he was troubled particularly, when he ſaw how much Time was devoured by that Slavery to Tobacco, which too many debaſe themſelves unto; and now he grew old, he was deſirous that his Works ſhould hold pace with his Life; the leſs Time he ſaw left, the leſs was he willing to have loſt. He imagined that he could now do nothing to any purpoſe in any Service for God; and ſometimes he would ſay with an Air peculiar to himſelf, I wonder for what the Lord Jeſus Chriſt lets me live; he knows that now I can do nothing for him! And yet he could not forbear Eſſaying to Do ſomething for his Lord; he conceived, that tho' the Engliſh could not be benefited by any Gifts which he now fancied himſelf to have only the Ruines of, yet who can tell but the Negro's might! He had long lamented it with a Bleeding and a Burning Paſſion, that the Engliſh uſed their Negro's but as their Horſes or their Oxen, and that ſo little Care was taken about their immortal Souls; he look'd upon it as a Prodigy, that any wearing the Name of Chriſtians, ſhould ſo much have the Heart of Devils in them, as to prevent and hinder the Inſtruction of the poor Blackamores, and confine the Souls of their miſerable Slaves to a Deſtroying Ignorance, meerly for fear of thereby loſing the Benefit of their Vaſſalage; but now he made a Motion to the Engliſh within two or three Miles of him, that at ſuch a time and Place they would ſend their Negro's once a Week unto him: For he would then Catechiſe them, and Enlighten them, to the utmoſt of his Power in the Things of their Everlaſting Peace; however, he did not live to make much Progreſs in this Undertaking.

At length, when he was able to do Little without Doors, he try'd then to do ſomething within; and one thing was this. A young Boy in the Neighbourhood, had in his Infancy fallen into a Fire, ſo as to burn himſelf into a perfect Blindneſs; but this Boy being now grown to ſome Bigneſs, the good old Man took him home to his Houſe, with ſome Intentions to make a Scholar of him. He firſt informed him of and from the Scripture, in which the Boy ſo profited, that in a little time he could even Repeat many whole Chapters Verbatim, and if any other in Reading miſſed a Word, he would mind them of it; yea, and an ordinary piece of Latin was become eaſy to the Lad; but having his own Eyes cloſed by Death, he could no longer help the poor Child againſt the want of his.

Thus, As the Aged Polycarp could ſay, Theſe Eighty Six Years have I ſerved my Lord Jeſus Chriſt; and he has been ſuch a good Maſter to me all this while, that I will not now forſake him. Such a Polycarp was our Eliot; he had been ſo many Years engaged in the ſweet Service of the Lord Jeſus Chriſt, that he could not now give it over: 'Twas his Ambition, and his Privilege, to bring forth Fruit in old Age; and what Veneration the Church of Smyrna paid unto that Angel of theirs, we were upon the like Accounts willing to give unto this Man of God.

While he was thus making his Retreat out of this evil World, his Diſcourſes from time to time ran upon, The Coming of the Lord Jeſus Chriſt; it was the Theme which he ſtill had Recourſe unto, and we were ſure to have ſomething of this, whatever other Subject he were upon. On this he talk'd, of this he pray'd, for this he long'd, and eſpecially when any bad News arriv'd, his uſual Reflection thereupon would be, Behold, ſome of the Clouds, in which we muſt look for the Coming of the Son of Man. At laſt, his Lord, for whom he had been long wiſhing, Lord, come! I have been a great while ready for thy Coming! At laſt, I ſay, his Lord came and fetched him away into the Joy of his Lord.

He fell into ſome Languiſhments attended with a Fever, which in a few days brought him into the Pangs (may I ſay? or Joys) of Death; and while he lay in theſe, Mr. Walter coming to him, he ſaid unto him, Brother, Thou art welcome to my very Soul. Pray retire to thy Study for me, and give me leave to be gone; meaning that he ſhould not, by Petitions to Heaven for his Life, detain him here. It was in theſe Languiſhments, that ſpeaking about the Work of the Goſpel among the Indians, he did after this Heavenly manner expreſs himſelf, There is a Cloud (ſaid he) a dark Cloud upon the Work of the Goſpel among the poor Indians. The Lord revive and proſper that Work, and grant it may live when I am Dead. It is a Work, which I have been doing much and long about. But what was the Word I ſpoke laſt? I recal that Word, My Doings. Alas, they have been poor and ſmall, and lean Doings, and I'll be the Man that ſhall throw the firſt Stone at them all.

It has been obſerved, That they who have ſpoke many conſiderable things in their Lives, uſually ſpeak few at their Deaths. But it was otherwiſe with our Eliot, who after much Speech of and for God in his Life-time, uttered ſome things little ſhort of Oracles on his Death-Bed, which, 'tis a thouſand Pities, they were not more exactly regarded and recorded. Thoſe Authors that have taken the pains to Collect, Apophthegmata Morientum, have not therein been unſerviceable to the Living; but the Apophthegms of a Dying Eliot muſt have had in them a Grace and a Strain truly extraordinary; and indeed the vulgar Error of the ſignal ſweetneſs in the Song of a Dying Swan, was a very Truth in our Expiring Eliot; his laſt Breath ſmelt ſtrong of Heaven, and was Articled into none but very gracious Notes; one of the laſt whereof, was, Welcome Joy! and at laſt it went away calling upon the ſtanders by, to Pray, pray, pray! Which was the thing in which ſo vaſt a Portion of it, had been before Employ'd.

This was the Peace in the End of this Perfect and upright Man; thus was there another Star fetched away to be placed among the reſt that the third Heaven is now enriched with. He had once, I think, a pleaſant Fear, that the Old Saints of his Acquaintance, eſpecially thoſe two deareſt Neighbours of his, Cotton of Boſton, and Mather of Dorcheſter, which were got ſafe to Heaven before him, would ſuſpect him to be gone the wrong way, becauſe he ſtaid ſo long behind them. But they are now together with a Bleſſed Jeſus, beholding of his Glory, and celebrating the High Praiſes of him that has call'd them into his marvellous Light. Whether Heaven was any more Heaven to him, becauſe of his finding there, ſo many Saints, with whom he once had his Deſireable Intimacies, yea, and ſo many Saints which had been the Seals of his own Miniſtry in this lower World, I cannot ſay; but it would be Heaven enough unto him, to go unto that Jeſus, whom he had lov'd, preach'd, ſerv'd, and in whom he had been long aſſured, there does All Fullneſs dwell. In that Heaven I now leave him: Not without Grynæus's Pathetical Exclamations [O beatum illum diem!] ‘Bleſſed will be the Day, O ‘Bleſſed the Day of our Arrival to the Glorious ‘Aſſembly of Spirits, which this great Saint is ‘now rejoicing with!

Bereaved New-England, where are thy Tears, at this Ill boding Funeral? We had a Tradition among us, ‘That the Country could never ‘periſh, as long as Eliot was alive. But into whoſe Hands muſt this Hippo fall, now the Auſtin of it is taken away? Our Eliſha is gone, and now who muſt next Year invade the Land? The Jews have a Saying, Quando Luminaria patiuntur Eclipſin, malum ſignum eſt mundo; But I am ſure, 'tis a diſmal Eclipſe that has now befallen our New-Engliſh World. I confeſs, many of the Ancients fell into the Vanity of eſteeming the Reliques of the Dead Saints, to be the Towers and Ramparts of the Places that enjoy'd them; and the Dead Bodies of two Apoſtles in the City, made the Poet cry out,

A Facie Hoſtili duo propugnacula præſunt.

If the Duſt of dead Saints could give us any Protection, we are not without it; here is a Spot of American Soyl that will afford a rich Crop of it, at the Reſurrection of the Juſt. Poor New-England has been as Glaſtenbury of Old was called, A Burying-place of Saints. But we cannot ſee a more terrible Prognoſtick, than Tombs filling apace with ſuch Bones, as thoſe of the Renowned Eliot's; the whole Building of this Country trembles at the Fall of ſuch a Pillar.

For many Months before he dy'd, he would often chearfully tell us, ‘That he was ſhortly ‘going to Heaven, and that he would carry a ‘deal of good News thither with him; he ‘ſaid, he would carry Tidings to the Old ‘Founders of New-England, which were now ‘in Glory, that Church-Work was yet carried ‘on among us: That the Number of our Churches was continually encreaſing: And that ‘the Churches were ſtill kept as big as they ‘were, by the Daily Additions of thoſe that ‘ſhall be ſaved. But the going of ſuch as he from us, will apace diminiſh the Occaſions of ſuch happy Tidings.

What ſhall we now ſay? Our Eliot himſelf uſed moſt affectionately to bewail the Death of all Uſeful Men; yet if one brought him the notice of ſuch a thing, with any Deſpondencies, or ſaid, O Sir, ſuch an one is Dead, what ſhall we do? He would anſwer, Well, but God lives, Chriſt lives, the Old Saviour of New-England yet lives, and he will Reign till all his Enemies are made his Footſtool. This, and only this, Conſideration have we to relieve us; and let it be accompanied with our Addreſſes to the God of the Spirits of all Fleſh, that there may be Timothies raiſed up in the room of our Departed Pauls; and that when our Moſes's are gone, the Spirit which was in thoſe Brave Men, may be put upon the ſurviving Elders of our Iſrael.

The laſt Thing that ever our Eliot put off, was, The Care of all the Churches, which with a moſt Apoſtolical and Evangelical Temper he was continually ſollicitous about. When the Churches of New England were under a very uncomfortable Proſpect, by the advantage which Men that ſought the Ruine of thoſe Golden and Holy and Reformed Societies, had obtained againſt them. God put it into the Heart of one well known in theſe Churches, to take a Voyage into England, that he might by his Mediations at Whitehall, divert the Storms that were impending over us. 'Tis not eaſy to expreſs what Affection our Aged Eliot proſecuted this Undertaking with; and what Thankſgiving he rendred unto God for any hopeful Succeſſes of it. But becauſe one of the laſt Times, and for ought I know, the laſt of his ever ſetting Pen to Paper in the World, was upon this occaſion; I ſhall tranſcribe a ſhort Letter, which was written by the ſhaking hand, that had heretofore by Writing deſerved ſo well from the Church of God, but was now taking its leave of Writing for ever. It was written to the Perſon that was Engaging for us, and thus it ran.

Reverend and Beloved Mr. Increaſe Mather,

‘I Cannot write. Read Neh. 2. 10. When ‘Sanballat the Horonite, and Tobijah the ‘Servant, the Ammonite, heard of it; it grie‘ved them exceedingly, that there was come ‘a Man to ſeek the Welfare of the Children ‘of Iſrael.

‘Let thy bleſſed Soul, feed full and fat upon ‘this and other Scriptures. All other things I ‘leave to other Men; and reſt,

Your Loving Brother,

JOHN ELIOT.

Theſe Two or Three Lines manifeſt the Care of the Churches which breath'd in this great Old Man, as long as he had a Breath to draw in the World. And ſince he has left few like him for a Comprehenſive and Univerſal Regard unto the Proſperity of all the Flocks in this Wilderneſs, we have little now to comfort us in the Loſs of one ſo like a Patriarch among us, but only this, That our poor Churches, it may be hop'd, have ſtill ſome Intereſt in the Cares of our Lord Jeſus Chriſt, Who walks in the midſt of the Golden Candleſticks. Lord! make our Churches and keep them, yet Golden Candleſticks! Amen.

BUT I have not obtained the End of this Hiſtory, nor may I let this Hiſtory come to an End, until I do with ſome Importunity beſpeak the Endeavours of good Men every where, to labour in that Harveſt which the Bleſſed Eliot juſtly counted worthy of his utmoſt Pains and Cares. It was the Confeſſion of Themiſtocles, that the Victory of Miltiades would not let him ſleep in Quietneſs; may thoſe of our Eliot raiſe a like Emulation in thoſe that have now ſeen the Life of this Evangelical Hero! One Robert Baily (a true Son of Epiphanius) many Years ago publiſhed a Book, wherein ſeveral Groſs Lies, by which the Name of that John Cotton, who was known to be one of the Holieſt Men then alive, was moſt injuriouſly made odious unto the Churches abroad, were accompanied with ſome Reflections upon poor New-England, whereof this was one, The way of their Churches hath moſt exceedingly hindred the Converſion of the poor Pagans: Of all that ever croſſed the American Seas, they are noted as moſt neglectful of the Work of Converſion. We have now ſeen thoſe Aſperſions and Calumnies abundantly wip'd away. But let that which has been the Vindication of New-England, be alſo the Æmulation of the World: Let not poor little New-England, be the only Proteſtant Country that ſhall do any Notable thing for the Propagation of the Faith, unto thoſe Dark Corners of the Earth which are full of cruel Habitations. But the Addreſſes of ſo mean a Perſon as my ſelf, are like to prevail but little abroad with Men of Learning and Figure in the World. However, I ſhall preſume to utter my Wiſhes in the ſight of my Readers; and it is poſſible that the Great God who deſpiſes not the Prayer of the poor, may by the Influences of his Holy Spirit, upon the Hearts of ſome whoſe Eyes are upon theſe Lines, give a Bleſſed Anſwer thereunto.

Wherefore, May the People of New-England, who have ſeen ſo ſenſible a Difference between the Eſtates of thoſe that ſell Drink, and of thoſe that preach Truth, unto the miſerable Salvages among them, as that even this alone might inſpire them, yet from a nobler Conſideration than that of their own outward Proſperity thereby advanced, be encouraged ſtill to proſecute, firſt the Civilizing, and then the Chriſtianizing of the Barbarians, in their Neighbourhood; and may the New Englanders be ſo far Politick as well as Religious, as particularly to make a Miſſion of the Goſpel unto the Mighty Nations of the Weſtern Indians, whom the French have been of late ſo ſtudiouſly, but ſo unſucceſsfully Tampering with; leſt thoſe horrid Pagans, who lately (as 'tis credibly affirmed) had ſuch a Meaſure of Deviliſm and Inſolence in them, as to ſhoot a Volley of great and ſmall Shot againſt the Heavens, in Revenge upon The Man in the Heavens, as they called our Lord, whom they counted the Author of the Heavy Calamities which newly have diſtreſſed them; be found ſpared by our Long-ſuffering Lord, [who then indeed preſently tore the Ground aſunder, with immediate and horrible Thunders from Heaven round about them, but kill'd them not!] for a Scourge to us, that have not uſed our Advantages to make a vertuous People of them. If a King of the Weſt Saxons long ſince aſcribed all the Diaſaſters on any of their Affairs, to Negligencies in this Point, methinks the New-Englanders may not count it unreaſonable in this way to ſeek their own Proſperity. Shall we do what we can that our Lord Jeſus Chriſt may beſtow upon America, (which may more juſtly be call'd Columba) that Salutation, O my Dove!

May the ſeveral Plantations, that live upon the Labours of their Negro's, no more be guilty of ſuch a prodigious Wickedneſs, as to deride, neglect, and oppoſe all due means of bringing their poor Negro's unto our Lord; but may the Maſters of whom God will one Day require the Souls of the Slaves committed unto them, ſee to it, that like Abraham, they have Catechiſed Servants; and not imagine that the Almighty God made ſo many Thouſands of Reaſonable Creatures for nothing, but only to ſerve the Luſts of Epicures, or the Gains of Mammoniſts; leſt the God of Heaven out of meer Pity, if not Juſtice, unto thoſe unhappy Blacks, be provoked unto a Vengeance which may not without Horrour, be thought upon. Lord, when ſhall we ſee Ethiopians read thy Scriptures with Underſtanding!

May the Engliſh Nation do what may be done, that the Welch may not be deſtroy'd for the lack of Knowledge, leſt our Indiſpoſition to do for their Souls, bring upon us all thoſe Judgments of Heaven, which Gildas their Country-man, once told them, that they ſuffered for their Diſregards unto ours; and may the nefandous Maſſacres of the Engliſh by the Iriſh, awaken the Engliſh to conſider, whether they have done enough to reclaim the Iriſh, from the Popiſh Bigottries and Abominations, with which they have been intoxicated.

May the ſeveral Factories and Companies, whoſe Concerns lie in Aſia, Africa, or America, be perſwaded, as Jacob once, and before him his his Grandfather Abraham was, That they always owe unto God certain Proportions of their Poſſeſſions, by the honeſt Payments of which little Quit-Rents, they would certainly ſecure and enlarge their Enjoyment of the Principal; but that they are under a very particular Obligation to communicate of our Spiritual Things, unto thoſe Heathens, by whoſe Carnal Things they are Enriched: And may they therefore make it their Study, to employ ſome able and pious Miniſters, for the Inſtruction of thoſe Infidels with whom they have to deal, and honourably ſupport ſuch Miniſters in that Employment.

May the Poor Greeks, Armenians, Muſcovites, and others, in the Eaſtern Countries, wearing the Name of Chriſtians, that have little Preaching and no Printing, and few Bibles or good Books, now at laſt be furniſhed with Bibles, Orthodox Catechiſms, and Practical Treatiſes by the Charity of England; and may our Preſſes provide good ſtore of good Books for them, in their own Tongues, to be ſcattered among them. Who knows what Convulſions might be haſtened upon the whole Mahometan World by ſuch an extenſive Charity!

May ſufficient Numbers of great, wiſe, rich, learned, and godly Men in the Three Kingdoms, procure well-compoſed Societies, by whoſe united Counſels, the Noble Deſign of Evangelizing the World, may be more effectually carried on; and if ſome generous Perſons will of their own Accord combine for ſuch Conſultations, who can tell, but like ſome other Celebrated Societies heretofore formed from ſuch ſmall Beginnings, they may ſoon have that Countenance of Authority, which may produce very Glorious Effects, and give Opportunity to gather vaſt Contributions from all well diſpoſed People, to Aſſiſt and Advance this Progreſs of Chriſtianity. God forbid, that Popery ſhould expend upon cheating, more than ten times what we do upon ſaving the Immortal Souls of Men.

Laſtly, May many Worthy Men, who find their Circumſtances will allow of it, get the Language of ſome Nations that are not yet brought home to God; and wait upon the Divine Providence, for God's leading them to, and owning them in their Apoſtolical Undertakings. When they remember what Ruffinus relates concerning the Converſion of the Iberians, and what Socrates, with other Authors, relates concerning the Converſion wrought by occaſion of Frumentius and Ædeſius, in the Inner India, all as it were by Accident, ſurely 'twill make them try, what may be done by Deſign for ſuch things now in our Day! Thus, let them ſee, whether while we at home in the midſt of weariſome Temptations, are Angling with Rods, which now and then catch one Soul for our Lord, they ſhall not be Fiſhing with Nets, which will bring in many Thouſands of thoſe, concerning whom with unſpeakable Joy in the Day of the Lord, they may ſay, Behold, I and the Children which God has given me! Let them ſee, whether, ſuppoſing they ſhould proſper no farther than to Preach the Goſpel of the Kingdom in all the World for a Witneſs unto all Nations, yet the End which is then to come, will not bring to them the more happy Lot, wherein they ſhall ſtand, that are found ſo doing.

Let no Man be diſcouraged by the Difficulties, which the Devil will be ready to clog ſuch Attempts againſt his Kingdom with; for I will take leave ſo to Tranſlate the Words of the Wiſe Man, in Prov. 27. 4. What is able to ſtand before Zeal? I am well ſatisfy'd, that if Men had the Wiſdom, To diſcern the Signs of the Times, they would be all Hands at Work, to ſpread the Name of our Jeſus into all the Corners of the Earth. Grant it, O my God; and Lord Jeſus, Come quickly.

A Copy of a LETTER from the very Reverend Mr. Richard Baxter, to Mr. Increaſe Mather (then in London.)

Written upon the Sight of Mr. Eliot's LIFE, in a Former Edition.

Dear Brother,

'I Thought I had been near Dying at 12 a 'Clock, in Bed; but your Book reviv'd 'me: I lay Reading it, until between One 'and Two. I knew much of Mr. Eliot's Opinions, by many Letters, which I had from 'him. There was no Man on Earth, whom 'I Honour'd above him. It is his Evangelical 'Work, that is the Apoſtolical Succeſſion that ‘ I plead for. I am now Dying, I hope, as he did. It pleaſed me to Read from him, my Caſe, [My Underſtanding faileth, my Memory faileth, my Tongue faileth, (and my Hand and Pen fail) but my Charity faileth not.] That Word much comforted me. I am as Zealous a Lover of the New-England Churches, as any Man, according to Mr. Noyes, Mr. Nortons, Mr. Mitchels, and the Synods Model.

‘ I loved your Father, upon the Letters I received from him. I love you better for your Learning, Labours, and peaceable Moderation. I love your Son better than either of you, for the Excellent Temper that appeareth in his Writings. O that Godlineſs and Wiſdom thus Increaſe in all Families! He hath Honoured himſelf Half as much as Mr. Eliot: I ſay, but Half as much; for Deeds excel Words. God preſerve you, and New-England! Pray for,

Your Fainting,

Languiſhing Friend,

Ri. Baxter.

INTRODUCTION.

READER,

P*Eruſe, I pray, and ponder theſe Words of the Incomparable* Turretine.

Singularem Dei Gratiam, non poſſumus, quin Æternis Laudibus, Celebremus, quod Noviſſimis hiſce ſæculis, reſtitutâ Evangelii Luce, tot tantoſq; Viros, Doctrinâ & Inſigni Pietate Præditos, ad Opus Reformationis Inchoandum & Promovendum Vocaverit; qui uberrimâ Rerum Sacrarum Scientiâ imbuti, & Heroico Spiritu donati, tanquam [אנשי מופת] Viri Prodigis, Tubæ Evangelicæ Sonitu, & Veritatis Divinæ Fulgore, Tenebras Erroris Craſſiſſimas fæliciſſime fugarunt, Antichriſti Regnum Concuſſerunt, & Eccleſiam a Multis ſæculis miſere Captivam, & Tyrannidis Jugo pluſquam ferreo tantum non oppreſſam, è Babylone Myſticâ glorioſe Evocârunt.

Thou art prepared then to proceed, in what Remains of our Hiſtory.

Reader, Thou knoweſt the way for a Man to become Wiſe, was thus declared by an Oracle, ſi concolor fieret Mortuis.

And thou wilt not forget that Leſſon ſometimes given;

‘ Since we have lived here, and ſince we are
‘ to die, and yet live after Death, and others
‘ will ſucceed us when we are Dead, We are ‘ greatly concerned, to ſend before us a very ‘ Good Treaſure, to carry with us a very Good ‘ Conſcience, and to leave behind us a very ‘ Good Example.

Behold ſome of them, who did ſo!

It hath been Remark'd, That when Sarah call'd her Husband Lord; her Speech was all an heap of Sinful Infidelity; there was but one Good Word in it: Yet the Spirit of God, long after takes notice of that Word. And why ſhould not we then take notice, of many a Good Work, occurring in the Lives of thoſe, concerning whom yet we do not pretend or ſuppoſe, that they lived altogether free from Infirmities? Their Infirmities were but Humanities.

CHAP. I.

REMAINS of the Firſt Claſſis.

THE ſurviving Friends of the Reſt, mentioned in the Firſt Catalogue of Confeſſors, by whom the Goſpel of our Lord Jeſus Chriſt was brought into this Wilderneſs, having ſupplied me with ſo few and ſmall Informations concerning them, that I am of the Opinion, Præſtat nulla quam Pauca dicere. Let all their Vertues then be Galaxied into this one Indiſtinct Luſtre, they were Faithful Servants of Chriſt, and Sufferers for their being ſo.

Nor is it unlikely that there might be ſome among thoſe good Men, who yet might be, in ſo little Extraordinary, that there might be the ſame Account given of them, that there was of a certain Biſhop of Rome, in the Second Century, Nihil præclari de Gubernatione & factis ejus commemorari poteſt; and although we New-Englanders do dwell in ſo Cold, and ſo Clear an Air, that more of the ſmaller Stars may be ſeen by our Conſiderers than in many other Places, yea, and not only the Nebuloſa of Cancer it ſelf, but even the Leſſer Stars which compoſe that Cloud, are Conſidered among us; nevertheleſs, for us to attempt the Writing of their Lives, would carry too much Fondneſs in it: Nor do we forget, that Suum eſt cuiq; ordi vulgus.

Moreover, there were divers of theſe Worthy Men, who by removing back to England upon the Turn of the Times, have almoſt releaſed us from ſuch a Large Account of them, as otherwiſe might have been expected from us: And yet ſome Good Account of not a few among them, is to be reported. I remember, Dr. Patin in his Travels, tells us, That in a certain Muſæum at Vienna, he ſaw a Cherry-ſtone, on which were engraved above an Hundred Portraitures, with different Ornaments of the Head upon them. I muſt now endeavour a Tenth part of an Hundred Pourtraitures, with different Ornaments of the Mind upon each of them; nevertheleſs I am to take up almoſt as much as little room as a Cherry-ſtone for them all. Particularly,

Mr. RICHARD BLINMAN. After a Faithful Diſcharge of his Miniſtry, at Gloceſter, and at New-London, he returned into England; and living to a good Old Age, he, who wherever he came, did ſet himſelf to Do Good, concluded his Life at the City of Briſtol, where one of the laſt Things he did, was to defend in Print the Cauſe of Infant Baptiſm.

Mr. SAMUEL EATON. He was the Son of Mr. Richard Eaton, the Vicar of Great Burdworth in Cheſhire, and the Brother of Mr. Theophilus Eaton, the Renowned Governour of New-Haven. His Education was at the Univerſity of Oxford: And becauſe it will doubtleſs recommend him to find ſuch a Pen, as that which wrote the Athenæ Oxonienſes thus Characteriſing of him, Reader, thou ſhalt have the very Words of that Writer, concerning him: After he had left the Univerſity, he entred into the Sacred Function, took Orders according to the Church of England, and was Beneficed in his Country: But having been puritanically Educated, he did diſſent in ſome Particulars thereof. Whereupon finding his Place too warm for him, he Revolted, and went into New England, and Preached among the Brethren there. But let us have no more of this Wood! Mr Eaton was a very Holy Man, and a Perſon of great Learning and Judgment, and a moſt Incomparable Preacher. But upon his Diſſent from Mr. Davenport, about the Narrow Terms, and Forms of Civil Government, by Mr. Davenport, then forced upon that Infant-Colony, his Brother adviſed him to a Removal: And calling at Boſton by the way, when he was on his Removal, the Church there were ſo highly affected with his Labours, thus occaſionally enjoyed among them, that they would fain have engaged him unto a Settlement in that Place. But the Lord Jeſus Chriſt had more Service for him in Old-England, than he could have done in New; and therefore arriving in England, he became the Paſtor of a Church at Duckenfield, in the Pariſh of Stockfort, in Cheſhire, and afterwards at Stockport; and a Perſon of Eminent Note and Uſe, not only in that, but alſo in the Neighbour-County.

After the Reſtoration of K. Charles II. he underwent firſt Silencing, and then much other Suffering, from the Perſecution, which yet calls for a National Repentance. He was the Author of many Books, and eſpecially of ſome in Defence of the Chriſtian Faith, about the God-Head of Chriſt, againſt the Socinian Blaſphemies: And his Help was joined unto Mr. Timothy Tailors, in writing ſome Treatiſes entituled, The Congregational Way Juſtified. By theſe he Out-lives his Death, which fell out at Denton, in the Pariſh of Mancheſter in Lancaſhire (where ſays our Friend Rabſhakeh Wood, he had ſheltered himſelf among the Brethren after his Ejection) on the Ninth Day of January, 1664. and he was Buried in the Chapel there.

Mr. WILLIAM HOOK. This Learned, Holy, and Humble Man, was born about 1600. and was for ſome time a Collegue with Mr. Davenport, in the Paſtoral Charge of the Church at our New-Haven; on the Day of his Ordination, whereto he humbly choſe for his Text thoſe Words in Judg. 7. 10. Go thou, with Pharah thy Servant; and as humbly raiſ'd his Doctrine, That in Great Services a little Help is better than none; which he gave, as the Reaſon of his own being joined with ſo conſiderable a Gideon as Mr. Davenport. After this returning into England, he was for ſome while, Miniſter at Axmouth in Devonſhire, and then Maſter of the Savoy on the Strand, near London, and ſo Chaplain to the Greateſt Man, then in the Nation. He was the Author of divers Compoſures that ſaw the Light; whereof perhaps one of the moſt memorable is that about, The Privileges of the Saints on Earth above thoſe in Heaven. But there was one of his Compoſures, which did more nearly concern himſelf, than perhaps his Perſecutors did imagine; and that was about, The Slaughter of the Witneſſes: For he bore a part in that Slaughter, when his Teſtimony to the Kingly Office of the Lord Jeſus Chriſt, in his Church, procured him the Condition of a ſilenced Non-Conformiſt, from May 24. 1662. to March 21. 1677. when he died in, or near London, and went from the Priviledges of Labours among the Saints on Earth, to thoſe of Rewards among the Saints in Heaven. He lies buried in the Sleeping-Place on the North-ſide of the New Artillery Garden.

Mr. ROBERT PECK. This Light having been by the Perſecuting Prelates, put under a Buſhel, was, by the good Providence of Heaven, fetch'd away unto New-England, about the Year 1638. where the Good People of our Hingham did Rejoice in the Light for a Seaſon. But within Two or Three Years, the Invitation of his Friends at Hingham in England, perſwaded him to a Return unto them; where, being though a Great Perſon for Stature, yet a Greater for Spirit, he was greatly ſerviceable for the Good of the Church.

Mr. HUGH PETERS. A Brief Narrative of his Life, both before and after his Abode, for about Seven Years, in the Charge of the Church at Salem, the Reader may find at the Concluſion of his Advice to his Daughter, publiſhed under the Title of, A Dying Father's laſt Legacy to an only Child: And indeed, I heartily Recommend it unto his Reading. The Narrative of his Death has alſo been long ſince publiſhed unto the World: And it reports thoſe to have been amongſt his Laſt Words. Oh! This is a Good Day! He is come that I have long looked for, and I ſhall be with him in Glory!

Mr. THOMAS PETERS. He came over unto New-England, in the Time of the Civil War; and ſtaying but about Three Years, he returned into England. A Worthy Man, and a Writer of certain Pieces, which will, I ſuppoſe, preſerve his Memory among thoſe that are Strangers, as I am thereunto.

Mr. SAXTON. He was a Yorkſhire Man; a Studious and a Learned Perſon, a great Hebrician. The unſettled Condition of the Colony, and ſome unhappy Contention in the Plantation, where he Lived, put him upon removing from Scituate, firſt unto Boſton, and ſo unto England, in his Reduced Age. I find in honeſt Mr. Ryther's Devout Book, Entituled, A Plat for Mariners, this Paſſage related concerning him. 'An Old Puritan Miniſter, [Mr. 'Saxton of Leeds, in Yorkſhire,] in a Storm, 'coming from New-England, when they were 'all expecting the Veſſel to ſink, he ſaid, Oh 'who is now for Heaven, who is bound for Hea'ven!

I ſay nothing, becauſe I know nothing of Mr. Brecy; but this, he alſo returned into England. But the leſs of him, the more might be written of Mr. GILES FIRMIN, who viſited New-England in his younger Years, but afterwards became, in England, an Eminent Preacher of the Goſpel, and a Writer, as well as a Preacher of it. Among the reſt of his Books, that Golden one, which is Entituled, The Real Chriſtian, does Really prove the Title to be his own Character; and the reſt, as well as that, prove him to be an Able Scholar, as well as a Real Chriſtian. I ſuppoſe him to be yet living in a Fruitful Old Age, at Ridgewel in Eſſex: But ſuch Demonſtrations, he hath ſtill given of his Affections to New-England, on all occaſions, that he might have juſtly reſented it, as an Injury, if he had been wholly omitted in the Catalogue of them that have deſerved well of that Country.

Beſides theſe Perſons, there are ſome others, of whom a larger Account might be endeavoured.

Three ſhall be All that we will offer.

CHAP. II.

The LIFE of Mr. THOMAS ALLEN.

IT was a Computation made in that Year, when our Colony was juſt Forty Years Old, and our Land had ſeen Reſt Forty Years, that of Miniſters which had then come from England unto us, chiefly in the Ten Firſt Years, there were Ninety Four: Of which Number, Thirty One were then Alive; Thirty Six had retired unto Heaven; Twenty Seven had returned back to Europe.

Of thoſe Firſt Comers, who again left the Country, ſoon after their Firſt Coming, one was that Worthy Man Mr. Thomas Allen, who after he had for ſome time approved himſelf a Pious and Painful Miniſter of the Goſpel, in our Charleſtown, ſaw Cauſe to return back into England; where he lived unto a good Old Age, in the City of Norwich.

The Name of Allen being but our Pronunciation of the Saxon Word, Alwine, which is as much as to ſay Beloved of All, expreſſed the Fate of this our Allen, among the Generality of the well-diſpoſed. And being a Man greatly Beloved, he applied himſelf to enquire much into the Times, wherein his Predeceſſor Daniel, was an Hard Student, when the Angel came to call him ſo.

Though he ſtaid not very long in this Country, yet this Country lays claim eſpecially to Two of his Compoſures, which have been Serviceable unto the World. The former of theſe was printed here; namely, An Invitation unto Thirty Sinners to come unto their Saviour; prefaced and aſſiſted into the Light by our Worthy Higginſon. But the latter was Printed beyond Sea; and Entituled, A Chain of Scripture Chronology: Wherein the Author was diſpoſed like the Illuſtrious Bucholtzer, who being weary of Controverſy, betook himſelf to Chronology, ſaying, Malle ſe Computare quam Diſputare. This is a moſt Learned and uſeful Piece; and all my further Account of the Author ſhall be in the Words of the Famous Greenhil, in his Epiſtle before it. Says he,

‘This Work having had its Conception in a Remote Quarter of the World, it was latent in his Cloſet, the greateſt part of Seven Years; as Joaſh ſometimes was kept ſecret in a Chamber of the Temple, before he was brought to publick View, by the Means of Jehojadah, that good Old High Prieſt: And it had ſtill been ſuppreſſed had not the Author been preſſed, and charged with hiding of a Talent in a Napkin, by ſuch another as Jehojadah was [Mr. John Cotton] whoſe Soul is now amongſt the Saints in Heaven, reſting from its manifold Labours, and whoſe Name both is, and ever will be precious in all the Gates of the Daughters of Sion, through all Ages. When Moſes, Daniel, and John were in ſuffering Conditions, they had much Light from God, and gave forth much Truth concerning the Church and the Times: And many of our Reverend, Learned, and Godly Brethren, being through the Iniquity of the Times driven into America, by looking up unto God, and by ſearching of the Scriptures, received and found much Light concerning the Church and the Times; and have made us, and Ages to come, beholden to them, by communicating the ſame; amongſt whom now, is this Learned and Judicious Author.

From the Epitaph of Helvicus, the Great Chronologiſt, we will preſume to borrow a Tetraſtick, for this great Student in Chronology.

CHAP III.

The LIFE of Mr. JOHN KNOWLES.

OUR Bleſſed Saviour has denounced that Righteous and Fearful Curſe, upon thoſe, who deſpiſe the Offers of his Glorious Goſpel, Whoſoever ſhall not receive you, nor hear your Words, it ſhall be more tolerable for Sodom and Gomorrah, in the Day of Judgment, than for that City. And the Excellent Knowles, was an Eminent Perſon among thoſe Embaſſadors of Heaven, in the Quarrel of whoſe Entertainment, the King of Heaven, wonderfully accompliſhed that Prediction. If New-England hath been in ſome Reſpects Immanuel's Land, it is well; but this I am ſure of, Immanuel-College contributed more than a little to make it ſo, a Fellow whereof once was our Mr. John Knowles.

He was among the Firſt Comers into New-England, joined as a Colleague with Mr. Philips at Watertown. But as he began, ſo he ended his pious Days in England; between which there occurred one very Remarkable Providence, now to be Related.

In the Year 1641. One Mr. Bennet, a Gentleman from Virginia, arrived at Boſton, with Letters from well-diſpoſed People there, unto the Miniſters of New-England, bewailing their ſad Condition, for the want of the Glorious Goſpel, and entreating that they might hence be ſupplied with Miniſters of that Goſpel. Theſe Letters were openly Read at Boſton upon a Lecture-Day; Whereupon the Miniſters agreed upon ſetting apart a Day for Faſting and Prayer, to implore the Direction of God about this Buſineſs; and then the Churches of Watertown, Braintree, and Rowly, having each of them two Miniſters apiece, Mr. Philips of Watertown, Mr. Thompſon of Braintree, and Mr. Miller of Rowly, were pitched upon for the intended Service; whereof the General Court ſo approved, that it was ordered, the Governour ſhould Recommend theſe Perſons by his Letters to the Governour and Council at Virginia.

Mr. Philips being Indiſpoſed for the Voyage, Mr. Knowles went in his Room; and Mr. Miller's Bodily Weakneſſes, cauſed him alſo to Decline the Voyage. But the Two Churches of Watertown and Braintree, though they loved their Miniſters very well, yet cheerfully diſmiſſed them unto this great Concern; accounting it their Honour that they had ſuch Deſireable Perſons, by whom they might make a Miſſion of the Goſpel, unto a People that ſat in the Region and Shadow of Death.

On Oct. 7. 1642. They began their Voyage: At Rhode-Iſland, they lay long Wind-bound; and they met with ſo many other Difficulties, that they made it Eleven Weeks of dangerous Paſſage, before they arrived at Virginia: Nevertheleſs, they had this Advantage in the way, that they took in a Third Miniſter for their Aſſiſtance; namely, Mr. James, then at New-Haven.

Though their hazardous Retardations in their Voyage, made them ſometimes to ſuſpect, whether they had a clear Call of God unto their Undertaking, yet the Succeſs of their Miniſtry, when they came to Virginia, did ſufficiently extinguiſh that Suſpicion. They had little Encouragement from the Rulers of the Place, but they had a kind Entertaiment with the People; and in the ſeveral parts of the Country where they were beſtowed, there were many Perſons by their Miniſtry brought home to God.

But as Auſtin told Mankind, The Devil was never turned Chriſtian yet: the Powers of Darkneſs could not count it for their Intereſt, that the Light of the Goſpel powerfully preached, ſhould reach thoſe Dark Places of the Earth. The Rulers of that Province did not allow of their publick Preaching; but inſtead thereof, an Order was made, That ſuch as would not conform to the Ceremonies of the Church of England, ſhould by ſuch a Day, depart the Country. By which Order, theſe Holy, Faithful, Painful Miniſters, were driven away from the Virginia Coaſt: But when they return'd, as they Left behind them, not a few Seals of their Miniſtry, ſo they Brought with them ſome, who afterwards proved Bleſſings to New-England.

Well, before the Day fixed for the Departure of theſe Miniſters came, the Indians far and near having entred into a Conſpiracy, to cut off the Engliſh in thoſe Territories, executed it in an Horrible Maſſacre, whereby at leaſt Three Hundred poor Engliſh Virginians, were at once Barbarouſly Butchered, which Maſſacre was alſo accompanied with a Grievous Mortality, that cauſed many ſober Perſons to Remove out of that Colony, and others to acknowledge the Juſtice of God upon them, for the Ill-Treats, which had been given to the Miniſters of his Goſpel, and the Goſpel brought by thoſe Miniſters.

After this, did Mr. Knowles remove back to England, where he was a Preacher at the Cathedral, in the City of Briſtol, and Lived in Great Credit and Service for divers Years.

But when the Act of Uniformity, made ſuch a Slaughter of Non-Conformiſts, Mr. Knowles was one of the Miniſters which were ſilenced by that Act. And after that Civil Death, he lived in London a Collegue to the famous Mr. Kentiſh, and a Bleſſing to the Church of God.

Exerciſing his Miniſtry in the City of London, he underwent many Grievous Perſecutions, and received as many Glorious Deliverances. —— But when ſome of his Friends diſcouraged him, with Fears of his being thrown into Priſon, if he did not affect more of Privacy, he Reply'd, In Truth, I had rather be in a Gaol, where I might have a Number of Souls, to whom I might Preach the Truths of my Bleſſed Maſter, than live Idle in my own Houſe, without any ſuch Opportunities.

He lived unto a very Great Age, and ſtaid longer out of Heaven, than the moſt of them that Live in Heaven upon Earth. But in his great Age, he continued ſtill to do Great Good; wherein his Labours were ſo fervent and eager, that he would ſometimes Preach till he fell down; and yet have a Youthful Readineſs in the Matter and Spirit of his Preaching. His laſt Falling Down was a Flying up; and an Eſcape to that Land where The Weary are at Reſt.

Eliſha's Bones. The LIFE of Mr. HENRY WHITFIELD.

Cupiditatem Imitandi fecit; Spem abſtulit.

THere has been a Trite Proverb, which I wiſh indeed were ſo Thread-bare as to be never uſed more; which, though 'twere pity it ſhould ever ſpeak Engliſh, has been Engliſhed, A Young Saint, an Old Devil. I remember Eraſmus believes, the Devil himſelf was the Author of that Proverb. This I am ſure, the Proverb was none of Solomon's, who ſays, Train up a Child in the way that he ſhould go, and when he is old, he will not leave it. Indeed a Young Sinner may make an Old Devil; a Young Hypocrite, a Young Diſſembler, pretending to Saintſhip, may do ſo; but a Young Saint will certainly make an Old Angel.

Angelicus Juvenis, ſenibus Satanizat in Annis.

And ſo did our Bleſſed Whitfield. He was a Gentleman of Good Extraction by his Birth; but of a Better by his New-Birth: Nor did his New-Birth come very long after his Birth. He did betimes begin his Journey Heavenwards; but he did not ſoon Tire in that Journey; nor did the Serpent by the way, the Adder in the Path, prevail to make him come ſhort home at laſt.

His Father being an Eminent Lawyer, deſigned this his youngeſt Son, to be a Lawyer alſo, and therefore afforded him a Liberal Education, firſt at the Univerſity, and then at the Inns of Court. But the Gracious and early Operations of the Holy Spirit, on his Heart, inclined him rather to be Preacher of the Goſpel, and in his Inclinations he was encouraged by ſuch Eminent Miniſters, as Dr. Stanton, Mr. Byfield, and others.

He was very pious in his Childhood, and becauſe pious, therefore Prayerful; yea, ſo addicted unto Prayer, that in the very School it ſelf, he would be ſometimes Praying, when the Scholars about him imagined by his Poſtures, that he had only been intent upon his Book.

As he grew up, he grew exceedingly in his Acquaintance with God, with Chriſt, and with the exceeding Riches of Grace diſplay'd in the New Covenant. And he gained ſuch a grounded Aſſurance of his own ſaving Intereſt, in that Covenant, that he had not for Forty Years together, fallen into any Miſcarriage, which made any Conſiderable Breach upon that Aſſurance.

Oekely in Surrey, was the Place where the Providence of the Lord Jeſus Chriſt now ſtation'd him; where his Labours were bleſſed unto the Good of many, not only in his own Town, but in all the Circumjacent Country, from whence on Holy-Days, the People would flock to hear him. At length, obſerving that he did more Good, by Preaching ſometimes Abroad, than by preaching always at Home, and enjoying then a Church-Living of the firſt Magnitude, beſides a fair Eſtate of his own, he procured and maintained another Godly Miniſter at Okely; and by means thereof, he had the Liberty to preach in many Places, which were deſtitute of Miniſters, where his Labours were ſucceſsful in the Converſion of many Souls unto God.

He was one who abounded in Liberality and Hoſpitality; and his Houſe was always much Reſorted unto. He was for Twenty Years, a Conformiſt; but yet a pious Non-Conformiſt was all this while very dear unto him: And ſuch perſecuted Servants of Chriſt, as Mr. Cotton, Mr. Hooker, Mr. Goodwin, and Mr. Nye, then moleſted for their Non-Conformity, were ſheltered under his Roof. At laſt, being preſent at the Conference between Mr. Cotton, and ſome other Famous Divines, upon the Controverſies of Church-Diſcipline, there appeared ſo much of Scripture and Reaſon on that ſide, that Mr. Whitfield alſo became a Non-Conformiſt. But now, finding it impoſſible for him, to proceed in the Publick Exerciſe of his Miniſtry, he obtained a Godly Succeſſor, he embraced a Modeſt Seceſſion, and he Reſigned his Place with the true Spirit of Self-Denial.

He now ſold his Perſonal Eſtate, and came over to New-England, in the Year 1639. with a Multitude of poor People, out of Surrey, Kent, and Suſſex, who could not live without his Miniſtry. With theſe, he began a New Plantation, about Twenty Miles from New-Haven, and called it Guilford: Where he mightily encouraged the People to bear with a Chriſtian Patience and Fortitude, the Difficulties of the Wilderneſs, which they were come into; not only by his Exhortations, but alſo by his own Exemplary Contentment, with low and mean Things, after he had once lived in a more ſplendid manner, than moſt other Miniſters.

His way of Preaching was much like Dr. Sibs's; and there was a marvellous Majeſty and Sanctity, obſervable in it. He carried much Authority with him; and uſing frequently to Viſit the particular Families of his Flock, with Profitable Diſcourſes on the Great Concerns of their Interiour State, it is not eaſy to deſcribe the Reverence with which they entertained him.

He ſojourned Eleven Years at Guilford, living with his large Family of Ten Children, moſtly on his own Eſtate, which was thereby exceedingly exhauſted. But the Inconveniencies of New-England, and Invitations to Old, at length overcame him, to return into his Native Country: And at the Time of parting, the whole Town accompanied him unto the Water-ſide, with a Spring Tide of Tears, becauſe they ſhould ſee his Face no more.

This was in the Year 1650.

How highly his Ancient Friends then welcomed him; how highly the greateſt Perſons in the Nation then reſpected him; how faithfully he then diſcharged his Miniſtry in the City of Wincheſter; how many Services he occaſionally did for New-England; and how Triumphantly at laſt he flew away to Heaven; muſt be no part of this Hiſtory.

But let the Excellent Words of Lupichius in his Epitaph, be borrow'd for an Epitaph to this Rare Perſon; inaſmuch as no Words can more livelily expreſs the very Spirit of all his Life.

Dum mihi Vita fuit, Tibi, CHRISTE, Fidelis ut eſſem,
Mente Pia Studui, Dogma Sonando Tuum.
Tu mihi Dæliciæ, — Tu Divitiæq; fuiſti;
Tu mihi Defuncto, Gloria, Vita, Salus.

CHAP. V.

REMAINS of the Second Claſſis.

OF our Second Catalogue are now fallen aſleep, ARNOLD, the Author of a Savoury Diſcourſe, publiſhed under the Title of David ſerving his Generation: BISHOP, BULKLY, CARTER, DEAN, HANFORD [of which Worthy Man, let the Reader, here in a Crotchet, as we go along, refreſh himſelf with one Crotchetly Paſſage: He was near Forty Years a Faithful, Painful, and Pious Miniſter at Norwalk, even from the firſt Settlement of that Plantation: But though he had the Comfort of ſeeing a Good and Great Succeſs to his Miniſtry there, yet there were Times wherein the Fire of Contention annoy'd the Affairs of that Church exceedingly: And in this Fire, there once happened ſuch a Smoke, that the People made this one of their Articles to the Council againſt him, that in a certain Paper of his, he had opprobriouſly called them Indian Devils: The Council thereupon with Wonder, calling for the Paper, wherein the Reproachful Terms was to be look'd for, found his Expreſſion to have been only thus, Every Individual among them: Which occaſioned a very Joco-ſerious Reflection upon the Ridiculous Errors and Follies that attend a Quarrelſome Diſpoſition:] HOUGH, NEWTON. And into this Catalogue I am content that there ſhould be received (for the Saints of this Catalogue already departed have received him) Honeſt Mr. Nicholas Baker of Scituate; who, tho' he had but a Private Education, yet being a Pious and Zealous Man; or as Dr. Arrowſmith expreſſes it, ſo Good a Logician, that he could offer up to God a Reaſonable Service, ſo Good an Arithmetician, that he could wiſely Number his Days; and ſo Good an Orator, that he perſwaded himſelf to be a Good Chriſtian; and being alſo one of good Natural Parts, eſpecially of a ſtrong Memory, was choſen Paſtor of the Church there; and in the Paſtoral Charge of that Church, he continued about Eighteen Years, until that Horror of Mankind, and Reproach of Medicine, the STONE (under which he preached Patience, by a very memorable Example of it; never letting fall any Word worſe than this, which was an uſual Word with him, A Mercy of God it is no worſe!) put an end unto his Days.

But he that brings up the Rear, is Mr. JOHN WOODBRIDGE, of whom we are able to ſpeak a little more particularly.

He was Born at Stanton, near Highworth, in Wiltſhire, about the Year 1613. of which Pariſh his Father was Miniſter; and a Miniſter ſo Able and Faithful, as to obtain an high Eſteem among thoſe that at all knew the Invaluable Worth of ſuch a Miniſter. His Mother was Daughter to Mr. Robert Parker, and a Daughter who did ſo Virtuouſly, that her own Perſonal Character would have made her highly eſteemed, if a Relation to ſuch a Father had not farther added unto the Luſtre of her Character.

Our JOHN was, by his Worthy Parents, trained up in the Way that he ſhould go, and ſent unto Oxford, when his Education and Proficiency at School had ripened him for the Univerſity; and kept at Oxford, until the Oath of Conformity came to be required of him; which neither his Father, nor his Conſcience approving, he removed from thence unto a Courſe of more Private Studies. The Rigorous Enforcing of the Unhappy Ceremonies, then cauſing many that underſtood, and regarded the Second Commandment in the Laws of Heaven, to ſeek a peaceable Receſs for the pure Worſhip of the Lord Jeſus Chriſt in an American Deſart; our young Woodbridge, with the Conſent of his Parents, undertook a Voyage to New-England about the Year 1634. and the Company and Aſſiſtance of his Worthy Uncle Mr. Thomas Parker, was not the leaſt Encouragement of his Voyage.

He had not been long in the Country, before Newberry began to be planted; where he accordingly took up Lands, and ſo ſeated himſelf, that he Comfortably and Induſtriouſly ſtudied on, until the Advice of his Father's Death obliged him to Return into England; where, having ſettled his Affairs, he Returned again unto New-England, bringing with him his Two Brothers; whereof one died by the way. He had married the Daughter of the Honourable Thomas Dudely, Eſq; and the Town of Andover then firſt peeping into the World, he was by the Hands of Mr. Wilſon and Mr. Worceſter, Sept. 16. 1644. ordained the Teacher of the Congregation there.

Here he continued with Good Reputation, diſcharging the Duties of his Miniſtry, until upon the Invitation of his Friends, he went once more to England, in the Year 1647. where he ſoon found Employment (beſides his being a Chaplain to the Commiſſioners treating with the King at the Iſle of Wight) firſt at the Conſiderable Town of Andover, and afterwards at Burford St. Martins, in Wiltſhire; at the laſt of which Places, he continued until the Return of Epiſcopacy firſt ſequeſtred him, and they being outed of the School at Newberry, the Infamous Bartholomew-Act, cauſed him, in the Year 1663. (with his now Numerous Family) to come once more unto New-England. Here it was not long before the Church of Newberry ſolicited him, to become an Aſſiſtant unto his Aged Uncle Mr. Parker; and in anſwer to their Solicitations, he beſtowed his Conſtant, Learned and Holy Labours upon them.

At laſt, there aroſe little Differences between him and ſome of the People upon certain Points of Church-Diſcipline, wherein his Largeneſs and their Straitneſs, might perhaps better have met in a Temper; and theſe Differences ended not, without his putting an end unto his own Miniſtry among them; after which, the Remarkable Bleſſing of God upon his own private Eſtate, abundantly made up to him the Publick Stipend which he had parted withal. The Country hereupon in Token of their Value for him, choſe him a Magiſtrate of the Colony, that ſo he might in yet a more extenſive Capacity, be A Miniſter of God unto them for Good; and upon the Alteration of the Government, he was made a Juſtice of Peace, in which Office he continued unto the laſt.

He had Iſſue Twelve Children, whereof Eleven lived unto the Age of Men and Women: And he had the Conſolation of ſeeing Three Sons, with Two Sons-in-Law, Improved in the Miniſtry of the Goſpel, and Four Grandſons happily advancing thereunto. A Perſon he was, truly of an Excellent Spirit; a Pious Diſpoſition accompanied him from his Early Childhood, and as he grew in Years, he grew in the Proofs and Fruits of his having been ſanctified from his Infancy. He ſpent much of his Time in Holy Meditations, by which the Foretaſts of Heaven, were continually Feeding of his Devout Soul; and he abounded in all other Devotions of Serious, Heavenly, Experimental Chriſtianity.

He was by Nature wonderfully Compoſed, Patient, and Pleaſant; and he was, by Grace, much more ſo: He had a great Command of his Paſſions, and could, and would, and often did forgive Injuries, at a rate that hardly can be imitated. It was rarely or never obſerved, that Worldly Diſappointments made any Grievous Impreſſions upon his Mind; but as once, when Word was brought him, that a ſore Diſaſter had befallen many of his Cattel, the Meſſenger was exceedingly ſurprized, on his beholding the only Reſentments of this Good Man thereupon to be in theſe Humble Expreſſions, which were the firſt he utter'd, What a Mercy it is, that this is the firſt Time that ever I met with ſuch a Diſaſter!

This was the Frame of Mind with which he ſtill entertain'd all Diſaſterous Occurrences. Only he was obſervably overwhelmed by the Death of his moſt Religious, Prudent and Faithful Conſort, when ſhe was July 1. 1691. Fifty Years after his firſt Marriage unto her, torn away from the Deſire of his Eyes. His Value for the whole World, was, after a manner, extinguiſhed in this Loſs, of what was to him the beſt part of it; and he ſometimes declared himſelf deſirous to be gone, whenever the Lord of Heaven ſhould pleaſe to call him thither.

At laſt, about the Beginning of March, 1695. the Strangury arreſted him; and he, who had been a Great Reader, a Great Scholar, a Great Chriſtian, and a Pattern of Goodneſs in all the Succeſſive Stations, wherein the Lord of Hoſts had placed him, on March 17. the Day of the Chriſtian-Sabbath, after much Pain, went unto his Everlaſting Reſt; having a few Minutes before it, refuſed a Glaſs of offered Wine, ſaying, I am going where I ſhall have better!

His Age was about Eighty Two.

Let him now report the reſt himſelf, in a Epitaph, like that on the Tomb of Chriſtianus Machabæus.

Quam Vivens Potui tantum ſperare, Quiete

REMAINS of the Third Claſſis.

SEveral, in our Third Catalogue, have upon the late Revolutions, returned back to Europe, and ſeveral are yet living in Service and Eſteem among our ſelves.

Article (I.) But of thoſe that are gone unto the better World, we have cauſe particularly to remember Mr. THOMAS GILBERT, whoſe Hiſtory is, it may be, ſufficiently related in his Epitaph, which is at this Day to be read on his Tomb in Charleſtown.

Here is Interred the Body of that Reverend, Sincere, Zealous, Devout and Faithful Miniſter of Jeſus Chriſt, Mr. THOMAS GILBERT, ſometime Paſtor of the Church of Chriſt, at Chedle in Cheſhire: Alſo, ſometime Paſtor of the Church of Chriſt at Eling, in Old-England: Who was the Proto-Martyr, the firſt of the Miniſters that ſuffered Deprivation, in the Cauſe of Non-Conformity in England: And after, betaking himſelf to New-England, became Paſtor of the Church of Chriſt, in Topsfield; and at Sixty Three Years of Age, departed this Life. Interred Oct. 28. 1673.

Omnia præterunt, præter amare Deum.

Theſe Things paſs for ever, Vain World, away;
But Love to God, This, This endures for ay.

Sic fuit in Vitâ Gilbertus, ſicq; Receſſu,

Lo here of Gilbert, but a Shadow ſlight;
He was a Star of more Illuſtrious Light.
Such Gilbert was in Life, ſuch in his Death;
God grant we may ſo live, ſo yield our Breath.

Article (II.) On Dec. 28. 1674. Died Mr. John Oxenbridge, a Succeſſor to four Famous JOHNS, in the Paſtoral Charge, of the Firſt Church in Boſton. He was Born in Daventry, Northamptonſhire, Jan. 30. 1608. Both Cambridge and Oxford contributed unto his Liberal Education; and in one of thoſe Univerſities he proceeded Maſter of Arts, in the Year 1631. The Year following, he became a Publick Preacher of the Goſpel; and after this, taking ſucceſſively Two Voyages to Barmudaz, he at length returned into England, and in the Year 1644. became a Paſtor to a Church in Beverly. I find him after this, a Fellow of Eaton-College: But in the General Shipwrack that beſel the Non-Conformiſts, A. C. 1662. I find him ſwimming away to Surrinam, in America. From thence he came to Barbados, in the Year 1667. and to New-England in the Year 1669. where he ſucceeded Mr. Davenport, and continued until his laſt Remove, which was to the City of God.

The Abilities and Inclinations of this Worthy Man, are diſcovered in ſeveral of his publiſhed Compoſures. In England he publiſhed ſeveral Diſcourſes on, The Duty of Watchfulneſs. He alſo publiſhed, A Propoſition of propagating the Goſpel by Chriſtian Colonies, in the Continent of Guianai being ſome Gleanings of a larger Diſcourſe. That larger Diſcourſe is yet ſleeping: But upon Peruſal of the M. SS. I am ſenſible, that there is in it a grateful Variety of Entertainment. After he came to New-England, he publiſhed a Sermon, preached at the Anniverſary Election of our Governour and Aſſiſtants. And he likewiſe publiſhed a Sermon about Seaſonable ſeeking of God.

The Piety which breathed in theſe Compoſures, was but what he maintained in his Daily Walk: And ſometimes he found the Leiſure to Articulate the Breathings of it in Writing. We read concerning Balaam, The Lord put a Word in his Mouth: It ſhould ſeem, his Heart was not Holily affected with what was expreſſed by his Mouth. But the Word was in the Heart, as well as in the Mouth of our Oxenbridge; and his Pen alſo ſometimes tranſcribed his Heart. Once thus particularly.

‘ Certain late Experiments of the Grace of ‘ God in Chriſt, to J. O. a poor Worm, who ‘ deſires to Record them, to the Praiſe of his ‘ Grace.

‘ Nov. 19. 1666. was a Dark Day; my Bo- ‘ dily Spirits being very low (tho' without ‘ Pain) and my Heart ſhut up, that I could ‘ not look up to God. This made me to ap-
‘ prehend the ſad Condition of a Soul deſerted
‘ of God in a Time of Affliction; but the ‘ Lord ſuffered not this Dark Maze to continue.
‘ For that Night he thawed my Heart, and ‘ opened it with ſome Freedom to himſelf.

‘ But what ſhall I ſay for the ſtrange and ſtrong Conſolations; with which he filled my Soul, on the 20 and the 21 of November? No Words can expreſs what I have felt in my Heart. I was wholly taken up with the Thoughts of the Kindneſs of God. I ſaid, What Love is like this Love? And who is a God like unto thee? and what remains for me, but to love and to praiſe thee for ever? Now Death was no Dark Thing to me, neither was any Concern of this Life conſiderable. And now I have ſaid, Who can lay any thing to my Charge, ſince Chriſt hath ſatisfied by his Death, and hath gotten a Releaſe by his Reſurrection, and lives for ever to perfect my Salvation? This hath been a great Stay to me in my Solitary Condition; tho' bereft of ſuch Relations, a precious Wife, and two ſuch Children. But the Lord Jeſus liveth for ever, to do all for me, and be all to me. And I do the more admire and adore the Great God, in his condeſcending ſo much to ſo vile a Worm, that hath been ſo full of Fears and Doubts, and hath ſo much diſpleaſed my Lord Jeſus and his Holy Spirit. That which grieved me moſt, of late Months, is, the Unfixedneſs of my Thoughts on God: And Oh, that the Lord may, by his Eſtabliſhing Spirit, confirm theſe Comforts on me, ſo that I may enjoy them in Death, and improve them for the good of others in Life. I know Satan is a Wrangler; but my Advocate is able to ſilence him!

When the Lord of this Faithful Servant came to call for him, he was found in his Maſter's Work. Towards the Cloſe of a Sermon, which he was preaching at Boſton-Lecture, he was taken with a Degree of an Apoplexy (as John Cyril, the Worthy Bohemian Paſtor was in the Beginning of the former Century, Apoplexia in media ad populum concione correptus) which in two or three Days, ended his Pilgrimage. Thus he had the Wiſh of ſome great Men, Oportet Concionatorem, aut Precantem aut Predicantem, Mori.

Article (III.) On March 24. 167$\frac{8}{9}$. Expired that Excellent Man, Mr. THOMAS WALLEY, about the Age of Sixty one. I can't recover the Day of his Birth, Let it content my Reader, that the Primitive Chriſtians did happily confound the Diſtinction of the Two Times mention'd by the Wiſe Man, A Time to be Born, and a Time to Die, calling the Day of a Saint's Death, by the Name of their Natalitia.

This Man of a Thouſand, was a well accompliſhed Scholar; but his Accompliſhments eſpecially lay in that which the Great Gregory aſſerts to be, Ars Artium, & Scientia Scientiarum, namely, Animarum Regimen.

He was a Chriſtian in whom the Graces of Chriſt very richly adorned, but moſt of all, that which has moſt of Chriſtianity in it, HUMILITY; the Happy Vertue which we may addreſs, with the Acknowledgment once made unto Fœlix, By thee we enjoy great Quietneſs: and by that Vertue he was eminently Serviceable to make all Quiet, wherever he came. He was a Divine, well furniſhed with the Knowledge neceſſary to Maſter Builder in the Church of God, and particularly knowing in thoſe Points of Divinity, which Non Lectio docet, ſed Unctio, non Litera, ſed Spiritus, non Eruditio, ſed Exercitatio.

He was a Preacher, who made CHRIST the main Subject of his Preaching; and who had ſuch a Regard for Souls, that he thought much of nothing, by which he might recommend a CHRIST unto the Souls even of the meaneſt, as well as of the greateſt: Being diſpoſed, like that Great King of France, who being found inſtructing his Kitchin-Boy in the Matters of Religion, and being as'd with Wonder the Reaſon of it, anſwered, The meaneſt has a Soul as precious as my own, and bought by the Blood of Chriſt as well as mine! It may be I cannot give a Truer Deſcription of this our WALLEY, than in the Words of him that writes the Life of the Famous Belgic WALLÆUS; ‘ He was diligent in Viſiting his Pariſhioners, whereby he Reformed many which were given to Viciouſneſs. He ſatisfied Doubting Conſciences, and extricated them out of the Snares of Satan. He comforted thoſe that were caſt down, with the Apprehenſion of God's Wrath for their Sins. He miniſtred Relief to Widows, Orphans, and ſuch as were deſtitute of Humane Help. His Company was never Grievous.

His being ſuch a one, did but render him the more likely to be found a Non-Conformiſt, when the Act of Uniformity ſtruck Dead ſo many Faithful Miniſters of the Goſpel in the Engliſh Nation. When the Church of England under the New Form, which its Canons after the Year 1660. depraved it into, was preſſing its Unſcriptural Rites, our Walley replied, with Tertullian, ſi ideo dicetur, licere, quia non prohibeat Scriptura, æque retorquebitur, ideo non licere, quia Scriptura non Jubeat.

If the Church of England, in the Days of New-England's firſt planting, did ſo want Reformation, that theſe Colonies muſt be planted for the ſake thereof, how much more would the Second Model of it affright ſuch Conſcientious Diſſenters as our Walley, unto Congregations that were more thoroughly Reformed? For, as one writes, ‘ Tho' the Church of England was never ſo Reformed, as Geneva, France, Holland, and other Reformed Churches; yet there is as vaſt a difference between the Old Church of England and the New one, as between Nebuchadnezzar, when ſitting on his Throne and glittering in his Glory, and Nebuchadnezzar when grazing among Beaſts in the Field, with his Hair like Birds Feathers, and Nails like Eagle's Claws. The Effect of all was, that Mr. Walley was driven from the Exerciſe of his Miniſtry in London, to New England; where he arrived about the Year 1663.

Here he had a Great Service to do; for if the Apoſtle Paul thought it beſeeming an Apoſtle, to write a part of Canonical Scripture, about the Agreement of no more than Two Godly Perſons [Phil. 4. 2.] certainly it muſt be a Great Service to bring a Divided Church of Godly Perſons unto a Good Agreement. In Thebes, he that could reconcile any Quarelſome Neighbours, was honoured with a Garland. The Honour of a Garland, was on that ſcore, highly due to our Walley.

The Church of Barnſtable had been miſerably broken with Diviſions, until this Prudent, Patient, and Holy WALLEY appeared among them: And,

Quum Pietate Gravem, ac Meritis hunc Forte Virum jam Conſpexere, Silent. ——

As among the Suevians it was a Law, That in a Fray, where Swords were drawn, if any one did but cry Peace, they muſt end the Quarrel, or elſe he died that ſtruck the next Blow after Peace was named. Thus, after our WALLEY, with his charming Wiſdom, cried Peace, that Flock was happily united; and he continued in much Peace, and with much Fame, Feeding of it, all the reſt of his Days.

I will now ſo far diſcover my ſelf, as to applaud this Worthy Man, for Two Things which it may be, many Good Men will count worthy rather of Reproach than Applauſe.

One is this: In my Father's Preface to his Diſcourſes on the New Jeruſalem, I meet with this Paſſage. Tho' it hath been generally thought, that the Firſt Reſurrection ſpoken of in the Apocalypſe, is to be underſtood only in a Myſtical Senſe; yet ſome of the Firſt, and Eminent Teachers in theſe Churches, believed the Firſt Reſurrection to be Corporal. So did Mr. Davenport, Mr. Hook, and of later Years, that Man of an Excellent Spirit, Mr. Thomas Walley, Paſtor of the Church in Barnſtable. Thus did our Pious Chiliaſt, Walley. it ſeems, come to his Thoughts, as Joſeph Mede before him did, and as in the Times of more Illumination Learned Men muſt and will: Poſtquam alia omnia fruſtra tentaſſem, tandem Rei ipſius Claritudine perſtrictus, paradoxo Succubui.

Another is this: On a Great Occaſion, our Walley declared himſelf in theſe Words, It would not conſiſt with our Profeſſion of Love to Chriſt or Saints, to trouble thoſe that peaceably differ from the Generality of God's People, in leſſer Things; thoſe that are like to live in Heaven with us at laſt, we ſhould endeavour they might live peaceably with us here. A well bounded Toleration were very deſireable in all Chriſtian Commonwealths, that there may be no juſt Occaſion for any to complain of Cruelty or Perſecution; but it muſt be ſuch a Toleration, that God may not be publickly Blaſphemed, nor Idolatry practiſed. With ſuch Candor did he expreſs himſelf againſt the way well decryed by Gerhard, A Verbo ad Ferrum, ab Atramento ad Armamenta, a Pennis, ad Bipennes, confugere.

I cannot find any more than one publiſhed Compoſure left behind; which is Entituled, Balm in Gilead to heal Sion's Wounds: Being a Sermon preached before the General Court of the Colony of New-Plymouth, — Jun. 1. 1669. the Day of Election there: In which, Let it be remembred, he expreſly foretels, That New-England, would e'er long, loſe her Holineſs, her Righteouſneſs, her Peace, and her Liberty.

Article (IV.) The ſmall Stay of the Reverend Mr. SAMUEL LEE in this Country, where he was Paſtor of the Church at New Briſtol [from the Year 1686. to the Year 1691.] will excuſe me, if I ſay little of him; and yet the Great Worth of that Renowned Man, will render it inexcuſable to ſay Nothing at all.

All that I ſhall ſay is, That if Learning ever merited a Statue, this Great Man, has as Rich an one due to him, as can be erected; for it muſt be granted, That hardly ever a more Univerſally Learned Perſon trod the American Strand.

Live, O Rare LEE, Live, if not in our Works, yet in thy own; Ten or Twelve of which, that have ſeen the Light, will Immortalize thee. But above all, thy Book De Excideo Antichriſti, ſhall ſurvive and aſſiſt the Funeral of the Monſter, whoſe Nativity is therein, with ſuch Exquiſite Study calculated; and thy Book, Entituled, Orbis Miraculum; or The Temple of Solomon, ſhall proclaim thee to be a Miracle for thy vaſt Knowledge, and a Pillar in the Temple of thy God!

In his Return for England, the French took him a Priſoner, and uncivilly detaining him, he died in France; where he found the Grave of an Heretick, and was therein (after ſome ſort, like Wickliff and Bucer) made a Martyr after his Death.

A Good Man making a Good End. The LIFE and DEATH of the Reverend Mr. JOHN BAILY, Compriſed and Expreſſed in a Sermon, on the Day of his Funeral. Thurſday 16 D. 10. M. 1697.

Pulchra ſunt Verba ex Ore
Ea Facientium. Adag. Judaic.

READER,

WE are not ſo Wiſe, as the Miſerable Papiſts! Among them, a Perſon of Merit ſhall, at his Death, be Celebrated and Canonized by all Men agreeing in it, as in their Common Intereſt, for to applaud his Life. Among us, let there be Dues paid unto the Memory of the moſt Meritorious Perſon after his Deceaſe; many of the Survivers are offended, I had almoſt ſaid enraged at it: They ſeem to take it as a Reproach unto themſelves (and it may be, ſo it is!) That ſo much Good ſhould be told of any Man, and that all the little Frailties and Errors of that Man, (and whereof no meer Man was ever free!) be not alſo told with all the Unjuſt Aggravations that Envy might put upon them. This Folly is as Inexpreſſible an Injury to us all; as it cannot but be an Advantage unto Mankind in General, for Interred Vertue to be Rewarded with a Statue.

If ever I deſerved well of my Country, it has been when I have given to the World the Hiſtories and Characters of Eminent Perſons, which have adorned it. Malice will call ſome of thoſe things Romances; but that Malice it ſelf may never hiſs with the leaſt Colour of Reaſon any more, I do here declare, Let any Man living evince any one Material Miſtake in any one of thoſe Compoſures, it ſhall have the moſt Publick Recantation that can be deſired. In the mean time, while ſome Impotent Cavils, nibbling at the Statues which we have erected for our Worthies, take pains to prove themſelves, The Enemies of New-England, and of Religion, the Statues will out-live all their Idle Nibbles; The Righteous will be had in Everlaſting Remembrance, when the Wicked who ſee it and are grieved, ſhall gnaſh with their Teeth and melt away.

A GOOD MAN making a GOOD END.

Uttered, Thurſday 16 D. 10 M. 1697.

I Bring you this Day a Text of Sacred Scripture, which a Faithful Servant of the Lord Jeſus Chriſt, lately gone unto him, did before his going, order for you as his Legacy. Give your Attention.

'Tis That in Pſal. XXXI. 5.
Into Thine Hand I Commit my Spirit.

THAT Holy and Worthy Miniſter of the Goſpel, whoſe Funeral is this Day to be attended, having laboured for the Converſion of Men unto God, at length grew very Preſagious that his Labours in the Evangelical Miniſtry, drew near unto an End. While he was yet in Health, and not got beyond the Fifty Fourth Year of his Age, he did, with ſuch a Preſage upon his Mind (having firſt written on this wiſe in his Diary, Oh! that Chriſt's Death might fit me for my own!) begin to ſtudy a Sermon on this very Text, Into thine Hand I commit my Spirit. But his Great Maſter, who favoured him with ſuch a Preſage, never gave him an Opportunity to finiſh and utter, what he had began to ſtudy. His Life had all this while, been a Practical Commentary upon his Doctrine; yea, 'twas an Endeavour to imitate our Bleſſed Lord Jeſus Chriſt, who is ſaid [Act. 1. 1.] firſt to Do, and then to Teach: And now, Behold! His Death muſt Expound and Apply the Doctrine which he would have preached unto us. He muſt ſhow us, how to do that Important Work of Committing a Departing Spirit into the Hands of God, no otherwiſe than by the Actual doing of that Work himſelf. While therefore he lay a Dying, he aſk'd one of his deareſt Relations, Doſt thou know what I am doing! She ſaid, No; He then added, I am Rendring, I am Rendring! Meanin, I ſuppoſe, his own Spirit unto the Lord. But while he was doing of that Work, and with Humble Reſignation Committing his own Spirit into the Hands of God, he deſired of me, that I would preach upon the Text, about which he had been under ſuch Intentions. Wherefore [If at leaſt I may be thought worthy of ſuch a Character!] You are now to conſider me, ſhall I ſay, as Executing the Will of the Dead? Or, as Repreſenting a Man of God, whom God hath taken. The Truths which we ſhall now Inculcate, will be ſuch, as you are all along to think, Theſe are the things which a Saint now in Glory would have to be Inculcated. And when we have briefly ſet thoſe Truths before you, we will deſcribe a little that Excellent Saint, as from whom you have them Recommended: We will deſcribe him chiefly, with Strokes fetch'd from his own Diaries, out of which, in the little Time I have had ſince his Death, I have collected a few Remarkables.

Our Pſalmiſt, the Illuſtrious David, now, as we may judge, drew near unto his End: And we may ſay of the Pſalm here compoſed by him, Theſe are among the laſt Words of David, the Man who was Raiſed up on High. The Sighs of the Pſalmiſt here collected, ſeem to have been occaſion'd by the Sufferings, which he underwent, when his own Subjects took up Arms againſt him. Nevertheleſs, as our Pſalter is all over The Book of the Meſſiah, ſo this particular Hymn in it, is contrived Elegantly to point out the Sufferings of our Lord Jeſus Chriſt unto us. In the Text now before us, the Pſalmiſt apprehending himſelf in danger of Death, does the Great Work of a Dying Man: Which is, To Commit a Surviving Spirit, into the Hand of God. But in doing this, he entertains a ſpecial Conſideration of God, for his Encouragement in doing it: This is, Thou haſt Redeemed me, O Lord God of Truth. It is the Meſſiah that hath Redeemed us; It is the Meſſiah whoſe Name is the Truth; David upon a View of the Meſſiah, ſaid, This is the Man, who is the Lord God. Wherefore, In Committing our Spirits unto God, our Lord Chriſt is to be diſtinctly conſidered; and he was, no doubt, by David conſidered. The Power of God is called his Hand; The Wiſdom of God is called his Hand: But above all, the Chriſt of God, who is the Power of God, and the Wiſdom of God, he is the Hand of God; By Him 'tis, that the God of Heaven doth, what he doth in the World: And he is, for that Cauſe alſo ſtyled, The Arm of the Lord. It is therefore to the Power and Wiſdom and Goodneſs of God, in Chriſt, that our Expiring Spirits are to be committed.

There was indeed a wonderful Time, when our Lord Jeſus Chriſt himſelf made a wonderful Uſe of this very Text. We read in Luke 23. 46. When Jeſus had cried with a loud voice, he ſaid, Father, into thy Hands I commend my Spirit; and having ſaid thus, he gave up the Ghoſt. Sirs, God uttered his Voice, at this rate, and the Earth trembled at it! And well it might, for never did there ſuch an amazing thing occur upon the Earth before. Now, our Lord having ſaid, Into thy Hands I commend my Spirit, ſtop'd at thoſe Words; for he was himſelf the Redeemer, the Lord God of Truth. But as for us, we are to conſider God, as in our Lord Jeſus Chriſt, when we Commit our Spirits into his Hands. As Luther could ſay, Nolo Deum Abſolutum, I tremble to have to do, with an Abſolute God; that is to ſay, a God without a Chriſt: So, we may all tremble to think of Committing our Spirits into the Hands of God, any otherwiſe than as he is, in Chriſt Reconciling the World unto himſelf. We are truly told in Heb. 10. 31. It is a fearful thing to fall into the Hands of the Living God. Our Spirits are by Sin become obnoxious to the Fearful Wrath of God; and wo to us, if our Spirits fall into his Hands, not having his Wrath appeaſed! Sirs, we Commit Briars and Thorns, and wretched Stubble to infinite Flames, if we Commit our Spirits into the Hands of God, not in a Chriſt, become our Friend. We deliver up our Spirits unto a Devouring Fire, and unto Everlaſting Burnings, if we approach the Holy, Holy, Holy Lord God Almighty any otherwiſe than thro' the Immanuel, our Mediator. We are to Commit our Souls unto our Faithful Creator: But if he be not our Merciful Redeemer too, then He that made us will not have Mercy on us. When Hezekiah was, as he thought, a Dying, he turn'd his Face to the Wall: I ſuppoſe it was to that ſide of the Upper Chamber, the Praying Chamber, where he lay, that had God's Window in it, the Window that opened it ſelf towards the Ark in the Temple. When we Commit our Spirits into the Hand of God, we are to turn our Face towards that Ark of God, our Lord Jeſus Chriſt. We have this Matter well directed by the Words of the Dying Martyr Stephen, in Acts 7. 59. He ſaid, Lord Jeſus, Receive my Spirit.

And now there is a weighty CASE, that lies before us;

After what manner ſhould we commit our Spirits unto our Lord Jeſus Chriſt, that ſo the Eternal Safety and Welfare of our Spirits, may be effectually provided for?

If our Faithful BAILY were now Alive, I do not know any one CASE, that he would more Livelily have diſcourſed among you: But I know, that he would have Diſcourſed on this, with a Soul full of Inexpreſſible Agonies. He was a Man, who had from a Child, been full of ſollicitous Cares about his own Soul; and from hence in part it was, that when he became a Preacher of the Goſpel, he preach'd nothing ſo much, as the Cares that all Men ſhould have, about the Converſion of their Souls unto God, and the Sincerity of their Souls before him. There were many Great Points of our Chriſtian Faith, which he ſtill treated with ſhorter Touches, becauſe his Thoughts were continually ſwallowed up with the Vaſt Concern of not being deceived, about the Marks of a Regenerate and a Sanctified Soul, and Hopes of being found in Chriſt at a Dying Hour. He was none of thoſe Preachers, Qui ludunt in Cathedra, & lugent in Gehenna. Thoſe two Words, A Soul and Eternity, were Great Words unto him; and his very Soul was greatly, and always under the Awe of them. Hence the very Spirit of his Preaching lay in the Points of turning from Sin to God in Chriſt, and the Tryal of our doing ſo, and the Peril of our not doing it. Wherefore, as far as alas, one of my ſinful Coldneſs in thoſe dreadful Points can do it, I will ſet before you in a few Minutes, what I apprehend, my dead Friend would have to be ſpoken, upon theſe Points, in Relation to the Caſe that is now to be conſidered.

I. Let every mortal Man be very ſenſible, that he hath an Immortal Spirit in him, and prize that Spirit exceedingly. How ſhall we Commit a Spirit into the Hands of the Lord Jeſus Chriſt, if this thing be not Realized unto us, That we have a Spirit, which will be horribly miſerable to all Eternity, if the Lord Jeſus Chriſt look not after it!

Could that Mouth, which is this Day to be laid in the Duſt, once more be opened among us, I know what Voice would iſſue from it: With a very zealous Vivacity, I know this Voice would be uttered, Man, Thou haſt a Soul, a Soul within thee; a Soul that is to exiſt throughout Eternal Ages; Oh! Prize that Soul of thine at the greateſt rate imaginable. I ſay then; we muſt be ſenſible, That we have Spirits which are Diſtinct from our Bodies, and which will out-live them: Spirits which are Incorporeal Subſtances, endued with Rational Faculties; and tho' inclined unto our Humane Bodies, yet ſurviving after them. An Infidel Pope of Rome, once lying on his Death-Bed, had ſuch a Speech as this; I ſhall now quickly be certified and ſatisfied, whether I have an Immortal Soul or no! Woful Man, if he were not until then certified and ſatisfied! God forbid, that there ſhould be ſo much as one Epicurean Swine among us, dreaming, That Man is nothing but a meer Lump of Matter put into Motion. Shall a Man dare to think, that he has not a Rational Soul in him, which is of a very different Nature from his Body? Truly, his very Thinking is enough to confute his monſtrous Unreaſonableneſs: Meer Body cannot Think; and I pray, of what Figure is a Rational Atom? The Oracles of God have therefore aſſured us, That the Fathers of our Bodies, are not the Fathers of Spirits; No, theſe have another Father! And, That the Spirits of Men may go from their Bodies; and be caught up to the Third Heaven too! Well; But when our Bodies crumble and tumble before the Strokes of Death, are not our Spirits overwhelmed in the Ruines of our Bodies, like Sampſon, when the Philiſtean Temple fell upon him? No; they are Sparks of Immortality, that ſhall never be Extinguiſhed; they muſt live, and move, and think, until the very Heavens be no more. Among other Evidences, That our Spirits are Immortal, there is no contemptible one, in the Preſages, which the Spirits of ſuch good Men, as he which is anon to be interr'd, have had of their ſpeedy Paſſage in a World of Spirits. Our Lord Jeſus Chriſt, who gave his own Blood for the Purchace of our Souls, and can tell, ſure! what it is that he has purchaſed; he has expreſly told us in Matth. 10. 28. They which kill the Body, are not able to kill the Soul. Our Bleſſed Apoſtle Paul, a mighty Student and Worker for Souls, was not fed with Fancies, when he took it for granted, in Phil. 1. 21. That when he ſhould be diſſolved, he ſhould be with Chriſt immediately. Do, try thou Fool-hardy Creature, to perſwade thy ſelf, That thou haſt not an Immortal Soul: Thou canſt not, for thy Soul, render thy ſelf altogether, and evermore perſwaded of it: With very dreadful Suſpicions, of its Immortality, will thy own Conſcience, a certain Faculty of thy Soul terrify thee, when God awakens it. I have known a ſturdy Diſputer againſt the Immortality of the Soul, go out of the World with this Lamentable Out-cry, Oh! my Soul, my Soul; what ſhall I do for my poor Soul? Sirs, let this Principle ſtand like the very Pillars of Heaven with every one of us, That we have Immortal Souls to be provided for. But if a Man have an Immortal Soul within him, what will be the Natural Conſequence of it? The Conſequence is plainly this; That ſince the Soul is Immortal, it ſhould be very precious. It was infinitely Reaſonable for the Soul to be called, as it was in Pſal. 22. 20. My Soul, my Darling! Oh! There ſhould be nothing ſo dear to a Man as that Soul of his, that ſhall endure when all other things are changed: For, O my Soul, of thy Years there ſhall be no end. The Intereſts of our Spirits are to be much greater things unto us, than the Intereſts of our Bodies. What will become of our Souls? That, that is a thing that ſhould lie much nearer to our Hearts, than what will become of our Lives, our Names, our Eſtates. We ſhould ſet an high Value on our Spirits, and often meditate on the Text, which was once given to a Great Man, for his daily Meditation in Matt. 16. 26. What is a Man profited, fited, if he gain the whole World, and loſe his own Soul.

II. Let every Man in this World that hath an Immortal Spirit, be above all Things, thoughtful for the Welfare of that Spirit in another World. When we Commit a Spirit into the Hands of the Lord Jeſus Chriſt, it is, that ſo it may eſcape that Wretchedneſs, and attain that Bleſſedneſs in another World, whereof our Lord hath in his Word adviſed us. When that Embaſſador of Chriſt, who is lately gone back unto him, was Reſident among us, there was no one thing that he more vigorouſly inſiſted on than this; Oh! there is nothing ſo dreadful, as that Hell, which every wicked Soul ſhall be turned into: There is nothing ſo joyful as that Heaven which is prepared for every godly Soul: And there is nothing of ſo much Concernment for you, as to flee from that Wrath to come, and lay hold on that Life Eternal. I ſay accordingly; there are aſtoniſhing Dangers, whereto our Souls are expoſed by our Sins. Our Spirits are in Danger of being for ever baniſhed from the Communion of the Lord Jeſus Chriſt, into a State of Eaſeleſs and Endleſs Horror; our Spirits are in Danger to be plung'd into doleful Torments, among the Devils that have been our Tempters: Our Spirits are in Danger to be ſeiz'd by the Juſtice of that God againſt whom we have ſinn'd, and laid under Everlaſting Impreſſions of his Indignation. There are Spirits in Priſon; there is Danger leſt the Vengeance of God chain up our Spirits in that fiery Priſon. (It was but a little before he went unto Heaven, that our Baily in Twenty Six Diſcourſes on Rev. 6. 8. opened the Treaſures of that Wrath among us.) And we ſhould now be ſo thoughtful of nothing upon Earth, as how to get our Spirits delivered from this Formidable Hell. The fitteſt Language for us, would be like that in Pſal. 116. 3, 4. The pains of Hell are getting hold on me; O Lord, I beſeech thee to deliver my Soul. But then there is a Great Salvation, which our Lord Jeſus Chriſt has wrought for us; and that Salvation is, The Salvation of the Soul. Our Spirits may be releaſed from the Bonds, which the Sentence of Death, by the Law of God paſſed upon them, has laid them under. Our Lord Jeſus Chriſt, ſatisfying of the Law, by his Death in our ſtead, hath procured this Releaſe for the Spirits of his choſen. There are the Spirits of Juſt Men made perfect; and there is perfect Light, and perfect Love, and perfect Joy, among thoſe glorified Spirits. Our Spirits may be advanced into the Society of Angels; and be with our Lord Jeſus Chriſt in Heaven, the Spectators and Partakers of his Heavenly Glory. Now, we ſhould be more thoughtful to make ſure of ſuch a Heaven for our Spirits, than to enſure any thing on Earth. We ſhould wiſh for nothing ſo much as that in 1 Sam. 25. 29. A Soul bound up in the Bundle of Life. There are Souls which our Lord Jeſus Chriſt has bundled like ſo many Slips, to be tranſplanted into the ſweet Garden of Heaven; ſay now, O Man, with all poſſible Ardour of Soul, Oh! may my Soul be one of them!

When our Father Jacob was a Dying, he ſeems, upon the Occaſion of mentioning a Serpent, immediately to call to mind the Miſchiefs which had been done by the old Serpent unto our Spirits: Whereupon he cried out, Gen. 49. 18. I have waited for thy Salvation [for thy JESUS!] O Lord. That our Spirits may not be deſtroy'd in our Dying, This, this is the Thing that we ſhould be concerned for; That they may be ſaved by a Jeſus, from the Miſchiefs, which the old Serpent has brought upon them.

III. When we Commit our Spirits into the Hands of our Lord Jeſus Chriſt, we muſt believe in him, as fully able to ſave our Spirits unto the uttermoſt. It is by Faith acted unto the uttermoſt, that we are to Commit our Spirits into the Hands of our Lord Jeſus Chriſt: Now the Acts of this Faith are admirably expreſſed in 2 Tim. 1. 12. I know whom I have believed, and I am perſwaded, That he is able to keep that which I have committed unto him. We would have our Spirits preſerved from the Direful Anger of God, which threatens to ſwallow them up: Say now, Lord Jeſus, I am perſwaded, Thou art able to preſerve me. We would have our Spirits enriched with the Knowledge and Image, and Favour of God, in his Kingdom: Say now, Lord Jeſus, I am perſwaded, Thou art able to enrich me. We are therefore to place our Faith on the Sacrifice which our Lord Jeſus Chriſt hath offered unto God, on the behalf of his People. We read in Job 33. 22. When a Soul draws near unto the Grave, If there be a Meſſenger with him, an Interpreter, then he ſays, Deliver him from going down to the Pit, I have found a Ranſome. Some of the Ancients take that, Angelus Interpres, to be Chriſt the Mediator. Sirs, when yours Souls are drawing near unto the Grave, 'tis high time to believe on that Ranſome, which One among a Thouſand has paid unto God for us. We muſt believe, That the Sacrifice of the Soul of the Meſſiah, when He was cut off, but not for himſelf, is a valuable Sacrifice, a ſufficient Sacrifice, and a Sacrifice which the wondrous Grace of God invites us to depend upon; and with a firm Dependance on that Sacrifice, we muſt plead, O let my Soul be delivered from going down to the Pit, ſince God has found ſuch a Ranſome for me! But while we rely on our Lord Jeſus Chriſt, as he has been ſacrificed for us here below, we muſt alſo reply upon him, as he is now above, in the Holy of Holies, interceeding for us. And that our Faith in committing our Spirits unto our Lord Jeſus Chriſt, may be a truly Chriſtian Faith. We muſt believe him to be no leſs than The Lord God of Truth; to be God as well as Man; to be God and Man in one Perſon. That Man is a very Fooliſh Man, who will truſt his own Soul with any one leſs than the God who made our Soul, and who alone can ſave it. Our Belief muſt pronounce our Lord Jeſus Chriſt, the ſame that his Bible has pronounced him; The True God, the Great God, and God over all; one who is every where, and who knows every thing. This Article of our Faith, which the modern Jews deny, is indeed ſo inconteſtable, that I could preſently overwhelm them with an Army of Teſtimonies, from the Rabbies among the Ancient Jews, confeſſing, That the Meſſiah muſt be very Jehovah himſelf. I beſeech you, let no Man dare to die in any Doubt, whether the Lord Jeſus Chriſt, unto whom he commits his own Soul, be not more than a meer Man. Believing him to be God, let us believe, that his Blood is Price enough to obtain for us the Everlaſting Happineſs of our Spirits; what can our Spirits want that the Blood of God can't obtain? Let us believe, that his Holy Spirit can fit our Spirits for, and fill our Spirits with Eternal Glories; the Spirit of Chriſt is the Spirit of God: What can't he do for us? Let us believe, that he has Legions and Myriads, and Millions of Bleſſed Spirits to be our Convoy, and Safeguard from thoſe Evil Spirits, which are waiting to arreſt our Spirits at our Diſſolution: He is God among the Thouſands of his Angels, in his Holy Place: They'll fly like ſwift Flaſhes of Lightning to ſuccour us, when ever he ſhall command them ſo to do. What ſhall we ſay? When Jacob fell aſleep with his Head lying upon a Stone, he had a Viſion of Angels concerned for him. Truly, our Lord Jeſus Chriſt is, The Stone of Iſrael. If you don't fall aſleep, till you have laid your Heads and Hopes on that Stone, you ſhall then ſee Armies of Angels about you, to ſecure you.

IV. When we commit our Spirits into the Hand of our Lord Jeſus Chriſt, we muſt ſubmit unto all his Gracious Operations upon our Spirits. We commit our Spirits into the Hand of our Lord Jeſus Chriſt, we ſay: Well, he then demands of us, as in Mark 10. 51. What wilt thou, that I ſhould do unto thee? And, I pray, mark it; If there be any Article of Grace always wrought by the Lord Jeſus Chriſt, for the Spirits of his Elect, which you do not Conſent unto, he will not receive your Spirits; no, he will deſtroy them dreadfully. Some commit their Spirits into the Hand of the Lord Jeſus Chriſt, they ſay; but they are not willing that the Hand of the Lord Jeſus Chriſt ſhould ever do for them, all that muſt done, in all that are brought Home unto God. Perhaps they would have their Spirit reſcued from the Hands of the Devils hereafter; but they don't heartily commit their Spirits into the Hands of the Lord Jeſus Chriſt, for to have all the Luſts that make their Spirits like Devils, here embittered, and Eradicated. They would have eaſy Spirits, it may be, but Oh! they are loth to have Holy Spirits. This Halving of it, thou Hypocrite, this Halving of a Chriſt, will hang the Milſtones of Damnation about the Neck of thy Soul for ever. The Lord Jeſus Chriſt puts this Queſtion unto us, Poor Sinner what ſhall I do for thy Spirit? No Man can aright commit a Spirit into the Hand of the Lord Jeſus Chriſt, until he have ſeriouſly pondered on that Queſtion. Ponder it Sirs, in the Fear of God! But then let our Anſwer to it, be according to that in 2 Theſ. 1. 11. That he would fulfil all the good pleaſure of his Goodneſs in you, and the Work of Faith with Power. In committing your Spirits into the Hand of the Lord Jeſus Chriſt, Oh! Let your Hearts, being made willing in the Day of his Power, declare themſelves willing to have him do for you, all that he is willing to do. 'Tis the Propoſal of the Lord Jeſus Chriſt, Shall my Obedience to my Father furniſh thee with that Attonement, and that Righteouſneſs whereby thy Spirit ſhall ſtand without Fault before the Throne of God? Reply, Lord, I commit my Spirit into thy Hand, for thee to juſtify it. The Propoſal of the Lord Jeſus Chriſt unto us is, All the Maladies of thy Spirit, ſhall I heal them all? Reply, Lord, I commit my Spirit into thy Hand, as into the Hand of the Lord my Healer; O let that hand of thine open this Blind Mind, and ſubdue this baſe Will, and rectifie all theſe depraved Affections; and on all Accounts renew a right Spirit within me. Man, commit thy Spirit into the Hand of the Lord Jeſus Chriſt, with ſuch a Diſpoſition; and then reſt aſſured, That Spirit ſhall never be loſt.

V. If you would ſucceſsfully commit your Spirits into the Hand of the Lord Jeſus Chriſt, when you die, you are to do it for your Spirits before you die. Indeed, what ſhould all our Life be, but a Preparation for Death? And all of our Life truly is little enough. So thought our Devout Baily. It was the Counſel which he often gave to his Friends, Let not one Day paſs you, without an earneſt Prayer, that you may have a Chriſt for to ſtand by you in a Dying Hour. And his own Practice was according to that Counſel, as is well known to them that lived with him in his Family. Sirs, you are not ſure, that when the Decretory Hour of Death overtakes you, you ſhall have one Minute of an Hour allow'd you, to commit your Spirits into the Hand of the Lord Jeſus Chriſt. Is not a Sudden Death a Frequent Sight? There are very many ſo ſuddenly ſnatched away by the Whirlwind of the Vengeance of the Almighty, that they have not opportunity ſo much as to ſay, Lord have Mercy upon me! And let me tell you, That a Sudden Death is moſt likely to be the Portion of thoſe who moſt preſumptuouſly put off to a Death bed, the Work of committing their Spirits into the Hand, that can alone befriend them. I have Read, That of old, according to the Laws of Perſia, a Malefactor had Liberty, for an Hour before his Execution, to ask what he would, and what he ask'd was granted him. One that was under Sentence of Death, being admitted unto the uſe of this Liberty, deſired neither one thing nor another, but only, That he might ſee the King's Face; which being allow'd him, he ſo plied the King in that Hour, that he obtained his Pardon: Whereupon the Perſians altered their Cuſtom, and covered the Face of the Malefactor, that he might never ſee the King any more. I will not now Enquire, how far this Paſſage, will illuſtrate the Story of Haman; but I will obſerve, That the Face of God is the Name of the Meſſiah; and in this Obſervation, I have given you a Golden Key to come at New Treaſures in ſcores of Scriptures. And I will apply it with ſaying, you have it may be an Hour and no more allow'd you to addreſs the Face of God in the Lord Jeſus Chriſt. In this Hour you may obtain his Favour and Mercy, and Pardon. Don't ſlip this Hour, leſt it be too late. Or, peradventure (and alas, 'tis but a peradventure!) you ſhould upon a Death-bed have ſpace enough to commit your Spirits into the Hands of the Lord, are you ſure that you ſhall then have the Grace to do it? It is a ſolemn Caution that is given us, in Phil. 2. 12, 13. Work out your own Salvation with Fear and Trembling; for it is God that works in you, both to will and to do of his own good Pleaſure. Even ſo fear and tremble, to delay committing your Spirits into the Hand of the Lord, ſo much as one Day longer; you don't know, that God will pleaſe to work in you, for the doing of it, when your laſt Moments are upon you.

I have read it, as the Obſervation of ſome very Experienced Miniſters, that they never handled in their Miniſtry any Subjects more ſucceſsfully than thoſe which led them to diſcourſe againſt Procraſtination in the Concerns of their Souls. Our Baily was much in making of this Experiment. Many a Man inſerts that Clauſe in his Laſt Will, I bequeath my Soul unto God that gave it. But in the Name of God, art thou certain that he will accept of it? The Law ſays, Legato renunciari poteſt, and Legatum accipere nemo nolens cogitur; one may refuſe a Legacy, there's no compelling one to accept it. It is true, our Compaſſionate Lord will ever accept a poor Soul, whenever 'tis with a true Faith brought unto him. Yea, but it may be, he will not accept of thy Soul, inaſmuch as thou haſt no true Faith to bring it withal; Faith, which is not of our ſelves, 'tis the Gift of God! Wherefore, O Man, if thou haſt any Regard unto thy never dying Soul, go thy ways preſently, and earneſtly commit it unto the Lord before a Dying Hour. As the Apoſtle ſaid, This I ſay, Brethren, the Time is ſhort: Even ſo, this I ſay, My friend, thy Time it may be ſhorter than thou art well aware of. What ſhall I ſay? I ſay, Boaſt not thy ſelf of to Morrow. I ſay, This Night thy Soul may be required.

And if thy Faithleſs Heart, have the Aſſiſtances of the Divine Grace witheld from it, when the damp Sweats of Death are upon thee, there is yet another Objection, with which the God of Heaven will Thunder-ſtrike thy Attempts to commit thy Spirit into his Hand. That is this: That Spirit of thine, is it thy own to diſpoſe of? Haſt thou not already otherwiſe diſpoſed of it? It is a Rule in Law, Nemo poteſt legare, quod ſuum jam non eſt, No Man can by Will, Demiſe, Deviſe, Diſpoſe of that, of which he had made Sale before. It is ſaid of a very Ungodly Man, in 1 King. 21. 25. He ſold himſelf to work Wickedneſs, in the ſight of the Lord. Ungodly Sinner, the Devil has often bargain'd with thee, about thy Soul; he hath ſaid, By deliberate ſinning againſt Heaven, do thou make over thy Soul to me, and thou ſhalt have the ſhort Pleaſures of Sin for it. God knows how often thou haſt thus bargain'd away thy Soul to the Devil; and ſince thou haſt not in all thy Life revok'd that Bargain, then though thou do at thy Death cry unto him, Lord, Receive this poor Soul of mine! How juſtly may he ſay, No, not I! Thou haſt ſold that Soul to another; and let him keep it for ever! There will alſo be this further to be ſaid, What Power haſt thou to diſpoſe of thy Spirit? haſt thou any thing at all at thy own Diſpoſal?

It is a Rule in Law, Servus non poteſt Condere Teſtamentum; a Slave can't make a Will: He has nothing of his own to diſpoſe of. It is ſaid in Joh. 8. 34. Whoſoever practiſeth Sin, is the Slave of Sin. It may be, thou haſt all this while been a very Slave; thy Luſt is thy Lord, a Luſt of Uncleanneſs, of Drunkenneſs, of Worldlineſs, it hath utterly enſlaved thee. And, What? Not got out of that Slavery before thy Dim Eyes, and Cold Lips, and Faltering Tongue, and Failing Breath, hath put over thy Soul into the Hand of the Lord! How juſtly may he ſay, Slave, Thou art not able to do for thy wretched Soul, what thou doſt now pretend unto. The Lord Jeſus Chriſt will not caſt off thy Soul with ſuch Objections, if thou Seek the Lord while he may be found, and call upon him while he is near. I earneſtly teſtify unto you, The Vileſt and the Oldeſt Sinner among you all, may Come and be Welcome unto the Lord Jeſus Chriſt, if you will come now, while it is the Acceptable Time, now while it is the Day of Salvation. Though thou art never ſo bad, yet come and heartily complain to him of all thy Badneſs, and he will do good unto thy Soul!

I am ſure my BAILY, would have ſaid nothing more heartily than this among you; you heard him often ſay it, Come in to the Mercy of my Lord, for yet there is Room! But it is to be fear'd, That if thou ſtay till the laſt Aſſaults of Death are made upon thee, the Door of Mercy will be ſhut, and ſo when the Shrieks are, Lord, Lord, Open to me! all the Anſwers will be Rebukes and Fiery Thunders.

VI. Often committing our Spirits into the Hand of the Lord Jeſus Chriſt while we live, Let us endeavour after ſuch Characters upon our Spirits, as may aſſure us, that he will receive us when we die.

Indeed when we firſt commit our Spirits into the Hand of the Lord Jeſus Chriſt, we are to bring them with no other Characters but thoſe of Sin and Hell upon them. If we then commit our Spirits into the Hand of the Lord Jeſus Chriſt, under the Encouragement of any Laudable Qualifications and Recommendations in them, Ah! Lord, thou wilt abhor us and caſt us off! In our firſt Believing on the Lord Jeſus Chriſt, he enquires of us, What Spirit is that which thou doſt now commit into my Hand? Our Anſwer muſt be, Lord, It is a guilty Spirit, a filthy Spirit, a Spirit full of Sin and Hell, as ever it can hold, and a Spirit horribly under the Curſe of God.

Sirs, If you anſwer any otherwiſe than ſo, the Redeemer of Spirits will not receive your Spirits. But when we commit our Spirits into the Hand of our Lord Jeſus Chriſt, in the laſt Actions of our Life, it is to be ſuppoſed, That we only repeat what we have done before, and that our Lord Jeſus Chriſt has already received our Spirits on our doing of it. Oh! 'Tis a dreadful thing for a Dying Man to think, The Lord never yet received this poor Soul of mine; for I never till now committed it unto the Lord! When ſuch Perſons commit their Spirits into the Hand of the Lord Jeſus Chriſt, under the Dimneſs of the Anguiſh of Death, 'tis as one ſays, As if one ſhould bequeath unto an Honourable Perſon ſome greaſy Diſh-clout, or ſome dirty Shooe-clout.

It is of unutterable Concernment, for every Man to get the Symptoms of a Received Soul upon him, now before his laſt ſurrender of a Diſtreſſed Soul: And for a Man to be able to ſay at the laſt, Lord, I commit a poor ſinful Spirit now into thy Hand; but it is a Spirit upon which thy Blood has been ſprinkled, and it is a Spirit which thy Spirit has long ſince taken Poſſeſſion of. Now to render this unqueſtionable, we are to examine our ſelves, Whether our Spirits have been renewed by the Holy Spirit of God? And be Reſtleſs in our own Spirits, till we are ſure of ſuch a Renovation. The Apoſtle once concluded, That when our Spirits depart from hence, the Lord Jeſus Chriſt will receive them into an Houſe not made with Hands, Eternal in the Heavens: And upon what was it, that he raiſed this Concluſion? He ſays, in 2 Cor. 5. 5. For he that wrought us, for this ſelf ſame Thing is God. The Greek Word uſed there, is the ſame that the LXX uſe for the Curious Works about the Tabernacle.

When Bezaleel had neatly wrought a Board, for to be ſet up in the Silver Sockets of the Tabernacle, he would not throw it away among the Rubbiſh. Man! If thou haſt a well wrought Soul within thee, God will receive it, and advance and improve it, in his Houſe for ever. A Work of Grace produced by the Spirit of God, upon the Spirits of Men, is a ſure Token of his purpoſe to beſtow a State of Glory upon them, at their Departure from their Bodies. The Primitive Martyrs were bidden in 1 Pet. 4. 19. To Commit the keeping of their Souls unto God, as unto a Faithful Creator. But it is probable, the New Creation experienced by Renewed Souls, is eſpecially therein referred unto. Has the Spirit of God made a New Creature of thy Spirit? This will be a Demonſtration, that the Lord Jeſus Chriſt has already received thy Spirit, and that when thou doſt again commit thy Spirit unto him, he will receive it. When we do, in our laſt Actions, commit a Spirit into the Hand of the Lord Jeſus Chriſt, what is it for? It is that he may put an upper Garment of Glory upon that Spirit. But he will demand, Where is the under Garment of Grace upon it? If thou art without that Garment, he will doom thy Spirit unto Outer Darkneſs, that is to ſay (for Outer Darkneſs was the Name of the Priſon among the Jews) he will make a perpetual Impriſonment, the Portion of thy Soul. Wherefore, let us enquire diligently into the Signs of a Newborn Soul upon us before we come to die. Wo to us, if we are not Born Twice before we Die Once! Why ſhould we incur this Deſolation upon our Souls, That when at laſt we go to commit them into the Hand of the Lord, he ſhall reject them and ſay, No, I know them not; they are none of mine; they are the Workers of Iniquity!

The more certainly to prevent this Deſolation, let this one Comprehenſive Duty of the New Creature, be often renewed with you. Receive the Lord Jeſus Chriſt into thy Soul, when he does command it of thee, and the Lord Jeſus Chriſt will receive thy Soul into Heaven, when thou doſt at laſt commit it unto him. As Jotham ſaid, in Judg. 9. 7. Hearken to me, that God may hearken to you: Even this do I now ſay to you; and I carry it on to this Iſſue: Do you hearken to the Lord Jeſus Chriſt, when he bids you to receive him, and when you pray him to receive you. He will then hearken to you.

The Lord Jeſus Chriſt is often knocking at the Door of thy Soul: There would he enter, with all his Gracious Influences: Open to the Lord, by reſigning up thy Soul to the ſweet Influences of his Grace: Reply, O come in, thou Bleſſed of the Lord, why ſtandeſt thou without? So when my laſt Sands are running, thou mayſt joyfully think, My Lord Jeſus Chriſt will now receive me, more heartily than ever I received him: If I have had an Heart, alas a vile Heart! for him. I am ſure he has an Heaven for me! Lord, I now commit into thy Hand, a Spirit into which thou haſt been received, when thy wondrous Grace demanded it for an Habitation: And thou wilt now receive this unworthy Spirit of mine into a better Habitation.

bitation. Think thus, and Rejoice with Joy unſpeakable and full of Glory!

VII. When we come to commit our Spirits into the Hand of our Lord Jeſus Chriſt, at and for our laſt Reſignation, let us do it very Humbly, but very Willingly, but very Chearfully.

How humbly ought we to commit our Spirits into the Hand of the Lord Jeſus Chriſt! With how much Loathing and Judging of our ſelves, and with what ſhameful Reflections on all our paſt Behaviours. We are bitterly to acknowledge the Diſorders and Corruptions of our own Spirits, when we commit them unto the Lord, and acknowledge the numberleſs Errors whereinto our Spirits have betray'd us. When we lift up our Soul unto the Lord, let it be in Terms like thoſe in Ezra 9. 6. O my God, I am aſhamed, and bluſh to lift up my Face to thee, my God! And therefore, whatever Bleſſings we expect for our Souls, let us with all poſſible Self-Abhorrence found our Expectations on the pure Mercy of God, in our Lord Jeſus Chriſt. Moſt ſweetly did our Dying Hooker expreſs the Frame of Spirit, wherewith a Spirit is to be committed into the Hand of the Lord: When one that ſtood weeping by his Bed-ſide ſaid unto him, Sir, You are going to receive the Reward of all your Labours, he replied, Brother, I am going to receive Mercy! What ſhall I ſay? The Frame of Spirit neceſſary in this Glorious Tranſaction, I cannot better paint out unto you, than by reciting the Words, which I remember I once had, from an Eminent old Servant of the Lord Jeſus Chriſt, at my taking Leave of him: Said he, ‘Sir, I am every Day expecting my Death; but I deſire to die like the Thief, crying to the Crucified Jeſus for Mercy. I am nothing, I have nothing, I can do nothing, except what is unworthy. My Eye, and Hope, and Faith, is to Chriſt on his Croſs. I bring an Unworthineſs, like that of the poor Dying Thief unto him, and have no more to plead than he. Like the poor Thief Crucified with him, I am waiting to be received, by the Infinite Grace of my Lord, into his Kingdom. And pray tell me, did not aged Paul mean ſomething of this, when he ſaid, I am Crucified with Chriſt?

Sirs, This is the Frame wherewith we are to do what we do. But then how Willingly, how Chearfully! God forbid, That we ſhould commit our Spirits into his Hand, as only drag'd and forc'd unto it by unavoidable Death. Our dying Lord ſaid, Father, Into thy Hands I commend my Spirit. When God calls for our Spirit, we are to think, 'Tis my Father that calls for me; and ſhall not I go to my Father?

It was a good Speech even of an Heathen, Bene Mori eſt Libenter Mori, one thing in well dying, is to die willingly. 'Tis a diſmal thing for the Spirit of a Man to be torn from him, and be pull'd away with roaring Reluctances, with Horrid Convulſions. Where would be the ſenſe of it, if a dying Man ſhould ſay, Lord, Into thy Hand I commit my Spirit, but if I could have my choice, my Spirit ſhould never come there! When we perceive that Call from our Lord Jeſus Chriſt, Go up and die! Let us freely ſurrender our Spirits unto our Great Lord, and Go up and die: He is the Lord of our Lives. Freely, did I ſay? Yea, and gladly too. When we have aright committed our Spirits into the Hand of the Lord, then take up that Concluſion in Pſal. 49. 15. God will receive my Soul. And then, let us wonderfully comfort our ſelves, in the Thoughts of that Spiritual World which we are going into. Think, I ſhall quickly reſt from Sin and all Temptations, and all Affections, and all the curſed Effects of Sin, and all the Annoyances of Ill Spirits for ever. I ſhall quickly be lodg'd among the pure Spirits that ſee God, and ſerve him Day and Night in his Temple, and God ſhall wipe away all Tears from my Eyes. Yea, I ſhall quickly be with my Lord Jeſus Chriſt, which is by far the beſt of all. Oh! Rejoice in the Hope of this Glory of God! And let not your Joy be interrupted by any Fear of what may become of your Friends, when you ſhall be dead and gone. The Lord that calls you to commit your Spirits into his Hand, calls you at the ſame time, to commit your Widows, your Orphans, and all your Friends, into that Omnipotent Hand: He ſays, Leave them all with me, and I'll take the Care of them all!

It was noted of the Engliſh Martyrs, which dy'd at the Stake in the Bloody Marian Perſecution; That none of them went more joyfully to the Stake, than thoſe that had the largeſt and the deareſt Families then to commit unto the Lord: And afterwards thoſe large Families, were wondrouſly provided for. The Excellent Mr. Heron, a Miniſter, that had a Family of many ſmall Children in it, when he lay a dying, his poor Wife ſaid with Tears, Alas, what will become of all theſe Children? He preſently and pleaſantly replied, Never fear, he that feeds the young Ravens, won't ſtarve the young Herons! And it came to paſs accordingly.

Sirs, Thus you are to commit your Spirits into the Hand of the Lord Jeſus Chriſt.

My Reverend BAILY did ſo; and it is as from him, that I do this Day beſpeak your doing like him; yea, not from him only, but from the Lord Jeſus Chriſt, the God, whoſe he was, and whom he ſerved. If you would more particularly be told after what manner he did commit his own Spirit into the Hands of the Lord, I can faithfully recite you his own Account of the Tranſaction. He gives it thus,

‘I ſpent half the Day alone in ſeeking of God; deſiring to give up my ſelf unto God in ‘ Chriſt wholly, and to be his in Soul and Body. The Particulars I omit. I hope, God in ‘ Chriſt, will accept of me, and enable me by ‘ his Spirit to keep touch with him: For I ‘ owned my ſelf wholly unworthy to enter in-

‘ to Covenant, and alſo unable to keep it;
‘ but Jeſus Chriſt is both worthy and able.

'Tis from one who thus did it, that you are now call'd upon to do likewiſe.

When you ſee the Coffin of this Man of God, anon carried along the Streets, imagine it a mournful Pulpit, from whence, Being Dead he yet ſpeaks thus unto you; Whatever yon do, commit your periſhing Souls into the Hands of the Lord Jeſus Chriſt, as you have been adviſed.

That theſe Admonitions may have the more of Emphaſis, a ſhort Account of this worthy Man muſt now be given you.

He was Born on Febr. 24. 1643. near Blackbourn in Lancaſhire; of a very Pious Mother, who even before he was Born, often as Hannah her Samuel, Dedicated him unto the Service of the Lord.

Of this his Birth-day, in the Return of every Year, he ſtill took much Notice in his Diaries: And made his humble and uſeful Reflections thereupon.

Once particularly, I find him thus entertaining it.

‘ This is my Birth-day, I am ready to ſay of
‘ it, as Job doth of his: But I forbear any un-
‘ adviſed Words about it: Only, I have done
‘ little for God, and much againſt him; for ‘ which I am ſorry.

When this Day, laſt arrived unto him, he thus wrote upon it.

‘ I may ſay with a great Sigh, This was my ‘ Birth-day! O how little Good have I done all
‘ this while! O what Reaſon have I to ſtand
‘ amazed at the Riches of God's Forbearance!
‘ Much may happen this Year! Lord, Carry
‘ me through it!

From a Child he did know the Holy Scriptures, yea, From a Child he was wiſe unto Salvation. In his very Childhood he diſcovered the Fear of God, upon his young Heart; and Prayer to God was one of his Early Exerciſes.

There was one very Remarkable Effect of it. His Father was a Man of a very Licentious Converſation; a Gameſter, a Dancer, a very Lewd Company-keeper. The Mother of this Elect Veſſel, one Day took him, while he was yet a Child, and calling the Family together, made him to pray with them. His Father coming to underſtand, at what a rate, the Child had pray'd with his Family, it ſmote the Soul of him with a great Conviction, and prov'd the Beginning of his Converſion unto God. God left not off working on his Heart, until he proved one of the moſt Eminent Chriſtians in all that Neighbourhood. So he lived; ſo he died; a Man of more than ordinary Piety. And it was his manner ſometimes to retire unto thoſe very Places of his former Lewdneſſes, where having this his little Son in his Company, he would pour out Floods of Tears in repenting Prayers before the Lord.

This Hopeful Youth having been educated in Grammar-Learning under a worthy Schoolmaſter, one Mr. Sager, and in further Learning, under the Famous Dr. Harriſon, at length, about the Age of Twenty Two, he entred on the Publick Employment of Preaching the Goſpel. In ſo doing, he was not one of thoſe, of whom even the great Papiſt Bellarmine complains, Qui non valde ſolliciti eſſe ſolent, an ea qua par eſt preparatione accedant, cum Finis eorum magis ſit cibus Corporis, quam Animæ. He began at Cheſter; but afterwards went over to Ireland, where his Labours were ſo frequent, and fervent, that they gave thoſe Wounds unto his Health, which could never be recovered. About Fourteen Years of his Time, in Ireland, he ſpent at Limrick, and ſaw ſo many Seals of his Miniſtry, in that Country, that he ſeem'd rather to fiſh with a Net, than with an Hook, for the Kingdom of God.

I am not willing to relate, how grievouſly, and yet how patiently he ſuffered long and hard Impriſonments, from thoſe Men, concerning whom a conformable Divine of the Church of England, very truly ſays, That they were Atheiſts, with the Inventions of Ceremonies habited like Chriſtians, for the Service of the Devil, to corrupt and deſtroy true Chriſtianity: I I ſhould relate but little of this, becauſe that Spirit of Perſecution, has been repented by an happy Act of Parliament.

And yet for the Admonition of our Inexcuſable Young Men, The Sin of which Young Men is very great before the Lord! above that of thoſe, who have been brought up, as many very Godly Chriſtians have in thoſe ways of the Church of England, for a Seceſſion from which, this Country was firſt planted: Young Men, who notwithſtanding their Deſcent from Fathers and Grandfathers, that were great Sufferers for their Non-Conformity to an Uninſtituted Worſhip of Chriſt, and notwithſtanding their Education in the Knowledge of what is Required, and what is Forbidden in the Second Commandment, and notwithſtanding their being urged by no Temptation of Perſecution, or being tempted by any thing, but the Vanity of their own Minds, do yet ſo Rebel againſt the Light, as to turn Apoſtates from the Firſt Principles of New-England; it may be ſeaſonable to repeat ſo much of the Hiſtory of this Worthy Man, as a little further to illuſtrate this Article.

He no ſooner began to preach the Goſpel of the Lord Jeſus Chriſt, but his Fidelity to that Goſpel, was tried by an hard Impriſonment, which he underwent becauſe his Conſcience could not conform to Humane Inventions in the Sacred Service of Heaven. Yea, while he was yet a Young Man, he often travelled far by Night in the Winter, as well as in the Summer, that ſo he might enjoy the Ordinances purely adminiſtred in the Meetings of the Faithful; and was laid up ſometimes in Lancaſhire Gaol, for being found at thoſe Meetings. When he was at Limrick, the Attendance of a Perſon of Great Quality, and his Lady, (who were nearly related unto the Duke of Ormond, the Lord Lieutenant of Ireland) upon his Miniſtry, provoked the Biſhop to complain unto the Lord Lieutenant. This Gentleman then profered unto Mr. Baily, that if he would conform, he would procure his being made Chaplain to the Duke, and having a Deanery immediately, and a Biſhoprick upon the firſt Vacancy: But he refuſed the Profer. Albeit, another Eminent Non-Conformiſt Miniſter, not far from Limrick, a Godly and an able Man, and one who had appeared much againſt Conformity at the firſt preſſing thereof, did afterwards accept of the aforeſaid Chaplainſhip, and by degrees conformed, and arrived unto ſeveral Places of Preferment: Pretending, That he did it for the ſake of Opportunities to preach the Goſpel. But it was remarkable! God ſo diſabled him with Diſtempers after this, that he was very ſeldom, if ever able to preach at all.

Mr. Baily went on in the Exerciſe of his Miniſtry, not purſuing any Factious Deſigns, but meerly the Converſion of Men to Chriſt, and Faith, and Holineſs, which the Devil counts the worſt of all Deſigns. And now, although he were ſo harmleſs and blameleſs in his whole Converſation, that he was always much beloved wherever he came, yet another long Impriſonment was inflicted on him, while the Papiſts in the Neighbourhood, had all manner of Liberty and Countenance. When he was before the Judges, he told them, If I had been drinking and gaming and carouſing at a Tavern with my Company, my Lords, I preſume that would not have procured my being thus treated as an Offender. Muſt praying to God, and preaching of Chriſt, with a Company of Chriſtians, that are as Peaceable and Inoffenſive, and Serviceable to his Majeſty and the Government as any of his Subjects, muſt this be a greater Crime? The Recorder anſwered, We will have you to know, it is a greater Crime.

While he was impriſoned, his Church being divided into Seven Parts, viſited him one part a Day, ſo that preaching to them, and praying with them every Day, he once in a Week ſerved them all. But this, in a little while gave ſuch Offence, that a Violent Obſtruction was given thereunto; and though his Flock, particularly his Dear Young Men (as he call'd them) did pray without ceaſing, and not without faſting, for his Releaſe; and humble Applications were alſo made unto the Judges at the Aſſizes for it, yet no Releaſe could be granted him, without his giving Security, to depart the Land, within a little time then limited unto him.

It was not long, before a Wrath unto the uttermoſt came upon the City, which had thus perſecuted this Faithful Miniſter of God; and that Perſon particularly, who had been the chief Inſtrument of his Perſecution, was (as we have been told) within a while, upon other Accounts, himſelf run into Priſon, where he cried out with Horror, of the Wrongs done by him to Mr. Baily, and then running Diſtracted, he died miſerably. But New England, a Country originally a Retreat for perſecuted Non-Conformiſts, hereupon afforded unto our Baily an Opportunity of labouring near Fourteen Years more, in the Work which he loved above all things in the World; the Work of Turning the Souls of Men from Darkneſs to Light, and from Satan to God: Wherein for ſome time, his Younger and Godly, and ſweet natur'd Brother, who came over with him, was his comfortable Companion and Aſſiſtant; until he got the ſtart of him in his Departure to the Glories of the better World. They were indeed, Fratrum dulce par; a David and a Jonathan. Death, which for a while parted them, has now again brought them together. This Mr. Thomas Baily, died January 21. 1689. as this his Brother and Colleague notes in his Diary; He died well, which is a great Word; ſo ſweetly as I never ſaw the like before! But as for this Elder Brother, he was a Man of Great Holineſs, and of ſo tender a Conſcience, that if he had been at any time innocently chearful, in the Company of his Friends, it coſt him afterwards abundance of ſad Reflection, through Fear, leſt e'er he had been aware, he might have grieved the Holy Spirit of Chriſt. A Savoury Book of his about The Chief End of Man, publiſhed among us, has fully deſcribed unto us, that Savour of Spirit, which was in his daily Walk maintained.

Sic Oculos, Sic ille manus, Sic ora ferebat.

The Deſire of this Holy Man, was (as himſelf expreſſed it) to get up unto Three things: To Patience under the Calamities of Life; To Impatience under the Infirmities of Life; and to earneſt Longings for the next Life.

And his Deſire at another Time, he thus expreſſed. Oh! that I might not be of the Number of them, that live without Love, ſpeak without Feeling, and act without Life! Oh! that God would make me his Humble and Upright and Faithful Servant!

From this Holy Temper it was, that when ſome kind Preſents were made unto him, he wrote in his Diary thereupon; I have my Wages quickly; But Oh! that God may not put me off, with a Reward here! Oh! that God may be my Reward!

We will more particularly note a few Notable, wherein the Holineſs which irradiated him, will be deſcribed unto us.

We might begin with obſerving, That the Holy Word of God was very dear to him, as indeed it is to every Holy Man. Hence, I find this Paſſage in his Diary, Jan. 11. 'I finiſhed 'the Reading of the Bible, in my Family (as 'formerly) Oh! it's a Dear Book; it's always 'New. In the Beginning of every Chapter it's 'good to ſay, Lord, open my Eyes, that I may 'ſee Wonders out of thy Law; And when we 'ſhut it up to ſay, I have ſeen an end of all 'Perfection, but thy Law is exceeding Broad. 'Oh! how terrible are the Threatning; how 'precious are the Promiſes; how ſerious are 'the Precepts; how deep are the Prophecies 'of this Book! But we will paſs on to ſome 'further Obſervations.

What is Holineſs but a Dedication to the Lord Jeſus Chriſt? This Holy Man was often breathing in himſelf, and preſſing on others, that great Point of dedicating every thing to the Service of the Lord. Thus in his Diary, there frequently occur ſuch Strains as theſe. 'Oh! that I may glorifie God with all I am, 'or have; even with all the Faculties of my 'Soul, all the Members of my Body, and in 'all the Places and Relations that I ſtand in, 'as Man, Maſter, Miniſter, Husband, Kinſman, 'and Neighbour. Oh! I ſtand in need both 'of a Juſtifying Chriſt, and a Sanctifying 'Chriſt. When ſhall I ſenſibly find a Chriſt 'ſwaying his Scepter in my Soul! Thus whatever Houſe he came to live in, it came under a Dedication; and once upon a Remove, he wrote this Paſſage in his Diary. 'I could not 'but leave my Old Houſe, with a Prayer in 'every Room of it, for pardoning Mercy.

But it was particularly expreſſed, when one of his Children was to be Baptized. He thus wrote upon it. 'I ſpent ſome time in offering up my ſelf, and my Child unto the Lord, 'and in taking hold of the Covenant for my ſelf 'and him. It is actually to be done to Morrow, [in Baptiſm.] I prayed hard this Day, 'all this Day, that I might be able in much 'Faith, and Love, and New-Covenant Obedience to do it to morrow. It is not eaſy, tho' 'common to offer a Child unto God in Baptiſm. Oh! that's a ſweet Word, I will be a 'God to thee, and thy ſeed after thee. No marvel 'Abraham fell on his Face at the hearing of it!

Hence, when he parted with the greateſt Enjoyment he had in this World, he thus wrote upon it, in his Diary;

'If I can but Exchange outward Comforts 'for inward Graces, 'tis well enough: Oh! 'for an Heart to Glorify God in the Fire!

From this Holineſs proceeded that Watchfulneſs, which diſcovered a ſingular Fear of God, in his whole Converſation. I find him entring in his Diary ſuch Paſſages as theſe.

At one Time.

'I did not watch my Tongue ſo as I ought; 'which coſt me much Trouble afterwards, and 'made me walk heavily. It's a mad thing to 'Sin!

At another Time.

'I ſpoke two unadviſed Words to Day. Tho' 'there was no great harm in them, yet I was 'rebuked by my Conſcience for them. Let 'the Lord forgive them; and for the future, 'ſet a watch before the Door of my Lips. Let 'my Thoughts and Words be acceptable in thy 'ſight, O Lord.

At another Time.

'That a ſerious Word, methinks, in Eph. 5. '30. I have grieved the Holy Spirit, by my unedifying Communication. Oh! that in ſpeaking, I might adminiſter Grace to the Hearer! 'Oh! that Honey and Milk were under my 'Tongue continually.

At another Time.

'I was too forgetful of God, and exceeding 'in Tobacco. The Lord pardon that, and all 'other Sins, and heal this Nature, and humble this Heart.

At another Time.

'This Day I have been more chearful than 'I have been of a long time. It hath afflicted 'me ſince, fearing it was not ſuitable. Oh! I 'ought to walk in the midſt of my Houſe, in a 'perfect way. I ought every Day to be writing Copies; and to leave a Stock behind me 'that others may trade for God withal, when 'I am dead. And behold, you ſee this Day, that he did ſo.

And as Holy Men uſe to be full of Hearty Prayers and Wiſhes for the Good of other Men, thus this Holy Man has fill'd many Places in his Diaries, with his Prayers for the Welfare of thoſe, with whom he was concerned; from whence we may gather how full his Heart was of Bleſſings for his Neighbous.

Once particularly I find him thus writing.

‘I deſired to know of Dr. O. what I was indebted to him for thoſe many rich things I have had from him: He told me, Nothing; [which was a great Favour!] only deſired my Prayers for him. Oh! that I could pray! Whenever I can pray, I will heartily ſay to God in the Name of Chriſt for him, The Lord bleſs him indeed! Let thy Hand be with him, and keep him from all Evil, that it may not grieve him.

Moreover, It was not only among the great Signs, but alſo among the great Means of his Holineſs, that he was very ſollicitous, as well in his Preparation for the Table of the Lord, as in his Obſervation of what Communion he enjoyed with the Lord Jeſus Chriſt, at his Table.

His Diary abounds with Paſſages of this Importance; the Expreſſions of a Careful Soul.

The laſt time of his being at the Lord's Table, he wrote the enſuing Paſſages.

‘I was encouraged to carry my late bad Frame to the Croſs of Chriſt, and to bewail there my late Prayerleſneſs and Unthankfulneſs. Of late it hath troubled me, to think how little I have admired Chriſt for bringing me out of ſome late Plunges of Temptation. I now come to him for two things; namely, for Pardon; and alſo for double Power; both to receive him, and to ſhew forth his Praiſes.

Let me add; Sometimes, as he was able, he would ſet a part half a Day for extraordinary Prayers: He ſtill did ſo, when there were any extraordinary Cares upon him. Thus he Records in his Diaries.

At one Time.

‘Being of late in ſo ill a Frame, I ſpent ſome time, to ſeek the fair Face of Jeſus Chriſt; and I did, on purpoſe, addreſs my ſelf to him, who is the moſt Admirable Saviour. I left my ſelf with him; my Mind, Heart, Mouth; eſpecially my Conſcience. Oh! how many Wonders are to be wrought in me! I know, the Loving and Wonder-working Jeſus can do them all.

At another Time.

‘I ſpent ſome time alone in Prayer, from 8 to 3. I was much tired. Oh! that I might wait for Returns, and never more turn to Folly. I can't tell how God ſhould admit me near him, conſidering how I have grieved his Spirit. Having pray'd in the Morning in the Family, I retired; and firſt ſought at large unto God for help to go through the Day: Eſpecially begging Repentance, and not only ſo, but Faith; that I might not reſt in the bare Work; that Satan might get no Advantage after it; that I might have Reaſon to deſire more ſuch days. Then after a little Meditation and Breathing, I went to Prayer again, only to confeſs my Sin before God, and to ſet my Soul as before the Lord; labouring to judge and loath my ſelf, for all my Sin, from firſt to laſt. God helped a little; but Oh! that my Heart was broken in pieces, and humbled to the Duſt. After a little more Meditation, I went to Prayer in way of Petition, and that at large. Oh! Lord, hear me, and give me the Wiſdom that I want. I hope God will hear, pity, pardon, and help me. After a little more Meditation, I fell to praiſe and bleſs God for my Mercies, by Sea and Land; but was ſomewhat ſhort in this part, for which I am ſorry. At laſt I concluded all, in praying for the Church of God in general, for London, Lancaſhire, and Limrick; and for New-England alſo. Here I brought all my Relations to the Lord. Oh, Lord, accept of me, and my poor Services in Chriſt. Oh! that I may watch afterward, and never more be ſenſual, unbelieving, proud, nor hypocritical. Lord, ſay Amen.

And that Praiſes, as well as Prayers might not be forgotten with him, I find him once particularly in his Diary, thus expreſſing himſelf.

December 15. 1691.

‘I reſolved, through the Grace and Strength of Jeſus Chriſt, even in the midſt of all my Sorrows and Sinkings, Deſpairings and Diſtractions, to keep as much of this Day as I could in Thankſgiving; which I did; but could not go thorow with it, through bodily Faintneſs. I ſpent Five Hours ſomewhat comfortably; but after that I flagged. I reſolved to do three things. Firſt, to ſpend ſome time in praiſing God for his Excellencies. God was with me, I hope, in that part of it, and I ſpent my ſelf ſo much therein, that I was diſabled for the reſt. To help it forward God brought to hand Mr. Burroughs, of the Nature of God; I bleſs God for it. After that, I went to Prayer; labouring to exalt God; (it was a good Time!) after that I ſang the 148th. Pſalm. Secondly, after that, I ſet my ſelf to bleſs God for his Benefits and Kindneſſes to me. But being ſpent, I did not much; only going to Prayer, I made mention of ſome Mercies; ſuch as theſe, viz. for Chriſt; his Covenant of Grace; and the Promiſes of it (ſome of which, were particularly mentioned and preſſed:) alſo my Education; my manifold Preſervations by Land and Sea; (eſpecially that in Ipſwich Bay:) and manifold tedious Sickneſſes ſince; for the long Day of God's Patience, notwithſtanding many Sins: For my comfortable Proviſions all along; for preſerving his great Name, that I have in nothing openly diſhonoured it; for my Succeſs and Acceptance in my Work; for my dear Wife, that I had her ſo long; and that my Brother and my dear Wife died both of them glorifying of God: They are in Heaven, and I am out of Hell! that I have hitherto been kept from Diſtraction and Deſpair, and kept to my Work: That I have any Friends (in this ſtrange Land) and any in my Family to mind me and tend me: That I have Work here, and Opportunities of Service: For my ſore Croſſes and Loſſes of late Afflictions and Temptations, hoping they may work for Good. Thirdly, To conclude all, with a chearful accepting of Chriſt, and devoting my ſelf to his Service: To do for him, that had done all this for me: Saying, If God would help me to ſtudy, he ſhould have all the Glory of it. Thus did he walk with God.

His Miniſtry was very Acceptable to the People, whoſe Good he moſt aimed at, wherever he came: Great Auditories uſually flocking thereunto, proclaimed it. But that he might not be Lifted up, it ſeemed meet unto the Wiſdom of Heaven, to humble him with ſore and long Temptations, often Recurring to Buffet him. In his Days, he ſaw many Diſconſolate Hours; he was fill'd with Deſponding Jealouſies, leſt after he had preached unto others, he ſhould be himſelf a Caſt-away: And he often intreated thoſe, who ſaw the Diſtreſſes of his Mind, That they would by no means take up any Prejudice againſt the ſweet and good Ways of Religion, from what they ſaw of his Diſconſolate Uneaſineſſes.

It may be, 'twill be profitable unto ſome Diſcouraged Minds, to underſtand how he expreſſes himſelf on ſuch Occaſions. In Sermons on thoſe Words, I am oppreſſed, undertake for me, he much deſcribed it unto us. But in his Diaries 'twas thus:

At one Time.

‘I was almoſt in the Suburbs of Hell all Day; a meer Magor Miſſabib. I ſaw Death and Sin full of Terror: I thought I never ſought the Glory of God: Ah! What a matchleſs Wretch am I! Oh! That I could love above all things, and ſeek the Glory of God, and live contentedly on him alone! Oh! that I could ſee the Blood of Chriſt on my Soul, and at the Bottom of my Profeſſion. Oh! for a Sight of the Myſtery and Majeſty of the Grace and Love of Jeſus Chriſt; ſo that all Excellencies might fall down before it!

At another Time.

‘I am in a woful Frame; far from ſaying, with Dr. Avery, Here I lie, not knowing what God will do with me, but tho' I thus lie, God doth not terrifie me, either with my Sin, or with my Death, or with himſelf.

At another Time.

‘If God ſhould yet ſave my Soul, and his Work in my Hand, it would be amazing. There is a May be! If theſe inward Troubles hold, I ſhall be forced to lay down my Work. O Lord, ſtep in for my Relief! O the Worth of the Senſe of God's Love in Chriſt!

At another Time.

‘I am oppreſſed unto Death, and fill'd with the Angry Arrows of God: It ariſeth not at preſent from any particular Cauſe, but the Senſe of my woful Eſtate in general. Oh! that the Iſſue may yet be Peace, and that I may not fetch Comfort unto my ſelf, but by Faith in Jeſus Chriſt.

At anotherr Time.

‘Oh! That Jeſus Chriſt would undertake for me! If God marvellouſly prevent not, I ſhall lay down my Work. O Lord, appear. Oh! for one ſaving Sight of the Love, and Lovelineſs of Jeſus Chriſt. I wiſh I could ſay, as my dear Tutor Dr. Harriſon ſaid, That he could not live a Day, without a freſh Manifeſtation of God unto his Soul!

At another Time.

‘The Eclipſe of the Moon laſt Night, made one think, Oh! that I could mourn bitterly, who have ſinned my ſelf into Darkneſs. How is the Earth interpoſing! Lord, Remove it. Let the Son of Righteouſneſs in his Glory and Strength yet be ſeen by me!

At another Time.

‘I have much Reaſon to bleſs God, for Rebuking of Satan. I have been many a Time ready to give up all, and lay down my Miniſtry, thinking that God had utterly forſaken me, and hid Jeſus Chriſt from me; which I would juſtify him in. But by the Conſideration of the Brazen Serpent, I was ſomewhat Recovered.

At another Time.

‘I was now ſupported by the Thoughts of a Precious JESUS. I ſhould for ever ſink, but for him! When I look backward or forward, upward or downward, I die, I ſink; but when I look at the ſweet JESUS, I live. I may reſolve with Dr. Preſton; (O that I could!) ſaying, I have often try'd God, and now I'll truſt him. It's a good Reſolution; Lord, help me to it!

At another Time.

‘I would gladly think, That God is my Father. And if ſo, Oh! what Glory is due to the Riches of Free Grace! Oh! how glorious is that Grace, and how will it ſhine through all Eternity! If ever I ſee my ſelf ſafe at laſt, I muſt for ever cry out, I am wonderfully ſaved!

In fine, One thing that much relieved him in his internal Troubles, was what he had occaſion (thus) to write in his Diary, a little before his End.

‘I do more ſee into the great Myſtery of our Juſtification by Faith, meerly of Grace. There is no reſpect in it, unto this or that; but Jeſus Chriſt having wrought out a Redemption for us, and by his Active and Paſſive Obedience procured a ſufficient Righteouſneſs, and making a Tender of it in the Goſpel, it becomes mine, by my accepting of it, and relying on it alone for Salvation. And ſhall I not accept of it? God forbid!

‘I ſee (ſaith he) there are two things, wherein I can't eaſily exceed, viz. In aſcribing to the Grace of God, the Freeneſs and Richneſs of it in Man's Salvation; and in aſcribing to the Righteouſneſs of Chriſt in Man's Juſtification.

At length, diſmal Pains of the Gout, with a Complication of other Maladies, confined him for a Quarter of a Year together. Under the Pains of his Confinement, he took an extraordinary Contentment in the Fifty Third Chapter of Iſaiah, which repreſents the Sorrows of our Lord Jeſus Chriſt, whereby all our Sorrows are ſanctified: And he would often roll over thoſe Words of our Saviour, elſewhere occurring, They pierced my Hands and my Feet. When the Remainders of his Flock, which waited on him to New-England, viſited him, his uſual and ſolemn Charge to them was, I charge you, That I find you all ſafe at laſt! My Brethren, God make the Charge of your dead Paſtor abide upon you. For ſome time in his laſt Sickneſs, his Heavenly Soul was harraſſed with terrible Diſcouragements: Under all of which, it was yet a common Expreſſion with him, The Maſter hath done all things well! But at laſt, he arrived unto a Bleſſed Satisfaction, That the Lord Jeſus Chriſt had made his Peace in Heaven, and that he was going into Eternal Peace. Yea, at the worſt, he would ſay, That his Fear was not ſo much about the End of all as about what he might meet withal in the way to that End. He had begun to prepare a Sermon for our South-Church, upon thoſe Words, Who is this that comes up from the Wilderneſs, leaning on her Beloved? And he now ſpoke of it, as expreſſing his own Condition; Thus am I going (ſaid he) out of the Wilderneſs of all my Temptations, leaning on my Bleſſed Jeſus! When his Affectionate Friends were weeping about him, he beſtow'd this Rebuke upon them, Away with your Idols! Away with your Idols! It was not very long before he fell ſick, that he wrote this Paſſage in his Diary.

‘I was affected with what I read of Mr. Shewel of Coventry, who died in the Pulpit. Lord, Let not me die meanly, but in dying bring much Glory to thee. And now it ſhall be ſo! At laſt, juſt as he was going to expire, he ſeem'd as if he had ſome extraordinary Apprehenſions of the Glory, in which our Lord Jeſus Chriſt is above enthroned: He ſtrove to ſpeak unto his Vertuous Conſort, and anon ſpoke thus much, Oh! What ſhall I ſay? He is altogether lovely? His Worthy Siſter-in-Law, then coming to him, he haid, Oh! All our Praiſes of him here, are poor and low things! And then added, His Glorious Angels are come for me! Upon the ſaying whereof he cloſed his own Eyes, about the time when he ſtill opened his Bible for his Publick Labours: On the Lord's Day, about three in the Afternoon; and he never opened them any more.

This was he whom you are now going to Bury; but I pray you, Bury not with him all the Holy Counſels and Warnings, that we have heard from him; Remember how you have received and heard.

He was one, who took much Notice of what was from the Oracles of God, ſpoken to him, in the Sermons of other Men. He has much repleniſhed his Diaries, with Remarks of this Importance; I have heard a good Word to day! And he would often decline going to Feaſts, whereto his Friends invited him, that he might go to Private Meetings in ſome other Parts of the Town, where he might at the ſame time Feaſt on the Word of God. Thus, more particularly.

At one Time.

‘I heard a very good Word. Are ye not Carnal? Ah, Lord, I am Carnal. The Lord give me his Spirit to make me Spiritual! I was in many things juſtly reproved: Let me take it, and be wrought into the Likeneſs of this good Word.

At another Time.

‘To day I heard a moſt precious Word, with which I was much edified and refreſhed, viz. Chriſt is all. Oh! that I might never forget it! Oh! that it might be written upon the Table of my Heart! Let my Soul feed upon it for ever. It was very ſeaſonable. Though it was a Day moſt intolerably cold; ſo cold, that there was little writing it; yet it heartily warmed me. I needed a Chriſt: Oh! that I could get him, and keep him for ever! I would make him my All, and count him my All. I need a whole Chriſt: Oh! that I may prize a whole Chriſt, and improve a whole

'Chriſt. I have of late thought, that this may 'be one Evidence of my Right unto Glory,
'that Chriſt is more precious to me than ever.

What I ſay upon it, is; Imitate him in a point ſo Imitable. This Preacher is well worthy to be imitated, as he was an Hearer.

You can all teſtify, that he was none of thoſe Cold Preachers, whereof one complains, Verba vitæ in quorundam Doctorum Labiis, quantum ad Virtutem, & Efficaciam Moriuntur: Adeo enim tepide, adeo remiſſe, verba Dei annunciant, ut Extincta in Labiis Eorum penitus videantur; unde Sicut ipſi Frigidi ſunt, & Extincti, ſic Frigidos & Extinctos relinquunt, & utinam non facerent Auditores.

For his Preaching, he particularly preſcribed unto himſelf, according to a Memorandum, which I found thus entred in his Diary.

'Old Mr. Thomas Shepheard, when on his 'Death-bed, ſaid unto the young Miniſters
'about him, That their Work was great, and
'called for great Seriouſneſs. For his own part,
'he told them three things. Firſt, That the 'ſtudying of every Sermon coſt him Tears; he
'wept in the ſtudying of every Sermon. Se-
'condly, Before he preach'd any Sermon, he 'got Good by it himſelf. Thirdly, He always 'went up into the Pulpit, as if he were to 'give up his Accounts unto his Maſter. Oh!
'that my Soul (adds our Baily) may remember
'and practiſe accordingly!

To this his Preaching, when he ſaw God gave any Succeſs, he would ſtill in his private Papers, take as Thankful a Notice, as if great Riches had been heaped in upon him. And yet he would add [ſuch Paſſages I ſometimes find.]

'Let my Soul rejoice. But, Lord, keep me
'from Pride. I deſire to be humbled for it.
'Do I not know that God makes uſe of whom
'he pleaſes, and uſually of the Weakeſt! No
'Fleſh ſhall glory!

But if the Word preached by this lively Diſpenſer of it, live not in our Lives, after he is Dead, he will himſelf be, which he often told you, he fear'd he ſhould be in the Day of God, a Witneſs againſt many of you.

That we may then meet him with Joy, Let us remember them, who have ſpoken to us the Word of God, and follow their Faith, conſidering the End of their Converſation.

But be thou ſenſible, O all my Country of New-England, how much thou art weakened, by the Departure of ſuch Bleſſings to the World of the Bleſſed.

Thy Baily could ſometimes write ſuch Paſſages as this, (I find) in his Reſerved Papers.

'There was a Day of Prayer. God was with 'me in Prayer, helping me to plead with him
'an Hour and half, for this poor Land, and in
'ſome meaſure to Believe for it. I hope, God
'will hear and help.

Such an one taking Flight from thee, Let thy Lamentations thereupon be heard; My Father, my Father!

INTRODUCTION.

If there have been Univerſities in the World, which a Beza would call Flabella Satanæ, and a Luther would call Cathedras Peſtilentiæ, & Antichriſti Luminaria, and a Third ventures to ſtyle, Synagogas Perditionis & Puteos Abyſſi; the Excellent Arrowſmith has truly obſerved, That it is no more to be inferred from hence that all are ſo, than that all Books are to be burnt, becauſe the Chriſtians did burn the Magical Ones at Epheſus. The New-Englanders have not been Weigelians: or the Diſciples of the Furious Fanatick, who held forth [Reader, Let it never be tranſlated into Engliſh!] Nullam eſſe in Univerſo Terrarum Orbe Academiam, in quâ Chriſtus inveniatur; In Academijs nè tantillam quidem Chriſti Cognitionem reperiri poſſe: Noluiſſe Chriſtum Evangelium prædicari per Diabolos; ergo non per Academicos. Leſt all the Hellebore of New-England (a Countrey abounding with Hellebore) ſhould not ſuffice to reſtore ſuch Dreamers unto their Wits, it hath produced an Univerſity alſo, for their better Information, their utter Confutation. Behold, an American Univerſity, preſenting her ſelf, with her Sons, before her Europæan Mothers for their Bleſſing. An Univerſity, which hath been to theſe Plantations, as Livy ſaith of Greece, for the good Literature there cultivated, Sal Gentium; An Univerſity, which may make her boaſt unto the Circumjacent Regions, like that of the Orator on the behalf of the Engliſh Cambridge, Fecimus (abſit Verbo Invidia, cui abeſt Falſitas) ne in Demagorijs Lapis ſederet ſuper Lapidem, nè deeſſent in Templis Theologi, in Foris Juriſperiti, in Oppidis Medici; Rempublicam, Eccleſiam, Sedatum, Exercitum, Viris Doctis replevimus, eòq; meliùs bono publico inſervire comparatis, quò magis eruditi fuerint: Finally, An Univerſity which has been what Stangius made his Abbey, when he turn'd it into a Proteſtant Colledge; Τῆς Θεογνωσίας παιδευτήριον ϗ Ψυχῶν διδασκαλεῖον Λογικῶν. And a River, without the Streams whereof, theſe Regions would have been meer, Unwatered Places, for the Devil!

PART I.

Its Laws, Benefactors, Viceſſitudes, and its Graduates.

§. 1. THE Nations of Mankind, that have ſhaken off Barbarity, have not more Differed in the Languages, than they have Agreed in this One Principle, That Schools for the Inſtitution of Young Men, in all other Liberal Sciences, as well as that of Languages, are neceſſary to procure, and preſerve, that Learning amongſt them, which > Emollit Mores, nec ſinit eſſe feros.

To relate the Thouſandth Part of the Brave Things, which have been done by the Nations of Aſia, in former, or the Nations of Europe, in later Ages, purſuant to this Principle, would be to fill huge Folio Volumes, with Tranſcribing from Hoſpinian or Middendorpius, from Alſted, from Junius, and from Leigh, and from very many other Authors. America is the part of the World, whereto our Hiſtory is confined; and one little Part of America, where the Firſt Academy, that ever adorned any Engliſh Plantation in America was erected; and an Academy, which if Majores noſtri Academias ſignato vocabulo appellavêre Univerſitates, quod Univerſarum Divinarum Humanarumq; Rerum Cognitio, in ijs, ut Theſauro conſervata aperiatur, it may, though it have otherwiſe wanted many Priviledges, from the very Foundation of it, pretend unto the Name of an Univerſity. The Primitive Chriſtians were not more prudently careful, to ſettle Schools for the Education of Perſons, to ſucceed the more immediately Inſpired Miniſtry of the Apoſtles, and ſuch as had been Ordained by the Apoſtles; (and the Apoſtate Julian, truly imagined, that he could not ſooner undo Chriſtianity, than by putting of them down!) than the Chriſtians in the moſt Early Times of New-England were to form a Colledge, wherein a Succeſſion of a Learned and Able Miniſtry might be Educated. And, indeed, they foreſaw that without ſuch a Proviſion for a Sufficient Miniſtry, the Churches of New-England muſt have been leſs than a Buſineſs of One Age, and ſoon have come to Nothing: The Other Hemiſphere of the World, would never have ſent us over Men enough to have anſwered our Neceſſities; but without a Nurſery for ſuch Men among our ſelves Darkneſs muſt have ſoon covered the Land, and Groſs Darkneſs the People. For ſome little while, indeed, there very Hopeful Effects of the Pains taken by certain particular Men of Great Worth and Skill, to bring up ſome in their own Private Families, for Publick Services; but much of Uncertainty and of Inconveniency in this Way, was in that little while diſcovered; and when Wiſe Men conſidered the Queſtion handled by Quintilian, Utilius ne ſit Domi, atq; intra privatos Parietes ſtudentem continere, an frequentiæ Scholarum, & velut publicis Præceptoribus tradero? they ſoon determined it as He did, That Set-Schools are ſo neceſſary, there is no Doing without them. Wherefore a Colledge muſt now be thought upon: A Colledge, the beſt Thing that ever New-England thought upon! As the Admirable Voetius could happily boaſt of it, that whereas there are no leſs than Ten Provinces in the Popiſh Belgium, and there are no more than Two Univerſities in them, there are but Seven Provinces in the Reformed Belgium, and there are Five Univerſities therein, beſides other Academical Societies; thus the Firſt Poſſeſſors of this Proteſtant and Puritan Country, were zealous for an Univerſity, that ſhould be more ſignificant than the Seminaries of Canada and Mexico; New-England compared with other Places, might lay Claim to the Character that Strabo gives of Tarſus, the City of our Apoſtle Paul's firſt Education; They had ſo great a Love to Philoſophy, [τοσαύτη σπουδὴ πρός τε φιλοσοφίαν] and all the Liberal Sciences, that they excelled Athens, Alexandria, and if there were any other Place worth Naming where the Schools, and Diſputes of Philophy, and all Humane Arts maintained. And although this Country did chiefly conſiſt of ſuch as by the Difficulties of Subduing a Wretched Wilderneſs, were brought into ſuch a Condition of Poverty, that they might have gone by the Title, by which the modeſtly-clad Noblemen and Gentlemen, that firſt petitioned againſt the Inquiſition in the Low-Countries, were diſtinguiſhed, namely, A Troop of Beggars, yet theſe Gueux were willing to let the Richer Colonies, which retained the Ways of the Church of England, ſee How much True Religion was a Friend unto good Literature. The Reader knows that in every Town among the Jews, there was a School, whereat Children were taught the Reading of the Law; and, if there were any Town deſtitute of a School, the Men of the Place did ſtand excommunicate, until One were erected: Beſides and beyond which they had Midraſhoth, or Divinity-Schools, in which they expounded the Law to their Diſciples. Whether the Churches of New-England have been duely careful or no, about their other Schools, they have not been altogether careleſs about their Midraſhoth; and it is well for them that they have not.

§. 2. A General Court held at Boſton, Sept. 8. 1630. advanced a Small Sum (and it was then a Day of Small Things) namely, Four Hundred Pounds, by way of Eſſay towards the Building of ſomething to begin a Colledge; and New-Town being the Kiriath Sepher appointed for the Seat of it, the Name of the Town was for the ſake of ſomewhat now founding here, which might hereafter grow into an Univerſity, changed into Cambridge. 'Tis true, the Univerſity of Upſal in Sueden, hath ordinarily about ſeven or eight Hundred Students belonging to it, which do none of them live Collegiately, but board all of them here and there at Private Houſes; nevertheleſs the Government of New-England, was for having their Students brought up in a more Collegiate Way of Living. But that which laid the moſt ſignificant Stone in the Foundation, was the Laſt Will of Mr. John Harvard, a Reverend, and Excellent Miniſter of the Goſpel, who dying at Charlſtown, of a Conſumption, quickly after his Arrival here, bequeathed the Sum of Seven Hundred, ſeventy nine Pounds, ſeventeen Shillings and two Pence, towards the Pious Work of building a Colledge, which was now ſet a foot. A Committee then being choſen, to proſecute an Affair, ſo happily commenced, it ſoon found Encouragement from ſeveral other Benefactors: The other Colonies ſent ſome ſmall Help to the Undertaking, and ſeveral particular Gentlemen did more, than whole Colonies to ſupport and forward it: But becauſe the Memorable Mr. John Harvard, led the Way by a Generoſity exceeding the moſt of them, that followed His Name was juſtly Æternized, by its having the Name of Harvard-Colledge impoſed upon it. While theſe Things were a doing, a Society of Scholars, to Lodge in the New Neſts, were forming under the Conduct of one Mr. Nathanael Eaton [or, if thou wilt, Reader, Orbilius Eaton] a Blade, who marvellouſly deceived the Expectations of Good Men concerning him; for he was One fitter to be Maſter of a Bridewel than a Colledge: And though his Avarice was notorious, enough to get the Name of a Philargyrius fixed upon him, yet his Cruelty was more ſcandalous than his Avarice. He was a Rare Scholar himſelf, and he made many more ſuch; but their Education truly was In the School of Tyrannus. Among many other Inſtances of his Cruelty, he gave One in cauſing two Men to hold a young Gentleman, while he ſo unmercifully beat him with a Cudgel, that upon Complaint of it, unto the Court in September, 1639. he was fined an Hundred Marks, beſides a Convenient Sum to be paid unto the young Gentleman, that had ſuffered by his Unmercifulneſs; and for his Inhumane Severities towards the Scholars, he was removed from his Truſt. After this, being firſt Excommunicated by the Church of Cambridge, he did himſelf Excommunicate all our Churches, going firſt into Virginia. then into England, where he lived privately until the Reſtauration of King Charles II. Then Conforming to the Ceremonies of the Church of England, he was fixed at Biddiford, where he became (as Apoſtata eſt Oſor ſui Ordinis) a bitter Perſecutor of the Chriſtians, that kept faithful to the Way of Worſhip, from which he was himſelf an Apoſtate; until he who had caſt ſo many into Priſon for Conſcience, was himſelf caſt into Priſon for Debt; where he did, at length, pay One Debt, namely, that unto Nature, by Death,

§. 3. On Auguſt 27. 1640. The Magiſtrates, with the Miniſters, of the Colony, choſe Mr. Henry Dunſtar, to be the Preſident of their New Harvard-Colledge. And in time convenient, the General Court endued the Colledge with a Charter, which made it a Corporation, conſiſting of a Preſident, two Fellows, and a Treaſurer to all proper Intents and Purpoſes: Only with Powers reſerved unto the Governour, Deputy-Governour, and all the Magiſtrates of the Colony, and the Miniſters of the ſix next Towns for the Time being, to act as Overſeers, or Viſitors of the Society. The Tongues and Arts were now taught in the Colledge, and Piety was maintained with ſo Laudable a Diſcipline, that many Eminent Perſons went forth from hence, adorned with Accompliſhments, that rendred them formidable to other Parts of the World, as well as to this Country, and Perſons of good Quality ſent their Sons, from other Parts of the World, for ſuch an Education, as this Country could give unto them. The Number of Benefactors to the Colledge, did herewithal increaſe to ſuch a Degree of Benefits, that although the Præſident were ſupported ſtill by a Salary, from the Treaſury of the Colony, yet the Treaſury of the Colledge it ſelf was able to pay many of its Expences; eſpecially after the Incomes of Charlstown Ferry, were by an Act of the General Court ſettled thereupon. To Enumerate theſe Benefactors would be a piece of Juſtice to their Memory, and the Catalogue of their Names, and Works preſerved in the Colledge, has done them that Juſtice. But as I find One Article in that Catalogue to run thus, A Gentleman not willing his Name ſhould be put upon Record, gave fifty Pounds; thus, I am ſo willing to believe, that the moſt of thoſe Good Men that are mentioned were content with a Record of their Good Deeds in the Book of God's Remembrance, that I ſhall Excuſe this Book of our Church-Hiſtory from ſwelling with a particular Mention of them: albeit for us to leave unmentioned in this place a MOULSON, a SALTONSTAL, an ASHURST, a PENNOYER, a DODDRIDGE, an HOPKINS, a WEB, an USHER, an HULL, a RICHARDS, an HULTON, a GUNSTON, would hardly be excuſable. And while theſe made their Liberal Contributions, either to the Edifice or to the Revenue of the Colledge, there were others that enrich'd its Library, by preſenting of Choice Books with Mathematical Inſtruments, thereunto, among whom Sir Kenelm Digby, Sir John Maynard, Mr. Richard Baxter and Mr. Joſeph Hill, ought always to be remembred. But the moſt Conſiderable Acceſſion to this Library was, when the Reverend Mr. Theophilus Gale, a well known Writer of many Books, and Owner of more, bequeathed what he had, unto this New-Engliſh Treaſury of Learning; whereof I find in an Oration of Mr. Increaſe Mather, at the Commencement in the Year 1681. this Commemoration, —— Libris quam plurimis iisq; Lectu dignisſimis Bibliotheca Harvardina Locupletatur, quos THEOPHILUS GALEUS (ὁ μακαρίτης) Theologus nunquam ſatis Laudatus, legavit; quoſq; Novanglorum Moſes, Dominum Gulielmum Stoughtonum volo, procuravit, eoq; ſe primarium Hujus Academiæ Curatorem præbuit, atq; Harvardinos omnes ſibi in perpetuum Devinctos habet. —— Indeed this Library is at this Day, far from a Vatican, or a Bodleian Dimenſion, and ſufficiently ſhort of that, made by Ptolomy at Alexandria, in which Fame hath placed Seven Hundred Thouſand Volumns, and of that made by Theodoſius at Conſtantinople, in which a more certain Fame hath told us of Ten Myriads: Nevertheleſs, 'tis I ſuppoſe the beſt Furniſhed that can be ſhown any where, in all the American Regions; and when I have the Honour to walk in it, I cannot but think on the Satifaction, which Heinſius reports himſelf to be fill'd withal, when ſhut up in the Library at Leyden; Plerumq; in eâ ſimulac pedem poſui, foribus Peſſulum obdo, et in ipſo Æternitatis Gremio, inter tot Illuſtres Animas ſedem mihi Sumo: cum ingenti quidem Animo, ut ſubinde Magnatum me miſereat, qui Fœlicitatem hanc ignorant.

§. 4. When Scholars had ſo far profited at the Grammar Schools, that they could Read any Claſſical Author into Engliſh, and readily make, and ſpeak true Latin, and Write it in Verſe as well as Proſe; and perfectly Decline the Paradigms of Nouns and Verbs in the Greek Tongue, they were judged capable of Admiſſion in Harvard-Colledge; and upon the Examination, were accordingly Admitted by the Preſident and Fellows; who, in Teſtimony thereof, ſigned a Copy of the Colledge Laws, which the Scholars were each of them to Tranſcribe and Preſerve, as the continual Remembrancers of the Duties, whereto their Priviledges obliged them. While the Præſident inſpected the Manners of the Students thus Entertained in the Colledge, and unto his Morning and Evening Prayers in the Hall, joined an Expoſition upon the Chapters; which they Read out of Hebrew into Greek, from the Old

Teſtament in the Morning, and out of Engliſh into Greek, from the New Teſtament in the Evening; beſides what Sermons he ſaw cauſe to Preach in publick Aſſemblies on the Lord's-Day at Cambridge, where the Students have a particular Gallery allotted unto them; the Fellows Reſident on the Place, became Tutors to the ſeveral Claſſes, and after they had Inſtructed them in the Hebrew Language, led them through all the Liberal Arts, e're their firſt Four Years expired. And in this Time, they had their Weekly Declamations, on Fridays in the Colledge-Hall, beſides publick Diſputations, which either the Præſident or the Fellows moderated. Thoſe who then ſtood Candidates to be Graduates, were to attend in the Hall for certain Hours, on Mondays, and on Tueſdays, Three Weeks together towards the Middle of June, which were called Weeks of Viſitation; ſo that all Comers that pleaſed, might examine their Skill in the Languages and Sciences, which they now pretended unto; and uſually, ſome or other of the Overſeers of the Colledge, would on purpoſe Viſit them, whilſt they were thus doing what they called, ſitting of Solſtices: When the Commencement arrived, which was formerly the Second Tueſday in Auguſt, but ſince, the Firſt Wedneſday in July; they that were to proceed Bachelors, held their Act publickly in Cambridge; whither the Magiſtrates and Miniſters, and other Gentlemen then came, to put Reſpect upon their Exerciſes: And theſe Exerciſes were beſides an Oration uſually made by the Preſident, Orations both Salutatory and Valedictory, made by ſome or other of the Commencers, wherein all Perſons and Orders of any faſhion then preſent, were Addreſſed with proper Complements, and Reflections were made on the moſt Remarkable Occurrents of the præceeding Year; and theſe Orations were made not only in Latin, but ſometimes in Greek and in Hebrew alſo; and ſome of them were in Verſe, and even in Greek Verſe, as well as others in Proſe. But the main Exerciſes were Diſputations upon Queſtions, wherein the Reſpondents firſt made their Theſes: For according to Voſſius, the very Eſſence of the Baccalaureat ſeems to lye in the Thing: Baccalaureus being but a Name Corrupted of Batualius, which Batualius (as well as the French Bataile) comes à Batuendo, a Buſineſs that carries Beating in it: So that, Batualii fuerunt vocati, quia jam quaſi, Batuiſſent cum Adverſario, ac Manus conſeruiſſent; hoc eſt, PUBLICE DISPUTASSENT, atque ita Peritiæ ſuæ Specimen dediſſent. In the Cloſe of the Day, the Præſident, with the Formality of Delivering a Book into their Hands, gave them their Firſt Degree; But ſuch of them as had Studied Three Years after their Firſt Degree, to Anſwer the Horation Character of an Artiſt,

And beſides their Exhibiting Synopſes of the Liberal Arts, by themſelves compoſed, now again publickly diſputed on ſome Queſtions, of perhaps a little higher Elevation; Theſe now, with a like Formality, received their Second Degree, proceeding Maſters of Art. —— Quis enim Doctrinam amplectitur ipſam, præmia ſi tollas? The Words uſed by the Præſident, in this Action, were §. 5. Mr. Henry Dunſter, continued the Præſident of Harvard-Colledge, until his unhappy Entanglement in the Snares of Anabaptiſm; fill'd the Overſeers with uneaſie Fears, leſt the Students by his means, ſhould come to be Enſnared: Which Uneaſineſs was at length ſo ſignified unto him, that on October 24. 1654. He preſented unto the Overſeers, an Inſtrument under his Hands; wherein he Reſigned his Preſidentſhip, and they accepted his Reſignation. That brave Old Man Johannes Amos COMMENIUS, the Fame of whoſe Worth hath been Trumpetted as far as more than Three Languages (whereof every one is Endebted unto his Janua) could carry it was indeed agreed withall, by our Mr. Winthrop in his Travels through the Low Countries, to come over into New-England, and Illuminate this Colledge and Country, in the Quality of a Preſident: But the Solicitations of the Swediſh Amballador, diverting him another way, that Incomparable Moravian became not an American. On November 2, 1654. Mr. Richard Mather and Mr. Norton, were employed by the Overſeers, to tender unto Mr. Charles Chancey the Place of Preſident, which was now become Vacant; who on the Twenty Seventh Day of that Month, had a Solemn Inauguration thereunto. A Perſon he was, of whom 'tis not eaſie to ſay too much; but let it here be enough, to Recite the Words of Mr. Increaſe Mather (who now ſucceeds him) in one of his Orations.

Cl. Ille Chancæus. quem CAROLUM magnum, jure optimo nominare poſſumus: Fuit ille Senex Venerandus, Linguarum & Artium præſidiis Inſtructiſſimus, Gymnaſiarcha præclarè Doctus; qui in filiis Prophetarum Erudiendis fidelem navavit operam omnemque diligentiam adhibuit. Abitus & Obitus tanti Viri, Collegium quaſi truncatum, ac tantum non enecatum reliquerunt. After the Death of Mr. Chancey, which was at the latter End of the Year 1701. The Alma Mater Academia, muſt look among her own Sons, to find a Preſident for the reſt of her Children; and accordingly the Fellows of the Colledge with the Approbation of the Overſeers, July 13. 1672. elected Mr. Leonard Hoar, unto that Office; whereto, on the Tenth of September following he was Inaugurated.

This Gentleman, after his Education in Harvard-Colledge, travelled over into England; where he was not only a Preacher of the Goſpel in divers Places, but alſo received from the Univerſity in Cambridge, the Degree of A Doctor of Phyſick. The Doctor, upon ſome Invitations, relating to a Settlement, in the Paſtoral Charge with the South Church at Boſton, returned into New-England; having firſt married a Virtuous Daughter of the Lord Liſle, a Great Example of Piety and Patience, who now croſs'd the Atlantick with him; and quickly after his Arrival here, his Invitation to Præſide over the Colledge at Cambridge, ſuperſeded thoſe from the Church in Boſton. Were he conſidered either as a Scholar, or as a Chriſtian, he was truly a Worthy Man; and he was generally reputed ſuch, until happening, I can ſcarce tell how, to fall under the Diſpleaſure of ſome that made a Figure in the Neighbourhood, the Young Men in the Colledge, took Advantage therefrom, to ruine his Reputation, as far as they were able. He then found the Rectorſhip of a Colledge to be as troubleſome a Thing, as ever Antigonus did his Robe; and he could ſubſcribe to Melchior Adam's Account of it, Sceptrum illud Scholaſticum, plus habet ſolicitudinis quam pulchritudinis, plus curæ quam Auri, plus Impedimenti quum Argenti. The young Plants turned Cud-weeds, and with great Violations of the Fifth Commandment: ſet themſelves to Traveſtie whatever he did and ſaid, and aggravate every thing in his Behaviour diſagreeable to them, with a Deſign to make him Odious; and in a Day of Temptation, which was now upon them, ſeveral very Good Men did unhappily countenance the Ungoverned Youths, in their Ungovernableneſs. Things were at length driven to ſuch a paſs, that the Students deſerted the Colledge, and the Doctor on March 15. 1675. reſigned his Præſidentſhip. But the Hard and Ill Uſage, which he met withal made ſo deep an Impreſſion upon his Mind, that his Grief threw him into a Conſumption, whereof he dyed Novem. 28. the Winter following, in Boſton; and he lies now interr'd at Braintree: Where he might properly enough have this Line inſcribed over him for his

EPITAPH,

Malus celeri ſaucius Africo.

The Fate of this Ingenious Man, was not altogether without a Parallel, in what long ſince befel Dr. Metcalf, the Maſter of St. John's Colledge in Cambridge; who, as Dr. Fuller has related it, was injuriouſly driven from the Colledge, and expired ſoon after his going out of his Office: But I would not have my Reader go too far, in Conſtruing the Remark, which the Great Caius made thereupon, Omnes qui Metcalfi excludendi Autores extiterunt, multis Adverſæ Fortunæ procellis, ſive Divina Ultione, ſeu Fato ſuo, jactati, mortem obierunt Exemplo Memorabili. All that I ſhall farther add concerning our Doctor, is, that in his Time, there being Occaſion for the Colledge to be recruited with New-Edifices, there was a Contribution made for it through the Colony, which, in the whole, amounted unto One Thouſand, Eight Hundred, Ninety Five Pounds, Two Shillings and Nine Pence; and of this, there was Eight Hundred Pounds given by the One Town of Boſton; and of that, there was One Hundred Pounds given by the One Hand of Sir Thomas Temple, as True a Gentleman, as ever ſet foot on the American Strand; and this Contribution with ſome other Aſſiſtances, quickly produced a New Colledge, wearing ſtill the Name of the Old One, which Old One is now ſo mouldred away, that —— Jam Seges eſt ubi Troja fuit.

After the Death of Dr. Hoar, the Place of Præſident pro Tempore, was put upon Mr. Urian Oakes, the Excellent Paſtor of the Church at Cambridge; who did ſo, and would no otherwiſe accept of the Place; though the Offer of a Full Settlement in the Place, was afterwards importunately made unto him. He did the Services of a Præſident, even, as he did all other Services, Faithfully, Learnedly, Indefatigably; and by a New Choice of him thereunto, on Feb. 2. 1679, was, at laſt, prevailed withal to take the full Charge upon him. We all know, that Britain knew nothing more Famous, than their Ancient Sect of DRUIDS; the Philoſophers, whoſe Order, they ſay, was inſtituted by One Samothes, which is in Engliſh, as much as to ſay, An Heavenly Man. The Celtic Name, Deru for an Oak, was that from whence, they received their Denomination; as at this very Day, the Welch call this Tree Derw, and this Order of Men Derwyddon. But there are no ſmall Antiquaries, who derive this Oaken Religion and Philoſophy, from the Oaks of Mamre, where the Patriarch Abraham had as well a Dwelling as an Altar. That Oaken-Plain, and the Eminent Oak under which Abraham lodged, was extant in the Days of Conſtantine, as Iſidore, Jerom and Sozomen have aſſured us. Yea, there are ſhrew'd Probabilities, that Noah himſelf had lived in this very Oak-plain before him; for this very Place was called Ογυγη, which was the Name of Noah, ſo ſtyled from the Oggyan (ſubcineritiis panibus) Sacrifices, which he did uſe to offer, in this Renowned Grove: And it was from this Example that the Ancients, and particularly that the Druids of the Nations, choſe Oaken Retirements for their Studies. Reader, Let us now upon another Account, behold the Students of Harvard-Colledge, as a Rendezvous of Happy Druids, under the Influences of ſo Rare a Præſident: But alas! our Joy muſt be ſhort lived; for, on July 25. 1681. the Stroak of a ſudden Death fell'd the Tree,

—— Qui tantum inter Caput extulit Omnes,
Quantum Lenta ſolent, inter Viburna Cypreſſi.

Mr. Oaks, thus being Tranſplanted into the Better World, the Præſidentſhip was immediately tendered unto Mr. Increaſe Mather; but his Church upon the Application of the Overſeers unto them, to diſmiſs him unto the Place, where to he was now choſen, refuſing to do it, he declined the Motion. Wherefore, on April 10. 1682. Mr. John Rogers was Elected unto that Place; and on Auguſt 12. 1683. he was Inſtalled into it. This Worthy Perſon was the Son of the Renowned Mr. Nathanael Rogers, the Paſtor to the Church of Ipſwich; and he was himſelf a Preacher at Ipſwich, until his Diſpoſition for Medicinal Sudies cauſed him to abate of his Labours in the Pulpit. He was One of ſo ſweet a Temper, that the Title of Deliciæ humani Generis might have on that Score been given him; and his Real Piety ſet off with the Accompliſhments of a Gentleman, as a Gem ſet in Gold. In his Præſidentſhip, there fell out one thing particularly, for which the Colledge has cauſe to remember him. It was his Cuſtom to be ſomewhat Long in his Daily Prayers (which our Preſidents uſe to make) with the Scholars in the Colledge-Hall But one Day, without being able to give Reaſon for it, he was not ſo Long, it may be by Half as he uſed to be. Heaven knew the Reaſon! The Scholars returning to their Chambers, found one of them on fire, and the Fire had proceeded ſo far, that if the Devotions had held three Minutes longer, the Colledge had been irrecoverably laid in Aſhes, which now was happily preſerved. But him alſo a Præmature Death, on July 2. 1684. the Day after the Commencement, ſnatcht away, from a Society, that hoped for a much longer Enjoyment of him, and counted themſelves under as Black an Eclipſe as the Sun did happen to be, at the Hour of his Expiration.

But that the Character of this Gentleman may be more perfectly exhibited, we will here take the Leave to tranſcribe the Epitaph engraved on his Tomb, in God's-Acre, at Cambridge. It is the Deſire of Immortality in wrought into the very Nature of Man, that produced the Invention of Epitaphs, and while ſome will aſcribe the Invention unto the Scholars of Linus, who ſo ſignified their Affection to their ſlain Maſter, others will that it may be aſcend as high as the Great Stone of Abel, mentioned in the firſt Book of Samuel, which they'll tell us, was Erected as a Memorial to Abel, by his Father Adam, with that Inſcription upon it, Here was ſhed the Blood of the Righteous Abel.

Now to Immortalize this their Maſter, one of the Scholars in Harvard-Colledge, gave to the Great Stone of ROGERS, the enſuing Lines to be now read there for his Memorial; which for the ſame Cauſe, we make a part of our Hiſtory.

§. 6. The Colledge was now again by Univerſal choice, caſt into the Hands of Mr. Increaſe Mather, who had already in other Capacities, been ſerving of it; and he accordingly, without leaving either his Houſe or his Church at Boſton, made his continual Viſits to the Colledge at Cambridge, managing as well the Weekly Diſputations, as the Annual Commencements, and inſpecting the whole Affairs of the Society; and by Preaching often at Cambridge, he made his Viſits yet more profitable unto them.

Reader, the Intereſt and Figure which the World knows this my PARENT hath had, in the Eccleſiaſtical Concerns of this Country, ever ſince his firſt Return from England in the Twenty Second, until his next Return from England in the Fifty Third Year of his Age; makes it a Difficult thing for me to Write the Church-Hiſtory of the Country. Should I Inſert every where, the Relation which he hath had unto the Publick Matters, it will be thought by the Envious, that I had undertaken this Work, with an Eye to ſuch a Motto as the Son of the Memorable Prince of Orange took his Device, PATRIÆQUE PATRIQUE: Should I on the other ſide bury in utter ſilence, all the Effects of that Care and Zeal wherewith he hath Employed in his peculiar Opportunities, with which the Free Grace of Heaven hath Talented him to do Good unto the Publick; I muſt cut off ſome Eſſentials of my Story. I will however Bowle nearer to the latter Mark than the former; and if no Body blame Sir Henry Wotton for ſtill mentioning his Father with ſo much Veneration, as that beſt of Men; my Father, I hope I ſhall not be blamed for ſaying thus much, my Father hath been deſirous to do ſome Good. Wherefore I will not only add in this Place, that when the Honourable Joſeph Dudley Eſq; was by the King's Commiſſion made Preſident of the Territory of New-England; this Gentleman, among other Expreſſions of his hearty Deſire to ſecure the Proſperity of his Mother, whoſe Breaſts himſelf had ſucked; continued the Government of the Colledge in the Hands of Mr. Mather, and altered his Title into that of a RECTOR. But, when Wiſe Perſons apprehend that the Conſtitution of Men and Things, which followed after the Arrival of another Governor, threatned all the Churches with Quick Ruines, wherein the Colledge could not but be comprehended, Mr. Mather, did by their Advice, repair to Whitehall; where being Remarkably favoured by Three Crowned Heads, in Succeſſive and Perſonal Applications unto them, on the behalf of his diſtreſſed Countrey, and having obtained ſeveral Kindneſſes for the Colledge in particular, he returned into New-England, in the Beginning of the Year, 1692. with a Royal-Charter, full of moſt ample Priviledges. By that Royal Charter under the Seal of King William and Queen Mary, the Country had its Engliſh, and its Chriſtian Liberties, as well as its Titles to its Lands (formerly conteſted) ſecured to it; and the Province being particularly enabled hereby to incorporate the Colledge (which was the Reaſon, that he did not ſtay to ſollicite a particular Charter for it) immediately upon his Arrival, the General Aſſembly gratified his Deſire, in Granting a Charter to this Univerſity. Mr. Mather now reaſſuming the Quality of Preſident over the Colledge, which in his Abſence had flouriſhed for divers Years, under the Prudent Government of Two Tutors, Mr. John Leveret, and Mr. William Bruttle, he does to this Day continue his Endeavours to keep alive that River, the Streams whereof have made glad this City of God. Unto this brief Recitation of Occurrences relating to the Colledge, I ſhall only annex a few Paſſages, uſed by Mr. Mather, when he gave the Degrees, at the firſt Commencement, after his Arrival; becauſe they are Expreſſive of Things purely Academical.

§. 7 At the Commencement, it has been the Annual Cuſtom for the Batchelors to publiſh a Sheet of Theſes, pro virili Defendendæ, upon all or moſt of the Liberal Arts; among which they do, with a particular Character, diſtinguiſh thoſe that are to be the Subjects of the Publick Diſputations then before them; and thoſe Theſes they dedicate as handſomely as they can, to the Perſons of Quality, but eſpecially the Governour of the Province, whoſe Patronage the Colledge would be recommended unto. The Maſters do, in an half-ſheet, without any Dedication, publiſh only the Quæſtiones pro Modulo diſcutiendæ, which they purpoſe either Affirmatively or Negatively to maintain as Reſpondents, inthe Diſputations, which are by them to be managed. They that peruſe the Theſes of the Batchelors of later Years publiſhed, will find that though the Ramæan Diſcipline be in this Colledge preferred unto the Ariſtotelæan, yet they not ſo confine themſelves unto That neither, as to deprive themſelves of that Libera Philoſophia, which the Good Spirits of the Age have embraced, ever ſince the Great Lord Bacon ſhow'd 'em the way to The Advancement of Learning; but they ſeem to be rather of the Sect, begun by Potamon, called ἐκλεκτικοὶ, who adhering to no former Sect, choſe out of them all, what they lik'd beſt in any of them: At leaſt, I am ſure, they do not ſhow ſuch a Veneration for Ariſtotle as is expreſs'd at Queens-Colledge in Oxford; where they read Ariſtotle on their Knees, and thoſe who take Degrees are ſworn to defend his Philoſophy. A Venetian Writer pretends to enumerate no leſs than Twelve Thouſand Volumes publiſhed in the Fourteenth Age, about the Philoſophy of Ariſtotle, none of ours will add unto the Number. For this let the Learned Reader, accept the Excuſe, which their preſent Preſident, in one of his Orations, at the Cloſe of their Exerciſes, has helpt us unto.

Mihi quidem maximè arridet, quòd vos qui eſtis in Artibus Liberalibus Initiati, Liberum Philoſophandi Modum, potius quam Peripateticiſmum ſapere videmini. Nullus addubito quin Cl. Gaſſendi Exercitationes vobis non ſunt ignotæ, in quibus, quòd apud Ariſtotelem multa deficiant, multa ſuperfluant, multa fallant, pluribus Oſtendit. Tritum eſt illud, Qui non vult Intelligi debet negligi; Nonnulla autem in Libris Ariſtotelis, Nemo mortalium poteſt Intellegère. Fertur itaque de Hermolao Barbaro, quòd Dæmonem ab Inferis Excitaverit, ut quid Ariſtoteles per ſuam ἐντελέχειαν voluit, exponeret. En. Egregium Ariſtotelis Interpretem! Quam plurima in ejus Scriptis, Authoris Paganiſmum redolent: Mundum facit Increatum: Mortuorum Reſurrectionem poſſibilem negat; Animam mortalem. Nonnulli Pyrrhonem, qui fuit Pater Scepticorum: Alii Zenonem, qui fuit Pater Stoicorum; Multi Platonem, qui fuit Pater Academicorum; Ariſtoteli præferunt. Vos autem quibus Liberè Philoſophari contigit, in Nullius jurare Verba Magiſtri, eſtis addicti: Aſt unicum Ariſtotelis Dictum verè Aureum, memoriâ teneatis, Amicus Plato, Amicus Socrates (addo ego Amicus Ariſtoteles) ſed magis Amica Veritas.

They likewiſe which peruſe the Queſtiones publiſhed by the Maſters, will find, that as theſe, now and then preſume to fly as high as Divinity; ſo their Divinity is of that Reformed Stamp, which carries as frequent Confutations of Arminianiſm with it, as are poſſible: Herein condemning thoſe Proteſtant Univerſities, abroad in the World, which have not preſerved the Glorious Doctrines of Grace, in ſuch Purity, as that great Party among the Romaniſts themſelves, which go under the Name of Janſeniſts. But for this alſo let their Preſent Preſident be Accountable, whoſe Orations at the End of their Exerciſes, have uttered ſuch Paſſages as theſe unto them.
